SOUND EQUIPMENT. A number of different components—soundheads, amplifiers, speakers, power units, etc., must be combined to make one sound system. Manufacturers build these components in models of different power and sometimes of different quality, and then combine them according to the needs of the theatre and the price it is willing to pay. In careful buying it is necessary for the purchaser to inform himself as to what component items, of what power and quality, go to make up each of the systems he has under consideration. A well-printed booklet on Motiograph-Mirrophonic sound apparatus has been issued by Motiograph. It first describes each component unit and illustrates it in detail; then lists five separate systems, setting forth just which of the previously described components goes into each. The power output and distortion rating of each system is also stated, as well as its capacity in terms of the number of seats it can serve under the recommendatione of the Academy Research Council (#17).

SOUND SYSTEMS. Century Projector Corporation has issued an 8-page, 2-color illustrated booklet setting forth the features of the latest sound equipment of Western Electric design—which is marketed by Century in this country and by Westrex Corporation abroad. The apparatus incorporates many striking features, including a flutter suppressor in the soundhead which is said to reduce flutter to only seven hundredths of one per cent—far below the requirements previously considered acceptable for the highest quality sound. The devices for effecting this result are illustrated and their action described in this Century booklet. It also lists and illustrates other features of the soundheads, amplifiers and loudspeakers. Among details thus treated are the exciter lamp mounting, film alignment control, light diffuser for equalizing illumination of the soundtrack, pre-amplifier utilizing war-developed midget tubes, amplifier system of from 40 to 100 watts output with rated harmonic distortion of less than 2 per cent, and Altec-Lansing Voice of the Theatre speaker systems matched to the Century amplifiers. Charts are included, showing the number of seats each speaker system can supply, angles of vertical and horizontal distribution of sound, and the overall dimensions the speakers will occupy on the screen platform. Two pages of the booklet are devoted to the mounting of the soundhead under the projector mechanism and the two methods available for driving the projector—gear connection and chain connection. These are clearly illustrated. It is an informative little publication worth the attention of anyone concerned in any way with the technical details of sound apparatus. (#18).

WALL PANELS. Wall surface panels having baked plastic or genuine wood veneer surfaces are available in a great variety of colors, patterns and finishes. Sold under the trade name Marlite, they are described and illustrated in detail in a four-page, three-color folder by Marsh Wall Products Company. There are tile patterns for wash rooms, marble patterns for foyers and lobbies, wood patterns, and unpatterned plain color panels, all in a wide range of color schemes to meet the needs of any location. The panels are 5/32" inch thick, readily cut and fitted with regular carpenter tools. Colored plastic, wood, pressed wood, white alloy and stainless steel mouldings are available for use with them. Anyone planning building or remodeling will be interested in this Marlite folder. (#19).

The Projection Advisory Council Guide To Good Projection

A Summary of All the Council's Advice to Date. You Will Want to File It For Reference

Built into every motion picture theatre in the world is one of the most ironical of all contradictions.

The theatre is dramatic. It is human. It is devoted to making people comfortable in surroundings that bring them agreeable sensations; and then entertaining them by artistically skillful arousing of the whole gamut of human emotions.

At the center of this effort, indispensable to it, is a completely contradictory core of cold, inhuman, scientific technology.

The glamour girl pursues the boy of her heart with the help of condensers, ballast resistors and diode rectifiers!

Therefore the people who man this industry, who are concerned with the arts of entertaining the public and the graces of giving it comfort and ease, must also busy themselves very intimately with a mass of highly complex and elaborate engineering.

This engineering is so exceedingly complex that the whole science of electronics explains only part of what goes on every day in the projection room. The whole of the abstruse science of optics covers only one of the other parts. And these disciplines and the technical arts they have fostered are in a state of constant progress—there is no such thing as getting through with learning them. They'll be different tomorrow.

Hence the men in each theatre can use competent technical advice.

The unselfish generosity of the members of the members of STR's Projection Advisory Council, and their zeal for the welfare of the industry of which they are so important a part, has led them to place the benefits of their competence and experience at your disposal, through these pages.

There is no higher authority in projection than the members of this Council. They are the men who supervise projection and sound for the largest and most successful groups of theatres in the country. The engineering developments, machinery and equipment they approve go into projection rooms everywhere; what they do not approve disappears from the market place and is heard of no more. The operating practices they recommend and endorse are followed in all the finest American theatres; those they condemn vanish entirely or at most survive only in shooting galleries in back alleys.

In everything that pertains to projection and sound there is no advice better than theirs—none equal to theirs. They are the last word.

Here presented is a summary of the invaluable recommendations they have given readers thus far. You will want to keep it on file, for permanent reference.

MEET YOUR COUNCIL
C. A. Dentelbeck

C. A. Dentelbeck has been associated with Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited since its formation in 1920 in the position of Supervisor of Projection.

He started in show business as manager of the Avenue Theatre in Toronto in 1909. In 1912 he took out a license as projectionist and the following year moved to the College Playhouse as projectionist. In 1918 he was appointed chief projectionist at the Strand Theatre.

In 1919 Charlie was named Supervisor of Projection for Paramount Theatres and, when Famous Players was granted a charter in 1920, he became Supervisor of Projection with that organization, which now operates 333 theatres in Canada and Newfoundland.

He was president of the Toronto Union, Local No. 173 for 21 years, during which time there was not one strike or lockout.

Charlie's hobbies are golf and poker. He's had golf scores as low as 74 and won a number of trophies at the game, including the IATSE trophy in Cleveland, Film Championship and others. His favorite movies are Westerns and heavy drama.

Good Operating Practice

Every film that enters the projection room should be rewound and inspected before it is run for the first time. The Council is totally unanimous on this. Put no film in your projectors until it has been examined; and repaired if and as needed.

Projection room equipment should be inspected and checked before the start of each day's operations. On this point also Council opinion is unanimous.

Some differences of viewpoint appeared on the question of how to pay for these inspections of apparatus and film. To carry them out with any thoroughness obviously requires that the projection crew report for work a considerable time before the beginning of the first show. Some members feel this ought to be specially arranged for in the union contracts. Others merely set up a working schedule that includes a start-work time early enough to meet the requirements. Another course suggested: to pay somewhat above scale in order to attract and keep men of the highest competence and sense of responsibility, and then hold them responsible for anything that needs doing, as part of the job.

There was also some difference of opinion also as to the need for hand rewinding; which was favored by many as essential. Others noted that in one-man projection rooms it is scarcely practicable.

Faults that may impair the quality of the show should be repaired as soon as found, the Council agrees unanimously.

Servicing of projection room equipment by experts who are not part of the theatre's regular staff also is unanimously

COMFORT PAYS OFF AT THE BOXOFFICE

YOU have to be comfortable to enjoy a show—and comfort is what these stylish "American" Bodiform Chairs provide in full measure! It's the kind of easy, restful comfort that lets your patrons really relax and have a good time. The kind that keeps them coming back. That's why these beautiful new Bodiform Chairs are boxoffice hits wherever they're featured!

Bodiform Chairs pack a lot of potent appeal for you, too. These smart, streamlined theatre chairs save space, make possible quicker, more economical housekeeping. They feature smooth, quiet operation and "foolproof" construction that slashes maintenance costs to the bone. And they're built to last and last.

So, look to "American"—as thousands of theatre owners the nation over are doing—for the finest in theatre seating. And remember, our engineers are always ready to help you solve your individual seating problems. Write today for full details.

vacuuming and occasional scrubbing. The scrubbing-in-place method is not very popular among the members; they feel that the technique, as it exists now, still leaves much to be desired.

Building and Remodeling

Whatever else the theatreman does about building or remodeling, let him employ a competent architect experienced in theatre work. This does not mean, however, that any radical changes in design or construction are expected. They are not. But the Council members are convinced that a good architect who understands theatre requirements can effect economies far more important than his fee.

As long ago as March of 1945 the Council estimated that postwar building and remodeling costs would be (to take the median figure) 30 per cent higher than the pre-war level, with some Councilors putting the increase at as much as 70 per cent. They do not consider that the early postwar period is any time for building, or even for acquiring real estate, and consequently are convinced that the government's temporary ban on non-residential construction does the theatre industry no harm. The Spring of 1947, however, will be the time to begin new theatre construction and remodeling, according to the views the majority held in April of 1946. In the meanwhile not only the law, but considerations of ethics and public good will require the industry to leave scarce materials in the hands of those who are erecting urgently needed homes.

Planning construction or renovation is another matter. Plans should be made in advance. They should be made in detail, ready for the builder the very moment conditions change to an extent that makes building advisable.

Future Policies

The primary need of the theatre of the future will be greater patron comfort —in every respect.

The second most important need will be better projection and better sound. In this connection approximately half the Council favor installation of a third projector for emergencies and to enable the projectionists to maintain top screen quality under all circumstances.

Training Personnel

Seventy per cent of the members favor training in the form of refresher courses for managers, projectionists and maintenance men. However, a number of the theatre chains represented on the Council do not follow this recommendation, but feel that a man who has reached the status of managing a theatre ought to have the initiative and sense of responsibility to take care of his own continued training.

All chains represented on the Council provide specific training for assistant managers and other junior members of the theatre's staff, including ushers.

Selling Refreshments

In September of 1945 the members preferred an attended candy stand to the vending machines then available. The ideal location, in their opinion, is one that meets three different requirements (and consequently does not exist in many theatres). The candy stand should be close enough to the box-office to encourage the patron to patronize it before loose change has been returned to purse or pocket. It should also be accessible from within the theatre in the interest of repeat sales during the show; and from without in order to make sales to passersby who do not intend to buy tickets.

Incidentally, 80 per cent of the members favored an outside box-office, even for theatres not dependent on transient patronage.

Servicing

Council members participating in the meeting that discussed use of outside servicing organizations were unanimously in favor of utilizing such service for the sound system and air conditioning system.

[As noted elsewhere in this issue, STR's Projection Advisory Council also unanimously endorses outside servicing of projection room equipment.]

Eighty per cent thought the theatre staff should have outside assistance in connection with the heating plant. Seventy per cent favored outside servicing aid for projectors, motors and generators. Fifty per cent thought the theatre personnel needs help in maintaining and servicing roofs, plumbing, signs and marquees.

Despite the Council's unanimous preference for sound servicing, and strong preference for servicing of projectors, motors and generators, the members still insist that the projectionist remains 100 per cent responsible for all projection room apparatus. To enable him to discharge this responsibility, he should be kept completely informed as to the nature of all servicing arrangements for projection and sound equipment into which the theatre may enter. On the other hand, the servicing people should deliver written reports to the manager as well as to the projectionist, so the manager can follow through on their recommendations and suggestions.

The Council also stresses the difficult and technical nature of acoustical work, and emphasizes that no such work ought to be undertaken without help of outside, thoroughly expert advice. And in building and renovation work, the Council is very strongly in favor of employing a competent architect familiar with the theatre field. Amateurish efforts, in fact, have been frowned on by the members in every phase of theatre operation as not being economical, when the final score is in, and seldom successful according to any reasonably acceptable standards.

Safety

Theatremen are advised to seek the cooperation of local fire authorities as a valuable precaution. It was pointed out that this step not only will reduce the chances of fire and loss through fire, but also will make utterly impossible any charge of criminal negligence.

The Council stresses the importance of lighting in avoiding accidents. If a higher level of auditorium illumination means that more powerful arc lamps, consuming more current, have to be installed in the projection room—install them. Accidents can be more expensive.

Also on the subject of accidents, the Council is agreed as to the urgent necessity for frequent inspection of chairs, and prompt repair of any fault found. As to the value of rubber nosing on steps, however, opinion is divided.

Buying Supplies

Small theatres can buy supplies as efficiently and cheaply as large chains, say these men who do the buying for large chains.

They point out that a chain gets lower prices from the supplier only by ordering in bulk—for many theatres at the same time—and that this involves an inefficiency because in some theatres the article will not be just exactly what is needed. The individual operator, however, can choose precisely the right article. In addition, the small individual theatre is directly under that "eye of the owner"—which according to all standard theories of economics results in greater efficiency than the less zealous supervision of hired help. These two advantages offset the advantage the large chain has in matters of purchasing. In themselves, they equalize the efficiency of the two types of theatre operation—chain and individual—to the advantage of the latter.

Additionally, the small theatre can pool its buying with that of friendly competitors in the same town or neighborhood, and thus achieve some of the advantages of bulk ordering. It is suggested that when this is done, a further advantage be gained by having the supplier send everything to one address.

Similarly, friendly competitors can equalize the advantage held as to spare parts by a chain with several theatres in the same vicinity:—they can set up their own pool of spare parts.

Other advice on efficient buying includes:

Take competitive bids on all purchases of over $15.00.

Either submit any article under consideration to careful technical tests before ordering it in quantity, or else buy only known products of unquestioned reputation from a supplier who is equally reputable.

Never overbuy.

Do not buy on price.

Keep in touch with the market by reading the trade papers.

Lighting

Theatre lighting to date has only scratched the surface of its possibilities.

Wide variations in the views of the members on matters of detail indicate that in their minds lighting is not only a science but also an art—the art of showmanship—so that decisions about it cannot be made on a scientific basis alone. A great depends on personal choice, or on the preferences of the type of audience to which the theatre caters.

In general, the members prefer front lighting that stresses beauty and enhances architectural lines above that which stresses exploitation. They advise tying in the canopy lighting with the decorative scheme of the facade. They favor maximum attraction board space, and large-size changeable letters.

In the auditorium, indirect lighting is strongly prefered as against the direct type; and a high level of illumination for the sake of safety is advocated even at the expense of putting larger arc lamps into the projection room. A number of members expressed preference for cold cathode lighting in the aditorium. Where incandescents are used, reflectors are favored by the majority.

Black light murals are not generally endorsed for the auditorium on the ground that nothing must be allowed to distract attention from the screen; it is considered that black light murals have their place in lounges and lobbies. Ultra-violet aisle lights and fluorescent aisle carpeting won only limited endorsement, owing to present costs. Opinion was scattered as to the usefulness of germicidal lamps; but a number of members noted that their experience with these lamps has thus far been limited.

Lamps should be kept clean, but how often it is necessary to clean them depends on the cleanliness or soil of the local atmosphere.

Screens

The favored method of cleaning screens is by brushing. Several different types of brush are recommended by different members, but all agree that whatever kind is used, it must be immaculately clean.

Keeping screen curtains closed whenever a picture is not actually being shown will reduce the necessity for cleaning and prolong the screen's life.

Re-painting an old screen has few advocates. Re-surfacing processes are in somewhat greater favor, but even those who approve them admit that re-surfacing is inadvisable unless done carefully, by experts.

No one favors a small screen and small picture. On this point also the Council agrees that the cost of installing larger arc lamps and burning more current in them must be counted a secondary matter. Whatever costs may be involved, the picture should be of generous dimensions, in all theatres.

Acoustics

Still another point on which the Council feels that cost does not matter as compared with results is acoustic correction. An emphatically large majority voted that where such correction is needed it has to be made regardless of expense. "This is a must" is the way one member put it.

It was stressed that acoustics is a highly specialized field, in which only specialists should be called on to advise. Fly-by-night and amateur correctionists are to be avoided. As sources of expert advice, the members named sound servicing organizations, engineers employed by reputable manufacturers of acoustical materials, or properly qualified consultants of known reputation.

In the matter of acoustical materials, permanently attached substances are favored as against drapes. However, the appearance of the acoustically treated surface must be adapted to the audience taste in decoration; therefore any given material, even though scientifically satisfactory, may not be suited to all theatres because of differences in decorative considerations.

Dusting and vacuuming are recommended for cleaning acoustical surfaces. Painting with any ordinary paint was opposed; but water-color type paints are approved. The majority hold that from three to five coats of water-color paint can be applied to the average acoustical surface without serious impairment of its sound-absorbing properties. (#11).

PROJECTION ADVISORY COUNCIL GUIDE TO GOOD PROJECTION

approved. (Equally unanimous approval of outside servicing of sound equipment was voiced by STR's Theatre Advisory Council, as reported elsewhere in this issue.)

The responsibility of the manager in projection matters, and his authority over them, was stressed by this gathering of projection chiefs, the majority holding that good organization requires the manager's advance approval of all overtime work; and does not require him to consult his projectionists in choosing the apparatus and supplies with which they must do their work. In the majority of theatre chains represented at the Council meeting that discussed this point, projectionists are not consulted when new equipment is selected.

The Manager's Part

The role of the manager with reference to good projection—exactly and in detail what he has to do with it—involves a delicate balance between complete assertion of his responsibility and authority on the one hand, and maintenance of totally harmonious relations with the projectionists on the other. So the Council believes. Nothing, they say, is more important to good projection than good morale as between the manager and the men who put the picture on the screen. This they consider a vital necessity of successful theatre operation.

But the manager should supervise actively, and keep in close touch with a great many small and technical details. It is part of his business to know or learn enough about technicalities to be able to do this effectively. He should visit the projection room often, appearing unexpectedly. He should carry his inspection of it beyond matters of neatness and cleanliness and into the condition of the apparatus and its parts, just as far as his ability and knowledge allow him to go. He himself should keep track of how often parts have to be ordered, so he can buy them efficiently; he should keep the record of how often each item of equipment has to be repaired. He should require written reports from the projectionists on the condition of all film received; and periodical written reports on the condition of all equipment. He should know whether each man comes in on time (but in the interest of harmony this matter is best handled without time clocks or officiousness.)

The more nearly personal affairs of the projection crew—such as the arranging of shifts and reliefs and days off—are matters he had best leave to them, or to their union.

Safety

The manager also is the key man in projection room safety. This ultimately is not the responsibility of the projectionists, but his. Safety regulations are complex—but he must learn them. It is a matter he cannot entrust or delegate to others.

This Council of projection men, many of whom are union members themselves, in good standing with the IA, is absolutely unanimous in favor of severely disciplining or dismissing any projectionist who violates safety rules. And not one member can envisage any union local objecting to that.

With respect to the expense of safety precautions, and the necessity of meeting competition that may not take such precautions, the Council asserts safety measures are not importantly expensive: but in any case, what the competition does must be ruled out of consideration. Each theatre manager has human lives in his custody—and they come first.

Difference of opinion exists as to the Underwriters requirement that projectionists make no attempt to fight film fire but operate the safety devices and get out. There was also difference as to the safety value of a two-man crew; with a small majority holding that one man is enough from the point of view of safety. Lack of agreement as to fire extinguishers —whether to put them in the projection room at all, and if so, what type to put there—likewise exists. Those who favor the carbon tetrachloride type agree that if it is installed, the projectionists should be given an ample additional supply of CT to make sure the extinguishers will not be treated as a source of fluid for cleaning electrical contacts.

Providing the projection room with dual exits, and with stairs for access instead of ladders, is strongly favored. The majority feel that no one under 21 ought to be employed with the responsibility of a projectionist. Full participation of the projection crew in all fire drills has nearly unanimous support of the Council.

Standards and Equipment

The members endorse the Society of Motion Picture Engineers' standards for screen brightness, and recommend adhering to them. But they consider that the Academy standards for sound power are no longer wholly adequate, and exceed them in their own theatres.

Installation of emergency sources of arc current, and of an emergency sound amplifier channel, are recommended by strong majorities. (#12).

HOW TO PREVENT PROJECTION ROOM FIRES

Zap, North Dakota,
October 20, 1946.

SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW
New York, N. Y.
Gentlemen:

I was interested in the article "Projection Safety," STR Oct. 12, Page E-3. I am enclosing an old report from our State Board of Electricians of North Dakota. I believe that fires in the projection room would drop to almost nothing if the states would regulate the projection room as they do in North Dakota. There are no "rat holes" in this state, and no ladders for getting to the projection room. The room must be fireproof, with plenty of space, automatic shutters on all ports, and the theatre must have a licensed projectionist.

The enclosed book gives the requirements for both projection room and projectionists. As a result, projection fires are almost unknown in this state.

Odorless Disinfectant Solves Problem of TACTFUL Sanitation

All infections that menace patronage—including even ringworm infection of the head, which threaten junior patrons who lean back against a mohair chair and may thus pick up ringworm fungi that other children have left there—may need tactful sanitation.

Depending on the state of mind of the community it is not always wise to use disinfectants that advertise themselves as such by residual disinfectant odor. In cases of threatened or rumored epidemic, obvious, conspicuous efforts at sanitations may scare patrons away.

Back from the war, Fort-A-Cide disinfectant provides one efficient answer to this problem. It is an effective fungicide, acocrding to reports of the State of Illinois Department of Public Welfare, the Sanitary District of Chicago, and other authorities who have tested it on a wide variety of germs, in direct comparison with a standard disinfectant such as carbolic acid. Fort-A-Cide is far more effective than carbolic acid, according to these reports. F. W. Mohlman, Director of Laboratories for the Sanitary District of Chicago, declared in a signed statement that on a dry weight basis it is 500 times as effective as carbolic acid.

The material is also an effective deodorant, according to these tests; yet it has no odor of its own.

The six different chemicals which are compounded to form the material serve varied purposes; some being germicides, some fungicides, some deodorants, and some penetrants which enable the "fighting" parts of the compound to penetrate both organic dirt in which germs may be hiding, and the protective oily or wax-like "armor" with which a number of obstinate germs surround themselves.

The material is applied by spraying. Weak solutions are used: for example, one part disinfectant to 40 parts of water is the rated solution for mopping toilet floors. For spraying plumbing fixtures, a stronger solution, 1 part Fort-A-Cide to ten parts water, is recommended.

To assist theatre personnel in using the preparation with maximum effectiveness the Fort-A-Cide Corporation also markets a 5-gallon fire pump and tank that can be strapped on the porter's back. The tank is rust-proof; made of galvanized steel. The hand pump is brass. The nozzle can be adjusted to deliver either a force stream of the solution, or a fog-mist spray. Wearing this tank on his back, and working the brass pump handle back and forth, an employe can readily spray auditorium chairs and discharge a fine spray of disinfectant into the rest room air to combat odors and air-borne bacteria, while a flip of the nozzle provides a force-driven, penetrating stream, that enables him to dislodge bacterial deposits and discoloring encrustations on plumbing fixtures. (#14).

New Wenzel "Bulldog" Helps All Film Shafts

To eliminate key breakage on all types of shafts used for winding film, and to distribute lower magazine "pull strain" more evenly when 2,000-foot reels are used, Wenzel Projector Company has brought out a new type "bulldog" for all types of magazines and rewinders. Of sturdy construction for long continued hard use, it takes both 1000′ and 2000′ reels. (#15).

SORRY

Through typographical error, STR on October 12 reported Altec "Voice of the Theatre" had been installed in 100,000 theatres. Of course there aren't that many theatres. The headline to the item gave the figure correctly: more than 2,000 theatres have now put in Altec speaker systems. We regret the slip. (#16).

'Black Light' Provides Thrilling Xmas Decoration

By J. Cornell Richardson*

Christmas season decorations call for the theatre manager's utmost ingenuity in devising holiday ornamentation that reflects the sharp showmanship theatre patrons have come to expect in their favorite place of entertainment.

Black Light offers an easy, highly successful, answer to this important problem. Simple to apply, inexpensive to use, Black Light and fluoro-materials provide vivid color in glowing radiance to delight and mystify the public.

Theatre managers often shy away from Black Light; their attitude frequently is: "It may be alright for Rockefeller Center, but my budget is limited and I am not sure I have the necessary talent for such design."

The simple truth is that no theatre is too small to incorporate Black Light into its Christmas decorations. As for talent—free, expert consultant advice is easily had.

And no theatre is too large or elaborate to benefit from the glorious, breath-taking displays which Black Light affords.

Consider the most common of displays—the Christmas tree. Whether it is placed in the foyer or lobby of the large theatre, at one side of the screen in smaller theatres, or outdoors on top of the marquee, the same principles of applying Black Light are followed.

First, the area around the tree must be dark or semi-dark. White light shining directly on the subject washes out the fluorescent effect.

Either a natural tree or an artificial one can be used. To get the best results one should spray the branches with fluorescent lacquer. A green transparent lacquer is ideal for use in conjunction with a white-light flasher system, for the surprise effect it gives. Under the white light, the tree will look quite ordinary. Under Black Light, however, it will glow with startling brilliance. For a greater fluorescence intensity, opaque lacquer is recommended. If any color but green is used on the tree, it is advisable first to spray the tree with a white casein paint for a base coat and then spray on the fluorescent lacquer. It is important to have the spray gun absolutely clean before this final operation.

The ornaments can be treated with fluorescent lacquer applied with a small camel's hair brush. The brushing is more successful if you thin the lacquer with a high-grade retarder thinner. A large star placed at the tip of the tree can be treated with Arctic White lacquer to give a lovely, silvery glow. The star can be fashioned from plastic, wood, or hard-surface paper or cardboard. Here again it is wise to use an undercoat of white casein paint, especially on paper, to prevent excessive absorption.

For the children, a Christmas display is disappointing unless it includes a Santa Claus. A real-life Santa can wear fluorescent makeup and a suit of "firewagon red" fluorescent satin. The harmless make-up will cause his skin to glow.

A papier mache Santa can be given a fascinating, out-of-this-world appearance by coating the face with fluorescent lacquer (over a base coat), painting the lips red and eyes a merry blue. His hair, even, can be fluoresced with fabric solution, and the snow on his boots can be made to shimmer like the snow in a wonderful fairyland.

A simple, yet effective, fluorescent display consists of a giant Christmas card, addressed to theatre patrons and signed by the theatre management. The lettering can be done in any of the 13 available lacquer colors. Such a card can be designed especially to fit into one of the "coming attraction" display windows. In this case a Black Light source can be suspended from the ceiling, with the invisible rays shining down on the sign.

The light fixture most often recommended for theatre seasonal displays consist of 100-watt mercury vapor units. These may be placed 10 or 12 feet from the tree or display. All Black Lights work on regular 110-volt AC current but only through the transformer provided as part of every unit. The transformer is commonly mounted directly on the lamp to provide a self-contained unit, but it can also be installed at a master switchboard, using No. 12 wires for the circuit to avoid voltage drop. The life of the lamp runs about 1,000 hours and it is replaceable at moderate cost (#17).

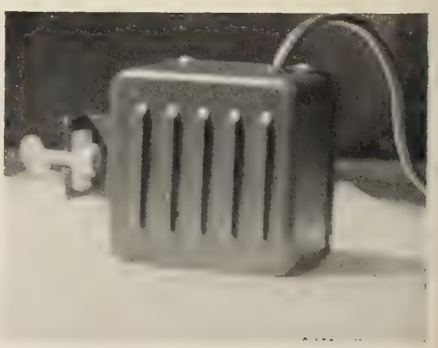
Quality Soundhead For Powers Mechs

Theatres still using Powers mechanisms will be interested, in this time of shortages and delayed deliveries, to know that Ballantyne Company can make prompt shipment of their high quality Royal Soundmaster and SP soundheads, which are designed to be used with Powers as well as Simplex projectors and pedestals.

Ballantyne soundheads for mechanisms of the Simplex type also can be supplied complete with drive attachments for either Simplex, Super Simplex, Simplex E-7, Simplex SI, Century, Wenzel, Gardiner and Motiograph Model K mechanisms.

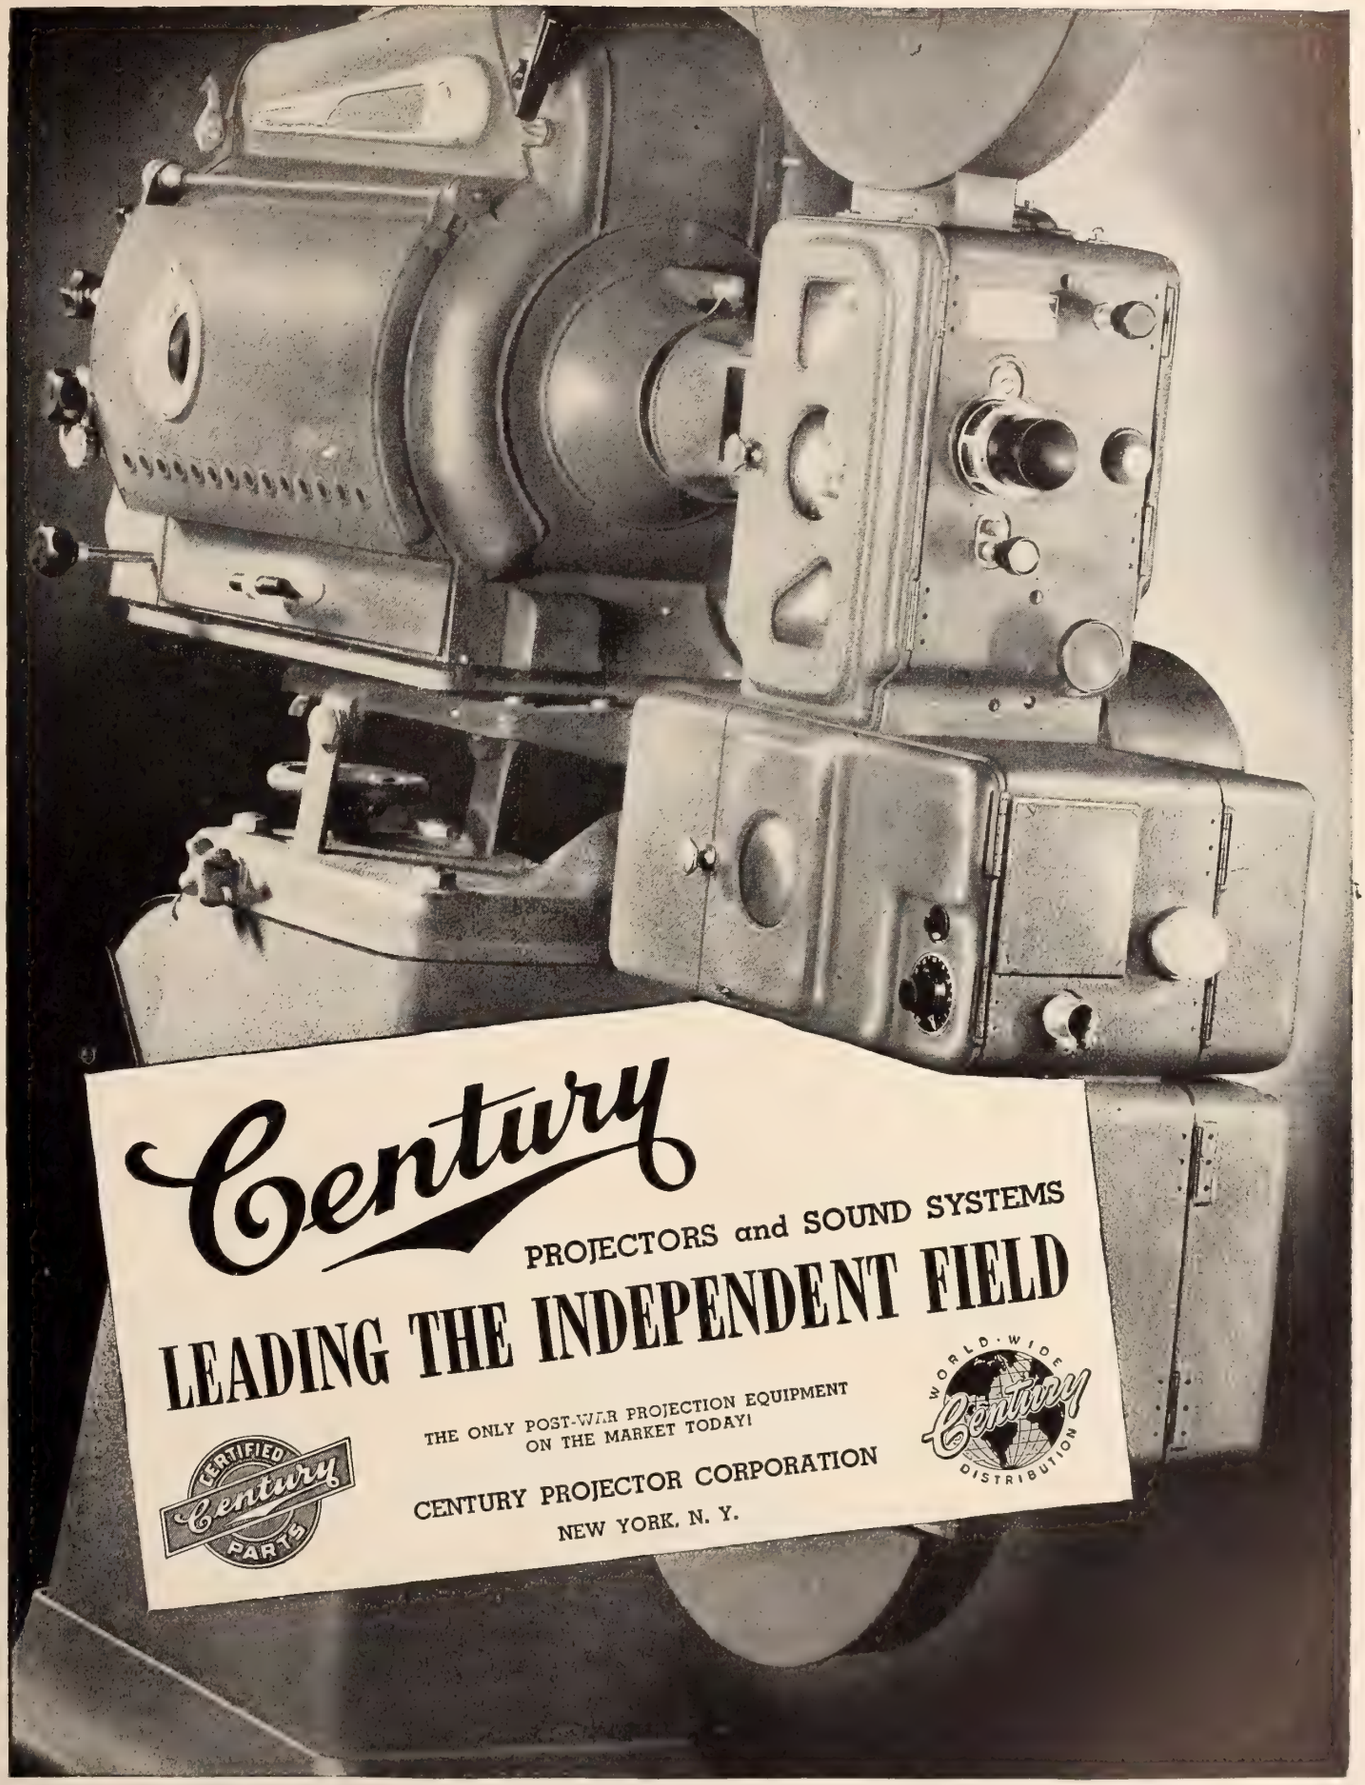
A very wide variety of combinations can be attained, using the Ballantyne soundheads. For example, among other possibilities, they can be installed successfully between a Powers four-point pedestal and a Simplex-type mechanism; or on a Simplex pedestal with a Powers mechanism. (#18).

G. E. Foresees New Projection Light



The "pulsed light" projection lamp now used to enable television cameras to pick up programs from motion picture film is not suited to theatre projection in its present form, but "there is every possibility that a new light source operated by the same principle will be developed later for theatre application," according to E. L. Robinson of General Electric Company. The "pulsed light" device is a gas-filled discharge lamp electronically controlled. (#19).

New Airkem Freshener For Rest Rooms Only



A new product by the makers of Airkem Chlorophyll Air Freshener has been brought out specifically for use in rest rooms. It is designed to be more efficient in that application than the standard freshener, which is for general use. (#20).

USEFUL SPEAKER

Signal Corps surplus, the excellent little loudspeaker shown here is useful in many theatre applications. It has been bought in quantities by Loew's, RKO and Paramount, for intercommunication, particularly in connection with stage shows. Small, light, compact, it clamps on almost anywhere. Power handling capacity is in excess of 1½ watts; impedance 4,000 ohms. The price is $3.95—possible only because this item is government surplus. Harvey Radio Company of New York is the distributor. (#21).

CENTURY MANUFACTURES A COMPLETE LINE OF REPLACEMENT PARTS FOR THE CENTURY MODEL "K" PROJECTOR MECHANISMS. Brenkert Light Projection Co., 6545 St. Antoine Ave., Detroit, Mich.

*__Forest Mfg. Corp.__, 60 Park Pl., Newark 2, N. J.

Entirely new in principle of operation, the Forest Electronic arc lamp controls carbon feed through two completely separate electronic circuits actuating two solenoid-ratchets. The rate of feed of either carbon is thus totally independent of the other; feeding of each carbon can be readjusted separately without the slightest effect on its mate. The lamp is of the reflector type and designed for a wide varicty of carbon trims.

Morelite Co., Inc., 600 W. 57th St., New York, N. Y.

*__National Theatre Supply__, 92 Gold St., New York, N. Y.

The 1 kw "Simplex High" projection lamphouse is designed for theatres of up to 800 seats, using screens up to 18 feet in width. It projects more than twice as much light as a low intensity source at far less than twice the operating cost, because of the efficiency of its cored carbons. Production of light is so efficient in proportion to the amount of heat generated that a simple burner mechanism and small housing are practicable, with correspondingly attractive price.

*__S.O.S. Cinema Supply Corp.__, 449 W. 42nd St., New York, N. Y.

*__Strong Electric Corp.__, 87 City Park Ave., Toledo, O.

The Strong Mogul 45 to 70 ampere high intensity automatic reflector arc lamp has a ball bearing control system with separate adjustments for the feeding rates of both carbons, full-floating carbon holders and heat resisting guides, and ample size to facilitate easy trimming and cleaning. It is one of the outstanding models of the Strong line, which includes also the Strong 1 kilowatt High Intensity and the Strong Junior High.

The exceptional speed of f/1.9 is maintained in all sizes of the new Kollmorgen Super-Snaplite anastigmatic projection lens. Wider-angle projection, higher magnification and the utmost in image quality are provided by this important new aid to good entertainment. It is available in focal lengths from 2 in. through 5 in. in ¼ in. steps. All glass-to-air optical surfaces are coated. Hermetically sealed mounting eliminates any possible need for taking the lens apart to clean it.

Models C and CC mechanisms are both of direct drive design and construction. In both, all driving and shutter shafts are completely ball bearing mounted. Model CC mechanism has seven gears and pinions; Model C, five. Model CC has double shutters completely independent of each other so that either could be used as a single shutter in emergency; Model C a single shutter. Model CC is rated at 58 per cent light efficiency and Model C at 50 per cent light efficiency, for all lens speeds and focal lengths.

RETISCOPE
CONCAVE SCREEN

"Shaped Like the Retina of the Eye" which ABSOLUTELY ELIMINATES IMAGE DISTORTION AT ALL POINTS IN THE AUDITORIUM.

Makes every seat earn money by affording a perfect image even at the extreme sides and in the balcony. Puts every chair in the center section.

PERFECT FOCUS—no special lenses required. Made of "Fiberglas," laced to a curved, movable steel frame.

GIVES ILLUSION OF DEPTH TO THE PICTURE.

REDUCES GLARE, HOT SPOT AND EYE STRAIN—the light being polarized by the "Fiberglas" screen surface.

IMPROVES SOUND—the glass fibres react like a "million" baffles for the sound waves, resulting in a less directional effect.

ABSOLUTELY FIREPROOF.
PRACTICALLY INDESTRUCTIBLE.

Century soundheads Models R-2 and R-3 were developed in cooperation with Western Electric engineering. Both have hydraulic flutter suppressers, and the R-2, in addition, has a magnetic film stabilizer. Rated flutter content is 0.7 per cent and .08 per cent respectively—the Academy Research Council rates twice that amount of flutter as acceptable for the finest theatres. Model R-2 includes a preamplifier with individual volume control and push-button changeover.

DeVry sound systems include a soundhead built into and integrally a part of the DeVry projector, with a film filter yielding a rated flutter content of only 2/10ths of one per cent. A pre-amplifier mounts on the front of each projector. The main amplifier rack is subdivided into seven unit panels, with structural arrangements that allow each panel to hinge open separately for utmost accessibility in servicing. The amplifier rack like the projector, is available in old ivory, chrome or gray.

Simplex 4-Star systems conform to the frequency response standards recommended by the Academy Research Council in all models from the smallest to the largest. A typical, 60-watt model comprises soundheads with rotary stabilizer film control, amplifiers with maximum rated distortion of only 1 per cent, and either Simplex or Altec Voice of the Theatre speaker systems, as preferred. Frequency response compensator circuits adapt the equipment readily to unusual auditorium acoustic conditions, when such are encountered. Built-in provisions permit economical adaptation to future stereophonic recordings.

American's well-known Bodiform chair is so designed that when the occupant rises the seat folds gently to ¾ position. Thus it leaves a clear space between rows for future patrons, and to facilitate cleaning. The seat foundation is of heavy, formed steel, streamlined to protect the front edge of the upholstery. Both seat and back are upholstered without tacks or wood parts; panels of both can be removed and recovered by an attendant in a few minutes.

Fox Boulevard Theatre, Wichita, Kan., showing 24" and 10" Adler "Third Dimension" Letters used interchangeably on "Remova-Panel" Glass-in-Frame units, on front face of sign. Sign is double-faced, set about 30 ft. in front of theatre, suspended between 2 masonry pillars. Front face shows current program and back shows coming attractions.

In 6-line, Double-Faced Sign, 85" Visible Height Made Possible by

ADLER

"REMOVA-PANEL"

with "THIRD DIMENSION" Letters

So easy to profit from large, brilliant marquee program displays, because ADLER Exclusive "Remova-Panel" frames give quick, easy access to any part of the interior of the sign for all maintenance—replacing lamps, fluorescent tubing, cleaning, repairs—all without removing any large, heavy frame and glass unit.

And ADLER "Third Dimension" Letters—the original and only letters with true third dimensional depth—provide flexible display in all interchangeable sizes—in all popular colors—all easily handled in and out of the sign.

A New FOREST Development!

ELECTRONIC CONTROL PROJECTION Arc LAMP

A new and highly acclaimed development — ELECTRONIC CONTROL — makes present mechanical systems of feeding the positive and negative carbons in projection arc lamps old-fashioned and obsolete; assures faultless arc control of precision accuracy, maintaining the proper focal point necessary for producing maximum light intensity without the necessity of constant watching and adjusting. Eliminates cams, gears, clutches and associated gadgets.

PUT MORE LIGHT ON YOUR SCREEN

Install new National REFLECTORS

● All reflectors gradually deteriorate to a state where replacement cost is insignificant. A drop of only 10% in reflective efficiency results in a corresponding decrease in screen brilliancy, and represents a loss amounting to 10% of the cost of your current and carbons. Replace yours now, and regularly. Available for all types and makes of arc lamps.

A cleansing, disinfecting and deodorizing compound, Fort-A-Cide has no odor of its own. Its use does not call patrons' attention to the fact that theatres need disinfection. It is compounded of six ingredients, some of which are penetrants piercing through dirt and soil to permit the accompanying sanitizing ingredients to do their work with maximum efficiency. Laboratory reports from impartial civic authorities show Fort-A-Cide to be vastly more efficient as germ-killer than carbolic acid—under some circumstances, 500 times as efficient.

Sturdy Chair-Covering Fabric Serves Music Hall 14 Years

Gus Eyssell, managing director of Radio City Music Hall, confirms that some of the Goodall Fabrics mohair plush chair covering material installed fourteen years ago is still in use in that immaculately maintained auditorium.

Chairs that have had the heaviest use have needed re-upholstering in fourteen years to keep their appearance up to Music Hall standards, Eysell explains, but in other areas of a theatre that has put out the SRO sign on countless occasions the original material still serves.

The current line of Goodall theatre upholstery material embodies marked improvements in durability over that installed in the Music Hall so long ago, according to C. J. Dyer of Goodall Fabrics.

The original, "Moravia" quality, has been replaced by one now known as "Molano" quality, which is even more durable because it is more tightly woven, Dyer asserts.

Explaining how the mohair plush chair material was first developed, Dyer declared in an interview with an STR representative:

"With the advent of sound pictures, the acoustic properties of the theatre became of major importance. Feeling that we, as manufacturers of theatre seating upholstery, might contribute our bit toward the solution of this problem, we had all types of upholstery materials used on theatre seating tested for their sound absorption qualities by an independent laboratory equipped for this purpose.

"These tests showed that a mohair plush had the highest absorption quality of any fabric submitted for testing. This information, as well as the general ratings of other types of upholstery material, was made available to the industry.

"The ideal theatre seating upholstery material should also be luxurious in appearance, and of exceptional durability Having these three factors in mind, we manufactured our Moravia quality, now much improved and known as Molano quality, as being the ideal theatre seating upholstery material, luxurious in appearance, of great durability, and having the highest sound absorption qualities.

"It is interesting to note that the sound-absorbing properties of this material are practically the same as that of the human body, giving, therefore, an even absorption, whether the theatre is partly or completely filled.

"Many theatres, while preferring materials such as noted above on the backs of their chairs, for various reasons prefer a cushion leather-like in appearance and properties. Ordinary simulated leathers used for this purpose were unsatisfactory due to a tendency to crack and peel. Our answer to this problem was our Redo quality, which resisted cracking and peeling so satisfactorily that the trade still asks for it, although we are today making a much improved article, known as Redolite, the coating of which is compounded of a modern vinylite plastic.

"Both of these items can be easily cleaned with bubble cleaner, or with suds made of pure soap and lukewarm water. Both represent, we believe, excellent examples of a product 'blended for performance'." (#22).

Immaculately maintained, New York's Radio City Music Hall is still using sturdy plush mohair chair fabric installed 14 years ago.

File for Reference

Here reproduced by permission is the "old reliable"—the Bausch & Lomb table that shows at a glance what lens to use for any length of throw and any desired size of screen image. Keep it on hand. To use the table, select in the top row of figures the one that most nearly corresponds with the distance from lens to screen in your theatre. Then run down the column under it until you find a pair of figures that represent the width and height of the screen image you want. Trace straight left along that line to the extreme left-hand column, where you will find the equivalent focus needed to enable a lens to give you that size picture at that distance. Order your lenses accordingly.

Wide-angle projection, greater magnification, and improved image quality are claimed for this new Super-Snaplite coated projection lens, which has the exceptional rated speed of f 1.9. Product of Kollmorgen Optical Corporation, the new lens is made in focal lengths from 2" through 5" in ¼" steps. The aluminum-alloy mounting is one piece, permanently and hermetically sealed so the lens need never be taken apart for cleaning. Virtually perfect flatness of field is claimed, to provide screen images as sharp at the corners as at the center. (#30).

When re-enameling radiators, first go over them vigorously with a wire brush to take off all loose rust and paint. Then wipe them with turpentine or benzine and apply radiator enamel according to directions, remembering that thin coats will resist chipping better than thick ones. In selecting the color of enamel to use, choose one slightly lighter in tone than you want it to be, to allow for the minor darkening effect produced when the radiator heats up. The radiator should be cold until the last coat of paint is thoroughly dry. (#31).

A new blacklight lamp which can be plugged into any 110-volt a.c. outlet is announced by Switzer Brothers. (#31).

THE Theatre Dictionary

A Glossary of Terms Associated With Theatre Equipment

A

Aberration. A deviation from perfection in the performance of a lens which impairs the definition or shape of the image it forms. See Astigmatism, Chromatic Aberration, Coma, Distortion, Spherical Aberration.

A.C. Alternating current.

Acetate Film. A motion picture film whose base is composed principally of cellulose acetate.

Achromatic Lens. Briefly, a lens free from chromatic aberration. In optical usage the expression is usually limited to lenses in which chromatic aberration has been corrected for two wave lengths, leaving some residual chromatic aberration for other wave lengths.

Just as there are two kinds of chromatic aberration, longitudinal and radial, there are two kinds of achromatic lenses: (1) lenses like telescope and microscope objectives for which images for two colors must lie in the same plane, and (2) lenses like eyepieces and magnifiers for which it is important that the images be of the same size for two colors. Distinguished from: Apochromatic Lens.

Acoustics. (1) The science of sound. (2) Acoustics of an Enclosure: The hearing and recording conditions within an enclosure such as a theatre or sound recording stage. The reflection and absorption of sound within the enclosure are factors affecting its acoustic conditions.

Acoustic Absorptivity. The acoustic absorptivity of a surface is equal to one minus the acoustic reflectivity of the surface.

Acoustic Intensity Level, Sound Energy Flux Density Level. The intensity level, in bells, of a sound is the logarithm to the base ten of the ratio of the intensity, I, of this sound, to the reference intensity, Io. Intensity level may also be expressed in decibels.

Acoustic Ohm. An acoustic resistance, reactance, or impedance is said to have a magnitude of one acoustic ohm when a sound pressure of one dyne per square centimeter produces a volume velocity of one cubic centimeter per second.

Acoustic Reflectivity. The acoustic reflectivity of a surface not a generator, is the ratio of the rate of flow of sound energy reflected from the surface, on the side of incidence, to the incident rate of flow. Unless otherwise specified all possible directions of incident flow are assumed to be equally probable. Also, unless otherwise stated the values given apply to a portion of an infinite surface thus eliminating edge effects.

Acoustic Resistance. The acoustic resistance of a sound medium is the real component of the acoustic impedance that is responsible for the dissipation of energy. The unit is the acoustic ohm.

Acoustic Transmittivity. The acoustic transmittivity of an interface or septum is the ratio of the rate of flow of transmitted sound energy to the rate of incident flow. Unless otherwise specified all directions of incident flow are assumed to be equally probable.

Actinic Light. Radiant energy whose wave length is such that it is able to cause chemical reactions or electrical effects to take place. Particularly, light which can form a photographic latent image or activate a photoelectric cell.

Adiabatic. An adjective descriptive of a process in which no heat is added to or extracted from the system executing the process.[1]

A.F. Audio frequency.

Air Cleaner. A device designed for the purpose of removing air-borne impurities such as dusts, fumes and smokes. (Air cleaners include air washers and air filters.)[1]

Air Conditioning. The simultaneous control of all or at least the first three of those factors affecting both the physical and chemical conditions of the atmosphere within any structure. These factors include temperature, humidity, motion, distribution, dust, bacteria, odors and toxic gases, most of which affect in greater or lesser degree human health or comfort.[1]

Air Washer. An enclosure in which air is forced through a spray of water in order to cleanse, humidify, or dehumidify the air.[1]

Aisle. A passageway in the seating area of a theatre. Center Aisle: An aisle on the longitudinal axis of the auditorium. Cross-over: A transverse aisle. Intermediate Aisle: Any longitudinal aisle that is not a center aisle or a wall aisle. Wall Aisle: An aisle along one of the side walls of the auditorium.

Aisle Lights. Fixtures mounted on end-chair standards, designed to illuminate aisles only.

Alabaster Glass. Glass simulating natural alabaster and having a gray or paraffin-like appearance.[2]

Amplification Factor. Measure of the grid voltage effectiveness in relation to the plate voltage in affecting plate current.

Amplifier. A device for increasing the amplitude of electric current, voltage, and/or power, through the control by the input power of a larger amount of power supplied by a local source to the output circuit. Specifically, (1) a vacuum tube used for this purpose; (2) the whole circuit of which such a tube is the essential element.[3]

Amplitude. The maximum height, or maximum depth, of a wave, measured from its base line or middle position. One-half the distance through which each part of the medium carrying the wave will vibrate from the time a crest passes to the time the next trough passes. The energy contained in a wave varies as the square of the amplitude of the wave.[3]

Anaglyph. A type of stereoscopic reproduction in which two pictures representing the scene as observed from two different positions are reproduced in contrasting colors and viewed simultaneously, each eye being screened from the image seen by the other eye by suitable light filters. If the images are orange and cyan, they may be viewed through spectacles which restrict the light seen by the viewer's eyes to blue and red respectively.

Anastigmat. Briefly, a lens free from astigmatism.

Anemometer. An instrument for measuring the velocity of moving air.[1]

Angle of Incidence. The angle between a ray of light falling on a surface and the normal to that surface at the point where the ray and surface meet.

Angle of Reflection. When a ray of light is reflected by striking an optical surface, the angle between the normal to the surface at the point of incidence and the reflected ray.

Angstrom. A unit of length commonly used in spectroscopy for measuring the wave length of light. The relationships between several common units of length are as follows:

1 micron	$= 3.937 \times 10^{-5}$ inch
	$= 10^{-4}$ centimeter
1 millimicron	$= 3.937 \times 10^{-8}$ inch
	$= 10^{-7}$ centimeter
1 Angstrom	$= 3.937 \times 10^{-9}$ inch
	$= 10^{-8}$ centimeter

Aniline Dyes. A term broadly applied to synthetic organic dyestuffs, which are derived from aniline or other intermediates made from coal-tar.

Anode. Positive terminal of an electric device (cell or tube), at which the current (in the conventional direction) enters the device.[3]

Aperture. Effective Aperture: The apparent diameter of a lens viewed from the position of the object against a diffusely illuminated background, such as a sky. Picture Aperture: The rectangular opening in a metal plate at which each frame of the motion picture film is situated during exposure, printing, or projection. Relative Aperture: The ratio of the focal length of a lens to its effective aperture for an object located at infinity. See f/number.

Aperture Plate. A metallic plate in a camera, printer, or projector containing the picture aperture.

Aperture Stop. The obstruction or element in an optical system which cuts off or limits the marginal rays of light which can pass from the object to the image.

Apochromatic Lens. A lens which is corrected for chromatic aberration in such a way as to make the images for three different colors of light coincide in size and position. See Achromatic Lens.

Apparent Candlepower. The apparent candlepower of an extended source of light measured at a specified distance is the candlepower of a point source of light which would produce the same illumination at that distance.[2]

Arc. Column of very hot, light-emitting gas, carrying an electric current sustaining this condition.[3]

Arc, Mirror or Reflector. Projection arc with a concave mirror placed back of it to reflect and concentrate the light.[3]

Artificial Daylight. Radiant energy having the same (or nearly the same) spectral composition as direct solar radiation plus skylight. According to the best available data, this corresponds to a color temperature of approximately 7000° K.

Aspheric. In general, non-spherical; in optics, usually applied to surfaces of revolution generated by the revolution of a curve other than a circle, such as a parabola.

Astigmatism. One of the aberrations of lenses: A variation in the position of the image of a point object off the axis with the meridian of the oblique pencil of light involved in the image formation. The greatest difference will be found between the image position for the principal meridian, that one which contains the axis of the lens (called the tangential meridian), and that meridian at right angles to it (called the sagittal meridian). A lens having astigmatism is unable to image horizontal and vertical lines in the same plane with equal sharpness.

Atmospheric Light Reflection. Reflection of light by particles of dust in the atmosphere of an auditorium. See Tyndall Cone.

Attenuation. Weakening of intensity.[3]

Audio Frequency. A frequency of vibration corresponding to a normally audible sound-wave. Audio frequencies for good hearing range roughly from 20 to 15,000 cycles per second.

Audio-Frequency Amplifier. Magnifies currents whose frequency of alternation lies in the audio-frequency range.[3]

Audion. Three-electrode vacuum tube.[3]

Auditorium Bowl Floor. An auditorium floor inclined for curved rows of seats in which the change of pitch takes place in such a way that all of the seats in each row are on one level.

Auditorium Floor Pitch. Combination Pitch: A floor which slopes downward and then upward toward the front wall of the auditorium. Down Pitch: A floor which slopes in part or whole downward toward the auditorium front wall to provide sight line clearances. Reverse Pitch: A floor which slopes upward in part or whole toward the auditorium front wall to provide raised seating levels located near to a motion picture screen so as to bring these seating levels as close to the screen level as possible. Uniform Pitch: A floor having an equal rise or fall for each row of seats.

Auditorium Front Wall. A false wall or structural wall at the front of the auditorium on the audience side of the screen.

Auditorium Lighting. Any lights in use in the auditorium when the motion picture show is not in progress.

B

"B" Power Supply. Device for current supply in the plate circuit of a vacuum tube.

Back Focal Length. The distance from the back of the lens to he film in the gate while the image is in focus on the screen.[3]

Back-Focus. Distance from the principal focus of a lens (behind the lens) to its nearest face.[3]

Backlash. "Play" or looseness of a screw or bolt in its fitting.[3]

Baffle: A wall or block for the absorption of sound.[3]

Baffle. A plate or wall for deflecting gases or fluids.[1]

Base. The transparent, flexible support, commonly cellulose nitrate or acetate sheet, on which photographic emulsions are coated to make a motion picture film.

Basic Dyes. Those synthetic, organic dyestuffs which are basic in character, as distinguished from acid dyes. Commonly these dyes are sold as the hydrochlorides of the free color bases. Many of the optical sensitizers are basic dyes, as are the dyes used for dye toning.

Basic Frequency. The basic frequency of any wave is that frequency which is considered to be the most important. In a driven system, it would in general be the driving frequency, while in most periodic waves it would correspond to the fundamental frequency.

Beam-Splitter. An optical system so arranged as to reflect or transmit two or more portions of a light-beam along different optical paths.

Beat Frequency. Number of beats per second.

Beats. Vibrations produced by interference between two or more wave-lengths.[3]

Black. (1) One of the unique visual qualities correlated (a) with a minimal visual stimulus in a portion of the visual field while the surrounding field is occupied by a high degree of achromatic stimulus or (b) with a minimal visual stimulus following a high degree of achromatic stimulus. (2) In practice, any extremely dark, dull color. (3) The absence of visual light.

Black Body. A perfect radiator and absorber of electromagnetic energy. The properties of incandescent tungsten and carbon approximate those of a black body.

Black Light. Radiant energy lying outside the visible range, especially light in the near ultra-violet region of the spectrum which is converted to visible light by the action of suitable fluorescent materials.

Blast Heater. A set of heat transfer coils or sections used to heat air which is drawn or forced through it by a fan.[1]

Bleeding (of color). The diffusing of dye away from a dye-image; most noticeable where dark areas adjoin light areas in a picture.

Bloop. The sound producd when an imperfect splice in a sound track passes through the sound reproducing mechanism of a motion picture projector.

Blooping Ink. Opaque (black) ink used to cover the joint of a sound track splice to prevent the splice from making a noticeable noise when passing through the projector.

Blooping Patch. Triangular or oval black section introduced over a splice in the positive sound track, to prevent the noise which the splice would otherwise cause during reproduction. The patch effects a relatively gradual diminution in the transmitted light, followed by gradual restoration to the original value. The sound frequency due to a properly blooped patch is too low to be heard.[3]

Blue. The preferred name for the color of the three-color additive primary which consists of light in the range 400-500 millimicrons.

Boiler Heating Surface. That portion of the surface of the heat-transfer apparatus in contact with the fluid being heated on one side and the gas or refractory being cooled on the other, in which the fluid being heated forms part of the circulating system; this surface shall be measured on the side receiving heat. This includes the boiler, water walls, water screens, and water floor.[1]

Boiler Horsepower. The equivalent evaporation of 34.5 lb. of water per hour from and at 212 F. This is equal to a heat output of 970.3 x 34.5 = 33,475 BTU per hour.[1]

Bordering. A manipulation resulting in creating the "stereoscopic window" through which a three-dimensional picture seems to be seen.

Box Light. A lamp, consisting of a cluster of incandescents mounted on a pedestal stand. Unlike the bunchlight, it does not include a reflector.

Breezing. Said to occur when projected picture is blurred as a result of distortion of focus in camera, printer, or projector—due to uneven shrinkage of negative or positive, or to perforations of uneven pitch.[3]

Bridging Amplifier. Any amplifier or relatively high input impedance, so that a number of such units may be connected in multiple across a relatively low impedance circuit without materially affecting its electrical condition and without reaction on one another. Abbreviated B.A.[3]

Brightness. (1) A photometric measure of light emission per unit area of a luminous body or of a translucent or reflecting surface, i.e., candle-power per unit area. Brightness determines the stimulus value of a given surface as a visual object, and this sense is conveniently expressed in candles per square meter or in millilamberts.

$$B = dI/(dA \cos \theta)$$

Brightness is the luminous intensity, I of a surface (real or virtual) in a given direction, θ, per unit projected area of the surface. A cos θ. Note: In practice no surface follows exactly the cosine formula of emission or reflection; hence the brightness of a surface generally is not uniform but various with the angle at which it is viewed. Some common units of brightness and their relations are ase follows:

1 candle per square inch	= 452 foot-lamberts = 0.487 lambert = 487 millialamberts
1 foot-lambert	= 1 lumen per square foot = 0.00221 candle per square inch = 1.076 millilamberts
1 lambert	= 1 lumen per square centimeter = 1000 millilamberts = 929 foot-lamberts = 2.054 candles per square inch
1 millilambert	= 0.929 foot-lambert = 0.002054 candle per square inch

The candle per square inch and lambert are commonly used for high brightness such as light sources. The foot-lambert and millilambert are used for ordinary illuminated surfaces. The foot-lambert equals incident foot-candles times reflection factor, assuming a diffusing surface or medium.

(2) Degree of resemblance to white. In common usage the term brightness often refers to the intensity of sensation which results from viewing surfaces or spaces from which light comes to the eye.

Brilliance. The characteristisc of a color which determines the intensity of the sensation it produces in the eye of an observer.

British Thermal Unit. A unit of energy defined in terms of the international steam-table calorie through the convenient relation 1 BTU per pound per degree Fahrenreit = 1 cal per gram per degree Centigrade. It is approximately the quantity of heat required to raise the temperature of 1 lb. of liquid water from 63 to 64 F.[1]

Brush. A device for making electrical contact between the rotating commutator of a generator and the stationary circuit wires. Brushes are made from carbon, copper wires, copper strips and copper gauze, but carbon brushes are most largely used.

Brush Loss. Loss, in watts, due to lack of perfect electrical contact between brush and commutator. May be greatly increased by dirty brushes, dirty rough commutator, or lack of sufficient pressure between brushes and commutator.

BTU. See British Thermal Unit.

Buckle. Unflatness of a motion picture film due to the edges shrinking while the film was in the roll.

Bunchlight. A floodlight containing up to ten or more incandescent lamps, mounted on a pedestal stand.

B.X. A flexible metal tubing for the protection of electric wires, much used for interior work. A flexible metal conduit.

By-pass. A pipe or duct, usually controlled by valve or damper, for conveying a fluid around a main control valve or damper.[1]

"C" Power Supply. Device for supplying current to apply a grid bias; connected between the cathode and grid of a vacuum tube.

Calorie. (Large calorie or I.T. kilocalorie) is equal to 1000 international steam-table calories = 1/860 international kilowatt hour. For practical purposes it may be considered as 1/100 of the heat required to raise the temperature of 1 kilogram of water from 0 to 100 C.[1]

Cam. In general, a non-circular rotating piece in a mechanism. In particular, the device which operates the intermittent movement of the film in a motion picture camera, printer, or projector.[2]

Camera Angle. The angle of view taken by a motion picture camera in photographing a scene, usually referring to the angle in a horizontal plane but it may be used as the angle in any plane.

Candle. The unit of luminous intensity. In the United States a specified fraction of the average horizontal candlepower of a group of 45 carbon-filament lamps preserved at the National Bureau of Standards.[2]

Candlepower. Luminous intensity expressed in candles.[2]

Capacitance. The measure of the quantity of electricity a condenser can hold. It equals the quantity stored divided by the voltage (pressure) storing it.[3]

Capacitative Coupling. Coupling of one circuit with another by means of a capacity common to both.

Capacity, Carrying. Current a conductor can carry without becoming overheated.[3]

Carbons. The carbon rods or pencils used in an arc lamp.

Carbon Jaw. The jaw of an arc lamp by means of which carbons are gripped and held in place.

Carrying Capacity. The greatest number of amperes an electrical conductor can safely carry.

Cased Glass. Glass composed of two or more layers of different glasses, usually a clear, transparent layer to which is added a layer of opal, opalescent or colored glass.[2]

Cel Side, Celluloid Side. On a motion picture film which carries an emulsion on one side only, the side on which the base is exposed or which is opposite to the "emulsion side."

Central Fan System. A mechanical indirect system of heating, ventilating, or air conditioning, in which the air is treated or handled by equipment located outside the rooms served usually at a central location, and is conveyed to and from the rooms by means of a fan and a system of distributing ducts.[1]

Change-over. In projection, the act of changing from one projector to another, preferably without interrupting the continuity of projection: or, the points in the picture at which such a change is made.

Characteristic, Characteristic Curve. Graph showing the essential features of the performance of a photoelectric cell, vacuum tube, photographic emulsion, or other piece of apparatus. For a film, the curve shows how transmission, or density, varies with exposure.

Chimney Effect. The tendency in a duct or other vertical air passage for air to rise when heated, owing to its decrease in density.[1]

Choke, Choke Coil. Coil of wire wound on an iron core and thus possessing high inductance.[3]

Chromatic Aberration. The failure of a lens or optical system to unit into a common focus the rays of light of different wavelengths eminating from a point-object. The variation in image position with wavelength may be in respect to (1) distance from the lens to the image in the direction of the optical axis (longitudinal chromatic aberration), or (2) distance from the optical axis to the image in a direction at right angles to the axis (radial chromatic aberration).

Cinch Marks. Short scratches on the surface of a motion pitcure film, running parallel to its length, and caused by improper winding of the roll which permitted one coil of film to slide on another.

Cine. A prefix used to refer to the motion picture art, or motion picture apparatus; probably originating as an abbreviation for cinema or cinematograph.

Circle of Confusion. Round image of a point of light not in focus. The circle of least confusion of a lens is the smallest circle of confusion obtainable with the lens by the best possible adjustment of focus.

Circuit Breaker. A device, somewhat similar to a switch, by means of which a dangerous variation in current flow will operate electro magnets and open the circuit. Circuit breakers are made to operate both for over-and-under-load.

Class A Amplifier. Amplifier whose grid bias and alternating grid voltages produce a plate current that flows at all times in a specific tube.

Class AB Amplifier. Amplifier whose grid bias and alternating grid voltages produce a plate current that flows less than the full, but more than half the electrical cycle.

Class B Amplifier. Amplifier in which the plate current in a specific tube flows for about one-half of each cycle with grid voltage applied but in which plate current is zero without grid voltage applied.

Class C Amplifier. Amplifier in which plate current in each tube is zero when alternating grid voltage is not applied.

Coefficient of Heat Transmission. The amount of heat (BTU) transmitted from air to air in one hour per square foot of the wall, floor, roof or ceiling for a difference in temperature of 1 F between the air on the inside and that on the outside of the wall, floor, roof or ceiling.[1]

Coefficient of Sound Absorption. When sound energy strikes any substance, it is partly reflected, partly transmitted, and partly absorbed (converted into heat). The percentage of energy absorbed by a given object is the object's absorption coefficient.

Collecting Lens. In a three-lens condenser, the lens nearest the light source.[3]

Collimated. A beam of light is said to be collimated when all of its rays have been made parallel. See Specular.

Color Analyzer. (1) A colorimeter. (2) An instrument used to determine the relative brightness of light of different wavelengths reflected or transmitted by a substance or emitted by a source.

Color Blindness. Any of various types of abnormal vision which impair the ability of the abnormal eye to detect color differences and relationships which are apparent to persons having normal sight. In total color blindness, all colors appear as greys; the more usual partial color blindness (dichromatism) is marked by the inability to distinguish between certain pairs, for example: red and green.

Color Box. A device holding gelatines of different colors and permitting one to be substituted for another or two or more to be used together.

Color Frames. Devices in which gelatine sheets are mounted.

Color Match. Two samples of light or colored materials are said to be a visual color match if they produce identical color sensations when viewed under some stated condition. Two samples of light or colored materials are said to be a physical color match if they produce identical color sensations when viewed under all possible conditions.

Color Mixture Curves. See Color Sensation Curves.

Color Photography. Any process in which an attempt is made to reproduce the light-and-shade and color of a scene by photographic means.

Color Sensation Curves, Excitation Curves. Curves based upon the response of the normal human eye, showing the relative excitations of the three elementary sensations, according to the Young-Helmholtz theory of color vision.

Color Sensitivity (Photographic). The sensitivity of a photographic material to light of various wavelengths. The color sensitivity may be measured by making a wedge spectrogram using the particular light source, emulsion, and developer that are being studied.

Color Temperature (of a Light Source). The temperature at which a black body radiator will visually match the color of the source. Color temperatures are commonly expressed on the absolute scale in degrees Kelvin.

Color Wheel. A device capable of being rotated, for holding gelatines and for permitting one to be substituted for another as required. May be motor driven.

Coma. An unsymmetrical spherical aberration of a lens in a principal plane of an oblique pencil of light. In the presence of coma, a point-object off the axis of a lens is imaged as figure resembling the general appearance of a comet, the tail of which may be directed toward the optical axis or away from it.

Comfort Air Conditioning. The process by which simultaneously the temperature, moisture content, movement and quality of the air in enclosed spaces intended for human occupancy may be maintained within required limits.[1]

Comfort Line. The effective temperature at which the largest percentage of adults feels comfortable.[1]

Comfort Zone (Average). The range of effective temperatures over which the majority (50 per cent or more) of adults feel comfortable. Comfort Zone (Extreme): The range of effective temperatures over which one or more adults feel comfortable.[1]

Commutator. That part of a dynamo that changes direction of currents, so that the current flowing in the outside circuit will remain d.c.[3]

Commutator Ripple. Small alternations in the emf produced by a d-c generator, due to the operation of the commutator. This ripple is the chief cause of arc hum.[3]

Complementary Colors. Two colors are said to be complementary when their spectral properties are related in any of the following ways: (1) Additive Complementary Colors: Two colors are complementary if they can be combined additively to form a visual neutral. For example, the colors might be blue and yellow papers which can be combined as sectors on a spinning top to produce a visual grey. (2) Subtractive

Complementary Colors: Two colors are complementary in another sense if the absorption bands of one correspond to the transmission bands of the other. Thus, a red and a cyan dyestuff might have their spectral properties so related that a subtractive combination of the two dyes would be a visual neutral, having approximately equal absorption for light of all wavelengths in the visible range. (3) Complementary After-image: As the result of retinal fatigue, an eye which has formed a fixed image of a bright object for several seconds will see a faint, negative image of complementary hue by looking quickly at a black field.

Concealed Radiator. A heating device located within, adjacent to, or exterior to the room being heated but so covered or enclosed or concealed that the heat transfer surface of the device, which may be either a radiator or a convector, is not visible from the room. Such a device transfers its heat to the room largely by convection air currents.[1]

Concentric Arcuated Seating Rows. Seats placed in curved rows, whose radii increase from row to row.

Condenser (1) (Optical) A lens or combination of lenses used to gather light from a source and to converge (condense) it, as upon the aperture of a projector, or into an intense spot of light for use in a theatre, etc. (2) Electrical) A device for storing electrical energy consisting of two electrical conductors separated by a non-conducting medium.

Conductance. The amount of heat (BTU) transmitted from surface to surface in one hour through one square foot of a material or construction, whatever its thickness, when the temperature difference is 1 F between the two surfaces.[1]

Conduction. The transmission of heat through and by means of matter unaccompanied by any obvious motion of the matter.[1]

Conductivity. The amount of heat (BTU) transmitted in one hour through one square foot of a homogenous material 1 in. thick (or 1 ft.) for a difference in temperature of 1 F between the two surfaces of the material.

Conductor (Heat). A material capable of readily conducting heat. The opposite of an insulator or insulation.[1]

Conductor (Electrical). Any substance which will transmit electric current.

Conduit. A metal or armored tubing in which electric wires are placed for their protection.

Cones. One of the two chief light-sensitive elements of the retina, frequently regarded as the seat of color vision. See Rods.

Continuous Projector. Any motion picture projector in which the film travels continuously through the film gate, and a steady image is obtained on the screen by moving some of the elements in the optical system as required to compensate for the motion of the film. Distinguished from: Intermittent projector.

Contrast. (1) The general term used to describe the tone separation in a print which corresponds to a given difference in the light-and-shade of the negative or subject from which it was made. Thus, "contrast" is the general term for the property called "gamma." See H & D Curve. (2) The range of tones in a photographic negative or positive expressed as the ratio of the extreme opacities or transparencies or as the difference between the extreme densities. This range is more properly described as "scale" or "latitude." (3) The ability of a photographic material, developer, or process as a whole to differentiate between small differences in the tones of the subject.

Contrast (Color). (1) The ratio of the intensities of the sensations caused by two colors. Sometimes the logarithm of this ratio. (2) In color photography, the ability of a process of color reproduction to distinguish between colors of equal brightness but unequal hue and saturation, and to reproduce the mas sufficiently distinct colors in the final print. In this connection, it is customary to distinguish between the color contrast of such a process and its black-and white contrast.

Convection. The transmission of heat by the circulation of a liquid or a gas such as air. Convection may be natural or forced.[1]

Convector. A heat transfer surface designed to transfer its heat to surrounding air largely or wholly by convection. Such a surface may or may not be enclosed or concealed when concealed and enclosed the resulting device is sometimes referred to as a concealed radiator.

Converging Lens. The lens of a condenser combination which is farthest away from the light source.

Core: An unflanged, cylindrical form on which film is wound for shipment or storage.

Coupling. Interconnection of two circuits in a way that permits transfer of energy from one to the other.

Covelights. Fixtures, usually including reflectors or reflector trough, mounted in lighting coves.

Coverage Power. The ability of a lens or optical system to form a satisfactory image of given size. "Covering power" is commonly expressed as the diameter of the maximum circle in the image plane within which a uniformly bright image free from objectionable aberrations can be formed.

Crater. Depression that forms in the positive electrode of a carbon arc.

Crinkle. A defect of a processed motion picture film consisting of a wavy fluting extending along one edge of the film. Crinkle may result from a mechanical mal-adjustment of a processing machine which stretches one edge of the film while it is wet.

Cue, Cue Mark. On a motion picture film, a mark or series of marks which appears in the upper right hand corner of the screen during projection, shortly before the end of the roll, to warn the projectionist that the end of the roll is approaching.

Curl. A defect of a photographic film consisting of unflatness in a plane cutting across the width of the film. Curl may result from improper drying conditions, and the direction and amount of curl may vary with the humidity of the air to which the film is exposed.

Curvature. A defect of motion picture films consisting of a lack of straightness of the film base measured along an edge of the film.

Curvature of Field. The inability of a lens, free from astigmatism, to image a flat object perpendicular to the axis of the lens on an image plane which is also perpendicular to the axis. In the case of a lens possessing astigmatism, curvature of field is taken as the distance from the ideal image plane to the surface midway between the image surfaces for the tangential and sagittal meridians of the lens.

Cut. (1) In shooting a scene on a set, to terminate a take. (2) In assembling and editing the material which will be spliced together to make the finished negative roll from which reelase prints are made, to discard unwanted film and select which is to be used.

Cycle. One complete set of the changes of a wave (or other periodic phenomenon), as from crest to trough and back to crest again. May refer to waves of sound, or alternating current, or any other waves or vibrations. Always relative to a second of time; thus "60 cycles" means 60 cycles per second.[3]

Cycle Line. A continuous opaque line running the length of a motion picture film between the pictures and the sound track or between the sound track and the perforations.

D

Dailies. See Rush Print.

Daylight. Light consisting of a natural combination of sunlight and skylight. For standardization of spectral quality, measurements are made at noon. The color quality of daylight matches approximately that of a black body at 7000 degrees Kelvin.

Decibel. The number of decibels denoting the ratio of two amounts of power is ten times the logarithm to the base ten of this ratio. Thus, a decibel is one tenth of a bel. If P_1 and P_2 designate two amounts of power and n is the number of decibels denoting their ratio:

$$n = 10 \log_{10} (P_1/P_2)$$

Definition. The ability of a photographic process, or some particular element of such a process, to reproduce fine details. In motion picture practice, a common test of definition involves photographing a test chart consisting of a standard pattern of black and white lines. The result may be reported in terms of the number of "lines per millimeter" in the reproduction of the finest pattern whose details have been resolved. Distinguished from: Resolving Power.

Degree-Day. A unit, based upon temperature difference and time, used in specifying the nominal heating load in winter. For any one day there exists as many degree-days as there are degrees Fahrenheit difference in temperature between the mean temperature for the day and 65 F.[1]

Dehumidify. To reduce, by any process, the density of water vapor within a given space.[1]

Dehydrate. To separate or to remove water in all forms from matter. Liquid water, hygroscopic water, and water of crystallization or water of hydration are included.[1]

Depth. In a non-stereoscopic picture, an illusion of three dimensional space which is sometimes created by a combination of favorable lighting and coloring of the set and favorable viewing conditions for the reproduction.

Depth of Field. The range of object distances within which objects are in satisfactory sharp focus in a photograph.

Depth of Focus. (1) Same as Depth of Field. (2) The range through which a photographic plate can be moved forward and backward with respect to the lens while maintaining satisfactorily sharp focus on an object at a given distance.

Developing. Chemically treating an exposed photographic material to convert the latent image to a visible image.

Dew-Point Temperature. The temperature corresponding the saturation (100 per cent relative humidity), for a given moisture content.[1]

Diaphragm. (1) (Acoustical) The disc of a loudspeaker, which is caused to vibrate by electrical impulses, thereby becoming a source of sound; also a disc in a microphone, which is caused to vibrate by impinging sound waves. (2) (Optical) A device such as a perforated plate or an iris, which limits either the aperature of a lens, the field covered by the lens, or both, depending upon its location.

Diffraction. Bending of waves around an obstacle.

Diffusion. (1) (Optical) The scattering of light rays so as to cause the light falling on a surface or passing through an aperture to scatter in all directions in contrast to the regular radiation of light from a point source. Diffusion may be introduced by reflection from a matte surface, by transmission through a frosted or opal glass, or by the use of an integrating bar. When diffusion is complete, a sharp image of the light-source can no longer be seen, and its place is taken by a uniform, extended source which emits light equally in all directions.

Dimmer. An electrical device for altering the intensity of lights connected to it. Usually a variable resistor, it may also be a variable reactor or an electronic control.

Dimmer Bank. A group of dimmers, mechanically or electrically connected for operation either singly or in groups.

Direct Current (D.C.). A current constant in direction, though not necessarily in value. A direct current constant both in direction and value is called a continuous current. Direct Current, which, while continuous in direction, pulsates as to pressure.

Direct Current Converter. A machine for converting D.C. of one voltage to D.C. of a different voltage.

Direct-Indirect Heating Unit. A heating unit located in the room or space to be heated and partially enclosed, the enclosed portion being used to heat air which enters from outside the room.[1]

Direct-Return System (Hot Water). A hot water system in which the water, after it has passed through a heating unit, is returned to the boiler along a direct path so that the total distance traveled by the water is the shortest feasible, and so that there are considerable differences in the lengths of the several circuits composing the system.[1]

Discharge Lamp. A lamp in which light is produced by the passage of electricity through a metallic vapor or a gas enclosed in a tube or bulb.[2]

Dissolve, Lap-Dissolve. In a motion picture film, a gradual transition from one scene to the following scene which is accomplished by overlapping the two scenes in such a way that the screen brightness remains substantially constant, the first scene disappearing as the second appears.

Distortion. (1) (Chromatic) Incorrect rendition of the various colors within a single scene relative to each other, as distinguished from incorrect over-all color balance. (2) (Electrical or Acoustical) A change in wave-form caused by (a) the addition of components having frequencies not originally present, due to circuit elments having non-linear characteristics; (b) a change in the relative amplitudes of the various components of the wave; or, (c) a change in the relative phase of the various components. Two or more of these forms of distortion may occur simultaneously. (3) (Optical) An aberration of lenses which causes them to image straight lines in the margin of the field of view as curves. If the curvature is convex toward the center of the field, the distortion is said to be "pincushion shaped"; if the curvature is concave toward the center of the field, the distortion is called "barrel shaped." When an image is projected by an optical system whose elements are not all per-

B & K Television Shown On Crowd-Size Screen

Variety programs and sporting events broadcast by Balaban & Katz' Chicago television station WBKB, were shown nightly before large crowds in the show window of Chicago's Fair Store, during the week September 30 to October 5. The occasion was the city's 1946 Community Fund drive. Projection was achieved on a screen measuring 22" x 26", using Rauland Corporation apparatus.

RCA Equipment for East Coast Studio

Colonial Pictures Corporation new huge studio at Yonkers, N. Y., which is designed to offer East Coast producers facilities comparable to those at Hollywood, will install all RCA recording equipment. The plant comprises 17 acres, with three 80'x100' sound stages. Recording equipment will include facilities for 200 mil push-pull sound tracks.

Motiograph Men At Toledo Convention

Fred Matthews, H. T. Matthews, W. D. Matthews, Jack Behlke and J. E. Huckelberry will represent Motiograph at Tesma's Toledo convention.

pendicular to the optical axis, the image on the screen may fail to be geometrically similar to the image on the film. This type of distortion is sometimes described as "keystone."

Dolly. Any small rolling platform. Sometimes, specifically, one large enough to carry the camera, cameraman, and director, and used to permit the camera to approach or recede from the scene being photographed.

Douser. Manually or electrically operated shutter in the lamphouse or in the condenser cone by means of which the light may be intercepted before reaching the film.

Down-Feed One-Pipe Riser (Steam). A pipe which carries steam downward to the heating units and into which the condensation from the heating units drains.[1]

Down-Feed System (Steam). A steam heating system in which the supply mains are above the level of the heating units which they serve.[1]

Downlights. Lamps equipped with reflectors and often with lenses, projecting light downward for general illumination or ornamental effect.

Draft Head (Side Outlet Enclosure). The height of a gravity convector between the bottom of the heating unit and the bottom of the air outlet opening. (Top outlet Enclosure): The height of a gravity convector between the bottom of the heating unit and the top of the enclosure.[1]

Drip. A pipe, or a steam trap and a pipe, considered as a unit, which conducts condensation from the steam side of a piping system to the water or return side of the system.[1]

Dry. (A) To separate or to remove liquid water or water vapor from matter. (B) To separate or to remove any readily condensible vapor from other matter.[1]

Dry Air. In psychrometric work, dry air is defined as air without water vapor. This state, though not obtained practically, is used as the basis of calculations.[1]

Dry-Bulb Temperature. The temperature indicated by a standardized thermometer after correction for radiation, etc.[1]

Dry Return. A return pipe in a steam heating system which carries both water of condensation and air. The dry return is above the level of the water line in the boiler in a gravity system.[1]

Dub, Dub In. In the preparation of a complete sound track which will accompany the action of a scene, to introduce during a process of rerecording any sound effect or speech which was not recorded along with the original action.

Dynamic Head or Pressure. Same as Total Pressure.[1]

E

Echo. A defect of auditorium acoustics, consisting of distinctly reflected sound reaching some part of the audience after the original sound has reached the audience directly.

Effect Lighting. Projection of scenic or ornamental patterns, still or moving, such as cloud effects, water effects, etc.

Effect Machines. Lamps for producing effect lighting or effect projection.

Effect Projection. Projection of scenic or ornamental pictures or patterns, still or moving, often used to provide a decorative frame for the motion picture screen at the start of a feature.

Effective Temperature. An arbitrary index which combines into a single value the effect of temperature, humidity, and movement of air on the degree of warmth or cold felt by the human body. The numerical value is that of the temperature of still, saturated air which would induce an identical sensation of warmth.[1]

Efficiency (of a source of light). The ratio of the luminous flux to the total power input. In an electric lamp it is expressed in lumens per watt.[2]

Electro Motive Force. That force which creates and maintains an electric current in, or on, through a conductor. It is commonly termed voltage. It is measured in volts. It is abbreviated E.M.F.

Electron. Unit of negative electricity, and smallest particle of matter.[3]

Electron Emission. Rate at which electrons are emitted from the cathode in a vacuum tube.

Electron Tube, Generally, same as Vacuum Tube, Thermionic. May also refer to Photoelectric Cell.

Emulsion, Emulsion Layer. (1) Broadly, any light sensitive photographic material consisting of a gelatine emulsion containing silver halide together with the base and any other layers or ingredients which may be required to produce a film having desirable mechanical and photographic properties. (2) In discussions of the anatomy of a photographic film, the emulsion layer is any coating which contains light sensitive silver halide grains, as distinguished from the backing base, substratum, or filter layers.

Emulsion Side. That side of a single coated motion picture film on which the emulsion has been coated.

Enthalpy. Enthalpy was formerly called heat content, sometimes total heat. It is a thermodynamic property which serves as a measure of the quantity of thermal energy convected by a fluid in steady flow. In a non-flow process the increase of enthalpy equals the quantity of heat absorbed provided pressure is constant. Specific enthalpy is the ratio of total enthalpy to total weight, that is, enthalpy per unit weight of substance BTU per pound.[1]

Entropy. Entropy is the ratio of the heat added to a substance to the absolute temperature at which it is added. It is a thermodynamic property which, for practical purposes, is best defined by stating its principal functions: (1) during a reversible adiabatic change of state, entropy is constant; (2) during a reversible isothermal change of state, the heat absorbed is equal to absolute temperature times change of entropy. Specific entropy is the ratio of total entropy to total weight, that is, entropy per unit weight, BTU per degree Fahrenheit per pound.[1]

Equivalent Evaporation. The amount of water a boiler would evaporate, in pounds per hour, if it received feed water at 212 F and vaporized it at the same temperature and atmospheric pressure.[1]

Equivalent Focus. A term applicable to compound lenses consisting of two or more individual elements, as in the case of a projection lens. It means that the combination will possess the same power of reduction or magnification possessed by a single, simple lens having the same focal length as the equivalent focus of the combination. For example: A projection lens of 4.5 equivalent focus will, working under the same conditions, project the same size picture that a single lens of 4.5 inch focus.

Estimated Design Load. The sum of the heat emission of the equivalent direct radiation to be installed plus the allowance for heat loss of the connecting piping plus the heat requirements of any auxiliary apparatus connected with the system.[1]

Estimated Maximum Load. The load stated in BTU per hour or equivalent direct radiation that has been estimated to be the greatest or maximum load that the boiler will be called upon to carry.[1]

Exciter Lamp. Light source used in reproducing sound from film.[3]

Exit Court. In theatre architecture, a space which is open to the sky and used for egress from the auditorium.

Exit Passage. In theatre architecture, a totally enclosed space which is used for egress from the auditorium.

Extended Heating Surface. See Heating Surface.[1]

Extended Surface Heating Unit. A heating unit having a relatively large amount of extended surface which may be integral with the core containing the heating medium or assembled over such a core, making good thermal contact by pressure or by being soldered to the core or by both pressure and soldering. An extended surface heating unit is usually placed within an enclosure and therefore functions as a convector.[1]

F

"F" System. System of marking lens diaphragm stops in terms of the focal length. Thus, an F:6.3 stop has a diameter equal to 1/6.3 of the lens focal length.[3]

Fade. (1) In a motion picture film, a gradual transition at the start or end of a scene during which the scene becomes progressively darker until the action disappears. A "fade out" is the gradual changing of a scene to black, a "fade in" is the reverse change.

Fader. In a motion picture sound projection system, a device by which the volume of the reproduced sound is controlled.

Fan Furnace System. See Warm Air Heating System.[1]

Fast. (1) Having a high photographic speed. The term may be applied to a photographic process as a whole, or it may refer to any element in such a process, such as the optical system, the emulsion, or a developer.

Fear Process. Method of recording and projecting wide pictures, by photographing on standard film through an optical system that turns the image through a right angle, so that the image on each frame lies along the length of the film instead of across the film. The frames can be longer than standard, thus permitting a width and height of picture greater than standard. In projection, another optical system is used to reverse the 90-deg. rotation.

Filament. Heated wire from which electrons are emitted in a vacuum tube.[3]

Filament Resistance. Rheostat controlling current through the filament of a vacuum tube.[3]

Film, Motion Picture Film. A thin, flexible ribbon of transparent cellulose material having perforations along one or both edges and bearing either a succession of images or a sensitive layer capable of producing photographic images.

Film Gate. A moveable part of a motion picture camera, printer or projector, which holds the film in proper position against the aperture plate.

Filter. (1) In mechanics, any system of springs, weights, or the like, used to suppress an undesirable vibration or motion. For example, a filter may be required in a motion picture projector to prevent undesirable vibrations caused by gear or sprocket teeth from being transmitted to the film traveling through the sound gate. (2) In electronics, a combination of resistance, reactance, or impedance used to suppress or control noise of some particular frequency which may interfere with good recording or reproduction.

Filter, Band-Pass. A filter designed to pass currents of frequencies within a continuous band limited by an upper and a lower critical or cut-off frequency and substantially reduce the amplitude of currents of all frequencies outside of that band.[3]

Filter, High-Pass. A filter designed to pass currents of all frequencies above a critical or cut-off frequency and substantially reduce the amplitude of currents of all frequencies below this critical frequency.

Filter Low-Pass. A filter designed to pass currents of all frequencies below a critical or cut-off frequency and substantially reduce the amplitude of currents of all frequencies below this critical frequency.[3]

Flame Arc. A flame arc is one in which the entire arc stream, made luminescent by the addition of flame materials, is used as a light source.

Flare. A defect of optical systems, scattered light resulting from reflections at optical surfaces, the walls of the camera, or imperfections in the optical parts, reaches the image plane and produces an overall fog or flare spot which damages the photographic quality of the resulting record.

Flashed Glass. See Cased Glass.[3]

Flat. An image is said to be "flat" if its contrast is too low. Flatness is a defect which does not necessarily affect the entire density scale of a reproduction to the same degree. Thus, a picture may be "flat" in the highlight areas, or "flat" in the shadow regions, or both.

Flicker. Unsteadiness in the apparent intensity of a motion picture image as projected on a theatre screen. Because of "persistance of vision" it is not necessary for the succession of projected images to be uniformly bright and uninterrupted in order to get the appearance of a steady image. It is sufficient to have the succession of images uniformally spaced and to make any periods of darkness sufficiently small to be bridged by the "persistance of vision" of the human eye.

Floodlight. A reflector lamp designed to illuminate a limited area with light evenly distributed.

Fluorescence. The radiation of light by a material which previously absorbed the necessary energy in the form of light of a shorter wavelength.

Fluorescent. Glowing with visible light when illuminated by ultra-violet.

Fluorescent Lamp. An electric discharge lamp in which the radiant energy from the electric discharge is transferred by suitable materials (phosphors) into wavelengths giving higher luminosity.[3]

Fluorescent Light Standard. A lamp consisting of a reflector and a number of fluorescent tubes, mounted on a pedestal stand.

Flux. See Luminous Flux, Radiant Flux.[3]

f/Number. A symbol used to express the relative aperture of a lens. For example, a lens having a relative aperture of 4.5 would be marked: f/4.5. See Aperture.

Focal Length. The distance measured along the optical axis from the image of a point source at infinity to the nodal point on the same side of the lens. When a lens is unsymmetrical, the focal length on one side of the lens is not necessarily the same as the focal length on the other side.

Focal Length, Equivalent. Calculated focal length of a combination of lenses or of a thick lens. Equal the focal length of such a simple thin lens as would give an image (of a distant object) the same size as the combination or thick lens gives.[3]

Focal Plane. The plane perpendicular to the optical axis of the lens at the focus.

Focal Point. Point at which a lens forms the sharpest image of a very distant object.[3]

Focus (verb). To adjust the position of a lens so as to secure the sharpest possible image of an object.[3]

Fog. Darkening of photographic film due to its exposure to undesirable light, or due to poor emulsion or to improper development.

Footcandle. The unit of illumination, when one foot is taken as the unit of length. The illumination of a surface one square foot in area on which there is a uniformly distributed flux of one lumen; or the illumination produced at a surface all points of which are at a distance of one foot from a uniform point source of one candle.[3]

Footlambert. A unit of brightness equal to . . . the uniform brightness of a perfectly diffusing surface emitting or reflecting light at the rate of one lumen per square foot. . . . The average brightness of any surface in footlamberts is, therefore, the product of the illumination in footcandles by the reflection factor of the surface.[3]

Footlights. Fixtures including reflectors or reflector troughs, mounted along the front of the stage.

Foyer. In theatre architecture, a room between the auditorium and the lobby which serves as a gathering place for the members of the audience and facilitates their reaching the different aisles leading to the seating sections.

Frame. A single picture on a motion picture film, representing the appearance of the scene at a particular instant. Thirty-five millimeter sound pictures are projected at the rate of twenty-four frames per second.

Frame (verb). So to adjust the projector framing device that the film photograph is in correct register over the aperture.

Frame Lines. Broad dark lines printed on a motion picture film between the pictures. These lines prevent white light from reaching the screen in the event that th film in the projector should get "out-of-frame" because of an incorrect splice.

Frame Line Noise. Noise in reproduction, due to the displacement of the film to the right in the projection machine, so that the beam of light for the sound track shines through part of the picture area as well, and cuts the frame lines. This noise is a type of Motorboating.[3]

Framing Device. An attachment on the projector which allows the operator to Frame the picture properly.[3]

Free Enthalpy. A thermodynamic property which serves as a measure of the available energy of a system with respect to surroundings at the same temperature and same pressure as that of the system. No process involving an increase in available energy can occur spontaneously.[1]

Frequency. Number of complete reversals or cycles per second.

Fringe, Color Fringe. A defect in color pictures resulting from imperfect registration of the component images. A fringe may be caused by parallax (as with cameras making two or three simultaneous records through different lenses), by error in printing some image in the correct position relative to the other images (because of shrinkage of a film base or maladjustment of the printer), or by movement of the object which has taken place betwen the making of the several color aspect records ("time parallax" in a color process employing successive frame photography).

Full Wave Rectifier. A two-element rectifier in which one element functions during one-half the cycle and the other for the next half cycle.

Fumes. Particles of solid matter resulting from such chemical processes as combustion, explosion, and distillation, ranging from 0.1 to 1.0 micron in size.[1]

Fundamental Frequency. The lowest component frequency of a periodic wave or quantity. See Basic Frequency, Sub-harmonic.

Furnace. That part of a boiler or warm air heating plant in which combustion takes place. Also a complete heating unit for transferring heat from fuel being burned to the air supplied to a heating system.[1]

Furnace Volume (Total). The total furnace volume for horizontal-return tubular boilers and water-tube boilers is the cubical contents of the furnace between the grate and the first plane of entry into or between tubes. It therefore includes the volume behind the bridge wall as in ordinary horizontal-return tubular boiler settings, unless manifestly ineffective (i.e. no gas flow taking place through it), as in the case of waste-heat boilers with auxiliary coal furnaces, where one part of the furnace is out of action when the other is being used. For Scotch or other internally fired boilers it is the cubical contents of the furnace, flues and combustion chamber, up to the plane of first entry into the tubes.[1]

Fuzzy. (1) Of sound track on visual inspection: lack of sharpness. (2) Of reproduced sound: characterized by distortion, particularly of high frequencies. The distortion may have been introduced in recording, processing or reproduction.[3]

G

Gaffer. Electrician in charge of a group of electrical workers.

Gage Pressure. Pressure measured from atmospheric pressure as a base. Gage pressure may be indicated by a manometer which has one leg connected to the pressure source and the other exposed to atmospheric pressure.[1]

Gain. Gain of energy in an appartus is ratio of output to input energy.

Gain Control. Device for varying the gain of an amplifier.[3]

Gamma. A measure of the contrast of a photographic process or step in such a process. Specifically, it is the slope of the straight line portion (or of a straight line drawn through a selected portion) of the H & D curve representing the process.

Gargle. A type of intensity in reproduced sound. See Wow-Wows for explanation.[3]

Gelatine. A transparent membrane made in many colors and used with spot lights or flood lights to give light of the color desired.

Gelatine Filter. A light filter consisting of a gelatine sheet in which the light-obsorbing pigment or dye is incorporated. When maximum durability is required, gelatine filters may be cemented betwen sheets of optically flat glass. Distinguished from Light filters made from colored glass.

Geneva Movement. Intermittent movement (produced by a cam-and-star wheel) used in most projection machines.

Grain. The ultimate, discrete particles of silver or dye which form a photographic image.

Graininess. (1) The non-uniformity of a photographic image which results from the irregular clumping of the individual silver or dye particles which form the image. (2) The sensation or impression of non-uniformity in a photographic deposit, produced upon the consciousness of the observer when such a deposit is viewed.

Grandeur Film. A system of motion picture photography using a film 70 millimeters wide. Frames were of normal height but considerably wider than standard.

Grate Area. The area of the grate surface, measured in square feet, to be used in estimating the rate of burning fuel. This area is construed to mean the area measured in the plane of the top surface of the grate, except that with special furnaces, such as those having magazine feed, or special shapes, the grate area shall be the mean area of the active part of the fuel bed taken perpendicular to the path of the gases through it. For furnaces having a secondary grate, such as those in double-grate down draft boilers, the effective area shall be taken as the area of the upper grate plus one-eighth of the area of the lower grate, both areas being estimated as previously defined.[1]

Grid. In a vacuum tube, the frame of wire gauze between the filament and plate. Small changes in the electric potential of the grid circuit produce far greater changes in the electron flow from filament to plate.[3]

Grid Bias. Negative voltage applied to the grid of a vacuum tube.

Grid Condenser. Condenser connected in the grid circuit of a vacuum tube.

Grid Leak. Very high- non-inductive resistance, usually connected across a condenser in the grid circuit of a three-electrode vacuum tube, to stabilize the action of the condenser (in making the tube more efficient) by permitting excess charge to leak off.[3]

Ground Noise. Undesirable noise appearing in reproduced sound, due to film grain, amplifier noises, etc.

Ground Wire. In projection a wire connecting a projector frame with the earth.

H

H & D Curve, Hurter & Driffield Curve. A graphical representation of the relation between the density of a developed photographic image and the common logarithm of the exposure. See Contrast.

Halation. A defect of photographic films and plates. Light forming an image on the film is scattered by passing through the emulsion or by reflection at the emulsion or base surfaces. This scattered light causes a local fog which is especially noticeable around images of light sources or sharply defined highlight areas.

Half-Wave Rectifier. Device using one-half of each cycle to change alternating into pulsating current.

Hard. Of a vacuum tube, thoroughly evacuated.[3]

Harmonic. A component of a periodic wave or quantity having a frequency that is an integral multiple of the fundamental frequency.

Head End. The end of a motion picture film which is intended to be projected first, also the corresponding end of any positive or negative, picture or sound records which may be required for making a release print.

Heater. Element supplying heat to an indirectly-heated cathode in a vacuum tube.

Heating Medium. A substance such as water, steam, air or furnace gas used to convey heat from the boiler, furnace or other source of heat or energy to the heating unit from which the heat is dissipated.[1]

Heating Surface. The exterior surface of a heating unit. Extended heating surface (or extended surface): Heating surface consisting of fins, pins or ribs which receive heat by conduction from the prime surface. Prime Surface: Heating surface having the heating medium on one side and air (or extended surface) on the other.[1]

Heat of the Liquid. This can usually be interpreted as the specific enthalpy of saturated liquid.[1]

High-Intensity Carbon Arc. A high-intensity carbon arc as used for projection is one in which, in addition to the light from the incandescent crater surface, there is a significant amount of light originating in the gaseous region immediately in front of the carbons as the result of the combination of a high current-density and an atmosphere rich in flame materials.

Hook-Up. Diagram of an electrical circuit; or, the construction of such a circuit.[3]

Horn, Exponential. Type of loudspeaker horn in which the cross-section area increases exponentially with the axial distance from the diaphragm, so that cross-section areas, taken at equal intervals along the axis, have a constant ratio each to the next.[3]

Horse Power. One horse-power (H.P.) equals 33,000 foot-pounds of work per minute. It is the theoretical amount of work one strong draft horse is supposed to perform if a block and tackle be attached to a weight of 33,000 pounds and the tackle be of such proportion that the horse can, by exerting his full strength, just raise the 33,000 pounds one foot while walking outward pulling on the rope for a period of one minute. Under these conditions one horsepower has been exerted during that minute. That is the theory of the thing. One horse power-hour is the amount of work exerted by one horse during one hour, or by 60 horses during one minute, or by 3,600 horses during one second. In electrics 746 watts is supposed to represent the raising of 33,000 pounds one foot and in one minute, or, in other words, one horse power.

Hot Water Heating System. A heating system in which water is used as the medium by which heat is carried through pipes from the boiler to the heating units.[1]

Humid Heat. Ratio of increase of enthalpy per pound of dry air to rise of temperature under conditions of constant pressure and constant humidity ratio.[1]

Humidify. To add water vapor to the atmosphere; to add water vapor or moisture to any material.

Humidistat. A regulatory device, actuated by changes in humidity, used for the automatic control of relative humidity.

Humidity. Water vapor when mixed with dry air or other diluent gases. Absolute humidity is the weight of water vapor per unit volume of moist air, pounds per cubic foot. It can be calculated by dividing the humidity ratio, weight of water vapor per pound of dry air, by the volume of the mixture per pound of dry air. Relative humidity is the ratio of the partial pressure of the water vapor in the air to the saturation pressure of the pure water corresponding to the actual temperature.

Humidity Ratio. Weight of water vapor per pound of dry air. (Formerly called specific humidity.)

Hygrostat. Same as Humidistat.

I

Image, Real Image. In optics, an image which actually exists and could be thrown on a screen at the position where it appears to be.

Image, Virtual Image. In optics, an image whose existence and properties are inferred by tracing various rays of light backward, into or beyond some lens or mirror surface. A virtual image does not exist at the location where it appears to be; however, the rays of light which appear to come from the virtual image behave in the same way that they would behave if they came from a real image having the location of the virtual image and in the absence of any interfering optical surfaces.

Impedance. (1) Effective opposition of a circuit to current, due to the resistance and reactance of the circuit. Equals voltage divided by current. In a d-c circuit, impedance equals resistance. (2) Similarly, a load or opposition to the transmission of mechanical or sound energy.[3]

Incandescent Lamp. Lamp in which illumination results from the passage of electric current through a metal or carbon filament.

Inch of Water. The pressure due to a column of liquid water one inch high at a temperture of 60 F.[1]

Index of Refraction. The ratio of the speed of light in a vacuum to the speed of light in a given medium. Since, in general, the index of refraction is a function of wavelength, it is commonly measured with monochromatic light and a statement of the index of refraction of a material should include a specification of the wavelength, or frequency) of the light to which the value applies.

Infra-Red. Light of a wavelength longer than the eye can perceive.

Insulation (Heat). A material having a relatively high heat-resistance per unit of thickness.[1]

Isobaric. An adjective used to indicate a change taking place at constant pressure.[1]

Isothermal. An adjective used to indicate a change taking place at constant temperature.[1]

Intensity (Sound). Sound Energy Flux Density, Flux Density: The sound intensity of a sound field in a specified direction at a point is the sound energy transmitted per unit of time in the specified direction through a unit area normal to this direction at the point. The unit is the erg per second per square centimeter but sound indensity may also be expressed in watts per square centimeter.

Interference. Meeting of waves in such a manner as to reinforce or to lessen or cancel one another's effects.[3]

Interference Colors. Colors resulting from the destruction of light of certain wavelengths and the augmentation of light of others in a composite beam by interference. Colors of thin films and polarization colors of double refracting crystals in a polariscope are examples of interference colors. Also called Newton's Rings, Interference Fringes.

Intermittent Movement. The mechanism by means of which the intermittent sprocket is operated.

Intermittent Projector. Any motion picture projector in which the optical parts are motionless and a succession of pictures is thrown on the screen by moving the film, one frame at a time, while the shutter is closed. Distinguished from: Continuous Projector.

Intermittent Sprocket. The sprocket of a projector by means of which the film is given its intermittent movement at the aperture.

K

Kerr Cell. A cell containing a pair of electrodes submerged in a liquid of such a nature that it will rotate the plane of polarization of a beam of polarized light when an electrostatic field is set up between the electrodes. Kerr cells are used in certain photographic system of sound recording.

Kilowatt. One thousand watts, which equals 1.34 horse-power.

Kilowatt Hour. The use of one kilowatt of electric energy for one hour.

Knife Switch. A switch having a movable blade or blades, usually of copper, which are hinged at one end and make or break contact with parallel spring contact clips at the other. The switch blade takes the place of the conductor between its contact points.

Lambert. A unit of brightness equal to . . . the uniform brightness of a perfectly diffusing surface emitting or reflecting light at the rate of one lumen per centimeter.[2]

Latent Heat. Latent heat is the heat required to produce a change of state at constant temperature. The most general interpretation is heat absorbed at constant temperature. More specifically the latent heat of vaporization is the difference between the specific enthalpies of saturated vapor and saturated liquid at the same temperature (and, for a pure substance, the same pressure). Latent heat of sublimation is the difference betwen the specific enthalpies of saturated vapor and saturated solid at the same temperature. Latent heat of fusion is the difference between the specific enthalpies of saturated liquid and saturated solid at the same temperature.[1]

Laws of Thermodynamics. The Law of Conservation of Energy states that energy, in any of its forms, can neither be created nor destroyed. As a corollary to this, the First Law of Thermodynamics states that in any power cycle or refrigeration cycle the net heat absorbed by the working substance is exactly equal to the net work done. The Second Law of Thermodynamics states that a power cycle which absorbs heat at a single temperature and converts it wholly into work, as required by the First Law, is impossible; hence it is absolutely necessary to reject heat at some lower temperature if any work it to be done. The Second Law further prescribes the least possible quantity of heat that must be so rejected depending on the two temperatures involved.[1]

Leader. A short length of film attached to the leading title of a subject, or to the beginning of a reel of film, in order to protect it and to allow of threading into the take-up without using the film title for the purpose.

Lens. (a) A transparent medium, usually glass, having one or more curved surfaces, for the purpose of changing the direction of rays of light, giving them a direction largely determined by the curvature of the lens surface or surfaces. (b) A combination of single lenses mounted together so as to act as a single (compound) lens.

Lens Barrel. Metal tube in which a lens is mounted.[3]

Light Bridge. A steel structure from which borderlights, spots, etc., may be suspended, and on which a man can stand to control the lights.

Light Filter. A transparent, light absorbing sheet, commonly consisting of colored glass or dyed gelatine, which is placed in an optical system to control the spectral quality or intensity of the light passing a given plane. Also called Color filter, Color screen, Ray screen. Distinguished from: Optical grid, Polarizing Screen, Sky filter.

Light Towers. Frameworks or pedestals, usually mounted on roller casters, carrying spotlights or floodlights.

Light Trap. (1) In architecture, an arrangement of walls and doors designed to exclude undesired light from a theatre auditorium, dark room, or other space which must be kept dark. (2) On a film magazine, a narrow, crooked passage, frequently lined with black velvet which permits the passage of film but not of light.

Light Valve. In sound recording, an eletcric device used to modulate a beam of light.

Load. The amount of electric power being drawn from the generators or mains.[3]

Lobby. The space between the first and second sets of doors of a theatre. See Outside lobby.

Loop. An endless band of film (especially negative) made by splicing the two ends of a length of film together to permit its running continuously through a processing machine, printer, or projector without being fed on and off the machine from reels.

Loudness. Loudness is the subjective quality of a sound which determines the magnitude of the auditory sensation it produces. Equivalent Loudness. (Loudness Level, Equivalent Loudness Level): The equivalent loudness of a sound is the intensity level, relative to some arbitrary reference intensity, of the 1000-cycle pure tone which is judged by the listeners to be equivalent in loudness. The unit of equivalent loudness is the decibel. Note: The 1000-cycle comparison tone shall be considered as a plane sinusoidal sound wave coming from a position directly in front of the observer. The listening is to be done with both ears and the intensity level of the 1000-cycle comparison tone is to be measured in the free progressive wave. It is recommended that the reference intensity be fixd at a sound flux density of 10^{-16} watts per square centimeter in air at normal condition. This pure tone is to be measured in a plane free wave coming directly to the front of the observer. The term "phon" is used by some writers as the equivalent of the decibel in specifying equivalent loudness.

Loudspeaker. Device which, receiving an amplified varying electric current, transforms the current variations into mechanical vibrations, thus setting up sound waves.[3]

Low Intensity Carbon Arc. The low intensity carbon arc is one in which the principal light source is incandescent solid carbon at or near its sublimation temperature.

Lumen. The unit of luminous flux. It is equal to the nux through a solid unit angle (steradian) from a uniform point source of one candle, or to the flux on a unit surface all points of which are at unit distance from a uniform point source of one candle.[2]

Lumen-Hour. The unit of the quantity of light. The quantity of light delivered in one hour by a nux of one lumen.[2]

Luminaire. A complete lighting unit consisting of a light source, together with its direct appurtenances, such as globe, reflector, retractor, housing and such support as is integral with the housing.[2]

Luminescent. Substances that will glow in the dark for various lengths of time after having been illuminated with ordinary visible light.

Luminous Flux. The time rate of flow of light. (Unit: the lumen.)[2]

Lux. The practical unit of illumination in the metric system, equivalent to the meter candle. (Compare footcandle.)[2]

M

Magazine. Camera or projector camera compartment (necessarily light-tight in a camera) holding the roll of unexposed film; also, the compartment holding the roll of exposed film.[3]

Magazine Valve or Magazine Valve Fire-Trap. Narrow opening, formed by two rollers, through which film passes in or out of projector magazines. The opening is so tight that no air can pass; hence the valve prevents flames from entering the magazine in case of fire.[3]

Magnetic Field. Region of magnetic influence surrounding a magnetic pole, and traversed by magnetic "lines of force," so that a magnetic needle (if free to move) will take up a definite position along a line of force.[3]

Manometer. An instrument for measuring pressures; essentially a U-tube partially filled with a liquid, usually water, mercury, or a light oil, so the amount of displacement of the liquid indicates the pressure being exerted on the instrument.[1]

Mat-Surface Glass. Glass whose surface has been altered by etching, sand-blasting, grinding, etc., to increase the diffusion of light.[2]

Mb,Mbh. Symbols which represent, respectively, 1000 BTU and 1000 BTU per hour.[1]

Mechanical Equivalent of Heat. The conversion factor from BTU to foot pounds; J = 778.3 foot pounds per BTU. This is also referred to as Joule's Equivalent.[1]

Mezzanine. In a motion picture theatre, an intermediate floor level between the main auditorium level and the first balcony.

Micron. A unit of length, the thousandth part of one millimeter or the millionth of a meter.[1]

Microphone. Device for converting sound waves into variations in an electric current.

Millimicron. A unit of length commonly used for measuring the wavelength of light. One millimicron equals 10^{-6} millimeters, or 1,00th of a micron.

Mirror Ball. A revolving fixture studded with small mirrors, designed to reflect a multitude of small, moving spots of light.

Misframe. In a film a wrongly made splice through which a part of one photograph is eliminated. In projection the showing of a portion of two pictures on the screen at the same time.

Mixer. (1) In recording, the apparatus which terminates the circuits from all microphones, and contains controls so that the recording apparatus will receive proper intensities from the various microphones. (2) The operator of mixer apparatus.

Modulate. In sound recording, to control the frequency or amplitude of a sound record in accordance with some definite scheme or record. Also in photography, to regulate light intensity as in printing, masking, etc.

Mol (Pound Mol). A weight in pounds numerically equal to the molecular weight of a substance. In the case of gases, and at not too high pressures, the volume of 1 mol is approximately the same for any gas at the same temperature and pressure. At 32 F. and standard atmospheric pressure this volume is 358.65 cu. ft.[1]

Motor Generator. In projection, a machine consisting usually of an A.C. motor directly connected to a D.C. generator for the purpose of generating D.C. with power supplied by A.C. The resultant D.C. may be of higher, lower, or the same voltage as the A.C. supply, but for projection work it is, in modern and efficient machines, supplied at arc voltage by a generator wound for constant current.

Moving Period. That portion of the picture cycle (in recording or in projection) during which the film at the aperture is in motion, expressed in degrees of revolution of the controlling flywheel (360° = 1 cycle.)[3]

N

Negative Film. Any of those types of motion picture film which are designed and used primarily for the making of the original camera records of a negative-positive process. Such films are usually characterized by high speed and special spectral sensitivity.

Nitrate Film. A motion pitcure film whose base is composed principally of cellulose nitrate.

Nodal Points. In the optics of a thick lens, the two points on which slant rays passing through the center of the lens appear to converge. The nodal points lie on the optical axis of the lens and are in general not coincident. One nodal point corresponds to the rays converging toward the optical center of the lens from each side.

Noise. In sound recording, any extraneous sounds which may be heard by the microhpone or introduced into the reproduction by imperfections of the recording or reproducing systems. Noise is a defect of sound reproducing systems and must be held at a low level if good reproduction is to be obtained.

Non-Track Side. In describing the location or orientation of pictures or defects on a sound motion picture film, that edge of the film which is opposite to the edge carrying the sound track.

Number of Teeth in Mesh. The number of teeth in mesh with the film (commonly referred to as "teeth in contact") is the number of teeth in the arc of contact of the film with the drum of the sprocket when the pulling face of one tooth is at the end of the arc.

O

Objective. In a system of lenses, the lens nearest the object being viewed or photographed. In projection, the lens nearest the screen.[3]

Observation Port. The opening in the front projection room wall through which the projectionist views the screen.

Ohm. The unit of resistance.

Ohm's Law. The law that, considering a uniform flow of current is given circuit, the amperage is equal to the F.M.F., in volts, divided by the resistance in Ohms. The law is expressed in simple formulas.

Oil Well. (a) An oil-tight receptacle in which the intermittent movement of a modern projector is placed so that it may work in an oil bath. (b) A cavity under a dynamo or motor bearing which contains oil for lubrication of the bearing.

Olivette. A floodlight mounted on a pedestal stand. Double or triple olivettes consist of two or three floodlights mounted at different heights on the same pedestal stand.

One-Pipe Supply Riser (Steam). A pipe which carries steam upward to a heating unit and which also carries the condensation from the heating unit in a direction opposite to the steam flow.[1]

One-Pipe System (Hot Water). A hot water system in which the cooled water from the heating units is returned to the supply main. Consequently, the heating units farthest from the boiler are supplied with cooler water than those near the boiler in the same circuit.[1]

One-Pipe System (Steam). A steam heating system consisting of a main circuit in which the steam and condensate flow in the same pipe, usually in opposite directions. Ordinarily to each heating unit there is but one connection which must serve as both the supply and the return, although separate supply and return connections may be used.[1]

Opal Glass. Highly diffusing glass having a nearly white, milky or gray appearance. The diffusing properties are an inherent, integral characteristic of the glass.[2]

Opalescent Glass. Opal glass having the properties of selectively transmitting and diffusing light, with a resultant fire appearance when used with concentrated incandescent sources. Sometimes refered to as fire opal.[2]

Open Circuit. A circuit which is not complete as to electrical connection. A circuit which has been broken, as by the opening of a switch.

Optical Axis. A line passing through the center of a lens which is perpendicular to its plane. In a projector optical train a line from the center of the light source to the center of the front lens of the projetcion lens, when all elements are in proper adjustment.

Optical System. Any apparatus which transmits and alters rays of light.[3]

Optical Train. In a projector, the various lenses it employs referred to as a whole.

Orchestra Floor. The lowest seating area of a theatre.

Outlet. A point in ceiling or wall out of which wires are led to make connections with lamps, motors, etc.

Outlet Box. An iron box, usually circular in form, located at an outlet to protect the splices and to serve as an anchorage for the circuit conduit.

Out of Focus. When the image is not sharp on the screen.

Output. The electrical energy delivered by a dynamo.

Outside Lobby. The partially enclosed space in front of the first set of entrance doors. (Sometimes called "Vestibule".)

Outside Wiring. Wiring attached to the surface—not concealed.

Overhead System. Any steam or hot water system in which the supply main is above the heating units. With a steam system the return must be below the heating units; with a water system, the return may be above the heating units.[1]

Overload. A load greater than a machine is designed to carry.

Overload Capacity. The amount of overload an electrical device or a machine may carry, either permanently or for a stated period, without sustaining permanent injury.

P

Pan (with a camera). During the course of photographing a scene, to swing the camera around in such a way as to follow th action. Derived from: Panorama.

Panel Board. Name applied to a small distributing switchboard, usually located in the wall of a room, auditorium or hallway, and controlling several circuits, or perhaps all the circuits on a single floor.

Panel Board Fuses. Fuses controlling the circuits controlled by a panel board.

Panel Radiator. A heating unit placed on or flush with a flat wall surface and intended to function essentially as a radiator.[1]

Pentode. A thermionic tube containeg a plate, a cathode and three additional electrodes.

Perforations. Regularly spaced and accurately shaped holes which are punched throughout the length of a motion picture film. These holes engage the teeth of various sprockets and pins by which the film is advanced and positioned as it travels through cameras, processing machines, and projectors.

Persistence of Vision. A property of the eye which consists of an inability to detect the flickering of a light provided that its frequency exceeds a certain critical value. Thus, modern 35 Millimeter sound pictures are projected at a rate of 24 frames per second using a shutter which closes 48 times each second. (Once in the middle of each frame and once at the end). Under normal viewing conditions, such pictures appear to be continuous.

Phase. Degree to which a whole wave or vibration is displaced from a standard position.[3]

Phase, Single. Generated and distributed a.c. involving only two wires and a single voltage wave.[3]

Phase Three. Generated and distributed a.c. involving three or four wires, employing three currents whose waves are not in the same phase.[3]

Phase, Two. Same as three-phase, but involves only two currents.[3]

Phosphorescence. The emission of light by a substance which has previously absorbed radiant energy of a shorter wavelength. Thus, phosphorescence is delayed flourescence. The term is derived from white phosphorous, a substance which glows in the dark when exposed to air because of slow oxidation (burning).

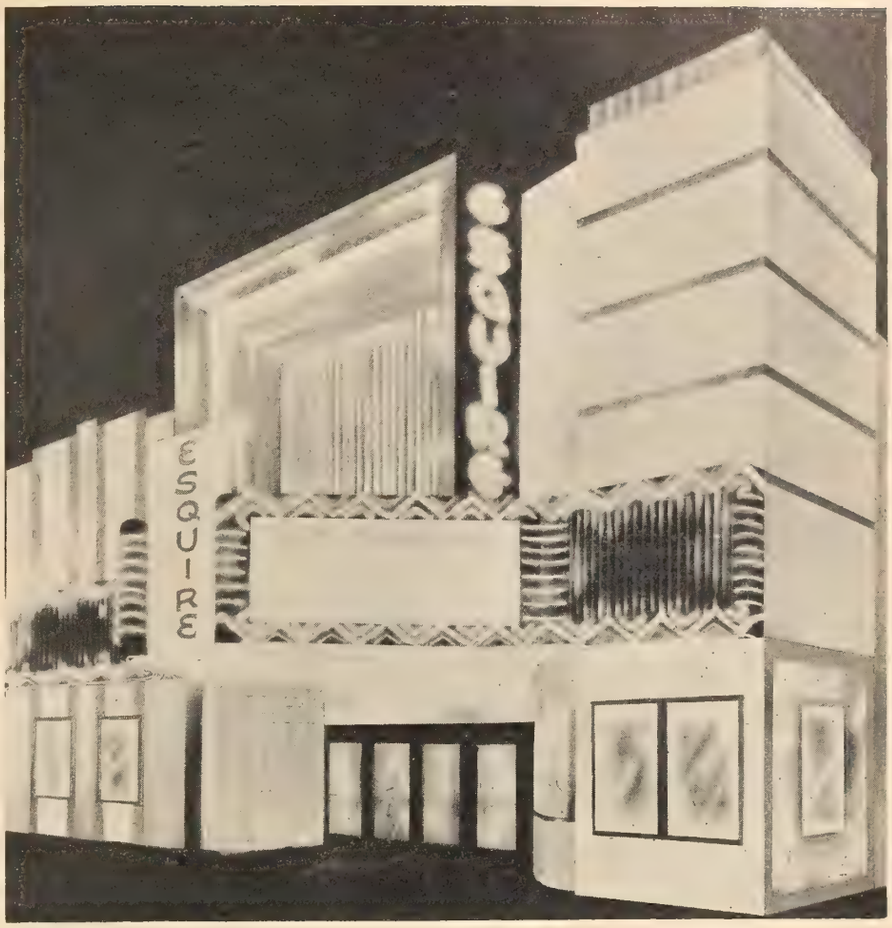
Phot. The unit of illumination where the centimeter is taken as the unit of length. (Compare footcandle).[2]

Photoelectric Cell, Photoelectric Effect. Certain chemical elements emit electrons when exposed to light of certain wavelengths (colors), the number of electrons emitted depending on the intensity of the light. This effect facilitates transformation of the light into electricity, since electrons in motion constitute an electric current. In a photoelectric cell, a piece of such an element is used as a cathode; the freed electrons flow to a plate (the anode) and a current flows in the external circuit. These cells do not contain air, which would chemically attack the sensitive element. Abbreviation, Pec.

Photoelectric-Cell Amplifier. Amplifier which first amplifies the small current from a photoelectric cell.[3]

Photoelectrons. Electrons liberated by light when the photoelectric effect takes place.[3]

Photometer. Any device for measuring light intensity.



Pitch. (1) That property of sound which is determined by the frequency of the sound waves. (2) Distance from the center of one perforation on a film to the next; or from one thread of a screw to the next; or from one curve of a spiral to the next.

Plano Convex. A lens which is flat on one side and convex on the other.

Plate. The anode of a vacuum tube or photoelectric cell.[3]

Plenum Chamber. An air compartment maintained under pressure and connected to one or more distributing ducts.

Challenger

CHALLENGING the opposition of the Fox Midwest Broadway and Orpheum theatres, the independently owned Esquire here shown opened in Cape Girardeau, Mo., on September 15th. With a frontage of 70 feet and a depth of 135 feet, the Esquire provides 800 seats and every modern theatre convenience. Barney Woolner, Harold Roth of Memphis, Tenn., are the owners; Eddie Bonns is the manager (#24).

Polaroid. Trade name for various types of homogeneous, anisotropic sheet material used for polarizing light. Such sheets may consist of an oriented colloidal dispersion of crystals of herapathite.

Polished Plate Glass. Glass whose surface irregularities have been removed by grinding and polishing, so that the surfaces are approximately plane and parallel.

Polyphase. Includes Two-Phase, Three-Phase, and higher numbers of phases in a.c. circuits.[3]

Port. In projection, an opening in the front wall of the projection room.

Positive Film. Any of the types of motion picture film which are designed and used primarily for the making of master positives, or black-and-white release prints. Such films are usually characterized by long latitude, fine grain, and good image color.

Potentiometer. Device controlling or measuring the electromotive force (voltage) across one or more circuits, by placing each of these in parallel with a variable part of a fixed resistance.[3]

Power. The rate of performing work; usually expressed in units of horsepower, BTU per hour, or watts.[1]

Power Amplification (of an amplifier. The ratio of the alternating-current power produced in the output circuit to the alternating-current power supplied to the input circuit.[3]

Power Amplifier. An amplifier capable of handling large amounts of electrical energy.[3]

Power Tube. A high-output vacuum tube.[3]

Primary Colors. In any color process or theory, those colors which are usel to synthesize a complete color reproduction or which are taken to be the fundamental color sensations from which all others are formed by combination.

Prime Surface. See Heating Surface.[1]

Projection Angle. The angle between the optical axis of a projector and the horizontal.

Projection Background. A background for a scene photographed in a studio which consists of a picture projected on a suitable diffusely reflecting or transmitting screen. Especially, a background obtained by rear projection of a motion picture with a projector whose shutter is in sync with the camera which is photographing the background and action.

Projection Distance. The distance from the front of the projector lens mount to the screen, measured along the optical axis.

Projection Period Lighting. Any lighting of the auditorium that may be necessary or desirable during the projection of the motion picture.

Projectionist. A person skilled in the art of projecting motion pictures and operating sound-on-film reproducing equipment.

Projector Designation. In a projecting room, looking toward the screen, the projector on the left shall be known as Projector No. 1, and the projector on the right as Projector No. 2.

Proscenium Lights. Striplights or border lights concealed behind the proscenium.

Proscenium Opening. The opening in the auditorium front wall through which the screen is viewed.

Psychrometer. An instrument for ascertaining the humidity or hygrometric state of the atmosphere. Psychrometric: Pertaining to psychrometry or the state of the atmosphere as to moisture. Psychrometry; The branch of physics that treats of the measurement of degree of moisture, especially the moisture mixed with the air.[1]

Pupil. By analogy with the human eye, a small circular opening in the diaphragm of an optical system which may or may not be variable in diameter or location.

Push-Pull Amplifier. An amplifying apparatus, employing two amplifier tubes, designed to obtain greater amplication with less distortion.[3]

Pyrometer. An instrument for measuring high temperatures.[1]

R

Radiant Energy. Energy traveling in the form of electromagnetic waves. Measured in units such as ergs, joules, calories or kilowatt hours.[3]

Radiant Flux. The time rate of flow of radiant

energy. Expressed preferably in watts, or in ergs per second.[2]

Radiant Heating (Panel Heating). A method of heating involving the installation of the heating units (pipe coils) within the wall, floor or ceiling of the room so that the heating process takes place mainly by radiation from the wall, floor or ceiling surfaces to the objects in the room. Panel heating also refers to a system transmitting heat by both radiation and convection to both air and surrounding surfaces, while radiant heating refers to a system dependent on radiation alone in which case only the heat radiated from the panel is effective for heating purpose.

Radiation. The transmission of heat through space by wave motion.

Radiator. A heating unit exposed to view within the room or space to be heated. A radiator transfers heat by radiation to objects within visible range and by conduction to the surrounding air which in turn is circulated by natural convection; a so-called radiator is also a convector but the single term radiator has been established by long usage.

Radio Frequency. Any frequency above about 10,000 cycles per second.[3]

Rapid Rectilinear (Lens). A type of lens, usually consisting of a symmetrical pair of cemented achromatic doublets, which forms an image free from pincushion or barrel distortion.

Rattle, Loudspeaker. Is sometimes heard in reproduction due to the vibration of an element within the loudspeaker unit, usually occurring when the sound volume is large.

Raw Stock. A finished motion picture film as supplied by the manufacturer prior to hypersensitizing or exposure in a camera.

Rear Projection. The projection of a picture onto a translucent screen from the side opposite to that from which the picture is viewed.

Rear Screen Space. The space on the side of the screen away from the audience.

Recessed Radiator. A heating unit set back into a wall recess but not enclosed.[1]

Reduction. (1) In chemistry, the inverse of oxidation. (2) In photography, partial bleaching of an image.

Reflection Factor (of a Surface). The ratio of the luminous flux emitted by a secondary source (e.g., a reflector) to the luminous flux incident upon the secondary source from the primary source. Reflection factor is stated in terms of per cent.

Refraction. That property of a medium which determines the velocity with which light can travel in it. If a ray of light is incident obliquely upon a surface separating a transparent medium from air, the index of refraction of the medium can be determined by measuring the angles of incidence and refraction and taking the ratio of the size of the larger of these angles to the size of the smaller. The index of refraction of a medium depends upon the wavelength of the light used for its measurement. The variation of index of refraction with wavelength is called the "dispersion" of the material.

Refrigerant. A substance which produces a refrigerating effect by its absorption of heat while expanding or vaporizing.[1]

Relative Humidity. See Humidity.[1]

Release Print. In a motion picture processing laboratory, any of numerous duplicate prints of a subject which are made for general theatre distribution.

Re-Reflected Screen Light. Light reflected from the screen and re-reflected from any other surface in the auditorium.

Resolving Power. The ability of a photographic process or element of such a process to form two distinct images of two point objects which are separated by a very small distance. See Definition.

Return Mains. The pipes which return the heating medium from the heating units to the source of heat supply.[1]

Reverberation. Persistence of sound in an enclosed space, due to reflection from the walls.[3]

Reverberation, Time of. Time required for a reverberating sound to die away to one one-millonth of the intensity of the original sound.[3]

Reversed-Return System (Hot Water). A hot water heating system in which the water from several heating units is returned along paths arranged so that all circuits composing the system or coming a major sub-division of the system are practically of equal length.[1]

Roundels. Curved glass facings made in many colors which fit on footlight, striplight and other fixtures to provide colored illumination from ordinary incandescent bulbs.

S

Sabine. In acoustics, a unit of equivalent absorption. It is equal to the equivalent absorption of one square foot of a surface of unit absorptivity, i.e. of one square foot of surface which absorbs all incident sound energy.

Safety Film. A photographic film whose base is fire resistant or slow burning. At the present time, the terms "safety film" and "acetate film" are synonomous.

Saturated Air. A mixture of dry air and saturated water vapor, all at the same dry-bulb temperature. It may also be considered as air containing the maximum possible amount of water vapor at a given temperature without becoming supersaturated.[1]

Saturation. The condition for coexistence in stable equilibrium of two or more distinct phases, such as steam over the water from which it is being generated.[1]

Saturation Pressure. The saturation pressure for a pure substance for any given temperature is that pressure at which vapor and liquid or vapor and solid can coexist in stable equilibrium.[1]

Scratch Filter. A choke coil and condenser used to filter out very high frequency sounds or ground noises.[3]

Screen Grid Tube. A modified type of vacuum tube with high amplification. A fourth electrode—the screen grid—is used to reduce the electrostatic effect between grid and plate.[3]

Sensation Level. Refers to loudness of sound, in decibels, compared to the intensity of sound of the same pitch which would be just barely audible in quite surroundings.[3]

Sensible Heat. Heat which manifests itself by temperature change.[1]

Shadow Box. A recess containing lamps and reflectors or reflector trough, over which lettered or illustrated material can be placed and illuminated from within.

Shower. A revolving fixture, designed to project a multitude of small, moving spots of light.

Shutter. Moving (usually rotating) device, which intercepts the beam of light in a motion picture camera, printer, or projector, once during each picture cycle.

Signal-to-Noise-Ratio. In sound reproduction, the ratio in decibels of the loudness of the signal (speech or music as the case may be) to that of the extraneous noise added to the signal during the processes of recording and reproducing.

Sling Psychrometer. An instrument with one dry and one wet bulb thermometer, used to determine the humidity of the atmosphere.

Smoke. Carbon or soot particles less than 0.1 micron in size which result from the incomplete combustion of carbonaceous materials such as coal, oil, tar and tobacco.[1]

Smokeless Arch. An inverted baffle placed in an updraft furnace toward the rear to aid in mixing the gases of combustion and thereby to reduce the smoke produced.[1]

Soffit. In theatre architecture, the ceiling under a balcony.

Sound Concentration. A defect of auditorium acoustics which consist of the existence of an area within the auditorium where the sound reproduced by the speakers can be heard very much louder than in other parts of the room.

Sound Head. Compartment on the projector which contains sound-reproducing systems and mechanism for guiding and driving film.[3]

Sound Pick-Up. Device or system for reproducing sound. In disc reproduction, an electromagnetic device which transforms the waves in the grooves of the disc into variations of electric current. In film reproduction, an optical-electrical system contained in the sound head.[3]

Sound Track. A narrow band, along a film (on the left side of the pictures), which carries the sound record.[3]

Specific Consumption. In an electric lamp, its watt consumption per lumen.[2]

Specific Enthalpy. The ratio of total enthalpy to total weight. The specific enthalpy of air is its enthalpy, BTU per pound, measured above 0 F and 29.921 in. Hg as a reference point. The specific enthalpy of water is its enthalpy, BTU per pound, measured from the reference point of saturated liquid at 32 F. (See Enthalpy.)[1]

Specific Gravity. The ratio of the weight of a body to the weight of an equal volume of water at some standard temperature, usually 39.2 F.[1]

Specific Heat. The ratio of heat absorbed per unit weight of substance to temperature rise. For gases, both specific heat at constant pressure, cp, and specific heat at constant volume, cv, are frequently given. In air conditioning, cp is usually used.[1]

Specific Volume. The volume, expressed in cubic feet, of one pound of a substance.[1]

Spherical Aberration. The failure of any image-forming optical element or system to unite into a single focus all the rays of light of the same wavelength that—emerging from a point object lying on the optical axis—are transmitted or reflected by that element or system.

Splice. Any type of cement or mechanical fastening by which two separate lengths of films are united end-to-end so as to function as a single piece of film when passing through a camera, film processing machine, or projector.

Split System. A system in which the heating and ventilating are accomplished by means of radiators or convectors supplemented by mechanical circulation of air (heated or unheated) from a central point.[1]

Spotlight. A lamp, usually incorporating both reflector and lens, designed to project a sharply defined circle or oval of light.

Sprocket. On a camera, projector, or other motion picture machine, a film carrying spool having teeth which engage the perforations of the film, causing the film and sprocket to move at the same surface speed.

Square Foot of Heating Surface (Equivalent). Equivalent Direct Radiation (EDR). The amount of heating surface which will give off 240 BTU per hour. The equivalent square feet of heating surface may have no direct relation to the actual surface area.[1]

Stack Height. The height of a gravity convector between the bottom of the heating unit and the top of the outlet opening.[1]

Stadium. In a motion picture auditorium, an area of seats higher than, and to the rear of the standee rail or partition, accessible directly from the standee space.

Standard Air. Air weighing 0.075 lb. per cubic foot. The density of air at 29.921 in. Hg barometric pressure, 68 F dry-bulb and 50 per cent relative humidity is 0.07497; and dry air at 70 F dry-bulb is 0.07496.[1]

Standee Partition, Standee Rail. In a motion picture auditorium, a partition (or rail) separating a last row of seats from a cross-over.

Standee Space. A space in a theatre in which patrons are permitted by law to stand and view the performance.

Static Pressure. The normal force per unit area that would be exerted by a moving fluid on a small body immersed in it if the body were carried along with the fluid. Practically, it is the normal force per unit area at a small hole in a wall of the duct through which the fluid flows (piezometer) or on the surface of a stationary tube at a point where the disturbances created by inserting the tube cancel. It is supposed that the thermodynamic properties of a moving fluid depend on static pressure in exactly the same manner as those of the same fluid at rest depend upon its uniform hydrostatic pressure.[1]

Steam. Water in the vapor phase. Dry Saturated Steam is steam at the saturation temperature corresponding to the pressure, and containing no water in suspension. Wet Saturated Steam is steam at the saturation temperature corresponding to the pressure, and containing water particles in suspension. Superheated Steam is steam at a temperature higher than the saturation temperature corresponding to the pressure.[1]

Steam Heating System. A heating system in which heat is transferred from the boiler or other source of steam to the heating units by means of steam at, above, or below atmospheric pressure.[1]

Steam Trap. A device for allowing the passage of condensate and preventing the passage of steam, or for allowing the passage of air as well as condensate.[1]

Stepped Platform Seating. In the architecture of an auditorium, stepped platforms upon which seats are placed. The amount of rise from one platform to another is determined by the "sight clearance factor."

Steradian. In solid geometry, the unit of solid angle. The complete surface of a sphere subtends a solid angle of 4π at the center of the sphere. $4\pi = 4(3.1416\text{—}) = 12.5664$.

Stereogram. A pair of pictures representing two different spacial aspects of a scene which can be viewed in such a way as to recreate the appearance of three-dimensional space.

Stereophonic Sound. A system of sound reproduction by which the spacial distribution of the original action can be simulated.

Striplights. Fixtures, including reflectors or reflector trough, usually mounted vertically in the wings to help illuminate the stage or curtain.

Sub-Harmonic. A sub-harmonic is a component of a complex wave having a frequency which is an integral submultiple of the basic frequency. Note: The term sub-harmonic is generally applied in the case of a driven system whose vibration has frequency components of lower frequency than the driving frequency.

Superheated Steam. See Steam.

Supply Mains (Steam). The pipes through which the steam flows from the boiler or source of supply to the run-outs and risers leading to the heating units.

Surface Conductance. The amount of heat (BTU) transmitted by radiation, conduction, and convection from a surface to the air or liquid surrounding it, or vice versa, in one hour per square foot of surface for a difference in temperature of 1 deg. between the surface and the surrounding air or liquid.

Switchboard (Stage). A device mounting a number of switches and dimmers, for control of stage and house lighting.

Sync, Synchronization. Two picture records or a picture record and a sound record are said to be "in sync" when they are so placed relative to each other on a release print as to be projected in correct temporal or special relationship. When this condition is not met, the two records are said to be "out of sync."

Synchronous Motor. Type of motor whose speed is governed by the standard frequency of the alternating current supplied to it.[3]

T

Tail End, T.E. The end of a motion picture film which is intended to be projected last. See Head End.

Take-Up. Mechanism by means of which a film is wound upon a reel after passing the aperture (in photography, printing or projection); also, to wind it thus.[3]

Take-Up Reel. Reel on which film is taken-up.[3]

Tension. As applied to projection (a) the pressure exerted by the tension springs, either through the tension shoes or direct upon the film at the aperture. (b) The tension exerted by a spring upon two friction discs for the purpose of revolving the film reel in the lower magazine, providing slippage so that the reel, although driven by a power having steady speed, may revolve at differential speed, gradually slowing up as the film roll increases in size.

Tension Shoes. Metal bars upon which the tension springs bear on the film and provide braking friction to stop film over aperture.

Tension Springs. The springs which provide braking action to stop the film over the aperture at the completion of the intermitten movement.

Tetrode. A thermionic tube containing a plate, a cathode and two additional electrodes.

Therm. 100,000 BTU. (Used in the gas industry).[1]

Thermal Resistance. The reciprocal of conductance.[1]

Thermal Resistivity. The reciprocal of conductivity.[1]

Thermostat. An instrument which responds to changes in temperature and which directly or indirectly controls the source of heat supply.[1]

Threading-Up. Operation of starting the film through the camera, printer, or projector, as the case may be.[3]

Three-Color Photography. Any photographic process by which a reproduction is made from three independent records which correspond to three different color aspects of the original scene. Commonly, these records will represent the blue, green, and red aspects of the scene and the positives made from them are either blue, green, and red (for an additive process) or yellow, magenta, and cyan (for a subtractive process).

Threshold of Audibility. The threshold of audibility at any specified frequency is the minimum value of the sound pressure of a sinusoidal wave of that frequency which produces a pitch sensation. This term is often used to denote minimum value of the sound pressure of any specified complex wave (such as speech or music) which gives the ear the sensation of sound. The point at which the pressure is measured must be specified in every case. The unit for expressing "threshold of audibility" is the dyne per square centimeter. Note: Unless otherwise specified, the ear is assumed to be in a silent place. The threshold of audibility may also be expressed in terms of the intensity level above a specified reference intensity.

Time of Reverberation. In acoustics, the length of time required for a sound to die down from its initial intensity to some much smaller intensity. The ratio of initial and final intensity may be expressed in decibels, and the time of reverberation in seconds.

Ton of Refrigeration. The removal of 12,000 BTU of heat per hour at a low temperature.[1]

Ton Day of Refrigeration. The removal of 288,000 BTU of heat at a low temperature.[1]

Total Heat. This can usually be interpreted as increase of enthalpy at constant pressure. It is often regarded as synonymous with enthalpy.[1]

Total Pressure. In the theory of the flow of fluids; the sum of the static pressure and the velocity pressure at the point of measurement.[1]

Track, Show The. To remove the sound track mask, in projection, so as to permit an image of the track to appear on the screen beside the pictures.[3]

Track Side. In describing the location or orientation of pictures or defects on a sound motion picture film, that edge of the film which carries the sound track.

Traffic Control (Physical or Suggestive). Any device (architectural lighting or decoration, signs, door controls, barriers, etc.) used to direct the movement of people in the public spaces of a theatre structure.

Trailer. A short series of scenes with descriptive matter referring to a forthcoming motion picture production which is shown in theatres for advertising purposes. (2) A short length of opaque film attached to the end of a reel of film so that projection may proceed up to the end of the film proper without showing white light upon the screen.

Transformer. Apparatus used in an a.c. circuit to raise (STEP-UP) or lower(STEP-DOWN) the voltage. Consists (in its simplest form) of two coils of wire and a laminated iron core, all insulated from one another. Current in the primary coil sets up magnetic flux around the core; the variations in this flux, due to the variations in the primary current, set up a similarly alternating current in the secondary coil. In general, the voltage across each coil is proportional to the number of turns on the coil; the current in each coil is inversely proportional to the voltage.

Transition Lighting. The graduation of illumination from outdoors to the inside of a theatre auditorium.

Travel Ghost. A defect of motion picture projection systems. Through failure of the shutter mechanism to be correctly designed or adjusted, a moving ghost image or patch of light may appear on the screen or theatre wall in addition to the principal image on the screen.

Traveling Arc. An unsteady arc, particularly one in which the point of highest illumination in the crater moves about, usually due to faulty carbons.

Triode. A thermionic tube containing an anode, a cathode and a third electrode by which the current flowing between anode and cathode may be controlled.

Tube (or Tubular) Radiator. A cast-iron heating unit used as a radiator and having small vertical tubes.[2]

Tube, Thermionic. Evacuated tube containing a wire filament, a metal plate, and often other electrodes. An electric current is passed into the tube and through the wire filament; the filament becomes hot and electrons are boiled out of it. A positive voltage being applied to the plate, the electrons flow across the vacuum onto the plate, and thus set up an electric current in the outside circuit connected to the plate. In tubes for most purposes there is a third element known as a GRID.[3]

Two-Pipe System (Steam or Water). A heating system in which one pipe is used for the supply of the heating medium to the heating unit and another for the return of the heating medium to the source of heat supply. The essential feature of a two-pipe system is that each heating unit receives a direct supply of the heating medium which medium cannot have served a preceding heating unit.[1]

Tyndall Cone. The scattered light whic his visible when an intense beam of light passing through a turbid medium (dusty air or a colloidal solution) is observed from the side.

U

Ultra-Violet Filter. A light filter which (A) absorbs the ultra-violet but transmits visible light, or (B) absorbs visible light while transmitting some region in the ultra-violet.

Ultra-Violet. Light of a wavelength shorter than the eye can perceive. Causes fluorescence, and can be photographed.

Underfeed Distribution System (Hot Water). A hot water heating system in which the main flow pipe is below the heating unit.[1]

Underfeed Stoker. A stoker which feeds the coal underneath the fuel bed.[1]

Unit. As applied to heating, ventilating and air conditioning equipment this word means factory-built and assembled equipment with apparatus for accomplishing some specified function or combination or functions.

It is loosely applied to a great variety of equipment. Usually the function is included in the name, and hence come terms like Unit Heater, Unit Ventilator, Humidifying Unit, and Air Conditioning Unit.

Units are said to be direct or room, when intended for location, or located in, the treated space; indirect or remote, when outside or adjacent to the treated space. They are ceiling units when suspended from above, and floor when supported from below. Other descriptive words include free delivery when the unit is not intended to be attached to ducts or similar resistance-producing devices, and pressure when for use with such ducts. Complete description requires the use of several of these qualifying words or phases.[1]

Up-Feed System (Steam). A steam heating system in which the supply mains are below the level of the heating units which they serve.[1]

Useful Life. A term applied to many things, but in electrics particularly to incandescent lamps, which deteriorate with age. It is the time an incandescent lamp will burn before its output of light has decreased more than 20 per cent. When a lamp has fallen below 80 per cent of its rated c.p. it is the part of true economy to replace it with a new one.

V

Vacuum Heating System. A two-pipe steam heating system equipped with the necessary accessory apparatus which will permit operating the system below atmospheric pressure when desired.[1]

Vapor. Any substance in the gaseous state.[1]

Vapor Heating System. A steam heating system which operates under pressures at or near atmospheric and which returns the condensations to the boiler or receiver by gravity. Vapor systems have thermostatic traps or others means of resistance on the return ends of the heating units for preventing steam from entering the return mains; they also have a pressure-equalizing and air-eliminating device at the end of the dry return. Direct Vent Vapor System: A vapor heating system with air valves which do not permit re-entry of air.[1]

Variable Area Sound Track. A sound track which consists essentially of an opaque line of variable width running the length of a motion picture film.

Variable Density Sound Track. A sound track which is constant in width but variable in density along the length of the record.

Variably-Pitched Auditorium Floor. A floor incline having a changing pitch for every row, or group of rows, of seats to obtain proper sight clearance.

Velocity. The time rate of motion of a body in a fixed direction. In the fps system it is expressed in units of one foot per second.[1]

Velocity Pressure. The difference due to velocity between total pressure and static pressure. It is supposed to equal the kinetic energy per unit volume of the fluid at the point of measurement.[1]

Ventilation. The process of supplying or removing air by natural or mechanical means, to or from any space. Such air may or may not have been conditioned. (See air conditioning.)[1]

Volatilization. In projection, the transforming of carbon into vapor through heat.

Volt. Unit of electrical pressure.

Voltage Amplification. The ratio of the alternating voltage produced at the output terminals of an amplifier to the alternating voltage impressed at the input terminals.

Voltage Drop. The drop in voltage due to the resistance of the conductors. Voltage drop exists in every circuit. See "Copper Loss."

Volt-Ammeter. An instrument for measuring current consumption in watts.

Voltmeter. An instrument of high resistance for measuring electrical pressure.

W

Warm Air Heating System. A warm air heating plant consists of a heating unit (fuel burning furnace) enclosed in a casing, from which the heated air is distributed to the various rooms of the building through ducts. If the motive head producing flow depends on the difference in weight between the heated air leaving the casing and the cooler air entering the bottom of the casing, it is termed a gravity system. A booster fan may, however, be used in conjunction with a gravity-designed system. If a fan is used to produce circulation and the system is designed especially for fan circulation, it is termed a fan furnace system or a central fan furnace system. A fan furnace system may include air washers and filters.[1]

Watt. Unit of power. Power employed to do ten million ergs of work in one second. Power produced by a one-ampere current falling through a potential difference of one volt. 746 watts equals one horsepower.[3]

Watt Hour. The energy consumed when one watt of electrical energy has been used for one hour.

Watt-Hour Meter. A meter used for measuring electrical consumption in watt hours.

Wave-Length. Distance between crests along a wave.[3]

Wet-Bulb Temperature. Thermodynamic wet-bulb temperature is the temperature at which liquid or solid

New note in doorway design — "Tolex" flexible plastic material, a product of Textileather Corporation, is designed as rich-looking and colorful upholstery and wall covering. It is claimed to be outstanding in ability to withstand punishing wear, stainproof; and capable of being flame-proofed to meet such fire resistant requirements as those of New York City and Boston (#25).

water, by evaporating into air, can bring the air to saturation, adiabatically at the same temperature. Wet-bulb temperature (without qualification) is the temperature indicated by a wet-bulb psychrometer constructed and used according to specifications.[1]

Wet Return. That part of a return main of a steam heating system which is filled with water of condensation. The wet return usually is below the level of the water line in the boiler, although not necessarily so (See Dry Return.)[1]

Whiskers. A type of pulsation of intensity in reproduced sound. See WOW-WOWS for explanation.

Window Glass. Glass . . . having a characteristic waviness of surface which is visible when viewed at an acute angle or in reflected light.[2]

Wipe. In a motion picture film, a transition from one scene to another which is accomplished by the motion across the screen of a more or less distant line of demarcation separating the first scene from the second. Also called Wipe-off.

Work Light. A reflector type lamp mounted on a pedestal stand, used to provide illumination for cleaning, etc.

Working Aperture. In projection, that portion of the aperture of a lens which is actually in use in the sense that it is contributing to the improvement of the finished screen result.

Wow-Wows. A type of pulsation of intensity in reproduced sound, due fundamentally to change of speed of the sound track during either recording or reproduction. While this change of speed produces a change of pitch, the latter, when the fluctuation is rapid is generally not perceptible but the phenomena of interference of sound waves in the theatre cause this change of pitch to produce a rapid periodic change of intensity. Wow-wows correspond to a variation in speed of, say, up to six cycles per second; FLUTTER, to a variation of about six to thirty cycles; GARGLE, 30 to 200 cycles; and WHISKERS, over 200 cycles.[3]

Every print run in the Griffith Theatres is the subject of one of this "film condition" reports, reproduced here by kind courtesy of Mr. A. C. Ince, member of STR's Projection Advisory Council. Outstanding among such report forms is this use of line cut replicas of motion picture film, to be marked by the projectionist to show the precise location and extent of all faults. The actual form is 8 3/8ths inches wide by 5 3/4 inches high. More extended comment on the condition of prints, when called for, is written on the back of the paper by the projectionist. Griffith managers thus are supplied with effective ammunition to back them up in any possible dispute with exchange representatives. (#27).

No—No—No—it's the Barret Textile Corporation's fabric for theatre decoration you're supposed to look at! One of their latest creations. The Conover models displayed a variety of them on a television program recently broadcast in cooperation with John Wanamaker's, of New York. They are colorful hand prints in many fascinating designs, and Barret Textile considers them eye-appealing enough to withstand even the competition of Conover girls. (#28).

BOX OFFICE SLANT

Gunman's Code

Universal Western with Songs 57 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Excellent; will prove highly entertaining to action fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do very well in all situations where this type fare is in demand.

Cast: Kirby Grant, Fuzzy Knight, Jane Adams, Danny Morton, Bernard Thomas, Karl Hackett, Charles Miller, Frank McCarroll. Credits: Producer-director, Wallace W. Fox. Screenplay by William Lively, based on original story by Sherman Lowe and Arthur St. Claire. Photography, Maury Gertsman.

Plot: A Wells Fargo agent and his comic sidekick are assigned the dangerous task of eliminating a gang of stagecoach robbers. They suspect the town's saloon-owner of being the ringleader. When the agent gets the evidence on him, they settle their long-standing grudge with a pistol duel. The agent nicks the ringleader's hand, winning for the side of justice and simultaneously, the girl of his heart.

Comment: This is easily the best of the current series of Kirby Grant-Fuzzy Knight westerns, largely because of a very tight script written by veteran scenarist William Lively. Lively's dialogue and neatly woven plot must give credit, however, to the original yarn penned by Sherman Lowe and Arthur St. Claire. The story and lines are above average for this type release. Grant looks better here than he has before and delivers several tunes effortlessly. Knight comes through with his usual efficient antics, plus the comic song he always delivers. Direction by Wallace W. Fox, who also produced, keeps the film rolling at a fast clip, Jane Adams is very pretty as the femme lead and Danny Morton, an unusually handsome villain, turns in a convincing performance. Especially professional work is also done by Bernerd Thomas, as the weakling son of the town banker.

Republic Western 87 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Western fans will like it but more sophisticated audiences are likely to note its weaknesses.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A good title and fairly good marquee values should bring average business in most situations.

Cast: William Elliott, Vera Ralston, Gail Patrick, Joseph Schildkraut, Andy Clyde, Donald Barry, Raymond Walburn, Reinhold Schunzel, Russell Hicks, William B. Davidson, Paul Hurst, Charles Judels, Byron Foulger, Jack Lambert, Hal Taliaferro, Stuart Hamblein, Noble Johnson, Eva Puig, Henry Wills. Credits: Associate producer and director, Joseph Kane. Screenplay by Richard Wormser from an original story by Michael Uris and Ralph Spence. Photography, Reggie Lanning. Music by George Antheil. Musical direction, Cy Feuer.

Plot: In 1859 the slow-moving stagecoach routes between Missouri and California are deemed too slow for communication purposes by a group of businessmen who decide to form a Pony Express system to carry the mails. The owner of the stagecoach lines uses every crooked means possible to destroy the Pony Express outfit before it can get started but eventually loses his business and his life to a Plainsman whose determined efforts gets the first Pony riders through successfully. The Plainsman wins the daughter of the Pony Express Lines' sponsor with his business success.

Comment: An essentially good idea for a top western misses fire because of a slow pace and stilted dialogue. While Republic has given the picture excellent production values and the actors are more than competent, with the exception of Donald Barry as a menace (who probably will evoke more laughs than shudders), the film lacks the pace to which western fans are accustomed. Bill Elliott is excellent as the Plainsman, Miss Ralston is charming, and Gail Patrick, is fine as a feminine menace, as is Joseph Schildkraut, as the stagecoach owner who stops at nothing in his attempts to destroy the Pony Express. Outdoor scenes are beautiful and the action, when it gets going, is more than satisfying. Despite its faults "Plainsman and the Lady" should do average business in most situations, based on the good title and the strength of its name players. An energetic exploitation campaign should produce good results.

The Verdict

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Intelligently produced murder-mystery enhanced by splendid acting and a tight script.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should draw well everywhere because of the Greenstreet and Lorre names and good word-of-mouth.

Cast: Sydney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre, Joan Lorring, George Coulouris, Rosalind Ivan, Paul Cavanaugh, Arthur Shields, Morton Lowry, Holmes Herbert, Art Foster, Clyde Cook, Janet Murdock, Ian Wolfe. Credits: Producer, William Jacobs. Director, Don Siegel. Screenplay, Peter Milne from a novel by Israel Zangwill. Photography, Ernest Haller.

Plot: An innocent man is hanged for murder on the circumstantial evidence presented by the Superintendent of Scotland Yard. When the tragic mistake comes to light, the Superintendent is replaced by another man whose best friend is accused of murder and convicted on circumstantial evidence. The ex-Superintendent watches his successor fumble the case, and at the last moment comes up with a surprising revelation to save the life of his friend.

Comment: This film is fortunate because it embraces so many fine talents. William Jacobs gives it splendid production mountings and Don Siegel proves why he has been elevated to a director's chair through his extremely smooth direction. Photographic angles, as arranged and taken by Ernest Haller, are Academy Award calibre, lending a great deal to the atmosphere of this eerie drama. The cast of fine performance is topped, of course, by those two masters of murder-mysteries, Sydney Greenstreet and Peter Lorre. Joan Lorring does a very able job as the Cockney entertainer and Rosalind Ivan, George Coulouris and Paul Cavanaugh deliver outstandingly. Warners had a real inspiration when they adapted this screenplay from a novel by one of England's most noteworthy writers, Israel Zangwill. It should please and draw well.

Tumbleweed Trail

PRC Western with Songs 59 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Much more satisfying and better entertainment than the usual B western. Songs are good, too.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do as well as others in the Dean series.

Cast: Eddie Dean, Roscoe Ates, Shirley Patterson, Johnny McGovern, Bob Duncan, Ted Adams, Jack O'Shea, Kermit Maynard, Bill Fawcett, The Sunshine Boys. Credits: Original screenplay by Frances Kavanaugh. Produced and directed by Robert Emmett Tansey. Photography, Ernest Miller. Musical director, Karl Hajos. Original songs, Tumbleweed Trail, by Eddie Dean and Glenn Strange; Lonesome Cowboy, by Eddie Dean and Johnny Bond; Careless Darlin', by Ernest Tubb, Lou Wayne and Bob Shelton.

Plot: A rancher disappears, apparently murdered by cohorts of his stepbrother who covets his ranch and land-holdings. When his will is read the stepbrother inherits the ranch, cattle, etc., but the rancher's daughter and son refuse to leave the ranch. Eddie Dean and Roscoe Ates sign on as ranch hands, assist the girl in holding her ranch and eventually expose the stepbrother as a will forger. The rancher turns up and explanations show that Dean and Ates have been agents of the U. S. Marshal, and have asked the rancher to continue his disappearance so that their investigation of the attempt to murder him might throw the criminals off their guard.

Comment: Dean and Ates have formed a team for their type of western derring-do that improves with each appearance in the series. And Dean becomes a more ingratiating actor with a nice singing voice, whose physical prowess in fisticuffs has more reality than most of the similar heroes have shown. The story has more plausibility than the majority of B westerns, although black is black and white is white—there are no gray tones. In other words a villain is a villain and a hero is a hero, and no mistaking which is which. This is as it should be in westerns. And fans will like this one for its singing, action and the moment when the villain finally gets his. Should do as well or better than others in the series.

RKO Radio Drama 62 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Never a dull moment in this one. Action, suspense and pure entertainment for the masses.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do very well with the exploitation possibilities it affords. Can lead double bills in some spots.

Cast: Morgan Conway, Anne Jeffreys, Lyle Latell, Rita Corday, Ian Keith, Dick Wessel, Douglas Walton, Esther Howard, Joseph Crehan, Byron Foulger, Jimmy Crane, Milton Parsons, Skelton Knaggs. Credits: Produced by Herman Schlom. Directed by Gordon M. Douglas. Screenplay by Dane Lussier and Robert E. Kent from an original story by Luci Ward, based on the cartoon strip, "Dick Tracy" by Chester Gould. Photography, George E. Diskant with special effects by Russell A. Cully.

Plot: Cueball strangles a diamond smug-

NEAR-RECORD SNOWFALL HALTS THEATRES, SCHOOLS, TRANSIT; WOLFBERG FORMING ALLIED UNIT

The worst snowstorm in 33 years struck Denver over last week-end, bringing almost all normal activities to an immediate halt. The State Capitol closed down, as did schools and some theatres, as emergency crews went to work digging the city out from under the 26-inch fall. Trains into the city were hours late, and auto traffic was at a standstill. It was believed that most theatres in the territory had films with which to operate, but whether they could open or not depended on local conditions.

Broadway Theatre manager John Wolfberg is carrying on a direct-mail campaign to enlist exhibitor support for the formation of an Allied unit in this territory. Allied officials, with whom he conferred at the Boston convention this summer, have pledged full cooperation.

Frank H. Ricketson, Jr., President of Fox Intermountain, was honored recently with a testimonial dinner for his activities in connection with the Central City Opera House Association, the non-profit group which sponsors an annual play festival at the 68-year-old theatre in Central City.

Orpheum Theatre manager William Hastings, having found a place to live, if only temporarily, has wired his wife in Cincinnati to join him.

Henry Leclaire, former Webber Theatre manager, writes that he has become assistant manager of the Riviera Theatre in New York.

Fox Denver Theatres are entering their second year in the concert business, with most of the attractions scheduled for the city auditorium. Advance ticket demands point to another successful season, reports Fox city manager Harry Huffman.

Hollywood Production Still Off Schedule, With 43 Pictures Before Cameras on Lots and on Location; IATSE Replacements Still Man Jobs of CSU Strikers

Production is perceptibly off in Hollywood. Instead of the usual 55 or more pictures in work, this week finds production hovering in the 40s. Counting actual films before the cameras, there are approximately 43 at all lots. Of this number an appreciable amount are on location, with Mexico getting more than its past share. Pictures being filmed on the lots are below the average in quantity; IATSE replacements are still manning jobs left by striking CSU workers. In the various laboratories the fight continues between IA workers sympathetic to the CSU and those, said to be in the minority, favorable to Walsh's newly taken-over setup.

Schwarz' First for SG

Jack Schwarz started his first venture for Screen Guild, with "Return of Buffalo Bill" going into action this week. Richard Arlen stars, with Bernard B. Ray directing. This is the first of a series of 10 features Schwarz is scheduled to deliver to SG. The screenplay is by Barney Sarecky, who also did the original story.

Producer James S. Burkett announced the start of a new film called "Bells of San Fernando." The picture is supposed to roll Armistice Day, with Terry Morse directing.

Eagle-Lion Shoots One

Although the venture has not been publicized, Eagle-Lion has been working on a film for several weeks. The present title is "Alias Mrs. Gray." Starred in the comedy-drama are Franchot Tone, Ann Richards and Tom Conway. Producer is Lee Marcus, with Leigh Jason directing.

Executives were shuffled around like a deck of cards at E-L last week, with Albert J. Cohen being released from his executive producer chores and Howard Welsch moving over from PRC to take over Cohen's spot. Leonard Picker, originally from Columbia, was given a producer's contract.

Sturges Leaves 'Vendetta'

The big news among the myriad United Artists' units last week was the suspension of production for an indefinite period on "Vendetta." Howard Hughes, 51 per cent stockholder in California Pictures, which also made "Sin of Harold Diddlebock," exercised his majority rights to force out Preston Sturges. Reasons given were that "Vendetta" was greatly over schedule and budget. A cast of virtual unknowns is featured in the picture.

Hal Roach sneaked his "Here Comes Trouble" at a suburban house and was so pleased that he has brought back the color feature comedy to his lot for 20 days of added scenes. This is following his original idea of allowing audience response to govern length of his films

Producer-director Fred Guiol is handling the added footage and among those appearing are William Tracy, Joe Sawyer, Beverly Loyd and Emory Parnell.

Irene Rich finished her part in "New Orleans," Jules Levey Production, just before the film was completed ahead of schedule. Howard Hawks' "Red River" is having much trouble on its Arizona location, largely due to bad weather. Hunt Stromberg's "Personal Column" is shooting at Goldwyn; it was originally set for General Service, which has been dark for some time now. George Zucco is another recent addition to the cast.

Wurtzel's Topical Angle

Sol Wurtzel, 20th-Century Fox's independent action producer, is shooting "The Jewels of Brandenburg," an original screenplay by Irving Cummings, Jr., Robert G. North and Irving Elman. It's inspired by the thefts of royal jewels in occupied European countries, and Wurtzel intends cashing in on the topical angle. James Tinling was originally set for director, but illness forced him out, with Eugene Forde substituting. Production started at Sutherland Studios November 8 with Richard Travis cast at the American secret agent who smashes a jewel thieves' ring.

Senor Wences, a ventriloquist, and A. Robbins, who does a banana act, were brought on from New York just for specialty numbers in a Christmas party sequence in Betty Grable's "Mother Wore Tights." Mack Gordon and Josef Myrow are writing the music for the picture, which is being filmed in Technicolor. Dan Dailey, Jr., who has the top male role, started work last week. Lamar Trotti, who is producing, also wrote the screenplay.

PRC Location Trouble

PRC's big-budget animal drama has been having trouble on its Mount Shasta location. "The Red Stallion" is over schedule because of adverse weather conditions. The studio sent a second camera crew north to help facilitate the ending of the location shooting. Several weeks more are required back in Hollywood before the film is finally finished. It is being filmed in color.

Two Start at Republic

Two more pictures started at Republic this week, supplementing "Gallant Man." The newcomers are both being shot on location. The Nelson Eddy-Ilona Massey starrer, "Will Tomorrow Ever Come," has Allan Dwan as associate producer-director. Others in the cast include Joseph Schildkraut, Hugo Haas, Elsa Lanchester and Tamara Shayne. The other starter is "Marshal of Cripple Creek," with

New Microphone Device Developed at Paramount

Described as a revolutionary innovation in film production, a device called the microphone's "fifth and last movement" which was introduced for the first time in the making of Paramount's "Golden Earrings" and which will be used extensively in recording the dialogue of production numbers in "Variety Girl," has stirred keen interest among studio sound engineers.

The device, developed by the Paramount sound department, permits the microphone operating at the end of the boom to tilt as well as pan in following action accompanied by dialogue. In "Golden Earrings," for instance, it enables the mike to point at Marlene Dietrich while she is seated on the ground, then to tilt up to Ray Milland without compromising on microphone placement or moving the boom arm, which would create shadows.

According to the Paramount sound department, sound men find that the new device saves production time, simplifies operation and aids in getting better quality.

The four movements available heretofore were boom tilting, panning, extending and microphone panning at the end of the boom. The fifth and last movement, tilting, in effect consists of looking up and down while panning.

4 WB Stars in Short

"So You Want to Be in Pictures," next in the series of Joe McDoakes comedies being directed by Dick Bare for Warner Bros., will have four Warner stars playing brief roles as themselves. Quartet includes Jack Carson, Bob Hutton, Martha Vickers and Janis Paige. Star of the series is George O'Hanlon.

His First Since War

Dick Hogan has been signed for a featured role in Paramount's "Blaze of Noon," his first picture since his release from service. He will portray a dispatcher on the pioneer airline which provides the background for the film.

Faylen Re-Optioned

Frank Faylen, who has had featured roles in 26 pictures in the last three years, has been re-optioned by Paramount. His most notable portrayal was that of Bim, the male nurse, in "The Lost Weekend."

Ladd in 'Variety Girl'

Alan Ladd has been added to the cast of Paramount's "Variety Girl." He will be teamed with Dorothy Lamour in a sequence in which they sing a deep south harmony number being written for them by Frank Loesser.

One for Rank

Joan Leslie will make a picture soon for J. Arthur Rank, her manager said in Chicago last week, where Miss Leslie is making a personal appearance at the Oriental Theatre.

Kilroy Hero of Feature Series Planned by Astor

With world-wide distribution rights signed March 25, Astor Pictures Corporation has completed a deal with Pat Patterson and Frank Roy Nicholson, San Francisco producers, whereby Patterson and Nicholson will handle production of a series of six features to be known as the Kilroy series.

The six features will be titled "Kilroy Was Here," "Kilroy Returns," "Kilroy Meets Girl," "Who Is Kilroy?," "Kilroy Gets Married" and "Kilroy and the Sergeant."

First of the series scheduled for release is "Kilroy Was Here," which is scheduled to reach metropolitan New York theatres around February 15. Every two months thereafter, according to present plans, another Kilroy film will be released.

Title, story and music for the series were copyrighted in Washington, D. C. last March.

'Two Guys' Series Scheduled by Warners

As a result of the success of "Two Guys From Milwaukee," Jack L. Warner, executive producer of Warner Bros., announces that Dennis Morgan, Jack Carson and Janis Paige, who appeared in that picture, will be reunited in "Two Guys From Texas," next in a series of similar "Two Guys" productions. Martha Vickers also will appear in the new production, which will have a dude-ranching background.

David Butler will direct from a screenplay by I. A. L. Diamond, with Alex Gottlieb producing.

Ben Hecht Signed By U. S. Pictures

Ben Hecht has been signed by Milton Sperling, president of United States Pictures, to do the screenplay of "Distant Drums," Dan Totheroh story of the Oregon Trail, for Warner Bros. release.

Lilli Palmer, just placed under new long-term contract by U.S.P. following her American film debut in "Cloak and Dagger," will star in "Distant Drums."

RKO Signs Brahm

RKO Radio has signed John Brahm to a long-term contract following his direction of "The Locket." Its stars are Laraine Day, Brian Aherne, Robert Mitchum and Gene Raymond.

Cast with 'Millie'

Michael Duane has been assigned by Columbia to a featured role in "Millie's Daughter." Sidney Salkow is directing, with Gladys George, Gay Nelson and Paul Campbell in top spots.

2 From MGM This Month

"Two Smart People," starring Lucille Ball with John Hodiak, and "Undercurrent," starring Katharine Hepburn and Robert Taylor, are being released this month by MGM.

Allan Lane as Red Ryder in the seventh of the series. R. G. Springsteen is directing for associate producer Sidney Picker.

Scheduled to start November 9 is "Bells of San Angelo," with Roy Rogers, Dale Evans and the Sons of the Pioneers. William Witney directs for associate producer Edward J. White.

Cy Feuer, the studio's music chief, announced that Robert Armbruster of radio fame will be musical director for the Eddy-Massey film, for which Rudolf Friml has written an original score.

'Arch' Filming Goes East

With Enterprise finishing its Hollywood shooting of "Arch of Triumph," cameras are being shifted to New York. Plans call for final sequences to start November 19, with Ingrid Bergman and Charles Laughton participating. Reason for the New York move: Miss Bergman had to leave for a Gotham stage appearance before Laughton came to Hollywood to replace Michael Chekhov. Meanwhile, "The Other Love" continues shooting on location.

Columbia Starts Serial

"Jack Armstrong, the All-American Boy," a 15-chapter serial based on the radio program, started last week at Kernville location with Sam Katzman producing. Johnny Hart, ex-stunt man, plays the lead role, with feminine leads shared by Rosemary LaPlanche ("Miss America" of 1941) and Claire James (runner-up in '41). Others in the cast include Joe Brown, Jr., Pierre Watkin, Hugh Prosser and Wheeler Oakman. Prosser just finished the lead heavy in "Prairie Raiders," latest "Durango Kid" with Charles Starrett and Smiley Burnette.

Charles Kemper was added to "King of the Wild Horses" for a leading character role.

Columbia picked up its option of comic Sid Caesar for another year.

One Starts at Monogram

Monogram finished Johnny Mack Brown's "The Devil's Deputy," but started "Fall Guy," based on an original yarn by Cornell Woolrich. The picture is set to roll November 11. Reggie LeBorg directs for producer Walter Mirisch. President Steve Broidy announced purchase of Alfred Noyes' famous narrative poem, "The Highwayman," from James S. Burkett. Budget has been set at a million dollars. Noyes is now collaborating on the screenplay with Jack De Witt and Renault Duncan.

Huston Pacted by RKO

Virginia Huston has been given a new long-term contract by RKO, and her first picture under the new deal is "Build My Gallows High," starring Bob Mitchum and Jane Greer.

Longest-shooting film on the lot is Hakim-Litvak's "A Time to Kill," which is now in its third month before the lensmen. Anatole Litvak, who is producing the picture with the Hakim brothers, is also directing. He had been doing night scenes on location for the past two weeks, with more to go. Other independents, releasing through RKO, now shooting are Sol Lesser's "Tarzan and the Huntress" and Robert Riskin's "Magic Town." Only RKO productions before the cameras are "Gallows" and "Dick Tracy vs the Claw." The Tim Holt western "Thunder Mountain," has been completed.

'Egg' Sole U-I Effort

"The Egg and I" remains the sole effort for Universal-International. Frank Skinner was named to compose an original score and conduct an orchestra for the underscoring for "Swell Guy," completed a number of weeks ago.

'Possessed' Still Shooting

Warners' "Possessed" has been shooting for over 115 days, longest of the current WB crop. Richard Walsh, young actor with Joan Crawford, Van Heflin and Raymond Massey in the picture, had his contract renewed. Next in shooting time ranks "Night Unto Night," Viveca Lindfors-Donald Reagan starrer, which has been going some 47 days. In all, Warners have five films rolling.

DeMille Film Ends

Cecil B. DeMille finished his long-shooting "Unconquered" with 250 extras and atmosphere players brought on for the 14th and final week, devoted to the picture's climactic sequence. "Desert Fury," formerly called "Desert Town," is in its third month of shooting, and "Variety Girl" is nearing the end of its first month.

"Blaze of Noon" has been started, with John Farrow directing and Robert Fellows producing. Picture stars Anne Baxter, William Holden, Sterling Hayden, Sonny Tufts, William Bendix and Howard da Silva. Exteriors of a county fair sequence were completed over the weekend, with 400 people working. The company then moved indoors for a party scene calling for services of 100 variety performers. The picture concerns and air circus troupe who abandon barnstorming to fly the mail.

'A Love Story' for MGM

Metro started "A Love Story" this week, with Clarence Brown producing and directing. Katharine Hepburn is starred.

Jimmie Durante finished his role in "It Happened in Brooklyn" and started on a personal appearance tour up Seattle way. Director Victor Saville called over 300 costume extras for a festival scene in "Green Dolphin Street," set as a Channel Island seaport of a century ago. The sequence required nearly a week of shooting. Filming has been progressing on the "Holiday for Strings" ballet for MGM's "The Unfinished Dance," with cameras rolling after more than a month of rehearsals. David Lichine handled the choreography, directing 200 dancers on the stage, including Margaret O'Brien and Cyd Charisse. Henry Stephenson was added to "The Personal Touch" as a villain.

Starts Dance Rehearsals

Charles O'Curran, RKO Radio's dance director, has begun work on the five production numbers he plans for Eddie Cantor's production of "If You Knew Susie." Since the film co-starring Cantor and Joan Davis will contain more dance numbers than any Cantor picture in some years, rehearsals have begun weeks in advance of the start of the film.

Gable Signs MGM Pact; Gets 'Hucksters' Lead

Clark Gable, who has been absent from the screen since 1945, when he co-starred with Greer Garson in "Adventure," has signed a new MGM contract and has agreed to play the lead in "The Hucksters," screen version of the best-selling Frederick Wakeman novel. Deborah Kerr, English actress, will come to the United States to appear with Gable in the film.

Gable is said to have rejected "Lucky Baldwin" as a vehicle and also for some time objected to "The Hucksters." The picture, which satirizes modern advertising agencies and the radio, will be produced by Arthur Hornblow, with production scheduled to start around the first of the year. MGM bought the screen rights to the book early this year for a reported $200,000.

Triangle Prods. Plan Two Films Annually

The new motion picture company formed in August by Mary Pickford, Buddy Rogers and Ralph Cohn to make two high-budget films a year for United Artists release will be known as Triangle Productions and is separate from Comet Productions, in which Rogers and Cohn are co-producers. Triangle's officers are: Mary Pickford, president; Buddy Rogers, vice-president, and Ralph Cohn, secretary-treasurer.

The company plans to spend an aggregate of $2,500,000 on the two productions, according to Miss Pickford. First will be "The Bat," a mystery drama, adapted from the play by Mary Roberts Rinehart. The second film, as yet untitled, will be a western epic in color.

'Show Me a Land' on Lesser's 1947 Schedule

Edward North has been signed by Sol Lesser to adapt Clark McMeekin's novel, "Show Me a Land," purchased last year and scheduled for production in 1947.

Lon McCallister and Edward G. Robinson will be co-starred in the new picture, which deals with events in sporting history prior to the Civil War and culminates in the running of the first Kentucky Derby. The picture will be made in Technicolor.

Haggard Story to MGM

Gaumont-British, which filmed H. Rider Haggard's novel, "King Solomon's Mines," in 1937, have sold the screen rights to MGM. A new version of the story, which deals with a lost African tribe, will be produced by Sam Zimbalist.

Heisler to Finish Film

California Pictures, the Howard Hughes producing company, has signed Stuart Heisler to complete direction of "Vendetta," from which Preston Sturges withdrew last week after a disagreement with Hughes.

Sheridan Visiting Mexico

Ann Sheridan, who recently finished "Nora Prentiss" for Warners, was scheduled to pay a brief visit to Mexico City this week before starting work on her next picture, "The Unfaithful."

Box-Office Slants

gler and three accomplices, keeping one step ahead of the indomitable Dick Tracy. Through the aid of Tess Trueheart and Vitamin Flintheart, Tracy traps the killer, who barely escapes and meets a horrible death under the wheels of a fast moving train. Tracy and his friends settle down to the birthday party that had opened the film, when a fusillade of shots outside the house tears him away again to his man-hunting.

Comment: Even with the fantastic names and characters contained in the Chester Gould comic strip, Producer Herman Schlom and Director Gordon M. Douglas have attempted little satire in making this fast-moving, exciting picture. The character of Cueball, enacted by Dick Wessel, is played down rather than burlesqued, and that of Vitamin Flintheart, played by Ian Keith, is a delightful cinematic portrayal. Morgan Conway is properly efficient and his comic aide Pat Patton, played by Lyle Latell, is Patton to the life. It is surprising just how much action, suspense and pure entertainment have been packed into the 62 minutes' running time and the fact that the picture is so good is a tribute to the director and the screenplay writers, Dane Lussier and Robert E. Kent. Newspaper editors were generous with their cooperation with the first Dick Tracy picture and should do no less with this one if plans are laid far enough in advance. Should do very well and can lead double bills in some spots.

The Fighting Frontiersman

Columbia Western with Music 61 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Slanted for the juvenile trade, it should fill the bill.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do as well as past releases in the Durango Kid series.

Cast: Charles Starrett, Smiley Burnette, Helen Mowery, Emmett Lynn, Robert W. Fillmer, George Chesebro, Zon Murray, Jim Diehl, Maudie Prickett, Russell Meeker, Frank Ellis, Ernie Adams, Frank LaRue, Jacques J. O'Mahoney, Hank Newman and the Georgia Crackers. Credits: Original screenplay by Ed. Earl Repp. Produced by Colbert Clark. Directed by Derwin Abrahams. Photoplay, Phillip Tannura.

Plot: An old prospector stumbles on a vast cache of long hidden gold, originally designed to pay Santa Ana's army in Texas. He is captured by a gang of outlaws who try to find out where the gold is hidden. Charles Starrett and Smiley Burnette go to the aid of their old friend, assisted by the Durango Kid (Starrett), and wipe out the gang.

Comment: This follows the standard rules for the Durango Kid who has built up a reputation for being on the side of law and order. The film contains the elements of action, some music, good acting on the part of Starrett and Burnette and just par for the course portrayals by the others. The music is of the regular western type and is pleasing enough but interferes with the action just when things are about to happen. The appeal of the Durango Kid pictures is on the upswing, however, and this should do as well as its predecessors, which is fair enough.

AUDIENCE CLASSIFICATIONS OF NATIONAL REVIEWING COMMITTEES

This information should be filed for reference when a picture is played in order that the theatreman may quote classifications of recognized reviewing committees independent of the industry when parents, guardians or local groups inquire as to the suitability of the picture for children and young people.

Feature	National Board of Review	Schools M. P. Committee	National Legion of Decency	General Federation of Women's Clubs
Deception	Mature	.....	Adults	Adult
Her Sister's Secret	.....	.....	Adults	Mature Family
Nobody Lives Forever	Mature	.....	Adults	.....
Undercurrent	Mature	.....	Adults	.....

NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW: Founded in 1909 "to represent the interests of the motion picture public," maintains a Review Committee consisting of some 300 men and women of all ages, "representing a cross-section of public taste." Designations: Family—14 years of age and up (recommendations for age groups under 14 by Schools M. P. Committee of the Board); Mature—18 years and up. *—Especially worth seeing.

SCHOOLS MOTION PICTURE COMMITTEE. A committee of the National Board of Review which "represents groups of parents and teachers from public and private schools," whose purpose is to select pictures "suitable for age groups 8-12 and 12-14."

NATIONAL LEGION OF DECENCY: Committee of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae reviews pictures and publishes its moral classifications for guidance of members of the Legion—composed of those members of the Catholic Church who join the Legion. Designations: Unobjectionable for General Patronage; Unobjectionable for Adults; Objectionable in Part; Condemned.

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS. The motion picture committee is headed by Mrs. Arretus F. Burt, Chairman, of St. Louis. Two reviewing committees are maintained—Mrs. Harry Lilly, New York, Chairman Eastern Committee; Mrs. John Stearns Thayer, Los Angeles, Chairman Western Committee. Designations: Family—8 years and up; Mature Family—14 years and up; Junior and Senior High School Students and Adults; Senior High School Students and Adults. —Exceptional.

MGM Buys Story For Robert Taylor

"The Burning Secret," a screen story by Stefan Zweig, has been purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a probable vehicle for Robert Taylor. The picture, a romantic comedy laid in the Austrian Alps, will be produced by Joseph Pasternak.

Since he left the Navy in 1945 Taylor has made only one film, "Undercurrent," with Katharine Hepburn. Production on "The Burning Secret" is scheduled for next year.

Doug Fairbanks, Jr. Buys 'Don Peon'

Screen rights to "Don Peon," a magazine story about early California by Johnston McCulley, author of "The Mark of Zorro," one of the elder Fairbanks' memorable films, have been purchased by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who is now an actor-producer at Universal - International.

Screen title of "Don Peon" will be "Caballero," with young Fairbanks in the leading role.

Buys Two Stories

Two screen stories have been acquired by RKO Radio for foreign production. One of these, "Mystery in Mexico," by Muriel Bolton, will be produced by Sid Rogell at the company's Churubusco studio in Mexico City. The other, "The Story of Scotland Yard," by Borden Chase, has been scheduled for filming in England next year.

Bare to Make Six

Dick Bare, Warner Bros. short subjects director, has been scheduled to make six of his popular Joe McDoakes comedies for release in the 1946-47 selling season. Bare is now shooting the fifth of the six which will go into the 1946-47 short lists. The fifth, "So You Want to Be in Pictures," will be followed by "So You Want to Be a Father."

Dear Mr. Masek:

Occasionally we check our Projection Room, and the thought came to me the other day that since we installed Simplex E-7 Mechanisms, we have not had any maintenance cost to speak of in that department.

These E-7 Mechanisms have stood the grind of a ten hour day for nearly four years, and have maintained a rock, steady picture on our screen.

It then occurred to me that a theatre equipped with Simplex E-7 Mechanisms is really set right, as there is no further worry about having a perfectly projected picture. Thought you might want to know my sentiments on your E-7 Mechanisms.

Yours very truly,

LOEW'S PARK THEATRE

M-G-M NEWS IS GOOD NEWS!

EXTRA!
"Rage In Heaven" sets new all-time Sunday record at Capitol, N.Y.

BERGMAN AND BOB BIG!

Ingrid Bergman and Robert Montgomery are spellbinding the crowds with "Rage In Heaven" at the big Capitol Theatre on Broadway. First time in history that a Reprint plays M-G-M's Ace New York house. Packing them in everywhere!

RUNAWAY HORSE!

"Gallant Bess" continues to pay off at every gate! Big opportunity for showmanship! Filmed in Action-Cinecolor! A top audience show!

STARS OVER MUSIC HALL!

Naturally it is M-G-M which has captured the highly valued Christmas-New Year's booking at Radio City Music Hall. "Till The Clouds Roll By" Technicolor Musical of Jerome Kern's life and songs is a Big Show for a big Showshop. 13 Top Stars, 13 Top Featured Players, 26 Songs and Numbers! Something to look forward to.

"THE YEARLING" WORLD PREMIERE!

M-G-M will shortly make announcement of the most important World Premiere in years. No picture in recent film history has had such advance praise. It has already been selected as their Prize Picture by Louella Parsons in Cosmopolitan, Thornton Delehanty in Redbook, Jack Moffitt in Esquire, Dorothy Kilgallen in Modern Screen and more every day.

VAN DOES IT AGAIN!

"No Leave, No Love" is delighting every Van-fan from Coast to Coast. Van Johnson adds another gay musical hit to "Thrill Of A Romance" and "Easy To Wed."

REMINDER FOR THE FUTURE!

This week we screened an amazing attraction "Lady In The Lake." It reveals a unique technique in screen story-telling, the most startling innovation since talking pictures began! YOU are co-starred in the picture with Robert Montgomery and a sterling cast. You'll see what we mean! It's powerful, suspenseful. daring, revolutionary!

YOU CAN SAY IT AGAIN AND AGAIN!

Sometimes you can break a good rule!

It's usually a wise rule not to plan a chicken dinner before the eggs are hatched.

But not always!

If the "chicken dinner" represents your future, and the "eggs" are financial nest eggs—go ahead and plan!

Especially if your nest eggs are U. S. Bonds—all the War Bonds you have bought—all the Savings Bonds you are buying. For your government guarantees that these will hatch out in just 10 years.

Millions of Americans have found them the safest, surest way to save money . . . and they've proved that buying Bonds on the Payroll Savings Plan is the easiest way to pile up dollars that anyone ever thought of.

So keep on buying Savings Bonds. Buy them at banks, post offices, or on the Payroll Plan. You'll be building real financial security for yourself, your family, and your business.

Best of all, you can count your chickens before they're hatched . . . plan exactly the kind of future you want, and get it!

SAVE THE EASY WAY... BUY YOUR BONDS THROUGH PAYROLL SAVINGS

TRADE NOTES

UP POPPED THE RUMORS. The recurrent talk of a new distribution outfit making its appearance popped up again this week on both Coasts when the news broke Tuesday night that Charlie Chaplin and Mary Pickford and United Artists interests were asking for a new deal—or is it no deal?—with David O. Selznick. As it has been observed many times in this corner, there would be quite a flurry of excitement and anticipation of very interesting things to come were plans really set in motion to establish another distribution agency for the handling of top class product from big independent producers.

Before the war ended there was much speculation regarding this move and some very serious efforts made to get a new distributor company under way. Difficulties cropped up in unexpected directions (in one particular case at any rate), but the idea, according to many picture men, has not been abandoned—merely languishes in a phase of marking time.

SHARP SHOWMANSHIP. The industry, particularly the segment of it that is located in New York, now is witnessing a very potent example of dynamic showmanship as 20th-Fox turns on the ballyhoo for "The Razor's Edge." This campaign apparently has plenty of yeast under it and there are indications that active interest in its planning and direction has engaged the attention of biggies of the 20th-Fox outfit. It is a company that has plenty of showmanship talent, and the producer of this picture—Darryl Zanuck himself—ranks as one of the smartest showmen the industry has ever developed. We take it, from the evidences, that Zanuck and Skouras, Tom Connors and the entire executive command of 20th-Fox have given personal interest to the very potent campaign which is rising to a smashing crescendo for the opening of "The Razor's Edge" in New York next week exploitation—being executed by the company's able ad and publicity head, Charles Schlaifer, and his staff—rolls along.

'LEO AGAIN.' They're turning out some mighty big pictures these days in Hollywood, and so it can't be said that the eminence of a picture we saw at MGM last week is due to the flatness of the surrounding country. The picture we're talking about is "Till the Clouds Roll By," a super-duper entertainment package if ever you and your public saw one.

Rarely have we seen, even in fleeting glances of exceptional isolated shots in a picture, such exquisite color photography as that which comes down from the screen via the Technicolor in this opulent and stunning musical show.

To add further flavor to this tasty dish, there's a procession of real all-star talent—and all of the actors, actresses, dancers and singers shown at their best—and there is a story with many very effective sequences to round out one of the biggest bundles of show values ever offered to the public of this or any other land.

THE HUMAN TOUCH. It's a characteristic of show business that you find a warm human touch evident in all its dealings with the public. There's stiff competition in this business, however, and that calls for very buiness-like operations.

It is heartening to observe this human touch in action in the conduct of a big company operating in this or any other business, and that is why so much attention has been directed toward the incident that took place a couple of weeks ago when it became known that the first beneficiaries of a pension plan in effect in the National Theatres Company now were drawing their retirement incomes.

During the past few years there have been many reports about pension and profit-sharing plans being established by companies in this industry. Consequently, this actual case of a retirement plan operating to the benefit, in the form of a regular income, of employes took on special interest.

We can all take pride in the example of Charlie Skouras in setting up the excellent plan which is in effect for employes of National Theatres. One of the eleven beneficiaries now receiving retirement pay is none other than veteran Charles Thall, widely and affectionately known among theatremen and those in all branches of the industry.

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

DECREE—The Government this week formally protested exemptions for roadshowing in the forthcoming decree but told the statutory court by letter that if any such exemptions were contemplated it preferred the plan submitted by United Artists. In its letter the Government accused the defendants of seeking "grants of immunity" for acts which the court had declared illegal. Industry talk predicted that the copyright law would be invoked against competitive bidding were that clause to appear in the court's decree.

GOVERNMENT—The Administration is reported seeking to retain controls on construction. At present the lifting of controls on almost all items bids to send up costs both in exhibition and production, carpet being an illustration.

Industry leaders have been invited to two Washington conferences. On Nov. 19, a conference has been called at the White House, presumably to iron out the difficulty the Government seems to be having in distributing its federal films; on Dec. 12 Attorney General Tom Clark has invited industry heads to a conference which is reported to be concerned with checking lawlessness through message films and the spread of American doctrines of government through the same media.

EXHIBITORS—Western exhibitors see no falling off in box offices for the next three years, United Artists' Maury Orr reported upon returning to New York. Reasons: No housing prevents population shifts; Better product; Popularity of films due to service to armed forces during the war which built up a large audience.

Minnesota spent $462,000 in October this year for amusement taxes compared to $538,000 for October, 1945. Piedmont, Ala., now has a 10 per cent amusement tax.

Columbus, Ohio is enforcing a curfew keeping children off the streets and out of amusement places after 9 p.m. The law was revived for Halloween; the authorities found it so helpful they kept it.

Suit of Ascap against Ben Berger and associates over license fees is set for Dec. 2 at Minneapolis.

The 20th annual convention and trade show of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana has been set for the Hotel Severin, Indianapolis on Nov. 19-20. The North Central Allied will meet at the Hotel Nicollet, Minneapolis, Nov. 18.

Michigan Allied Wednesday decided to organize a buying and booking combine. The decision was reached at the organization's annual meeting in Detroit.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee met in Memphis, elected R. X. Williams, one time mayor of Oxford, Miss., president, and denounced the federal amusement tax as a wartime measure now unnecessary. They also opposed music license fees and local checkers.

LABOR—With the bombing of five non-strikers' homes in Hollywood, arguments growing up again over apparent jurisdiction and a plan by the Conference of Studio Unions to blacklist theatres playing product of majors or pictures in which actors appeared who had ignored picket lines, hope for peace in the studio strike seemed low this week. At the same time a survey of labor opinion throughout the country showed that labor on the whole might attempt to carry out the CSU boycott, which was planned to extend to stopping maintenance and construction, only if national heads of the unions approved. To date only two local unions had such a request before them. The Harrisburg AFL painters and carpenters had meetings set for the last week of November to discuss a possible boycott and picket line against theatres showing the disapproved pictures. Meanwhile, reports from the midwest said that exhibitors were urging the IATSE to organize ushers and cashiers before the CIO got around to it.

DISTRIBUTION — Charles Chaplin and Mary Pickford, who together own two-thirds of United Artists, seemed about to force that company to refuse distribution of David Selznick's "Duel in the Sun." At the same time attorneys for the pair said that suit would be instituted to recover from Selznick the United Artists stock which he acquired as part of his deal to deliver pictures.

Selznick claims the entire move is an effort by Chaplin and Pickford to oust him for their own profit in a possible sale of United Artists.

Monogram's President Steve Broidy announced Wednesday plans for a new company to be known as Allied Artists Corporation to handle distribution of a series of top-bracket pictures through Monogram's exchange network. This new company will not interfere with Monogram's announced production of 46 features but will bring together a group of producers, directors, actors and writers who have expressed interest in such an organization. Monogram is considering an increase of its capital from 1,000,000 shares at $1 par to 1,500,000 shares.

THE MAN ON THE COVER

German Elected President of Brulatour Companies

Canada-born William J. German, veteran of the film business for almost a quarter of a century, Monday was elected president of J. E. Brulatour, Inc., to succeed the late Jules Brulatour, founder of the company, who died in a New York hospital last month.

German was also elected president of the subsidiary, J. E. Brulatour, Inc., of California.

The new president, who was born in Port Hope, Canada, attended business school there and after coming to the United States joined the accounting department of Eastman in 1906. In 1922 he became associated with Jules Brulatour and when J. E. Brulatour, Inc., was formed in 1932, he was elected vice-president in charge of sales, a post he held through the succeeding years.

Before joining Brulatour German was managing director of the G. M. Laboratories in Long Island City and the Paragon and Sen-Jack Laboratories at Ft. Lee.

In 1944 he was elected to the directorate of Universal Pictures, which Brulatour and he helped found, and later was appointed a director of the Associated Motion Picture Industries.

The trade regards German as a keen-witted executive whose judgment is seldom off in trade matters and who has a genuine interest in people. In his post as sales head for J. E. Brulatour, he developed a wide range of contacts, and associates claim that he becomes interested in them not only as business prospects but also as individuals.

German is indifferent to sports, playing golf only when he has to, but by contrast he is an enthusiastic moviegoer, attending four to five shows a week and never showing discouragement when the program may fall under par.

Early to Bed? No

He hates to go to bed early and frequently after seeing a picture, he will go home and pick up a book from a collection which is always overflowing because he buys continually and seems to be unable to resist solicitation by mail.

In addition to books and films, he can enjoy a brisk game of gin rummy.

German lives with his wife, Estelle Weinert German, in an upper Fifth Avenue penthouse overlooking Central Park. They have two sons —Frederick, a former major who served under Gen. MacArthur as chief of photographic work and handled the filming of the Jap surrender; and William, formerly with the army air forces, who is now in the traffic department of Pan American Airways.

Taxes, Taxes, Taxes

Latest municipality to slap an admission tax on amusements is Piedmont, Ala., which this week put a levy of one cent on each ten cents of admission within the city limits. Amusements operating outside of the city limits but within its police jurisdiction will pay half a cent on each dime charged.

In Tulsa, Okla., the city council there is proposing a one cent tax on each 10 cents of amusement admission or fraction thereof with the exception of dime seats sold to those under 14 years of age.

NATIONAL NEWSREEL

'Duel' Between Selznick, Chaplin-Pickford Looms

Another turbulent battle between United Artists partners Charles Chaplin and Mary Pickford on one side and David O. Selznick on the other appeared in the making this week as reports from Hollywood indicated the Chaplin-Pickford interest might seek to prevent United Artists from distributing "Duel in the Sun" unless Selznick agreed to changes in his distribution contract.

As late as Thursday, attorneys for Chaplin and Pickford were of the opinion that they might go to court in an effort to recover the stock Selznick already has in United Artists.

It is this stock deal plus the Selznick activities outside of United Artists ranks in selling story properties and loaning stars to RKO and 20th Century-Fox that seem to be in the background of the Chaplin-Pickford efforts for a re-alignment as regards Selznick's status with U.A.

According to reports, when Selznick entered United Artists he was to acquire stock upon the delivery of a specified number of "units." This is the stock he already owns. After he had delivered 10 "units" he was to receive stock giving him a third ownership in the distributing corporation.

The unit system varied. Expensive productions were to each equal two units; a less expensive picture, one unit.

According to unofficial reckoning, Selznick had acquired six units with the delivery of "I'll Be Seeing You," "Since You Went Away" and "Spellbound." The delivery of "Duel," if accepted, would bring it up to eight units. "The Paradine Case," work upon which has been stopped by Hollywood's strike, could have brought him up to his 10 units.

Chaplin and Pickford both are said to have resented the fact that Selznick sold story properties and loaned players outside of United Artists. Chaplin had previously filed suit, as yet undecided, on this phase of the matter.

Commenting upon the report that United Artists might refuse "Duel" after its directors, instructed by the majority Chaplin-Pickford ownership, met, Daniel T. O'Shea, president of Selznick's Vanguard Films said:

"If perchance the United Artists board supports this weird and suicidal maneuver we shall have much to say of great interest to the trade and it will not be limited to our plans concerning 'Duel in the Sun'."

$250,000 Fire Destroys RKO Fairhaven Keith

A spectacular fire thought to have started in a boiler room explosion Wednesday destroyed the RKO Keith Theatre in the Fairhaven suburb of New Bedford, Mass.

The fire spread to the projection booth which caught fire and sent smoke and flames billowing high into the air. The blaze was so intense that for a time it threatened the entire business district and kept firemen from several adjoining stations fighting it for several hours before it was brought under control.

Damage was estimated at $250,000.

Warners Meet Nov. 21-22

Warner Bros., district managers will meet in New York Nov. 21-22 to discuss forthcoming product, Vice-President and General Sales Manager Ben Kalmenson announced Friday.

D. of J. Opposes Roadshows; Attacks 'Exemption' Attempts

If Decree Permits Road Shows, United Artists Plan Is Preferred, Berge Says

The United States Government this week formally objected to provisions permitting roadshowing under the forthcoming decree and struck hard at alleged attempts by defendants in the New York anti-trust case to procure exemptions to the court opinion.

In a letter to the three-judge statutory court, Wendel Berge, United States Assistant Attorney General in charge of the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, told the court that while the roadshow exemptions were not important in themselves, since they were hemmed in by limitations, the Government did not approve of the decree's being lifted once a year for each defendant in order that defendants might roadshow one picture annually.

If the Court considers allowance of road show privileges, Berge continued, the Government prefers the plan presented by United Artists.

Attacks 'Immunity' Grants

Berge further accused the defendants of wishing to avoid the court's opinion on illegal acts and of seeking "grants of immunity."

To the plea of Universal and United Artists, he wrote:

"Universal and United Artists appear to be pressing upon the court . . . for special exemption from the application of the relief decreed in the opinion on the ground that each relief written leaves them at a disadvantage in competition with the major defendants. In our view the proper solution to this problem rests upon the granting of additional relief against the major defendants rather than exemption from the Sherman Act.

"The proposals of all these defendants are apparently based upon the assumption that the primary purpose is permission rather than prohibition, as they all contain express grants of immunity from practices which the opinion condemned. With this assumption we emphatically disagree."

Competitive Bidding

Meanwhile industry talk was concerned with the competitive selling provision which may appear in the decree. A strong trend of thought in industry circles is to the effect that competitive bidding will be fought hard and all the way by certain of the defendants.

Indications of this are already seen in Columbia's brief. And frequent mention of the copyright law in these discussions also indicate that it will become a factor in any appeal that may be taken against possible competitive bidding provisions.

Some attorneys believe that the copyright law gives the owner the right to sell to whom he pleases, how he pleases, regardless of price, provided the seller does not engage in any conspiracy with regard to his sales. Others point out that courts in the past have undertaken to modify laws of Congress through judicial interpretation of other statutes and by extending them to cover patent and copyright cases, so that it is impossible to reach any pre-decree conclusions.

Labor Support in Doubt as CSU Lays Plans to Boycott Nation's Theatres

American Federation of Labor unions appeared in some doubt this week whether they would boycott and picket theatres across the country if the Conference of Studio Unions put such announced plans into effect.

The CSU has plans to boycott and possibly picket theatres showing pictures of major studios as well as blacklisting stars who have disregarded their picket lines in the current jurisdictional coast strike. The plans include an attempt to shut down maintenance and construction in all theatres from coast to coast.

"The plan is in the initial stages so far," CSU President Herbert K. Sorrell declared. "It will be undertaken by four or five of the largest international unions in the present lockout, including carpenters, painters, electricians, machinists." Sorrell would place the major producers on the "unfair" list of these locals whose membership in the United States and Canada is some three and a half millions.

Such a boycott and possible picketing, however, would require the sanction of the national leaders of each of the unions involved. A check by SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW indicates that there is some confusion on the part of some of the local unions about the Hollywood situation. The tendency is to say that if the national union ordered such action it would be carried out. But there seems to be no enthusiasm for such a plan.

In Omaha, David Chadwell, secretary of the Omaha Building and Construction Council, said:

"We haven't had any notice of such possible action. It's all news to us."

Chadwell said he could recall Omaha AFL members refusing to buy certain products, but there never had been any picketing. A decision to picket for a national cause, he added, would have to have the approval of the unions locally.

The general feeling among carpenter and plumber leaders were that "we are so far removed from the scene" that action seemed unlikely.

In St. Louis neither the painters nor the carpenters had taken any action on the matter, and Erwin C. Meiner, secretary-treasurer of the St. Louis Carpenters district council, said he had received no instructions in connection with any boycotting or picketing. The painters union had the same reply. The consensus of opinion among labor here is that carpenters and painters on the coast "apparently must have gotten a very raw deal."

Iowa labor said they had received no information on the matter, but if they had orders

Toledo Equipment Show Big Draw; TESMA-TEDPA Officers Re-Elected

By AARON NADELL

The four-day convention of organized theatre equipment manufacturers and supply dealers in Toledo, Ohio, closed Monday afternoon with several new manufacturer-dealer pacts concluded and a large number of orders for equipment items on exhibit placed by dealers from all parts of the country.

The convention, which featured the first national exhibit of theatre equipment drew a registration of nearly 300 manufacturers, dealers and motion picture theatre men, with a substantial additional attendance at the equipment show not accounted for by the official convention registration lists. Jake Elder, Interstate Circuits; Dick Dickson, National Theatres; Howard Feigley, Skirball Theatres, and other circuit executives were among those present.

Raw Materials Tight

Manufacturers queried at the meeting declared that while there has been considerable easement in the scarcity of raw materials and component parts for equipment, the situation still is tight and the general forecast was that wholly normal production and delivery schedules will not be attained for many months.

Displays of equipment covering practically everything used in the motion picture theatre were made by 53 manufacturers and service firms. Among many new items revealed among these exhibits of post-war theatre equipment were a new ticket issuing machine, a new projector, a new type fluorescent mural illuminated by ordinary fluorescent lighting equipment in place of the more elaborate "blacklight" projectors previously used.

The mezzanine floor of the Secor Hotel was converted into the exhibit hall in which the various booth displays were set up.

Hold Joint Sessions

The two organizations held joint sessions at which matters of mutual interest were discussed and acted upon. These included a resolution condemning communistic propaganda via the motion picture screen; declared the proposed "writers authority" has such communistic aims and called upon exhibitors to refuse bookings to films based on stories by authors associated with that organization or group if and when formed.

Both TESMA and TEDPA re-elected for another term all officers who have served during the past year.

Oscar Neu, William A. Gedris and Roy Boomer continue as president, vice-president and secretary, respectively, of TESMA. The organization set up a new board of directors comprised of Harry Strong, Carl Weber, E. J. Vallen, Robert Engel and Erwin Wagner.

Ray Colvin was reelected president of the dealers association.

Sees Sound Improvements

Prediction of new developments in sound which would extend over such a wide range field as control tracks, automatic volume control, stereophonic sight and sound, modification of present systems to meet new type of color film requirements was made in New York Wednesday night by Altec Chief Engineer E. S. Seeley before the Atlantic Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

Drops Blue Laws

After 32 years of blue laws for Sunday, Wellesville, Ohio last week voted by 1273 to 771 to permit Sunday movies and sports. The Liberty Theatre, owned by George Davis, was open for the first time in its history Sunday.

Opens Prefab House

What is thought to be the first prefabricated theatre erected in this area opened this month at Middleton, Wis. Named the Middleton, the house is part of the Wisconsin Eskin chain and seats 550. The entire building was shipped from the factory to that city in parts and erected on its site in less than a week.

Paramount Backlog Hits $8,000,000 Says Balaban

Paramount's backlog of pictures has jumped to about $8,000,000 due to increased value of the product, rise in costs of labor and materials and "an estimated amount of unpaid retroactive labor salary adjustments at the studio," President Barney Balaban told the stockholders in a letter this week.

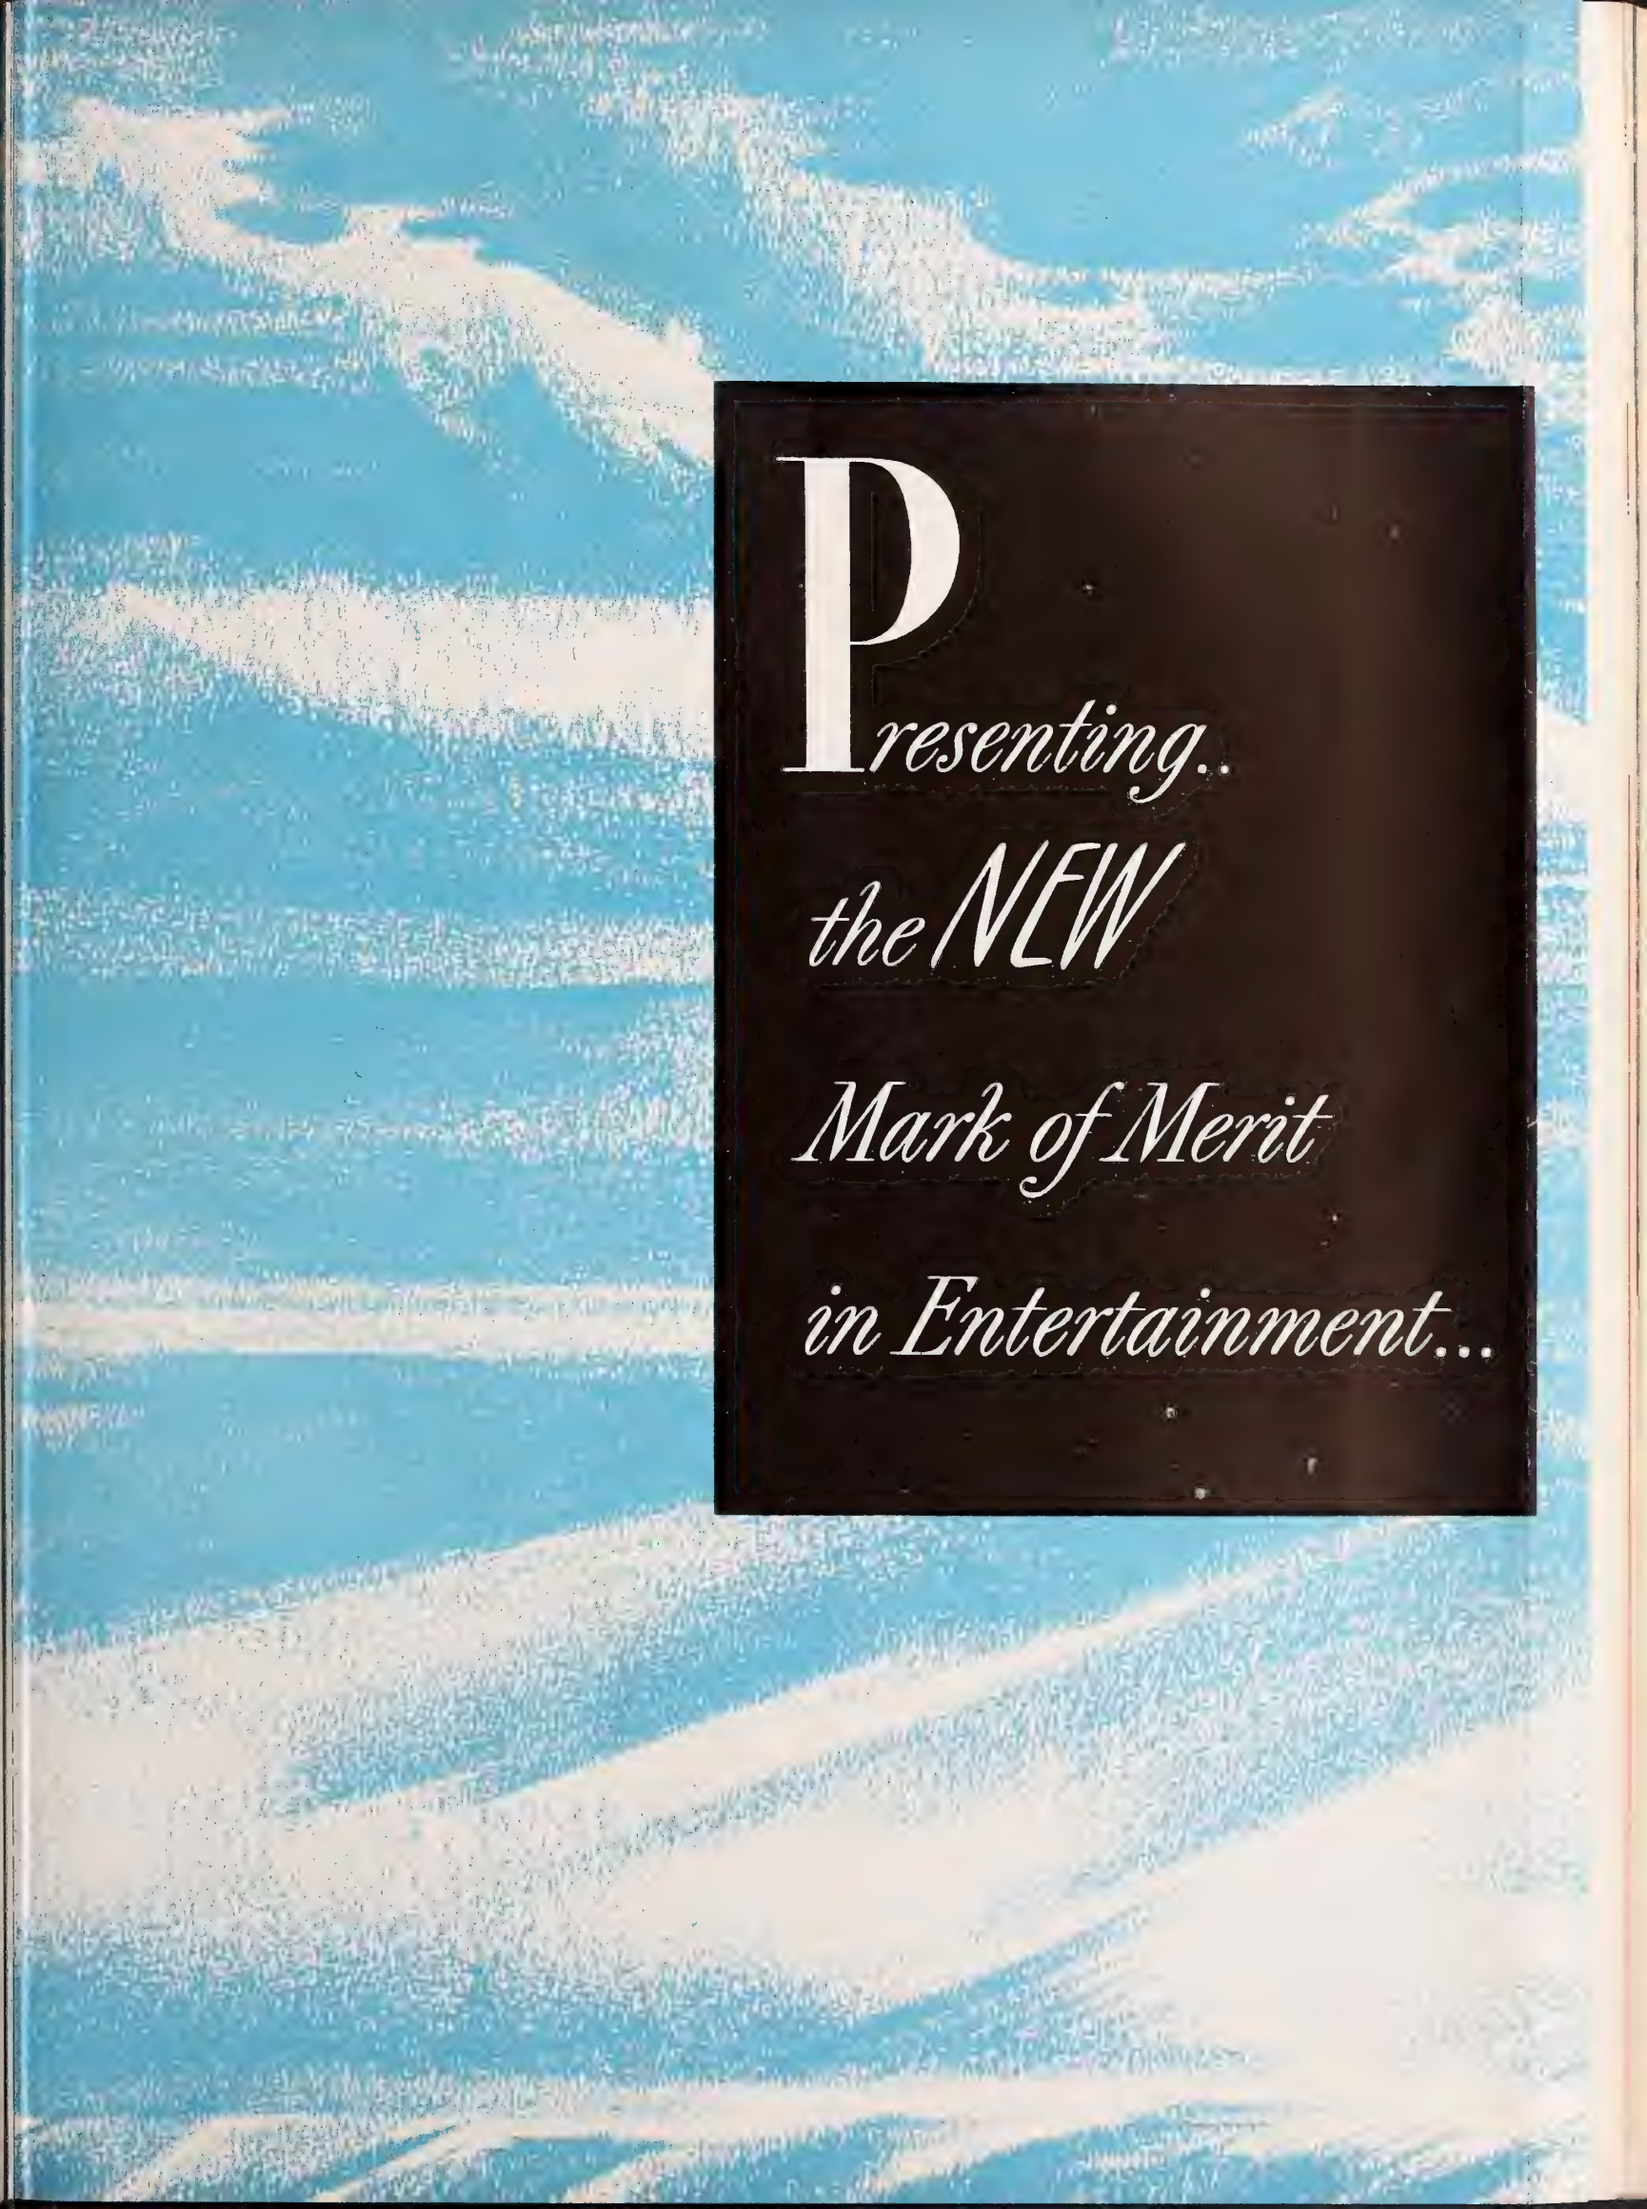
The increased inventory has absorbed a corresponding amount of the company's cash, Balaban said, pointing out that "while our cash has increased substantially during the year, it is essential that our cash reserves be established and maintained at an adequate level."

The Paramount president explained that this "adequate level" was necessary since it enabled the company to follow sound financial policies, maintain dividends and to select economical means "of conforming our theatre operations to the requirements."

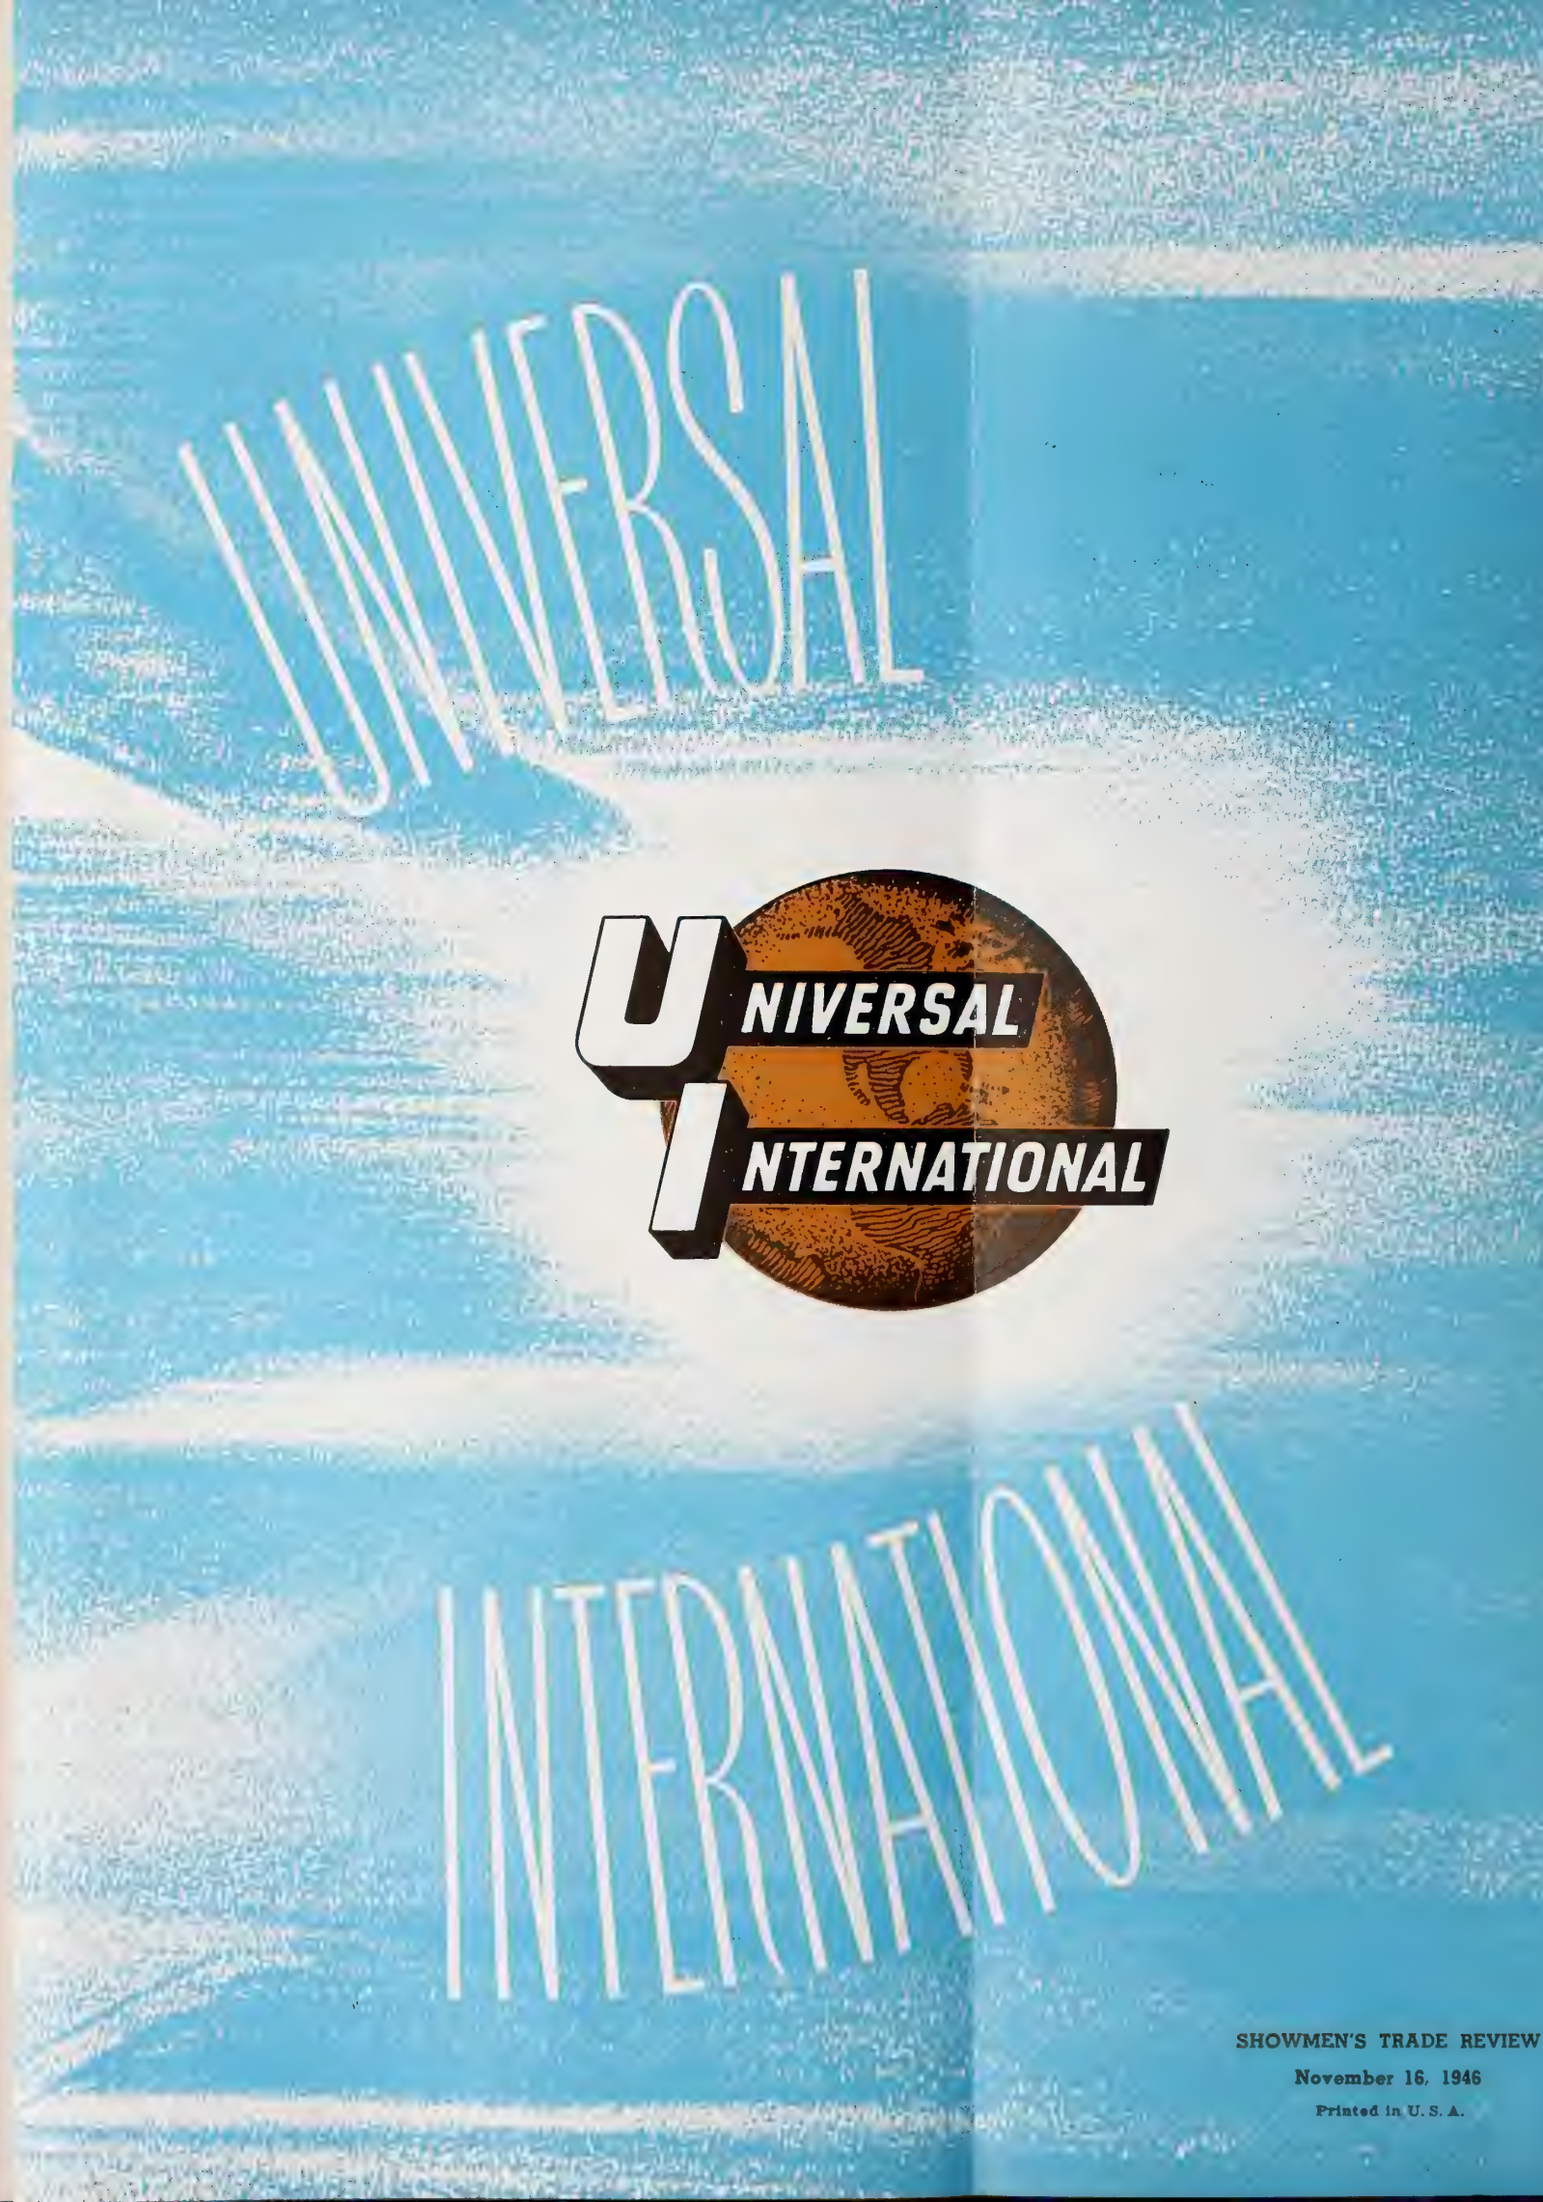
Balaban also told the stockholders that $5,000,000 cash had been applied this year to pay off "practically all" of Paramount's remaining fixed debt and that the Directors had approved a policy of acquiring common stock under favorable circumstances.

Paramount Dividends Raised to $2 a Share

Paramount this week increased its regular dividend rate to $2 a share, payable in quarterly instalments of 50 cents and also declared an additional dividend of 25 cents a share to be paid Dec. 27. This is the second dividend increase by Paramount which last week estimated its net profit for the third quarter ending Sept. 28 at $12,085,000, after deducting all charges.



Eric Johnston Gets Pneumonia, Halts Trip



Plans for the European trip of Motion Picture Association President Eric A. Johnston were canceled in London Monday as the film industry chief was confined to bed by an attack of pneumonia which developed after he had attended a trade luncheon against the advice of his physician. Whether he will continue with the European tour when he recovers has not been decided.

At the luncheon, Johnston in his speech suggested establishing an international film council consisting of the world's motion picture industry leaders. He will cancel his European tour and return to the United States by ship, sailing Nov. 22.

Singles Win

Voters in a theatre poll conducted by the Vogue Theatre at Vancouver, British Columbia, this week turned down double features in favor of single bills by a total of 59 per cent. For some time there has been an indication here that long bills were not too popular in that city but showmen will probably consider the matter more closely before accepting the poll of one theatre.

Labor Doubtful Over Theatre Boycott Plan

to boycott, they would probably do so. The Rocky Mountain area expressed the same opinion.

In Pennsylvania, I. W. Wood of the Painters Local 411, said a meeting had been called in Harrisburg for Nov. 22 to discuss a possible boycott and picket line against theatres. Ralph J. Lyons of Carpenters Local 287 reported his organization had a meeting set for Nov. 25.

In Minnesota union chiefs there reported there had been no official request for such action and that none would be taken unless national union headquarters asked for it.

New England unions said, "no comment" and added that national instructions had been received, but no union leader would commit himself to what course he might follow.

Studio Strike Violence Flares With Bombings

Violence flared again into the seething Hollywood labor situation this week as the homes of five non-striking union men were bombed. Though the damage of the bombings was slight and no one was hurt, the violence emphasized the fact that the labor situation on the west coast is in a jittery stage which might lead to even greater trouble.

Meanwhile, the supporters of arbitration have been meeting regularly in an attempt to get arbitration agreements under way.

This hope appeared slim as the Conference of Studio Unions extended their strike Monday to the General Service Studios because of a walkout of carpenters in protest of the IATSE set erectors. (This was a jurisdictional phase which supposedly had been settled in favor of the IATSE.) Work stoppages also occurred at Cinecolor by the IATSE striking members of Local 683 laboratory technicians because that company had begun to process film of the major studios.

Fear CIO, Urge IATSE Into Usher, Cashier Field

Midwestern exhibitors are urging the AFL International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes to sponsor organization of cashiers and ushers before the CIO moves into this field, reports received in several midwestern cities this week indicated.

The alarm over a possible CIO invasion of the theatre field was said to be great enough that the exhibitors were willing to sign contracts with such IATSE organizations at increased wages. In addition to the belief by showmen here that some wage raises are in line due to cost of living, there seems to be a worry that if the CIO moves in, a jurisdictional fight within theatres may develop which will be similar to that of the Hollywood studios.

In a number of situations the IATSE actually has chartered cashier and usher locals but has let the charters lie dormant, thus leaving a door unlocked which the CIO is said to be trying to push wide open.

Will Appeal

Attorneys for the defendants in Chicago's Jackson Park Theatre case will appeal against Federal Judge Michael Igoe's drastic injunction upsetting the Cnicago clearance system, it was learned in that city Thursday. Judge Igoe had suspended his injunction for 30 days while the defendant attorney studied the nature of their appeal.

'U' in 16, 8-mm. World Move; Buys Filmosound

Universal this week entered the 16-and-8-mm. field on a world-wide basis through its wholly-owned subsidiary, United World Films, Inc., which bought out the Bell and Howell Filmosound Library of 6,000 subjects as a starter in a plan of production and distributing of entertainment, educational and religious pictures on substandard film.

In announcing the new move, Universal President Nate Blumberg said the Bell and Howell purchase included transfer of its entire operating personnel and branch offices of the Chicago, New York, Washington and Los Angeles offices as well as the dealer and agency contact which that company had built up. It does not include purchase of the Bell and Howell manufacturing activities, which includes motion picture camera production.

Through the close affiliation it has with J. Arthur Rank, Universal is also planning to take over the distribution of J. Arthur Rank 16-mm. and 8-mm. releases through United World.

Officers of the new enterprise will be Matthew Fox, who in addition to his duties as executive vice-president of Universal will be board chairman of United World; Col. James Franery, formerly of Gen. Eisenhower's staff as personnel and administration chief, as president; William F. Kruse, former Bell and Howell president, and Edward L. McEvoy, head of Universal's short subjects, vice-presidents. Edmund L. Dorfman will be vice-president in charge of production.

Holdover Parade Marches; Box-Offices Stay Strong

Columbia's "The Jolson Story," currently playing its sixth week at Radio City Music Hall and going into second weeks in Oakland, Buffalo, San Francisco and Cincinnati—the only other cities it has been booked to date—this week marched in the parade of holdovers which were strong at box offices across the country.

Universal's "The Killers" which closed this week at the New York Winter Garden after 11 weeks, was holding up in all other engagements, going through its fourth week at Detroit, piling up three at Oakland, Calif.; Allentown, Pa.; Ft. Collins, Colo., and doing two weeks at Milwaukee, Rochester, San Jose, Eugene, Ohio; Boston, Minneapolis, Newark, Trenton.

"The Dark Mirror" was in its fourth week at the New York Criterion, its second, in Los Angeles, playing day and date in five houses, and its third in Chicago, as well as two weeks in Baltimore and Toronto. "White Tie and Tails" went into a second at Little Rock, while "Canyon Passage" did three weeks in Pittsburgh, and two in Worcester, Mass., "Brief Encounter," in its twelfth week in New York, has entered its third in Los Angeles and San Francisco, its second in Chicago, Memphis, Baltimore and Cleveland.

United Artists "A Night in Casablanca" has two weeks in Memphis and two weeks day and date in two houses in Victoria, British Vancouver. "Mr. Ace" reached its second week in Cleveland.

Warner Bros. "Nobody Lives Forever" has its third week in three houses in Los Angeles, while "The Big Sleep" has five weeks in Seattle and Chicago. "Cloak and Dagger" has two in Boston.

'Notorious' Bonanza

RKO's "Notorious," a box office bonanza to date, saw its eighth week in Chicago, its third in a two-house day and date booking at Newark, N. J.; and a full three weeks in Philadelphia, Patterson, Springfield, Mass., and Toledo, with two weeks in New Bedford. Tulsa, Portland, Youngstown, Ohio; Fresno, Calif.; Camden, N. J.; Niagara Falls and Fall River.

8 Ready, 8 to Come, Says 'U'-Int'l

A program of eight features ready to go into production and a schedule of eight more either ready for release or on which camera work has been completed was announced this week by Universal-International Pictures as papers concluding the merger of production resources of Universal Pictures Company, Inc., and International Pictures Company, Inc., were signed both in New York and Hollywood.

All product coming from the former Universal lot, one of the oldest in Hollywood, henceforth will bear the Universal-International trade mark. The signing of the final papers concludes negotiations which began last August and which commits the studio to an expanded policy wherein westerns, serials and small-budget pictures will be dropped in favor of a top-bracket feature with star names.

The eight pictures either in production or scheduled to go into production were announced as:

"The Egg and I," with Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray; "Ivy," with Olivia deHavilland and Richard Ney; "Time Out of Mind," with Phyllis Calvert; Abbott and Costello in "Buck Private Come Home"; "Assigned to Syria" with Ronald Colman; "The Secret Behind the Door," a Diana production with Joan Bennett; Skirball-Manning's "Portrait in Black," starring Joan Crawford, and "The Exile," with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

The eight now being edited or ready for release are "I'll Be Yours," with Deanna Durbin, Tom Drake and William Bendix; "Temptation" with Merle Oberon, Charles Korvin, George Brent, Paul Lukas; "Slave Girl" (Technicolor) with Yvonne De Carlo and George Brent; Walter Wanger's "Smashup" with Susan Hayward; Mark Hellinger's "Swell Guy" with Sonny Tufts, Ann Blyth, Ruth Warrick; Skirball-Manning's "Magnificent Doll" with Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Burgess Meredith; "Pirates of Monterey" (Technicolor) with Maria Montez and Rod Cameron; "Song of Scheherazade (Technicolor), with Yvonne De Carlo, Brian Donlevy and Jean Pierre Aumont.

Curfew Rang — No Kids in Shows

Columbus, Ohio, police this week enforced a 1909 curfew ordinance which provides that children under 15 must be off the streets and out of public places of amusement by 9 P. M., or be taken home by the police and subject to juvenile court action.

The only exceptions are for children employed at night or going to or from places of religious worship and "proper places of amusement."

Columbus exhibitors, burned up over the "proper places of amusement" phrase, which police do not seem to think includes movies, and also worried over loss of revenue, so far have not got to first base in their opposition.

The police revived the old law for Halloween and pleased with the results in keeping down pranks, decided to enforce it throughout the year.

U. S. Attorney General Invites Industry to Meet

United States Attorney General Tom C. Clark this week called upon industry representatives to meet with him in Washington on December 12 for a conference which it appears will bring together leaders in all fields of communication.

The conference over which Clark is to preside will be the second Washington gathering to which industry representatives have been invited within the past fortnight. The first came from Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion Administrator John Steelman, who invited the industry to a conference at the White House on November 19. Steelman's conference, it is believed, will be for the purpose of working out means whereby the industry would undertake to distribute government-message films of a non-partisan nature. Washington for some time has been reported puzzled with its inability to get Government films into the theatres due to what seems to be lack of an industry distribution system for such product even after it is approved by the various exhibitor groups which pass on subject matter, treatment and length.

Clark's meeting was thought to be along similar lines as that proposed by Steelman. It is rumored that the Attorney General wants to get films to combat lawlessness and to preach the doctrines of American Government before the public. The conference is not thought to have any relation on the forthcoming decree since that matter is now before the court.

35 Million Service Men See Loew's Shows in 5 Years

Some 35,505,927 men and women in uniform attended shows at Loew's theatres across the nation from July, 1941 through August, 1946, a tabulation released this week by General Auditor Harold J. Cleary shows. Of this amount over 11,000,000 were accounted for by New York city theatres with the remainder attending in other cities. All the admissions were at reduced scale.

It's the Secret

Sam Goldwyn, one of the first producers to use the Gallup poll in his field, this week turned his back on their advice and decreed that "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" which upon a Gallup report had been changed to "I Wake Up Dreaming" will again be changed to . . . "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty."

The reason, a man who talks for Goldwyn said, was "due to insistent pressure" from public and press, in favor of "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," as a title.

Milwaukee Mulls Over Censors; Showmen Protest

Milwaukee was still mulling a proposal to establish municipal censorship this week as city authorities seemed puzzled over the fact that exhibitors were opposing the measure.

The authorities said that in the past some of the opponents had actually been for the bill and that they could not understand what had transpired since to cause the change.

C. W. Trampe of Monogram Pictures, who had been a member of the Milwaukee Motion Picture Commission, which is now inactive, said, however, that it might be well to bring it back to life and give it power to cover censorship. Another exhibitor, who did not wish to be named added that the old commission actually had power since on its recommendation, the mayor could order police intervention against indecent pictures.

The Commission blew up when an exhibitor complained that one of its members had discussed cuts in a picture with him and then suggested insurance on his theatre.

J. Cheever Cowdin, Jr. Dead, Services on Coast

Funeral services for John Cheever Cowdin, Jr., 33-year old son of Universal's board chairman, were held in San Francisco this week. Young Cowdin. recently discharged from the army where he served with an anti-aircraft unit in the Aleutians and later in the European Theatre of Operations, died in Nassau, British Indies, while there on vacation.

Ascap Hearing Dec. 2

Hearing of the suit filed by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers against Ben Berger and associates has been set for Dec. 2 in the federal court at Minneapolis, it was reported this week. The exhibitor defendants have moved for a summary decision, equivalent to dismissal. The suit was filed by Ascap on grounds that their music had been played in theatres which had not taken out licenses. Ascap attorney Lou Frohlich will plead the case.

Henry Lehrman Dies

Henry Lehrman, 60, at one time associated with D. W. Griffith and Mack Sennett and producer of the Fox Sunshine comedies died at his Hollywood home last Thursday from a stroke.

Minnesota Spends More

Minnesota is spending more for its amusements, admission tax figures for October released in Minneapolis this week, reveal. The taxes for October, 1946 are $624,000 compared with $538,000 for October, 1945.

Picture People

Max Fleisher, who has been making cartoons for more years than most of us care to remember, is going to teach the television folk how to do it soon. On Dec. 2, Fleischer will begin a course at the Television Workshop in New York.

Warner Bros. Short Subject Sales Manager Norman H. Moray is back in New York after two months of traveling about the exchanges of the United States and Canada. While on the coast he discussed forthcoming shorts product with Executive Producer Jack L. Warner and Short Subject Production Chief Gordon Hollingshead.

Hunt Stromberg, Independent producer for United Artists, came to New York from Hollywood this week in connection with his two latest pictures, "The Strange Woman" and "Dishonored Lady," both starring Hedy Lamarr.

Charles Schlaifer, advertising, publicity, exploitation director for 20th Century-Fox, returned to the home office this week from Chicago, following a regional exploitation meeting at the Blackstone Hotel.

Monogram International President Norton V. Ritchey is in Hollywood where he went to attend the directors' meeting of Monogram and to confer with Monogram President Steve Broidy over plans to open new offices abroad.

Adolph Zukor headed the contingent of Paramount executives who toured the provinces to introduce to all members of the company's staff, as well as the press, the new chairman and managing director for Great Britain, J. E. Perkins, who was officially installed in London last week in the post recently vacated by David E. Rose. The entourage included George Weltner, president of Paramount International; Fred E. Hutchinson, general sales manager for the UK, and Tony Reddin, director of advertising and theatres.

J. J. Nolan, who started in film business during the Robertson-Cole days, and Leon Goldberg, who was a treasurer for the old Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation as well as a treasurer of RKO, have been elected by the RKO directors to the offices of vice presidency. Nolan had served in executive posts in the RKO studios and Goldberg had been studio manager.

American Theatres Association Executive Director Robert W. Coyne will start a series of three talks on bond ownership in peace time and increased participation of citizens in government management before business leaders and industrialists on Nov. 12 at Bangor, Maine. Coyne will speak at a dinner sponsored by the Federal Feserve Bank of Boston in cooperation with the United States Treasury Department. The others are: Augusta and Portland, Nov. 13.

Fails City Fathers

Returns from Philadelphia's city amusement admission tax, which on July 1 was raised from four per cent to 10 per cent, are falling short of the estimates made by city officials when the tax went into effect. Reports published this week show the returns are $3,000,000 below an anticipated $6,200,000.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Benefits for Theatre in Inquiring Reporter Column

While the exploitation of film attractions is a most essential policy for the successful operation of a theatre, the smart showman also recognizes the fact that the theatre itself must also be kept in the limelight of publicity.

The ways and means of accomplishing this salient factor are many and varied. Of course, it is well known by this time, and yet it cannot be emphasized too often, that the manager himself must participate as much as possible in community affairs, and he should make his theatre available at frequent intervals for worthy causes. He should be on friendly terms with the newspapers and merchants so that in any undertaking, whether he is approached for assistance or whether he seeks help from the others, there will always be a friendly spirit of cooperation.

There is a way of not only getting publicity for the theatre but also finding out the public's reaction to incidences in connection with moviegoing. For example, many newspapers run an "inquiring reporter" column in which a reporter-photographer asks people chosen at random a question submitted by a reader. Now the question may have something to do with the theatre, and it redounds to the manager's benefit to have the question propounded to patrons in the lobby.

Asks Theatre Questions

As a specific instance, questions for the Chicago Tribune's "inquiring reporter" column often are concerned with movie patrons' behavior. Recently, the question asked was: "What do you do when the woman sitting in front of you in the theatre is wearing a hat that obstructs your vision?" The logical place to ask this question was at a theatre, and in view of the fact that there are any number of them scattered throughout Chicago and its environs, it was highly favorable publicity that obtained for the Chicago when the inquiring reporter stationed herself in its lobby. The reporter might have chosen her station as a matter of convenience; on the other hand, there would certainly have been nothing wrong if the theatre's manager or publicity director had persuaded her to choose that locale for her interrogations.

If such a "question" column is not a newspaper feature in a theatreman's community, there is no reason why he can't propose the innovation to the editor, for while the theatre may be only occasionally the beneficiary, the newspaper profits daily from the reader interest thus built up. But that occasional publicity, nevertheless, is important, for it too can build and build extra patronage by bringing the theatre's name before the public eye.

Consider the Facade

Now that more workmen are available it is possible, in most cities, to contract with a steam or sand-blasting company to clean the entire front of the theatre. Give it a new, fresh appearance, hang bunting, etc., and watch the difference.

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management*

BRING BACK ONLY 'LIVE' RE-ISSUES

By Jack Jackson

With the threat of single-picture selling, the serious shortage of product, the deluge of re-issues (most of which are NSG for the general run of theatres) and the general drop of grosses all coming at once, the business outlook for exhibitors is anything but serene. Of course, I'm concluding that all of you fellows are experiencing the same kind of harassment that has been forcing me to postpone my nocturnal appointments with that lovable salesman of slumber, Morpheus, until long after the sheep have been counted and sheared by those fortunate fellows engaged in other lines of business.

If everything looks sweet and lovely along the trail you're trodding and your rose-colored glasses remain unsmeared by the fog that's befuddling me and some others I know, you'll not be interested in what follows.

But if you're one of the many who are gazing dejectedly at grosses shriveling like fresh cut clover under a mid-day Texas sun, and confusedly groping through the muddle to determine a policy that bears promise of keeping your screen alive during the days to come, the contentions and con emplations offered here may prove helpful.

The current picture crop is, as we all know, at a dangerously low level and the blight of Federal edicts and lawyer squabblings now rampant in the industry is such that the prospects for improvement in the near future are dismal indeed. There is, admittedly, a considerable quantity of completed "A" product stored in the vaults of major distributors. Of course nobody can be blamed for keeping a couple of sides of bacon hanging in the smokehouse, but it does seem to me that, when the supply is as plentiful as the studio reports indicate, some of it should be doled out to the exhibitors for presentation to the customers whose money built every one of the distributor's smokehouses.

Instead, many distribs are parading in pseudo robes as generous benefactors by digging in the bottoms of their long stored and discarded pork barrels to offer exhibitors and customers—in the form of re-issues—the rind of bacon sides marketed once, and sometimes twice, before at excessive profits. This is darn good business for the distributor, since it offers a source of high revenue at low cost. But, what about the exhibitor and his customers?

Let's admit that, on occasion, the re-issue serves—like the little Dutch boy's finger in the leaking dike—to plug a hole until help, in the form of current releases, can be summoned. However, generally speaking, there are but few instances where the emergency plugs could be considered as being highly satisfactory and, since the number of holes keep mounting and the value of the "plugs" keeps diminishing we gotta look for a different formula.

Since most of us are in picture business exclusively, we'll have to look for our best medicine in that field. But, let's not permit the bigwigs of distributor ranks to choose the ingredients from the lists of what they think our customers will like.

The audience potential of a re-issue is limited to the number of theatregoers who failed to see it during its original runs in the community, plus those addicted to nostalgic urges sufficiently strong to cause a second viewing plus the newcomers who have blossomed to maturity and are intrigued by the opinions of their elders—a very small number in these modern times.

The one person in this vast industry who actually meets and greets Mr. and Mrs. Patron—the folks who pay the bills for production, distribution and exhibition alike—is the chap who actually runs the theatre. You, Mr. Showman, and not the dis-

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Surmount Dangers of Winter By Making Preparations Now

Winter, with all its attendant problems, is practically upon us, deepnding of course, upon your location. The official date, however, is December 21, whether you will be basking in the sun in a tropical vacation paradise or even now digging a tunnel to get into your snow-bound theatre.

Winter wouldn't be winter without snow, and that is one of the season's biggest problems. First of all, when a snowstorm occurs, you should have some provision made whereby there will be enough men to shovel the snow away from in front of the theatre as well as out of all alleys and exit passageways in ample time before the show starts. If the snowstorm should continue beyond the starting time of the show, the snow should be swept away frequently enough to avoid danger of patrons slipping on the sidewalk. Local laws will undoubtedly compel you also to keep the exit passageways clear. Fire escapes should be cleaned frequently.

Keep Marquee Clean

Do not permit large accumulations of snow to remain on the marquee. The terrible disaster at the Knickerbocker Theatre in Washington several years ago was caused, as we all remember, by an overload of snow on the marquee. While every marquee is (or should be) designed to support a considerable weight, it is unwise to subject it to any strain.

Because it melts the ice, enabling it to be swept off and thus leaving a clean sidewalk, rock salt is a valuable agent. Hot water is inadvisable, for while it will melt the ice and snow, the hot water itself (if the weather is cold enough) will freeze in short order, creating a new and smooth coating of ice.

Street Dept. Cooperation

Get the cooperation of your Street Cleaning Department in preventing any large piles of snow from being deposited in front of your theatre when the plows come along. A pass or two in the right quarters will asure that there is an uninterrupted view of your front displays from the other side of the street.

Winter weather offers other hazards to theatremen. There will be times when you will be unable to have your fire banked for the night because it might take too long for the theatre to heat up the following day. You will have to keep the fire going and consume a little extra coal in order to make sure your patrons are comfortable.

Protect Your Doorman

If your box-office is an outside one, you can keep it comfortable by means of an electric heater. Your doorman should be adequately protected from the drafts of cold air which come from the constant opening and closing of doors. See that he dresses warmly.

You should make a general check-up of both sets of entrance and exit doors to make sure they are easy to open. Sometimes, when they have been open during the summer, they may be noisy and will need oiling at the hinges. Mats should be readily available so that patrons will not track ice and snow into the theatre.

Your particular theatre may have other individual problems with which to cope as a result of the onset of winter weather. Check up now to be sure you are ready for Jack Frost's first visit.

Check Electric Equipment

Electrical equipment should be regularly checked by a qualified electrician.

Special Legion Award to Magnet's F. J. Cahalan

Manager Francis J. Cahalan of the Magnet Theatre, Claremont, N. H. spends most of what spare time he has to furthering the interests of veterans of the late and previous wars. In recognition of his achievements along these lines Cahalan was recently presented with a Special Award for Service to Veterans by the American Legion Post of his city.

Mr. Cahalan's citation which accompanied the award, mentioned his service as a readjustment committeeman for veterans, his work with blood donors, his inauguration of a program of sending Christmas gifts to servicemen and his work in the opening of the Legion Home.

Compositions on Conduct in Theatre Held Aid to Good Juvenile Behavior

With many theatre managers currently struggling for audience behavior ranging from boorish manners to vandalism, Samuel G. Gilburt, one of the teachers of composition at the Straus Junior High School in Brooklyn has done his bit toward improving juvenile behavior by calling for a series of essays on theatre conduct.

In reporting Mr. Gilburt's action in the matter, the Public Information Bureau of the Motion Picture Industry, through its Motion Picture Letter, expresses the belief that "in that vast area west of the Hudson, other school teachers struggling with exuberant youth may find that the movies provide a theme, and that good citizenship may be combined with good composition in a try for good theatre manners."

That well-behaved juvenile moviegoers are conscious of the behavior of so-called "movie pests" is reflected in the 9B students' compositions, a few excerpts of which appear below:

Cecille Lesser: "Some people seem to think that in a democracy they are free to do as they choose. Yes, even in the movies. Your conduct in the movies is a reflection on your home training, and your character. The man or woman who refuses to remove his hat in the movies is showing little respect for his fellow moviegoer."

Herman Crull: "Here are a few things you should never do in the movies: First, you should never run down the aisle, because this annoys all the people sitting on the aisle. Second, you must not put your feet up on the seat in front of you. Third, you should not eat noisily in the movies. It is very annoying to the people around you."

Herbert Ennis: "One thing most annoying is when you sit down on a seat and stand up and find that you sat on a piece of gum. This little piece of gum may ruin your new suit."

Gerald Glicker: "There is the movie pest who has seen the picture, or has once read it in a book, who starts to tell the person next to him about the next part that is coming. This spoils the picture for the people who are sitting around the pest. Then come the boy and girl pests who sit up in the balcony and throw candy wrappers or gum wrappers on the peole who are sitting below the balcony. This is very annoying to the people below, thus spoiling the show for them. That, I think, is the worst of the movie pests. Then there is also the movie pest who is sitting quietly in his seat, and all of a sudden he sees his friend. He then starts yelling, 'Hey, Murray, I'm over here,' or something else, thus starting a commotion around him. After the commotion has stopped, many people have already missed part of the picture. So, from now on, don't be a movie pest, and try not to do these things which I have mentioned."

Shirley Lewis: "Oh, I almost forgot that crunchy candy. Our little pests are getting hungry. Off with the wrappers, the cellophane ones, and now starts the crunching for at least fifteen minutes. Ah, the climax of the picture; but that doesn't bother our pests. One of them is thirsty, so now he scrambles back over nineteen people just to get a drink. Therefore, no one saw the climax. Well, pesty is back in his seat by now, cracking gum to his heart's content and keeping his feet everywhere but the right place."

Cecille Lesser: "So if you happen to be a member of the group known as 'movie pests,' always learn to abide by the Golden Rule, for there is no other way to get along in life."

LEARN AS YOU GO. So believes Earl Layton, 22-year-old treasurer of Warners' Earle Theatre, Washington, D. C., who makes a trip every Thursday evening to New York to attend New York University's course in theatre management and advertising. It means traveling almost 2000 miles a month, but Earl, whose home is in Goldsboro, N. C., is serious about this theatre business. Here he is shown getting off to a flying start as Betty Lyons, usherette captain, hands him his brief case.

To all those who have made Warner Bros.

THE WORLD'S MOST HONORED STUDIOS:

CITATIONS have come to your studios in many forms and many languages. Governments and peoples, religious and educational leaders, civic groups and press associations, military organizations and patriotic societies have saluted you. The honors they have bestowed represent the appreciation of a world-wide cross section of democracy. Time and again your contributions to a decent civilization and the cause of human dignity have been recognized.

These citations have been gratefully accepted by us. We are proud of them and of what they represent in terms of your courageous vision, professional integrity and creative skill. They are striking evidence that motion pictures are built of more than celluloid and scenery. Our industry, above any other, is founded on human values and is fostered by the idealism of the men and women in it. Each award that comes to our company is gratifying proof of your continuing devotion to the principles of the free screen.

Pride in your accomplishments is matched by our confidence in your future achievements. We know that you will continue to serve the great motion picture public above and beyond the call of superior entertainment.

Our personal thanks to each of you.

'Return Only 'Live' Re-Issues'—Jackson

tributor, know best what kind of pictures can be resurrected from the past and shown in your theatre with best chances of financial success. Why not go through the data of past releases and select the titles from each company that your knowledge and records indicate as having the greatest revenue potential? Find out what is available and then offer rental terms in line with the customer expectancy. Talk it over with the salesman or branch manager and explain your position—the gamble you are taking in bringing the picture back and the extra revenue provided the exchange for a print now depreciating in the film vault. There are plenty of old pictures that possess the kind of entertainment your audiences want that were shown under unfavorable conditions such as unusual competition like circus, football, etc., or where unfavorable weather kept the folks at home. These can be gambled on as offering a fine chance for profit on repeat engagements. Go after them, but buy them right!

It seems to me that when the distributors are allowed to select the films for reissue they are too prone to lift some "turkey" that was originally marketed as a so-called "prestige" picture and failed to reach the dollar expectancy of its sponsors during its original exhibition cruise. Regardless of any personal delight in "arty" or "Classic" films and an effort by the producing and distributing branches to elevate the "I.Q.'s" and generate an appreciation of "life's higher aims" in the hearts and minds of our patrons, it is plain darn foolish to ignore the cobwebs that gather on the ticket machine. The box-office receipts are indisputable evidence that the bulk of our customers can't consider such films as entertainment and many are openly resentful of their exhibition as such. Mr. and Mrs. Ticket Buyer and the little Ticket Buyers are, for the most part, very plebian in their entertainment preferences. They believe—even as you and I—that education belongs in the classroom, politics on a speakers' platform, and preachments in the churches. Not that we can't and don't educate them and preach to them. And not that they can't or won't accept and assimilate such education and preachment. It is requisite, however, that we dish it out as garnishment on a platter well filled with the meat of daring adventure or rugged romance and spiced with healthy servings of emotional thrills and excitment.

For those theatres where stage facilities are at hand there is the possibility of using live talent to bolster the poor business periods. This is the season when itinerant acts are plentiful. The tent shows, carnivals and "rep" companies are all disbanding for the season and by letting the booking agents in your town (or closest city) know that you are interested you will be flooded with proposals at prices you can afford to pay. It may be possible for you to join with a local night club owner and arrange for the performers to "double" and thereby reduce the cost. Good novelty acts can always be depended on to draw a crowd and—if your house is in order and you arrange to make the advance notices, screen and lobby, sufficiently enticing—there is a better than even chance that attendance will increase on coming attractions.

Perhaps I'm writing ABCs for most of you, but I honestly feel that many will welcome some advice on how to go about combined stage and screen booking. Of prime importance is the factor of balancing the entertainment. Don't book a song and dance revue with a musical film production and don't put magicians or spook show experts and escape artists on the same program with mystery or detective stories. Unless the performers offering their services have the kind of repertoire that will lend spice and variety to your

THEATRE MANAGER'S NOTEBOOK
Maintenance

BUILDING STRUCTURES — Maintenance I

(From an Outline of Talks Presented to the Classes in the Wilby-Kincey School of Maintenance)

DECK STRUCTURES

The roof deck supports the roofing and generally represents a rather large investment. It is an excellent place, however, to check the roof for flashing leaks. Where the type of construction allows you visibly to inspect this part of the building, it should be done every six months. If you can locate leaks from inspecting the deck structure, you can prevent damage to the interior. If the deck is of wood construction, it will usually absorb large quantities of water before leaks become visible from below. When this happens the structure will rot and dangerously weaken the roof.

Make regular inspections for evidence of leaks. Locate and repair any that are found. It is not necessary to replace deck structure merely because it has become wet, but rotted areas should in all cases be thoroughly inspected by an experienced building contractor.

TRUSSES AND BEAMS

Check steel trusses and beams for rusting, sweating, loose connections, failure at bearing points and sagging.

Check wood beams and trusses for rot, loose connections, loose joints, loose splices, cracking, warping, failure at bearing points, sagging and insect infestation.

Have a competent, licensed engineer or architect verify any suspected conditions and recommend methods of safely repairing damage. Make repairs immediately.

Check exterior walls for:

WALL DETERIORATION

1. Defective mortar joints in coping materials or defective metal.
2. Cracked, broken, loose or missing coping units.
3. Defective flashing and counter-flashing at parapet walls.
4. Defective mortar joints in parapet walls.
5. Poorly constructed mortar joints or poor grade of mortar.
6. Jointing of cornices, sills, trim and projecting courses of brick; also vertical mortar joints.
7. Acid attack due to sulphur dioxide during rain, snow or damp weather.
8. Absorption of earth moisture at ground level.
9. Defective or under-sized conductor heads, gutters and downspouts, permitting flow of water over wall surfaces.

FIRE ESCAPES

Check adjustment of counter-balance weights regularly during periods of snow and sleet to be sure that it has not changed to the point where it presents a hazard to those passing below.

Keep fire escapes clean of snow and ice accumulations.

Jackson Discusses Re-Issue Problems

film program it is better to defer their engagement until you have time to make an appropriate picture purchase. Your program schedules are also important when you are offering combined stage and screen shows. Be sure that your stage attraction is presented at times most appropriate to volume attendance. And, watch your short subject buy. It may be possible to save part of the cost of the stage attraction by eliminating a short or two.

When it comes to booking film for exhibition with stage shows it is necessary to be extremely cautious. If the stage show is such that it promises to stand on its own legs and return a profit lay off the better class of film product and make a flat buy of some minor release of ordinary entertainment value. When the stage show is just so-so, go after a better picture and, if percentage is demanded by the distributor, make sure that your contract contains provision for the total cost of the stage show and extra advertising expenditures to be deducted from the receipts before computing film settlement terms.

One thing the recent court proceeding has done is to make the distributor representatives more amenable to consideration of deals of this kind. Avoid percentage arrangements when you have stage shows if at all possible but if you happen to be committed to exhibition time for some "cluck" on a percentage basis the stage show may be a genuine blessing.

Of course you'll be raising the price if you go for the combo shows and a percentage picture on the same program offers the possibility of plenty of extra "manna" to the distributor. Maybe you won't be able to get away with this one but it's well worth trying. Out in California the Spanish picture distribs are going for deals on combined stage and screen shows where they participate in revenue on a basis of prices charged for film only and the exhibitor uses the extra "take" to cover the cost of the stage attraction. You'll have to figure for yourself whether the arrangement is better than the "first money" basis as far as your house is concerned.

Before I go hunting for that guy Morpheus I'd like to remind that this is a swell time to make a concerted drive for extra attendance by the mail route. Look over the society columns and see who is holding parties and then drop them a line enclosing a few tickets to be distributed to their guests. Try the same gag on union meetings with the tickets going as door prizes to stimulate attendance.

Kid's Program Gets Major Radio Show to Aid Safety

Since Saturday morning shows have attained such great popularity, more and more ways have been discovered to increase their scope. For instance, getting the kids together has been found to offer real opportunity to put some ideas over on them that they will take in this form, whereas Dad's moralizing only gives them a pain in the neck. They'll take anything if it's sugar-coated. "Be careful crossing the street," says mama or papa, and junior takes it in stride. But when the lesson is put over via a show it's altogether different.

This and other sugar-coated lessons—all designed to help both the children and the community at the same time—are the basis for an unusual civic development unlimbered by Warren Faust when he recently was manager of the Fox Theatre, Phoenix, Ariz.

In Phoenix the Sears Roebuck Company was sponsoring a weekly radio program called the Safety Rangers, which featured cowboy music and western atmosphere, carrying a master of ceremonies, a half dozen singers and a 12-piece band. The program was almost entirely music, interspersed here and there with little spiels on the subject of safety.

Faust got to work and induced Sears to broadcast this program from his theatre instead of the studio every Saturday morning, thus making it part of his program. This move resulted in crowded houses and the kids got a great show besides the usual pictures, and—important for Faust—the theatre got credit for doing its share in promoting the local safety campaign.

Periodically check all structural supports and wall fasteners for corrosion and loose joints. Do not permit bent or loose handrails or bent steps.

Keep fire escapes and their structural supports and wall fasteners rust-free and well painted at all times.

SIGNS AND MARQUEES

Need for expensive repairs in vertical signs and marquees can often be traced to poor maintenance. Be sure all struts, hanger rods, turnbuckles and holding bolts are kept free from rust. Check turnbuckles with a wrench to be sure that all hanger rods are under tension and that each is therefore carrying its proper part of the load.

Keep the marquee roof clean and all drains open. Carefully remove snow accumulation so it will not be overloaded. Do not use it as a storage space and never install heavy displays there. Don't puncture the marquee roof. Keep interior and exterior of marquee sign boxes as clean as possible; a clean interior is less likely to be seriously damaged if a leak develops.

Pay special attention to marquee roof flashing leaks, as in all roof maintenance. Paint as often as necessary. Have all marquee leaks fixed immediately; to wait invites serious damage and expensive repairs.

DOORS

Proper maintenance of door edges is the key to door maintenance. Keep the edges well painted. Use a small mirror to check the bottom edges.

Swelling of wood doors is caused entirely by absorption of moisture. Keep all wood surfaces well protected against moisture by proper painting.

If doors become loose at glued joints do not use metal straps but re-glue, inserting wood dowels.

Poorly maintained door closers have ruined as many doors as any other one thing. Keep them tight. When inspecting doors, be sure to check the tightness of hinge connections both on the doors and on the frames.

WINDOWS

Inspect wooden frames and sashes for any surface failure (including failure around the edges) which will allow absorption of moisture.

Check for loose putty around window frames.

Inspect steel frames and sashes for rust.

Check both types for looseness.

Repaint defective wooden surfaces and replace all loose putty. Repaint rusted steel surfaces, making sure rust is wire-brushed or otherwise removed before painting. Weatherstrip and caulk if loose fitting can materially affect the heating or cooling load.

FIXTURE SUSPENSIONS

Some large electrical fixtures are so located that they cannot be relamped or cleaned without lowering them to the floor, for which either a rope or winch may be used. In either case carefully and frequently inspect every piece of equipment involved and keep it in safe working condition; when the fixture is in place carefully check the position of the holding equipment, making absolutely certain that it cannot under any circumstances allow the fixture to fall.

Stationary light fixtures also should be regularly and carefully inspected to make sure they are still properly and safely fastened, altogether against possibility of any accident.

(All of the foregoing comprises verbatim quotation or paraphrase of a chapter in the book issued to members of classes in the School of Maintenance of Wilby-Kincey Theatres circuit. The book was made available to Showmen's Trade Review for such quotation by the company, which is headed by R. B. Wilby and H. F. Kincey, and is recognized as one of the most progressive and efficiently operated circuits in the United States. The book, according to Mr. Wilby, was prepared not as a manual, but merely to serve members of the classes (which are conducted for managers of the circuit) as a notebook to spare those attending the classes the effort of making their own notes during the talks and demonstrations.)

Airline, Marines, Paper Aid 'Reservations' Bally

Manager P. E. McCoy of the Miller Theatre, Augusta, Ga., enlisted the cooperation of the Augusta Chronicle, Delta Airlines, the local U. S. Marines recruiting service and radio station WRDW as aids for his exploitation campaign on RKO Radio's "Without Reservations."

The Chronicle's initial story suggested that readers write about any unusual event in which they were involved in transit, with a free round trip to Atlanta presented by the Airlines company for the best letter received. The best letter was selected by two of Augusta's leading bankers.

More than 300 letters were received and the winner was presented with her tickets by Marine Major Carl M. Johnson during a U. S. Marines induction program held on the stage of the theatre. The proceedings were broadcast via WRDW.

Stories on the affair were printed by the Chronicle for ten days in advance of opening.

A street ballyhoo consisted of having an attractive young lady in traveling costume traverse the business section daily carrying an attractive luggage bag with copy pertaining to the theme of the picture.

'Magnificent Doll' Hunt To Start in Chicago

In conjunction with the world premiere of the Jack H. Skirball-Bruce Manning production, "Magnificent Doll" at the RKO Palace in Chicago on November 20, Universal Pictures, in cooperation with the American Broadcasting Company's daily network program, "Ladies Be Seated" and the Quaker Oats Company, sponsors of the show, will conduct a nationwide radio audience contest for the identification of a "magnificent doll." The contest will be centered in 14 key cities, including Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Washington, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Los Angeles and Dallas, with the winner in each city to be brought to New York for special ceremonies.

The contest will start in Chicago on the date of the world premiere, with the radio show originating from the RKO Palace stage. During the following three weeks, the "magnificent doll" to be identified through the "Ladies Be Seated" air program will be in the designated city walking the main stem, and the first radio listener who identifies the girl will be the winner for that city. The program will give details of the woman's costuming as well as the selected city in which she can be found on the designated day.

Sommers Takes Over State

Ben Sommers, producer of Canada's first community newsreel at the Windsor Theatre in St. Vital, as a promotional stunt for the theatre, has taken over the State, Winnipeg. Sommers was United Artists salesman and managing editor of a weekly newspaper before becoming an exhibitor.

BALLYHOO. Manager A. N. Lefebre of the Theatre Rex, St. Jerome, Quebec, sent one of his ushers on a street tour mounted on this horse which is said to resemble "Smoky" star of the 20th-Fox film of that name which was playing the Rex.

Screens 'Deception' for Ohio Newspaper Women

One of the highlights of the recent 44th Annual Convention of the Ohio Newspaper Women's Association held at the Gibson Hotel, Cincinnati, was a special screening of Warners' "Deception," arranged by James Ambrose, local branch manager for Warners. A telegram from Bette Davis, the film's star, congratulating the newspaper women on their work, was also read.

A special five-minute Hollywood interview with Miss Davis has been transcribed in Hollywood and made available to Warner field representatives working on "Deception." This is in addition to the regular minute and half-minute spot announcements and station breaks.

WB Coffee Ad Tieup To Cover More Films

Commercial tieup between Warner Bros. and Barrington Hall Coffee whereby Warner stars and pictures will be featured in the coffee firm's Sunday magazine advertising has been extended to cover five more current and coming releases. List includes Eleanor Parker in "Never Say Goodbye," with ad to appear in New York Herald Tribune on December 1; Paul Henreid in "Deception," in New York Times, December 8; Sydney Greenstreet in "The Verdict," Herald Tribune, December 15; Joan Crawford in "Humoresque," Times, December 22, and Janis Paige, "The Time, The Place and the Girl," Herald Tribune, December 29.

National Floral Tieup on 'Yearling' Set by MGM

A change in MGM studio's exploitation policy whereby suburban theatres handling MGM product make individual tieups with local merchants, is marked by the studio exploitation department's recent tieup with the Southern California Floral Association by which Walter Swartz, the Association's manager, has introduced a "Yearling Corsage" as a feature of National Flower Week.

Placards plugging the corsage and MGM's "The Yearling" have been distributed to county florists within a range of 100 miles and the intent is to plug the "Yearling Corsage" as the "creation of the year," inspired by the motion picture of the year, for the next three months.

It is expected that the stunt will spread nationally by Christmas as Cedric Nelson, state chairman of the Society of American Florists created the design, news about which is being disseminated to the floral industry's six top publications having a combined circulation in excess of one million copies.

Textile Firm Sponsors Theatre Party in Tilbury

Harland Rankin, manager of the Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, promoted the sponsorship of the American Pad and Textile Company for a two-day theatre party in connection with the showing of United Artists' "Breakfast in Hollywood" and Monogram's "South of Monterey."

As prizes for the occasion, 12 plain or plaid doeskin shirts were given away. Tickets, which admitted two adults for the price of one, were obtainable at dealers handling American Pad and Textile products.

City Seeks Premiere

Mayor Peter Roe Nugent, of Savannah, Ga., has sent a telegraphic invitation to Alfred W. Schwalberg, Eagle-Lion vice-president and general sales manager, to hold the world premiere of E-L's forthcoming production, "It's a Joke, Son" in that city. Kemny Delmar, the Senator Claghorn of the radio and star of the film, has also been invited to visit Savannah in connection with the premiere activities.

Disney Film 'Takes' Atlanta

Hollywood stars, newspapermen from 20 cities, RKO Radio and Walt Disney officials and others were on hand for the world premiere of Disney's "Song of the South" at the Fox Theatre in Atlanta, Ga., last Tuesday evening. Six powerful searchlights swept the entrance to the Fox from a special platform where interviews with stars were broadcast over 186 CBS stations. The event was hailed as the greatest of its kind in the history of the city.

The premiere was preceded by an Armistice Day parade viewed by more than 300,000 people who lined the streets for five miles. Walt Disney and Ned E. Depinet, RKO executive vice-president, sat with Mayor Hartsfield and William K. Jenkins, president of the Lucas and Jenkins Theatres, in the reviewing stand.

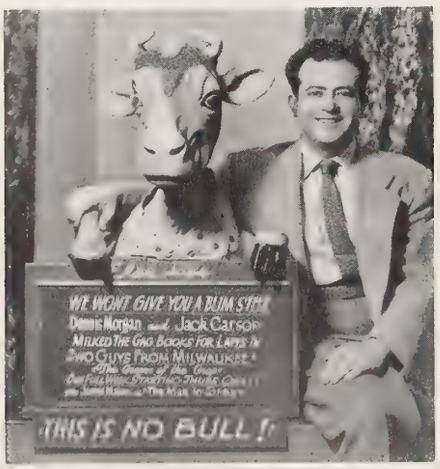
Campaign for 'Razor's Edge' Premiere Reaches Its Climax

Twentieth Century-Fox's extensive campaign for the world premiere of Darryl F. Zanuck's "The Razor's Edge" at the Roxy Theatre on November 19 reached its climax this week with the first illumination of the giant Times Square electric sign announcing the opening of the picture. The climatic windup began Sunday with the appearance of 1,000-line ads in the New York papers featuring the Norman Rockwell painting of Tyrone Power and the stars of the picture (see page 20.) This was followed Sunday night by the nationwide broadcast of the "We, the People" radio show devoted exclusively to the picture and its makers.

On Wednesday, a battery of Fifth Avenue windows were unveiled by Arnold Constable presenting the costumes worn by Gene Tierney in the picture and their modern adaptations. The promotion received further emphasis on the NBC "Honeymoon in New York" radio program Monday through Friday.

On Saturday (16) the New York Post was scheduled to begin running a 7,500-word serialization of the W. Somerset Maugham novel illustrated with scenes from the picture, with the story adaptation to be featured in the weekend magazine section of the paper and heralded by large ads in the regular editions throughout the week.

Currently on view is one of the largest billboard campaigns ever used on one of the company's pictures, augmented by the Times Square display and a huge sign completed last week in Columbus Circle. The outdoor campaign is supplemented by subway and railroad car posting, and special paper strategically spotted in store windows throughout the metropolitan area.



At the Roxy in the central lobby are a large animated book display, a life-size blowup of the Rockwell painting which has been framed in a simulated stage setting, plus a special counter setup with an attendant on hand to distribute full-color post cards of the Rockwell painting.

A portfolio of simulated 11 x 14 stills for use in connection with the national release of "The Razor's Edge" during Christmas week will be received around December 1 by 6,050 public and university libraries throughout the country. The portfolio is being distributed by the Educational Division of the Motion Picture Association as a public service and will contain scenes from the picture. The folder and its contents have been designed for use as a wall or counter display piece, carrying a title card describing the stars' roles in the film.

The early distribution date will give exhibitors an opportunity to contact their local libraries well in advance of opening to arrange for playdate and theatre credit sniping. In addition, arrangements for book promotion will be handled at the same time. The portfolio went on display in New York public libraries this week.

Meanwhile, arrangements were completed for the world premiere of "The Razor's Edge." Dignitaries from the United Nations General Assembly, Hollywood stars, prominent members of New York society, the press and leaders of the motion picture industry will attend. Hollywood celebrities will be headed by Zanuck, producer of the picture, Edmund Goulding, director, and Tyrone Power, Gene Tierney and Clifton Webb, three of the film's stars. From key cities* throughout the east, west and south will come motion picture critics and 20th-Fox division, district and branch managers. Prominent exhibitors, many of whom will be in New York for the Annual Picture Pioneers' Dinner to be held November 20, will also be part of the audience. Newsreel, radio and television crews will be on hand to record the proceedings.

Social events in connection with the premiere, in addition to private dinner parties to be given by society groups, will include a press reception given by Charles Schlaifer, director of advertising and publicity, at the Hampshire House on Monday afternoon for local and visiting newspaper people, with Zanuck, Power, Gene Tierney and Goulding as guests, and a reception and supper party which Spyros P. Skouras, president of 20th Century-Fox, will give, following the premiere, at the Pierre for Zanuck and the visiting stars.

ANOTHER VERSION. This is Manager Murray Greene's version of the "No Bull" idea, used in this case to plug his showing of Warners' "Two Guys from Milwaukee." There's no apparent connection until you read the sign which states something about "milked the book for laughs." Elsie munched realistically in the lobby of Century's Albemarle, Brooklyn, where Greene continues to set up gag-type displays like this one. That's Murray on the right.

ROVER, IN PERSON. Rover, a thoroughbred Collie who bears a striking resemblance to Lassie, appeared on the stage of Loew's Colonial, Reading, Pa., and went through the novice obedience training routine. Stunt was promoted by Manager Larry Levy in connection with showing of MGM's "Courage of Lassie."

Local Collie on Stage As Stunt for 'Lassie'

Through a special tieup with the Berks County Kennel Club, Manager Larry R. Levy of Loew's Colonial Theatre, Reading, Pa., presented as a stage attraction, Rover, a thoroughbred Collie who bears a striking resemblance to Lassie. Of course the stunt was in connection with the showing of MGM's "Courage of Lassie." News stories and bulletins mailed by the Kennel Club attracted much attention to the presentation.

The dog appeared on the stage with a trainer and announcer from the club and went through the novice obedience training routine, the same as demonstrated in the picture. In addition to helping Levy's over-all campaign, the stunt also helped box-office receipts by attracting full houses at every performance.

To the Kennel Club Levy presented the MGM Lassie Trophy, an engraved, sterling silver plate which was to be presented to the local dog obtaining the highest-point score at the Obedience Training Show in Reading.

Porter Musical Tied-In With Christmas Displays

Block & Kuhl, operating a chain of stores throughout Illinois, is putting on "Shop-early" Christmas window displays using "Night and Day" as the theme coincident with local engagements of the Warner Bros. musical.

First store to carry out the tieup, which also includes the use of newspaper ads on the same theme, is in Peoria, where "Night and Day" will play at the Madison Theatre.

Dallas Area Premieres Set on 'Sister Kenny'

Elaborate preparations for the Dallas area premiere in early December of RKO Radio's "Sister Kenny," are now under way. Arrangements include personal appearances of the real Sister Elizabeth Kenny in several Texas cities.

RKO Radio branch manager Sol Sachs has booked several day-and-date engagements for the film.

Washington, Milwaukee Sell 'Journey' in Big Campaigns

In two of its early engagements, Washington and Milwaukee, Columbia's "Gallant Journey" has benefited by advertising campaigns embracing several practical stunts that can be duplicated by other exhibitors who have yet to play the picture.

For the Washington campaign, Frank La Falce, publicity director, and John Marcon, manager of the Metropolitan Theatre, teed off with a highly successful stunt over the "Teen Time Review," broadcast to a large audience over WWDC. Using the fact that Glenn Ford, star of "Gallant Journey," had recently been voted "Man of the Year" by the Bobby-Soxers of America, La Falce and Marcon arranged for the Saturday morning program to hold an open forum, the discussion being: "Glenn Ford was recently voted the choice of the Bobby-Soxers of America. What is your opinion, etc., on the 'Man of the Year'?" Teen-agers representing all district high schools took part in the discussion.

Radio Contest Featured

Another novel stunt was employed on Mike Hunnicutt's program over WWDC in the form of a "Tune Guessing" contest. Using the old standby tunes from the turn of the century, as suggested in the press book, records were played and those who guessed the correct answers were given stills of Glenn Ford, the first twenty to reply being given passes to the film in addition. This program gave La Falce a terrific coverage of the younger crowd.

Beauty and fashion tieups received plugs over Station WTOP and from Nancy Osgood, Station WRC. Jay Carmody, Evening Star dramatic critic, on his Sunday show over WTOP also accorded the picture frequent mention. Bill Brundage, WOL's famed sportscaster included plugs for the picture on his sportscasts.

A worth-while tieup was made with the North East Public Library for a full bulletin board display and a table exhibit of pictures and books on aviation, in connection with the theme of the picture. Stills from the film were featured prominently, and proper credit for theatre, film, and playdate were given.

Again referring to the press book, La Falce obtained full window space with the leading bicycle shop in the district, using a large still of Ford and Janet Blair, on a bicycle built for two. A full window was made available for use by the Lansburgh Furniture Co., using a 30x40 art sketch blowup of the stars. The tie-in copy used was: "What better way to start your 'Gallant Journey' through life than by furnishing your home with Lansburgh's fine furniture?"

The National Pipe Shop lent its full window for display, using a large blowup of Ford in the role of a pipe smoker, giving the theatre, film and playing time proper credit. This store is located next door to the busy National Theatre, with thousands of transients daily passing their window, thus affording an excellent situation for any tieup. Using a large blowup of Ford in a hunting jacket, the Sport Center, leading sporting equipment store in the district, gave full window space to the picture. A window used by La Falce as an advance teaser was obtained at Emily Shop, a smart woman's apparel store, located in the heart of the busy shopping section. They featured bicycling clothes, using a large blowup of the film co-stars on a bicycle build for two as the tie-in motive.

All newspapers gave plentiful space, both art and feature, to the production; and a large ad was taken in the dailies by the Sport Center, using a picture of Ford in ski togs as a plug for the film.

Special Screening

A special screening for a select audience highlighted the campaign set by Charles Hacker, manager of the Palace Theatre, Milwaukee, for his "Gallant Journey" playdate. The screening, held six days before opening, to be sure its effect could be circulated, was attended by Archbishop Kiley and 28 priests representing the faculties of Marquette University and the local parochial schools. The priests agreed to endorse the attraction where it would do the most good; in their classrooms and among their circle of acquaintances. To have an endorsement from a group of men of this caliber was definitely a feather in the cap of Hacker. The screening for the clergy was an unusual idea, and Hacker used the results to the best advantage.

With the cooperation of Monart Auto Dealers, another unusual stunt used with success throughout the rest of the country, was planned. The dealers furnished the theatre with a 1906 Buick and a 1946 Mercury 8. The cars were appropriately bannered, and the Buick chauffeured by a driver in all the old fashioned regalia of cap and goggles and linen duster, accompanied by a charming young lady attired in full 1883 splendor. These two cars proceeded together through the streets of the town, their large attraction banners heralding the coming of BICYCLE TIEUP. Tieing in with the largest bicycle shop in the downtown section, Frank La Falce, publicity director, and John Marcon, manager of the Metropolitan Theatre, Washington, D. C., effected this display on Columbia's "Gallant Journey." The tie-in, which was on Schwinn Tandems, was an attention-getter.

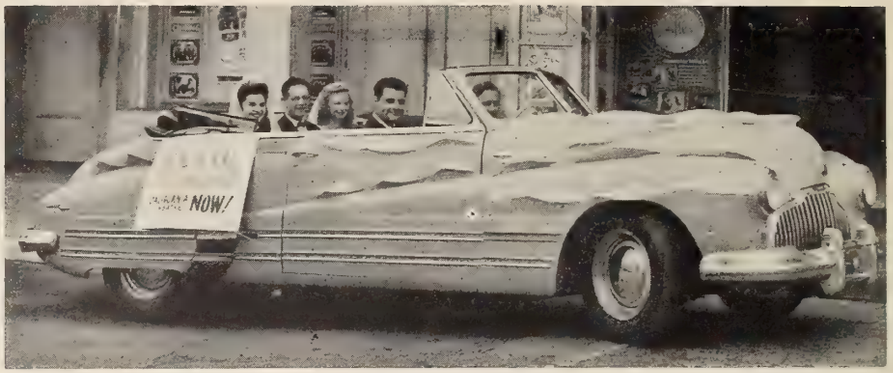
Macy's, RKO Hollywood Fashion Promotion

Merchandise inspired by Hollywood is the theme of two store promotions inaugurated this season by Macy's in cooperation with RKO Radio and Edward Stevenson, the film company's chief studio fashion designer.



The first of these, the Macy's Brides Shop tie-up, featuring a bridal gown and bridesmaid's dress especially created for Macy's by Stevenson, is now utilizing three Broadway windows. The second promotion scheduled for late in November is with the Negligee Shop and will consist of special negligee designs inspired by his costumes for "Sinbad the Sailor," a forthcoming Technicolor film.

Details of these promotions were worked out by Stevenson and Macy's stylists, who visited the former personally in Hollywood last Spring.

Series Springboard for 'Rage in Heaven' Gag

The recent World Series seems to have been a springboard for a few fertile-minded publicity men in Boston, including George Kraska who brought "Rage in Heaven" to the attention of the town's baseball fans by presenting a paid ad on the sports pages of the Hub papers which read, "World Series Tickets? We cannot assure you of any choice seats for the World Series games; but CAN assure you of one of the best movies in years, 'Rage in Heaven' at the State and Orpheum Theatres."

Kraska also made up a flock of heralds with copy, "If you believe there is some psychology between a pitcher and a batter, then you cannot fail to see 'Rage in Heaven' etc." and distributed the leaflets at Fenway Park in Boston before and after each game.—BOS.

'HELPED GREATLY AT THE BOX-OFFICE.' Utilizing a streamlined automobile and members of his house staff, Manager Norman Lofthus of the Warner California Theatre, Santa Barbara, created an effective street ballyhoo for Warners' "Janie Gets Married." Reports Lofthus: "We found that this bit of exploitation attracted a great deal of attention and helped greatly at the box-office."

'Tough' Portland, Me., Goes Big For 'Own Jane Russell' Contest

A full dress parade through the streets of Portland, Me., honoring the city's "own Jane Russell" with an American Legion band, a full company of U. S. Marine Corps men in battle dress, a few jeeps, etc., indicated the effect with which Manager William Fields of the Empire Theatre essayed an exploitation campaign to herald the coming of Jane Russell in Howard Hughes' controversial "The Outlaw" in the New England City.

The campaign was an enormously effective one with the winner, discovered as the result of a three-newspaper contest to find the city's "Jane Russell," appearing at the Palace Ballroom with Charlie Spivak's orchestra at Old Orchard Beach on the evening of the day the parade took place.

A front page ad in Portland newspapers ballyhooed the appearance with Spivak at the theatre, following the publication of an unprecedented number of feature stories and art in the Portland Evening Express, Press-Herald and Sunday Telegram, for all of which the managing editor is one man! And if that one man is not sold—no stories. Headlines in the newspapers were like a press agent's dream. For instance, one of the papers streamered, "Thousands line streets to see Portland's own Jane Russell," with photos illustrating what took place at the parade. Fashion designers, beauty contest judges and merchants all bought cooperative advertising to tell residents that "The Outlaw" was a "must" on everyone's movie-going list.

The beauty contest was conducted by the theatre to select the beauteous young lady who was to be "Portland's Own Jane Russell" with plenty of cooperation from the only three newspapers in the city. Portland merchants cooperated with widespread publicity through every media at their command. The winner received a leather make-up traveling case from the Carroll Perfume and Cosmetic Shops; a set of 'Jane Russell Outlaw Jewels,' consisting of a chattelaine with matched earrings from the House of Schrager; a set of jewels from Porteus Mitchell and Company, while Gilbert's Beauty Salon donated a complete beauty treatment. A complete wardrobe also was promoted from the Frederic Libby Company.

The safety drive conducted by the State of Maine used the contest winner to good advantage by arranging for photographs of the young Jane Russell in various traffic poses, a tremendous boost to "The Outlaw" booking. Police Chief Newell of Portland sanctioned the tieup which resulted in numerous picture breaks in the daily newspapers.

Windows included Strickland and Mooney for a sports display, Rines Brothers for jewelry, the Columbia Hotel on the contest, Filene's for perfume, also Carroll's, House of Schrager and others which also ran co-op ads in addition to regular displays.

Rockwell 'Razor's Edge' Canvas

A special painting by Norman Rockwell, foremost American artist, is being used by 20th Century-Fox to highlight the extensive advertising campaign for Darryl F. Zanuck's production of W. Somerset Maugham's "The Razor's Edge," which will have its world premiere November 19 at the Roxy Theatre in New York.

Four months were required by Rockwell to complete the painting, a striking canvas of Tyrone Power as Larry Darrell (see cut), at his Vermont studio. The full-length portrait of Power surrounded by heads of Gene Tierney, John Payne, Anne Baxter, Clifton Webb and Herbert Marshall reflects the theme of the picture in the artist's distinctive style.

Acclaimed for his pictorial versions of the "Four Freedoms" and nationally known for his Saturday Evening Post covers, Rockwell seldom takes outside assignments. His interest in the Maugham novel, however, prompted him to consent to accept 20th-Fox's commission to do a special painting on "The Razor's Edge."

Decision of 20th-Fox to use Rockwell's painting is in line with a policy inaugurated a few years back whereby the best-known artists and illustrators in the country are commissioned to create special art for advertising campaigns on its pictures. National newspaper and magazine advertisements, posters, lobby displays and other accessories, in addition to special material such as mailing cards and brochures, are featuring the Rockwell painting.

Levy, et al Beat Paper Shortage with Ingenuity

Several theatres around the country lately have had to circumvent the difficulty posed by newspapers on strike or refusing display advertising due to the newsprint shortage. And managers and publicity men have refused to sit down and take it. A recent illustration of ingenuity which succeeded in publicizing a picture resulting in top business, was the campaign conducted in Reading, Pa. at Loew's Colonial by Manager Larry Levy; his assistant, Bill Riding and MGM representative Ed Gallner for "No Leave, No Love," the Van Johnson starrer.

Firstly they printed 10,000 tabloid newspapers which were carefully distributed door-to-door, in parked cars, on street cars, buses, taxis, etc. Then they made a tieup with the Zeswitz Music House, which distriibuted 2000 "keys to Van Johnson's Heart," only one of which could open the large red heart on a life-size figure of Johnson set up in the Colonial lobby. The store devoted its entire window space to the stunt, bought 17 radio spots to plug it and aided the theatre in the distribution of 5000 heralds advertising it. Inside the heart the holder of the lucky key found a $25 bond, which had been advertised as the prize.

Car card space was taken in all public transportation vehicles serving Reading and the surrounding area and a large ballyhoo truck toured the entire city for three days in advance.

Other highlights of the comprehensive campaign included the placing of window and counter displays in 69 selected spots; stripping local copy on the sides of express trucks; considerable promoted radio time in addition to paid spot announcements, and last but certainly not least, assistance from the home-office in the form of the hovering MGM Mairship which carried local tie-in copy.

EXPLOITATION KEY. This lobby display was part of Loew's Colonial, two-way tieup in Reading by which 2000 keys to Van Johnson's heart were distributed by a music store. Store used its full window, radio spots and distributed 5000 heralds to plug the stunt. Only one key could open the heart, with winner getting a $25 Bond, locked within.

Wins 'Sleep' Contest

In an exploitation stunt offering $100 to anyone who could sleep through Warners' "The Big Sleep," the Broadway Theatre, Portland, Ore., created something of a sensation when an out-of-towner who had been unable to get a hotel room for two nights entered the contest and won the $100.

The demonstration was held in the Jewel Box preview theatre, where a medico checked the contestants. The winner, asked what he intended to do with the $100, replied:

"I'm going to buy me a mattress."

Washington, Milwaukee in Big 'Journey' Campaigns

"Gallant Journey." The stunt attracted large crowds of curious spectators all along the route.

On the air waves, Gloria Gorss, noted commentator of the "Ladies' Choice" program over Station WEMP, devoted one whole program to the film, tying in fashion trends from that time until now. Schuster Department Stores, sponsors of the "Feminine Viewpoint" program conducted by Carla, plugged the attraction, theatre and playdate for a full week in connection with Jenny Bags over their program.

The Schuster Stores cooperated even further in using displays in all their stores, featuring Jenny Bags, with the playdate receiving appropriate mention. In connection with a prearranged national tieup, the T. A. Chapman Department Store, exclusive distributor of Vera Maxwell fashions for the city, ran a large ad in the Milwaukee Sentinel advertising the fashions as "Gallant Journey" fashions. They also devoted window space to the tieup.

In another smart move, Hacker had 5,000 stock heralds printed, using stills from the picture and playdate material, with J. C. Penney imprinted on the back. These heralds were given to J. C. Penney & Co., who distributed them by including them in all their packages sent out through the wrapping department. Window displays, all containing 30 x 40 attraction cards, were obtained at the Columbia Music Co., Littmans Furriers, Adam Hats and the Majestic Flower Shop.

News and art breaks were obtained in all the papers prior to opening and an especially favorable reaction was given the film by the Catholic Herald Citizen because of the aforementioned screening.

Five days before opening, a special six-foot tandem setpiece, constructed according to the press book suggestion, was set up in the lobby and proved a great attraction to both young and old. Art wall frames were constructed on each side of the lobby entrance to give advance notice of the feature.

Invites Golden Wedding Couples As Party Guests

Every couple in the vicinity of Washington, D. C., whose wedding date was on or about November 7, 1896 were invited to contact the manager of Loew's Capitol, to celebrate their Golden Weddings as guests of the theatre to see "I've Always Loved You."

The first couple to contact the theatre were to be guests at a dinner party, with the next 10 couples invited to see the film.—WAS.

POPCORN MANUFACTURERS ELECT; BATTLE OF BOX-OFFICE NAMES SET FOR ORIENTAL & CHICAGO

The boys who keep things popping in the popcorn business—the National Association of Popcorn Manufacturers, concluded their meeting here with the election of Fred J. Mayer of Madison, Wis., president; B. F. Butterfield of Oakland, Calif., vice-president and Charles Seyfert of Fort Wayne, Ind., treasurer. Al Villiesse of Chicago was reelected executive secretary.

A battle of names for box-office bonanzas seems scheduled here with the Essaness Oriental and the B&K Chicago in the running. The next two weeks at the Oriental has Mickey Rooney and Company to be followed by Frances Langford and Jon Hall, programs which appear to be aimed at exceeding the Chicago house record with Danny Kaye for two weeks.

Saul Goldman of Variety Pictures is in Detroit for business conferences while Jack Schlaifer went to Minneapolis for exhibitors' meetings and Irving Mandell, Monogram distributor, is expected back from his Florida trip. Mandell planned to go to the coast for a meeting on Nov. 13, accompanied by Charley Trampe of Milwaukee.

Monogram's Irving Mandell stopped off to visit his son at the Riverside Academy, Gainesville, Ga., on recent trip to Florida.

Mrs. Ben Eisenberg, wife of the Monogram manager, is recuperating from a recent operation performed at Mt. Sinai Hospital.

Herman Couston, former PRC office manager, has joined Columbia as a booker again.

Monogram exchange manager Ben Eisenberg has announced the marriage of his daughter Sharlene to Myron W. Pass, of Columbus, on Christmas Day at the Belden Stratford Hotel.

The Nov. 17 meeting of the Reel Fellows Club will include the election of officers, according to President Jack Armgart.

The Variety Club of Illinois, Tent No. 26, has announced the election of the following officers: National Canvasman, Jack Rose, with Jack Kirsch as alternate; Clowns, Alvin S. Raymer and Lester Simansky, with alternates J. Harold Stevens, George B. Topper, and Erwin R. Fensin; Canvasmen: Thomas Flannery, John Balaban, Walter Immerman, J. Harold Stevens, George Topper, Benjamin Lourie, William Baker, James Coston, Lester Simansky, William Hunt, and Edward Brunell.

Lower Illinois theatres will be affected by the favorable decision rendered by Judge John McGoorty, of Cook County Superior Court, to the Film Truck Service in its contract dispute with Koerner Motor Express.

E. G. Fitzgibbons, of Paramount's publicity department, has gone to Indianapolis for the Indiana Theatre Owners Convention, which also will be attended by Alex Manta and Jack Rose of the Manta-Rose Circuit.

Warner zone manager James Coston and George Singer, maintenance chief, were lucky enough to obtain tickets for the Army-Notre Dame game at Yankee Stadium in New York last week.

Recent visitors to the Variety Club quarters were Dick Frank, of Indianapolis, Nathan Golden, of Washington, and H. T. Brandt and Ralph Pinda, of Oklahoma City. A new club member is Leon Weingarden, of Consolidated Confections.

NEW ORLEANS

Business has been seesawing in the New Orleans area during the past two weeks with the post war average up at some times and down as far as 25 per cent at others. No one seems to be able to explain it and exhibitor opinions are as varied as exhibitor opinions usually are.

A. C. Bromberg, president and general manager for the Southern Monogram Pictures Corporation spent several days in New Orleans conferring with Local Manager Henry Glover and Salesmen Joe Fabacher and George Nungessor.

Toto Guidry is scheduled to open his new theatre in Opelousas, La., next week. Fox Johnston, who is building up a circuit of small town houses is also slated to open in Bunkie, La., shortly.

Kay Films Branch Manager Jerry Kernigan and Salesman Arnold Severiede are busy boys these days, hustling to get film contracts.

Film shipments in Freddy Goodrow's exchange are hitting a new high. Freddie has a bale of western reissues going out into the territory each week where they like the "shoot-'em-ups."

Pensacola, Fla., is boasting a new community center theatre for naval and civilian personnel of the Naval Air Training base. Equipped with Motiograph sound and projection as well as the latest type seats, the center is said to be one of the most modern houses in the territory, including a cry room. It seats 730.

WOMEN PRAISE JOHN J. PAYETTE AS LEADER IN CONSTRUCTIVE MOVES FOR THE FILM INDUSTRY

Praise of Warner Theatres Zone Manager John J. Payette as a leader in constructive movements for the film industry was voiced here last week by Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the District of Columbia Motion Picture Council.

J. J. Payette

Mrs. Linzel's praise came at a recent meeting where she discussed the leadership taken by Payette to bring the Children's Film Library Plan to the neighborhooders. Representatives from church, community and social organizations attended the meeting which was also addressed by Mrs. Marjorie Dawson, in charge of community relations for the Motion Picture Association. Mrs. Dawson emphasized the need of community backing to insure the success of the project.

Eleven minutes of reasons why you should come to see Washington is wrapped up in the short, "Invitation to the Nation" intended for distribution through travel groups, schools, parent teachers clubs and conventions and service clubs. CRIME WAVE SEEMS ON AS SECOND HOUSE IS ROBBED IN WEEK; TRADE SHOW FOR 'JOLSON' SETS RECORD

Crime continued to make itself felt in Philadelphia theatres this week when William Crump, watchman of the Uptown, was overpowered last Thursday night by robbers who apparently had hidden in the theatre after it was closed. The thieves ransacked the office and took an undetermined amount of loot. Although they managed to open the safe, they did not get the night's receipts which had been sent to the bank by Manager Ben Blumberg.

The strike of the Newspaper Guild on J. David Stern's Philadelphia Record did not affect any advertising during the first few days. The editorial functions of the paper were taken over by a skeleton staff of departmental heads.

Columbia Booker Ben Rosenthal is minus a tooth this week which had been giving him a bigger headache than switched play dates. "Pop" Korson, who used to own the Masterprice Film Exchange, is visiting California. He's the father of Columbia Exchange Manager Dave Korson.

MGM Local Exploiteers Jim Ashcraft and Ed Gallner acknowledged they have been in close association with Bess, handling the equine tour of that attraction but deny that they've taken to eating oats for breakfast. They say it's oatmeal.

Exhibitor indifference to trade showings erupted into activity for that of "The Jolson Story." So many turned out the doors had to be locked and late comers refused admittance.

RKO Exploiteer Hank Howard has that long awaited new automobile these days. Mrs. Alice Hickey, wife of Rialto Theatre Exhibitor Thomas Hickey of Lewistown, Pa. and sister of William Humphries who owns theatres in Catasaqua and Lewiston, visited film row this week.

All local exchanges were operating with skeleton crews only on Armistice Day.

ROYALTY AT LONDON PREMIERE. The first Royal Command Film Performance at the Empire Theatre, London, proved to be a most brilliant social event. The above scene in the Empire foyer, with King George chatting to Stewart Grainger, and Princess Elizabeth talking with Ray Milland, gives no indication of the surging activities of the crowds outside the theatre, where police were powerless to deal with the legions drawn to Leicester Square to greet the Royal Family and the stars.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

By JOCK MacGREGOR

The biggest week in the history of the London film trade was highlighted by the reception for the stars appearing for the Royal Command Performance, the Eric Johnston interview, the gala premiere itself, Paramount's luncheon for James E. Perkins, new managing director for Great Britain, and the dinner dance at which Adolph Zukor presided, and the preview of "The Jolson Story."

The Royal Command performance at the Empire, which garnered $150,000 for the Cinematograph Trade Benevolent Fund and scored as a headline story in newspapers round the world, was one of those events that not only cast its shadow before, but left a wake of discussion behind. Among the many sidelights which continue to brighten conversation about this glittering first showing of "Stairway to Heaven" was the sight of newsreel cameramen operating in white ties and tails; and the continuing query among usherettes and managers from all West End cinemas (who helped out) as to how they fared in the mobbing which took place in Leicester Square's battle of the showmanship century.

Max Milder, joint managing director of WB and ABPC which controls Britain's largest cinema circuit, two studios, Pathe Distributors and a newsreel, announced that negotiations are nearing completion for the purchase of Anglo-American Distributors.

Anglo, under Louis Jackson, has become a leading independent distributor, handling the highly successful British National output.

It would appear that Anglo is making this move to insure adequate booking for its product in view of the uncertainty which faces the small British producer. It has been whispered for some weeks that Jackson was going to throw his lot in with ABC or Korda, still a mystery man in this field.

Paramount's dinner dance drew a big turnout of film personalities, with Odeon being particularly well represented. J. Arthur Rank made one of his rare appearances. The speeches were short. Mr. Zukor spoke most highly of Jimmy Perkins in introducing him and referred to Mr. Rank as a "credit to our industry throughout the world."

Mr. Rank responded for the guests and obviously enjoyed the evening. Later on Zukor and he had a heart to heart talk. Already the entire Paramount output goes to his Odeon circuit and a still closer tie-up between the two organizations would not be surprising.

Ray Milland led the film stars and there was much competition among the ladies to dance with him. Capt. Sidney Clift's daughter Denise was among the first to get him on the floor.

It was a great night for the independents who were there in strength. Lou Morris appeared to be finding life to his liking. Mr. and Mrs. Theo Fligelstone did not miss many dances.

PERKINS MEETS BRITISH PRESS. J. E. Perkins, chairman and managing director of Paramount Film Service, Ltd., succeeding David E. COLUMBUS

The crowd of 74,000 people which attended the Ohio State-Pitt game last Saturday contributed to the increased business done on Sunday and Armistice Day in local first-runs. This was in contrast to the low marks established on Election Day and, of course, at last Saturday's matinees.

SNOWSTORMS HIT BOX-OFFICES FOR $25,000 WEEK-END TAKE; DELIVERIES REMAIN NEAR NORMAL

Two snowstorms, hitting Denver as they did, just about put a crimp on business, delayed film shipments and gave film rowers a transportation problem the like of which they don't remember in several years.

The first snow was 26 inches, but coming as it did on a Saturday, it found most of the theatres with their film shipments and about all the harm it accomplished was to freeze the box office, nicking the Denver first runs for an estimated $25,000 of their usual week-end business.

And on top of that it slowed up returns, which forced exchanges to send out substitutes during the week as a result of print shortage.

Among the other effects was a fervent wish on the part of Paramount Booker Paul Almeyer, that he had not moved to Idaho Springs, Colo., which necessitates 45 miles of daily commuting. That might be bad enough but when Paul had to shove 300 feet of 26-inch snow before he could get to work, that was a different story. He was snowed in from Saturday through Tuesday.

Art Sears, auditor for Civic Theatres didn't mind a bit of overtime though and turned taxi driver for the occasion. With the company pickup he shuttled back and forth, getting theatre managers and operators for the daily performaces and taking them home again at night.

And the inclement weather kept exhibitors pretty close to home for the most part, with only Larry Starsmore of Colorado Springs; Glen B. Whittstruck of Meeker; G. S. McLaughlin of Los Animas and Carmen Romano of Louisville, being seen on the row.

Incidentally the blizzard made Popcorn executive Cyril B. Lee use about every type of transportation available to get back to Denver. Lee was in Kansas City for a Viking popper meeting. He left Kansas City by plane, was grounded; took a train, a bus, a streetcar, taxi, auto and made the last half mile on foot.

Paramount District Manager Hugh Braly went to Salt Lake City on business to confer with Western Division Sales Manager George Smith. Twentieth Century Fox District Manager Charles Walker spent three days here with Exchange Manager James Dugan and others of the local staff.

Ted Knox has reopened the Windsor at Windsor, Colo., after closing to install Motiograph sound and projection. He bought the theatre from Ben Riggs.

Edna Ahlers, head of Paramount's contract department was the woman on the jury last week when she served in a murder trial.

MINNEAPOLIS

About 200 independent exhibitors from Minnesota, western Wisconsin, North Dakota and South Dakota are expected here for the mid-year convention of North Central Allied at Nicollet Hotel. Scheduled to address the meeting are Jack Kirsch, president of Allied States and Allied of Illinois; Sid Samuelson, general manager of Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania; Leon Bamberger, public relations director of RKO; George Dembow, sales manager of National Screen Service; and Jack Schlaifer, sales manager of Monogram. Lee Loevinger of St. Paul, formerly of the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, also will speak at the conclave. The luncheon preceding the business sessions will be open to distributors as well as exhibitors. All independent exhibitors in the Minneapolis film zone have been invited to the convention but only paid up NCA members will be allowed to participate in the discussions, according to Don Swartz, NCA executive secretary.

G. E. Carroll, Warner Bros. travelling auditor, was a visitor to the Minneapolis exchange, as was Norman Moray, general sales manager of Warner shorts.

Ben Berger, president of North Central Allied, has appointed A. A. Kaplan of St. Paul and Jack Heywood of New Richmond, Wis., to the advisory committee of the NCA board. They will fill the posts left vacant by the death of Al Steffes and the resignation of Ben Friedman. Berger also has announced that the Miner circuit of eight theatres in western Wisconsin has joined NCA.

The entire membership of the Northwest Variety Club will meet in the club rooms at Nicollet Hotel on Nov. 18 to vote on a new board of directors for the coming year. Ben Berger has been named chairman of the nominating committee. Other members of the committee are Roy Miller, Bill Elson, Jack Heywood, Max Torodor and Al Lee.

H. P. Borah has purchased the Roxy Theatre at Roseau, Minn., from Verne Sessler. Borah recently sold the Bryant at Bryant, S. D., to Bernard Eirenberg. George March has purchased at auction the building housing the March Theatre at Vermillion, S. D., for $22,150

IRVING BERLIN TO BE GUEST AT TUB THUMPERS NEXT LUNCHEON

Looks like you couldn't keep Bostonians at home last week-end with Paramount Booker John Good off to New York to see the Army-Notre Dame game and Ruth Goldberg of MGM flying to that city for a week-end holiday.

Paramount Cashier Kay Shaeffer is recuperating after a lengthy illness and told her associates she hopes to be back at work in another week. Another Paramounter, Bud Lewis, film salesman for Rhode Island and Western Massachusetts, is in the Boston City Hospital. Add to the sick list Francis J. Cronin, well known here as an organist in many "A" houses, who is in the St. Elizabeth Hospital due to a heart attack.

Douglas Ames, recently discharged from the Armed Services, and who prior to the war was assistant manager at the M&P New Haven Paramount, is back on the job. Alfred Swett, who formerly managed the Falmouth Theatre, is the new manager of the Taunton State.

The Tub Thumpers are doing a job for the War Nurses Memorial Fund with Harry Browning and Arthur Moger helping to beat the drum for funds which are now being solicited under the guidance of Martin E. Adamo. Irving Berlin of "Blue Skies" and other fame will be the guest of honor at the Nov. 21 Tub Thumpers luncheon in Steuben's Blue Room.

Boston visitors included MGM Salesman Ray Curren who has the Maine territory and Eastern Division Sales Manager Edward M. Schnitzer of United Artists. Schnitzer was in a huddle while here with Clayton Eastman, John Dervin and Jim Winn.

United Artists Publicist Phil Engel was busy last week with the art display of paintings depicting "The Temptations of St. Anthony" which are being used to ballyhoo "The Affairs of Bel Ami." The turnout was tremendous though Boston's Mayor Curley doesn't like the pictures and termed them an insult to Catholics.

Joe Levine is back after a trip through the country to set up handling for his Embassy Pictures which include "Shanghai Gesture" and the former RKO release "Daniel Boone."

Young Fairbanks to Film Legend of 'Round Table'

Completing more than seven years of research and planning, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., this week announced his intention of producing and starring as Sir Lancelot in a lavish Technicolor picture of "Knights of the Round Table," based on the well-known legend. Negotiations are already under way to produce it all or in part in England on a budget of between four and five million dollars. Clemence Dane and Thomas Elton have written an adaptation of the story and will start on the screenplay immediately.

Before tackling "Knights of the Round Table," young Fairbanks has three pictures to make. First is "The Exile," scheduled to start in January. This will be followed by "Terry and the Pirates" and then "The Caballero." He will star in the first and third and produce the second with another player.

Sign Singing Star

Marjorie Knapp, 21-year-old Broadway singing star who has been understudy to Ethel Merman in "Annie Get Your Gun," has been signed by Columbia to a term contract. She was granted a release from her run-of-the-play contract.

To Film Langley Novel

Dore Schary's first production upon his return to his home studio, Vanguard Films, will be "Dark Medallion," a picturization of the novel by Dorothy Langley. The picture is scheduled for production in the near future.

Will Play the Mother

Mary Astor will play the mother of Elizabeth Taylor in MGM's "The Full, Rich Life," which Robert Z. Leonard directs and Edwin Knopf produces. Others in the cast include Gene Lockhart, Spring Byington and Jimmy Lydon.

'Dark Wood' Next

Upon completion of "Forever Amber," now before the cameras at 20th Century-Fox, Otto Preminger will produce and direct "The Dark Wood," screen version of the novel by Christine Weston. Ring Lardner, Jr., is now putting the final touches on the script.

Broidy Buys 'Masterpiece'

Steve Broidy, president of Monogram, has purchased Victor Pahlen's "Masterpiece" for early production in 1947. Hal E. Chester has been assigned to handle the production reins on the story, which is scheduled to be published shortly in a national magazine.

Lesser Sets 'Land'

Producer Sol Lesser has placed "Show Me a Land," best-selling novel by Clark McMeekin, on his 1947 production schedule for release through United Artists. Lon McCallister, who recently completed "The Red House" for Lesser, will star in the film.

STUDIO ROUNDUP

Production at Major Studios Still Below Schedule; Screen Story Analysts on CSU Picket Lines Leave Little Activity in Companies' Story Departments

Production at the Hollywood studios is still very much off schedule. Columbia, for example, has only three pictures before the cameras in contrast to past schedules of six, seven and eight films. Other companies are operating under similar circumstances with the exception of the smaller studios, such as Monogram and Screen Guild, which are as active as ever. One way in which the prolonged strike has hampered production at major lots is in the matter of script analysis, for the Screen Story Analysts, a member of the Conference of Studio Unions, are out on the picket lines in full force. This has greatly disrupted studio story departments, making it impossible to adequately cover available material.

Monogram Starts Three

The annual stockholders' meeting of Monogram had something to cheer about with the start of three pictures at the studio this week. The "Black Gold" camera crew returned to Hollywood after filming horseracing scenes at Agua Caliente, supplementing previously photographed material at Churchill Downs during the running of the Kentucky Derby. Cast so far includes Anthony Quinn, Katherine DeMille, Ducky Louie, Elyse Knox, Kane Richmond and Raymond Hatton. Six different locations will be used in Jeffrey Bernerd's Cinecolor production, which started November 14.

Jack Wrather started his initial effort for Monogram, with "The Guilty" now rolling under the direction of John Reinhardt. Featured are Bonita Granville, Don Castle, Wally Cassell, Regis Toomey and John Litel. Also started by Monogram was "Fall Guy," with Walter Mirisch producing and Reginald LeBorg directing. Only one announced thus far for the cast is Bob Pierce, formerly known as Leo Penn, who scored a great success in the Hollywood Actors' Lab project.

More Action at MGM

MGM started "The Birds and the Bees" and "A Love Story." Joe Pasternak is producing "The Birds," a musical starring Jeanette MacDonald, Jose Iturbi and Jane Powell. Fred Wilcox directs. Robert Schumann's Cantata from the opera "Faust" was recorded for the first time in America on November 2 at the studio with a 100-piece symphony orchestra and a mixed choir of 95 voices, plus a childrens' choir of 60. The recording was for "A Love Story," which stars Katharine Hepburn, Paul Henreid and Robert Walker.

MGM contract player Hal Hackett was given a role in "Undercover Maisie," Ann Sothern starrer with Barry Nelson. Margaret O'Brien completed her role in "The Unfinished Dance," but rehearsals have been in progress for the picture's "Butterfly Ballet" and actual shooting on this final number is scheduled to start November 19.

Long Shooting Schedule

The lengthiest shooting schedule in PRC history is being created with the making of "The Red Stallion," which finally returned after seven weeks' location work near Mount Shasta. Film is now doing interiors at the Eagle-Lion lot under the direction of Lesley Selander.

SG Adds Jennifer Holt

Jack Holt's daughter, Jennifer, was given the feminine lead opposite Richard Arlen in Screen Guild's "Return of Buffalo Bill." Jack Schwarz' unit is producing the film, first on its agenda.

Enterprise Filming Two

William E. Flannery, art director for Enterprise's "Arch of Triumph," is in New York arranging for set construction for sequences of the David Lewis production yet to be filmed involving Ingrid Bergman and Charles Laughton. Flannery will be East until November 27, when he is due to return to Hollywood.

Enterprise added Gilbert Roland to the cast of "The Other Love," another David Lewis production. Roland, who stars in Monogram's "Cisco Kid" series, will play the Monte Carlo croupier who makes love to Barbara Stanwyck. This completes the trio of her lovers in the film, the others being co-stars David Niven and Robert Stack. Also announced for the film, now in its second month, is Edward Ashley, who enacts the part of a millionaire yachtsman.

UA Production Drops

United Artists is down from its production peak, with only three films shooting. Howard Hawks brought back his "Red River" troupe from their tough-luck location site in Arizona and is shooting at the Goldwyn lot. Hawks is producing and directing the film.

Hal Roach is now editing "Who Killed Doc Robin," with actual camera work completed. Hunt Stromberg moved his "Personal Column" from the Goldwyn lot to General Service, making the first picture to go into action there in some time, due to the strike.

Five Going at RKO

RKO is below its past production peaks, but it ranks high in these days of labor strife in Hollywood, with five films before the camera. Kirk Douglas was handed a major role in "Build My Gallows High" and will play a 'heavy' who motivates much of the action that surrounds stars Robert Mitchum and Jane Greer. Hakim-Litvak changed the name of their independent venture to "The Long Night,"

STUDIO NEWS & PROGRAM NOTES

Alexander Knox to Star in 'Indian Summer' at RKO; Picker to Produce 'Prince Valiant' for Eagle-Lion

Ingrid Talmar, blonde Mexican actress, has been signed for a role in Columbia's "The Lady from Shanghai," which stars Rita Hayworth and Orson Welles.

Ruth Robinson, Thomas Jackson, Oliver Blake and Caroline Andrews have been signed by Jack Wrather Productions for supporting roles in "The Guilty," Bonita Granville-Don Castle co-starrer which John Reinhardt directs for Monogram release.

Richard Conte is the latest addition to the cast of Paramount's "Saigon," co-starring Alan Ladd and Veronica Lake which Leslie Fenton will direct with P. J. Wolfson producing.

Alexander Knox has been borrowed from Columbia to star in RKO's "Indian Summer," original story by Boris Ingster, which Michel Kraike will produce. Knox will also collaborate on the screenplay with Ingster. The latter will direct the comedy centering around a small town judge who leaves home and family for a belated romantic fling.

Eagle-Lion has purchased the film rights to the King Features adventure strip, "Prince Valiant," the story of King Arthur's court. Production reins on the feature, which is to be filmed in color, will be handled by Leonard Picker as his initial assignment for Eagle-Lion.

Versatile Dick Powell will be seen in the role of an Army officer, disguised as a mule skinner, who brings law and order to a tough western town in RKO's "Stations West," currently running as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post. Film will be produced under the executive supervision of Robert Sparks.

Sol Lesser has added Gene Fowler's novel, "Illusion in Java," to his 1947 production schedule. A troupe and crew will be sent to Java to photograph not only scenes but action as well.

Ben Hecht has been signed by Universal-International to write the screen-play and adaptation of the new novel, "Ride a Pink Horse," by Dorothy Hughes. He will collaborate with Charles Lederer who was also signed to work on the script.

John Rodney will join Lilli Palmer as leading man in United States Pictures' forthcoming "Distant Drums," for Warner Bros. Rodney made his film debut in Warners' "Pursued," Teresa Wright-Robert Mitchum starrer.

Arthur Marx was assigned by Columbia to write the screenplay of "Blondie Sees Stars," from his own original story. Picture will be the twenty-first in the studio's "Blondie" series co-starring Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake.

Benedict Bogeaus has signed George Raft, Randolph Scott and George Brent to starring roles in "Christmas Eve," for United Artists release. Edwin L. Marin will direct the story of a gentleman, a killer, and a cowboy who arrive on Christmas Eve in the home of an old woman, each to get their share of a fortune.

Ross Ford was set for a role in Warners' "Deep Valley," which stars Dane Clark, Ida Lupino and Wayne Morris. Film is directed by Jean Negulesco and produced by Henry Blanke.

Billy Scheffield, Patti Brady and Robert (Buzz) Henry will play the three important child roles in "King of the Wild Horses," now in production at Columbia with George Archainbaud directing.

Kane Richmond, star of three "Shadow" pictures, was set to join the cast of Monogram's "Black Gold," starring Anthony Quinn with Katherine DeMille and Elyse Knox. Phil Karlson will direct the Cinecolor film for producer Jeffrey Bernerd.

Dr. Miklos Rozsa will compose the score for Hal Wallis' Technicolor film, "Desert Fury," which provides him with an action-packed drama of the outdoors for his musical work. Heading the cast are John Hodiak, Lizabeth Scott and Burt Lancaster, with Lewis Allen directing for Paramount.

Vincent Lawrence has been signed to a writer contract by 20th-Fox and his first chore will be the screenplay for "The Foxes of Harrow," the Frank Yerby best-seller which William Bacher will produce.

"The Big Story," by Craig Rice, has been purchased by Monogram and assigned to Hal E. Chester for production.

Ferrer to Ford on 'Fugitive' Assignment

Mel Ferrer, who is under three-way contract to David O. Selznick as director, actor and producer, has been loaned by Selznick to star with Dolore Del Rio in the Spanish version of Ford's "The Fugitive," and to act as assistant to Ford on the production.

Ford will film "The Fugitive" in both English and Spanish. Henry Fonda will star with Miss Del Rio in the English version. Both versions will be photographed simultaneously by Ford at the Churubusco studios in Mexico City, with filming scheduled to begin December 1.

Foy to Be Portrayed

Edward Small has obtained permission from Bryan Foy to have the latter portrayed in "The Life of Rudolph Valentino." Concession carries the grant to the Eagle-Lion executive, however, to approve his screen facsimile. Foy and Valentino shared living quarters in 1919 shortly after Valentino made his screen debut.

Two for SG Release

Deals to release "Desert Princess" and "Last of the Wild Horses," to be produced by Screen Art Pictures and Affiliated Productions, respectively, have been signed by Screen Guild Productions. Producers and directors have not yet been set.

Cotten Signs New Pact

Joseph Cotten, one of the stars of David O. Selznick's "Duel in the Sun," has been signed to a new long-term contract by Vanguard Films. Cotten's next production will be the starring role in the picturization of the Robert Nathan novel, "Portrait of Jenny."

'Esquire Girl' Creators Win 'Flamingo' Award

Artists Fritz Willis and Joe De Mers, recently feted from coast to coast as creators of the new "Esquire Girl," are the winners of $5,000 in a competition conducted by Producer William Cagney to find the best artistic conception of another girl, the "Flamingo" of Adria Locke Langley's "A Lion Is in the Streets," best-selling novel which Cagney plans to bring to the screen. The sample sketches submitted by Willis and De Mers bested those of 22 other American artists.

When completed in December, the "Flamingo" portrait will be reproduced in color and used in an extensive talent search to find a real-life girl who resembles it enough to play the fiery redhead in Cagney's Technicolor version of the novel. Cagney is offering another $5,000 to the person or persons who match a girl to the portrait and lead her to a contract with the Cagney company.

Stearn, Handel, Conn in Production Arrangement

Bert M. Stearn, head of the Cooperative Theatre Service of Pittsburgh, and Harry Handel, prominent exhibitor in that city, have concluded arrangements with Maurice Conn for the production of two pictures annually through Screen Guild Productions. Offices of the new company have been opened on Melrose Avenue in Hollywood and production on the first picture is scheduled to start in January.

Conn, who has been associated with Hollywood production for many years, was responsible for such films as the Frank Darrow, Pinky Tomlin and Return of Rin Tin Tin series.

Rogers Films in Trucolor

All forthcoming Roy Rogers films for Republic release will be photographed in Trucolor, the studio has announced. "Apache Rose" has been completed. Still to come are "Bells of San Angelo," "The Gay Ranchero," "Springtime in the Sierras," "San Antonio Sunset," "Heart of Mexico" and "Song of the Golden West." Edward J. White will act as associate producer for all except the last two, which Donald H. Brown will produce.

Jackson Leaving U-I

Producer Felix Jackson has been granted a release from his contract with Universal-International. Jackson, who is currently supervising the editing of "I'll Be Yours," starring Deanna Durbin, Tom Drake and William Bendix, will leave the lot when that assignment is completed, probably late this month.

Set for 3 Top Roles

George Raft, Randolph Scott and George Brent have been signed to play top roles in the film, "Christmas Eve," which Benedict Bogeaus will soon produce for release through United Artists. The picture, which is based on a screenplay by Laurence Stallings, will be directed by Edwin L. Marin.

Corrigan Signed

Lloyd Corrigan has been signed by Paramount for a featured role in the aviation epic, "Blaze of Noon." He will appear as a minister who marries Anne Baxter and William Holden.

HOLLYWOOD

Circus Performers Set For 'Blaze of Noon'

Circus and carnival fans will recognize many famous performers in Paramount's "Blaze of Noon." Opening scenes of the aviation epic are played against the background of a county fair, in which most of the available top performers in Hollywood have been set to appear.

Heading the list is the famous Poodles Hanneford, the clown rider who has played vaudeville and the circuses for some 40 years. The Hanneford family of riders, now in its fifth generation, also will be represented by Poodles' daughter, Grace, who will appear as an aerialist. Also in the county fair is the famous clown, Buster Brody, the aerialist and acrobat, Pat Moran, and an expert with the Australian bull whip, Dave Kashner. Hollywood's tallest citizen, seven-foot, six-inch Lockhart Martin, will be seen walking through the crowds. Gabriel Canzano, official Hollywood organ grinder for more than 20 years, and his monkey, Josephine also will be seen.

Nebenzal Plans Expansion To Handle 1947 Program

Producer Seymour Nebenzal is planning a general expansion of his west coast organization preparatory to handling a 1947 production program predicated on a budget of $7,000,000 for a series of five pictures to be released through United Artists.

First offering on the production sheets in "Heaven Only Knows," to be followed by "Atlantis," in which Maria Montez will star. Third on the list is "Mayerling," then "The Tempest," starring Jorja Curtwright. Completing the projected Nebenzal schedule for 1947 will be "Madame Butterfly," based on a modern-day story paralleling the opera version and with the addition of the Puccini music.

Greene General Manager Of Comet, Triangle

Harold Greene has been appointed general manager of both Triangle and Comet Productions. Greene, former assistant story editor at Paramount, will take charge of general operations under Mary Pickford, Buddy Rogers and Ralph Cohn, top executives of Comet and Triangle.

2 Named for Western

Columbia has assigned Robert Scott to the juvenile lead, and Hugh Prosser to the "heavy" role in "Prairie Raiders," latest in the "Durango Kid" series starring Charles Starrett and Smiley Burnette. Derwin Abrahams has been named director of the film, replacing Ray Nazarro.

Ethel Griffies Signed

Ethel Griffies, who recently returned to Hollywood from a road tour with the stage version of "Rebecca," in which she played Mrs. Danvers, has been named by Columbia for a featured role in "Millie's Daughter."

Forms 16-mm. Company

Smiley Burnette, Columbia's cowboy-comic-musician, is forming a company to make one-reel 16-mm. comedies for home and commercial showing. He plans to have two of the subjects ready for release by the middle of December.

from a "A Time to Kill," and resumed interiors following a siege of location work.

Sol Lesser signed "Breezy" Eason to direct the second unit of "Tarzan and the Huntress." Eason began the supplementary unit's labors on November 7 at a Santa Anita ranch, shooting sequences involving Johnny Weissmuller and others in an elephant stampede. Other RKO films being made are "Dick Tracy vs. the Claw" and Robert Riskin's "Magic Town." Latter stars Jimmy Stewart and Jane Wyman.

WB Prepares 'Frontiersman'

Director Raoul Walsh and assistant Russell Saunders are in St. Louis, using that city as a base of operations while scouting outdoor locations for "The Frontiersman," being readied for production at the Burbank lot. Walsh and Saunders last worked on the U. S. Pictures' "Pursued." The Joan Crawford-Van Heflin starrer, "Possessed," is really going some—they added two more small parts to the picture being directed by Curtis Bernhardt and produced by Jerry Wald.

Warners are also shooting the Swedish importation, Viveca Lindfors, in her first American offering, "Night Unto Night," co-starring Ronald Reagan; and "Deep Valley," with Ida Lupino, Dane Clark and Wayne Morris. Also, the Technicolor "My Wild Irish Rose" is before the lensmen.

One in Work at U-I

The lone film in production at Universal-International is "The Egg and I," now in its second month. "I'll Be Yours," starring Deanna Durbin, is being edited.

'Boomerang' Coming Home

In its final stages of shooting on location at Stamford, Conn., and White Plains, N. Y., is 20th-Century Fox's "Boomerang." Dana Andrews, Jane Wyatt and company return to Hollywood very shortly.

Martin Lamont was added to "Forever Amber," one of four 20th-Fox films going, as a lover of the versatile lady. Lamont is a recruit from the Broadway stage. Other film rolling is Betty Grable's "Mother Wore Tights" which, like "Amber," is in Technicolor.

When Sol Wurtzel puts the last touches to his "Jewels of Brandenburg," shooting at Sutherland Studios, it will wind up his 1946 schedule of independent action dramas for 20th-Fox distribution. Wurtzel works closely with exhibitors, letting them determine the types of stories brought to the screen under his banner.

Republic Film Titleless

Republic has not decided on the title for its Nelson Eddy-Ilona Massey musical extravaganza formerly called "Will Tomorrow Ever Come." It is untitled at this writing. Tamara Shayne, wife of Akim Tamiroff, fresh from a hit as Al Jolson's mother in Columbia's "The Jolson Story," will enact the part of Miss Massey's confidante and maid. Eight songs are to be included in the film.

Virginia Bruce is the most recent addition to "Wyoming," and will co-star with William Elliott, Vera Ralston and John Carroll. Miss Bruce, just recovered from a pneumonia attack, plays a dancehall girl in this story of Wyoming in the cattle-baron days. Joe Kane directs and serves as associate producer. Frank Borzage is producing and directing "Gallant Man," ending its initial month of shooting.

Director R. G. Springsteen completed the Red Ryder, "Marshal of Cripple Creek," starring Allan Lane with Bobby Blake and Martha Wentworth.

Wallis Ends 'Desert Fury'

Hal Wallis completed "Desert Fury," his independent venture for Paramount release after 57 days of shooting, most of it on Arizona locations. It was made in Technicolor.

"The Big Haircut" sent a second company on November 13 for two days of location near Bakersfield to film progression shots of a harvesting combine crew's travels from Texas into the Dakotas. The main company has completed a 57-day shooting schedule, directed by Tay Garnett.

Pearl Bailey, Negro singer, reported on November 11 to start work on her specialty number in the 36-star "Variety Girl," story of the Variety Clubs. Frank Loesser, veteran songwriter, wrote Miss Bailey's "torch song." The big musical has kept four stages busy at the studio, with three dance directors, a producer and a group of musical supervisors handling the units. Daniel Dare is producing and George Marshall directs. Sid Grauman, one of the country's pioneer showmen, will make his professional screen debut when he plays himself in a sequence in the film in which Grauman's Chinese is the background.

Joan Caulfield has been re-optioned by Paramount for a third year.

Columbia Shoots Three

"The Lady from Shanghai," being produced and directed by Orson Welles for Columbia, started its second month on location in Acapulco, Mexico. Eighteen of Mexico's most beautiful girls and a Mariache band were flown to Acapulco from Mexico City last week for a beach barbecue scene. Welles also co-stars with his wife, Rita Hayworth.

Two recent starters at Columbia were "King of the Wild Horses" and "Blondie's Holiday." Preston Foster, Gail Patrick and "Big Boy" Williams are featured in the former, being produced by Ted Richmond and directed by George Archainbaud. The regular line-up of Arthur Lake, Penny Singleton and Larry Simms get top billing in "Blondie," which is directed by Abby Berlin, assisted by Carter DeHaven, Jr.

Janney, Lasky Talk on Production of 'Miracle'

Russell Janney, author of "The Miracle of the Bells," which Jesse L. Lasky recently purchased for $100,000 and a profit-sharing arrangement for the author, is in Hollywood conferring with Lasky on the filming of his novel which Lasky will produce for RKO release.

Following the conferences, Janney was scheduled to continue a lecture tour through San Francisco, Sacramento, Portland and Seattle.

BOX OFFICE SLANT

Singin' in the Corn

Columbia Comedy with Songs 66 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Perhaps the youngsters will like this, and average audiences will find it amusing.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Suitable for the lower half of double-bill situations.

Cast: Judy Canova, Allen Jenkins, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, Alan Bridge, Charles Halton, Robert Dudley, Nick Thompson, Frances Rey, George Chesebro, Ethan Laidlaw, Frank Lackteen and the Singing Indian Braves. Credits: Screenplay by Isabel Dawn and Monte Brice with additional dialogue by Elwood Ullman from a story by Richard Weil. Produced by Ted Richmond. Directed by Del Lord. Photography, George B. Meehan, Jr.

Plot: When Judy Canova, a psychic mind-reader working carnivals, is informed that she inherits the entire town of McCoy's Gulch, she and her partner Allen Jenkins find it a ghost city. Her uncle's will informs Judy that she must give the town back to the Indians from whom the uncle filched it and then she will inherit a large sum of money; otherwise the money and the town go to the uncle's former partner. The partner tries to prevent the town's return to the Indians but Judy and Jenkins complete the terms of the will.

Comment: This is "corny" in story, characterization, comedy and acting, although it does have its genuine comedy moments. Some of the gag situations are milked dry and might better have been given considerably less screen time, thus speeding the action, which drags considerably. Judy's songs are delivered with her usual vocal tricks, while Jenkins' drawn-out double-takes are little help to the comedy. One refreshing note is the music delivered by a group of Indian instrumentalists and singers. Those who like slapstick comedy, and this refers especially to the youngsters, will like "Singin' in the Corn." Average audiences will find it amusing. Suitable for the lower half of double-bill situations.

Boston Blackie and the Law

Columbia Mystery 69 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Good, smart mystery with comedy overtones that should tickle the Boston Blackie fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should follow the box-office course of past Boston Blackies.

Cast: Chester Morris, Trudy Marshall, Constance Dowling, Richard Lane, George E. Stone, Frank Sully, Warren Ashe, Selmer Jackson. Credits: Original screenplay by Harry J. Essex. Additional dialogue by Malcolm Stuart Boylan. Based upon the character created by Jack Boyle. Directed by D. Ross Lederman. Produced by Ted Richmond. Photography, George B. Meehan, Jr.

Plot: While presenting his annual Thanksgiving magic show at the women's penitentiary, Boston Blackie (Chester Morris) becomes involved in the escape of Constance Dowling. To clear himself from suspected complicity, he starts to trace the missing girl and finds that the escape was engineered so that she could locate a former partner in a magic act, whom she believes made away with a large sum of money which she had stolen and for which she had been sent to prison. Blackie engages in his usual set-tos with the law but finally clears himself and finds the missing money.

Comment: Even though the script writer apparently had his tongue in his cheek when writing this one, he has succeeded in putting together an interesting story of Blackie's ability to outwit the law whenever he finds it necessary to do so. Chester Morris' portrayal of the sleuth is by now a familiar one and there is little difference in his characterization this time, except for his performance as a stage magician, which in fact is no more than proof of Morris' actual ability as a good amateur along these lines. Trudy Marshall and Constance Dowling are both nice to look at and do very well in their respective parts. George E. Stone, Richard Lane and Frank Sully are their usual selves. Production values are good and direction adequate. Should do as well as any of the previous films in this series and might lead double-bill programs in some situations where the Blackies have done well.

The Devil's Hand

Distinguished Films Drama 80 mins.

(French Dialogue, English Titles)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) An eerie fantasy that will stimulate and excite adult, sophisticated audiences. Not for children under any circumstances.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: For the "art" houses primarily. May get by as general entertainment in a few spots.

Cast: Pierre Fresnay, Josseline Gael, Palau, Noel Roquevert, Guillaume de Sax, Andre Varennes, Antoine Balpetre, Rexiane, Robert Vattier, Chamarat, Jean Coquelin, Andre Bacque, Jean Davy, Douking, Rene Blancard, Garzoni, Marcel, Jean Despeaux, Pierre Larquey. Credits: A Maurice Tourneur Production. Scenario, Jean-Paul Le Chanois. Music, Roger Dumas. Settings, Armand Thirard.

Plot: This is a story about a miraculous, severed left hand, that has served as a talisman to each of several men through the centuries and has brought wealth and every wish to each who has possessed it. Each has had to re-sell the talisman before his death or lose his soul to the Devil. How an unsuccessful painter comes to possess the talisman, how he succeeds in every wish and how he finally defeats the Devil at the cost of his life and at the same time saves his own soul is the story of this film.

Comment: If it were not for considerable footage of defective film, this undoubtedly would be a stand-out French production of an oft-told, fantastic legend. Superb direction, casting and acting, aided by fine production values, even with the poor film stock, make it a much better than average importation. The English titles make the action clear and the lighting, music and the story itself will bring plenty of chills to American audiences. As fantastic as the tale is, it is made believable, (for the moment, at any rate). Those who see it will long remember "The Devil's Hand" as an experience in motion picture films. How it will fare at the box-office is anybody's guess. It could very well catch on and do all right. In any event it should be successful in the "art" houses and might get by as general entertainment. Not for chidren under any circumstances.

School for Secrets

GFD Drama 108 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Absorbing semi-documentary of the development of Radar and the "back room" scientists who made it possible.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Picture is too long and should be tightened. Lack of names is likely to restrict it to duals.

Cast: Ralph Richardson, Raymond Huntley, Richard Attenborough, Marjorie Rhodes, John Laurie, David Tomlinson, Ernest Jay, David Hutcheson, Patrick Waddington, Pamela Matthews and others. Credits: Written and directed by Peter Ustinov. Produced by George H. Brown and Peter Ustinov. Filippo del Giudice in charge of production. Presented by J. Arthur Rank.

Plot: A group of "back room" scientists are sent with their families to a small town to develop Radar. They include a zoologist, a vegetarian, a University professor, a radio expert and a doctor. Each has his idosyncrasies and gets on the others' nerves but remains friendly. Each has his particular job, and security surrounds the group so that not even their wives know what they are doing. Testing their experiments under combat conditions, one is killed, another has to bale out after bombing Berlin and a third goes on a Commando raid to check a German Radar station. The experiments succeed.

Comment: First and foremost, 'School for Secrets" is too long and should be cut. The idea is good, the characterizations excellent and a nice line in humor runs throughout, but the 108 minutes are not justified. Some of the combat stuff could be clipped effectively, while the picture generally could be tightened up. J. Arthur Rank has gambled. He has given the production to two practically untried youngsters: George Brown and Peter Ustinov, a writer whose first picture this is. They have acquitted themselves well. The factual scenes of the development of Radar are enthralling and the scientists' domestic affairs are skilfully handled. The characters are mainly middle aged and it is through no fault of her own that Pamela Matthews, a promising newcomer, strikes a false note through being introduced as a scientists's glamorous wife. Ralph Richardson is once again successful as an eccentric Englishman and special mention must go to John Laurie and Raymond Huntley for neat performances.

Till the Clouds Roll By

MGM Musical 120 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Sheer delight for all manner of men, women and youngsters everywhere; an all-star show for everybody's money. Captivating tunes, gorgeous spectacle, touching romance and a world of great entertaining talent.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Sure to prove a dynamic box-office force in all situations, because it's just about as big a musical show as can be crowded into anybody's theatre.

Cast: June Allyson, Lucille Bremer, Judy Garland,

Plot: Based on the life and music of Jerome Kern, this is the story of an American composer who thought of music in terms of romance and the modern idiom. He started as a song writer for the current musical comedy stage and remained to give that medium new character and substance. The 'plot" is a fictionized romance about the struggling youth seeking a place in the American theatre; his trip to England where he scored with a song spotted into a London revue; his return to America to win one triumph after another as the writer of musical hits; his marriage to the English girl who swept him off his feet when he met her while struggling for a hearing in London; his friendship with the musician whose teaching developed his talents; his ultimate recognition as the dean of American composers for the musical stage.

Comment: You will be hearing and reading lots and lots about this tremendously potent musical show. Even so, it will be a great mistake for any showman to neglect seeing the picture for himself before he offers it at his theatre. For here is a production that deserves first-hand showmanship treatment in order to realize its full potential as a popular draw and as a piece of entertainment that will give the screen renewed vigor as a widely recognized form of popular amusement for young, old, rich and poor alike. The romance is based on the life of Jerome Kern but there is no effort to palm this off as biography, and the fictional spirit of the entire plot and characterization is one of the elements which makes for the fascination which inheres in every scene and sequence of this lavishly endowed production. The Kern music, like your favorite dish, seems at the time you are partaking of it to be the most captivating melodic treat ever; the romance, so richly acted by Robert Walker in the name role, and Van Johnson and Dorothy Patrick and others, is warmly pleasing and often very affecting; the parade of stars seen in the dazling array of musical and spectacular visions from a cavalcade of Kern shows is a royal progress of "greats" of the modern show world (see that cast up above there). There's so much in this two-hour colossus of the screen that a reviewer's report couldn't even attempt to give details of the distinguished and exceptionally effective scenes and sequences that abound in "Till the Clouds Roll By." In the musical line, the scenes from Kern shows include the opener—and what an eye-opener that full-stage set is!—on the stage of the Ziegfeld Theatre where "Showboat" is being presented with Kathryn Grayson and Tony Martin doing "Make Believe I Loved You," Lena Horne singing "Can't Help Lovin' That Man;" Angela Lansbury's swing number in the London show; June Allyson's first number, "Till the Clouds Roll By" with Ray MacDonald and her later offerings; Judy Garland in "Sonny" interludes; that knockout clowning bit by Van Johnson in the "I Won't Dance" number with Lucille Bremer; Bremer again in the gloriously colorful "Land of Flowers" scenes; Dinah Shore, Virginia O'Brien, the stunning finale in an entrancing duo-tone of glowing-brown and white Technicolor for a series of Kern song hits rendered by Frank Sinatra and others. This is a flowing bowl of refreshing, charming and completely satisfying entertainment, this "Till the Clouds Roll By" that the MGM studio has turned out. And you'd better see it yourself to understand what we mean by this enthusiastic report.

That Brennan Girl

Republic Drama 95 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Here is one of the most terrific women-appeal pictures to come along in a long time. Will bring plenty of tears to feminine eyes and should benefit from excellent word-of-mouth.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should garner extra business at the box-office, especially in smaller towns and neighborhood houses.

Cast: James Dunn, Mona Freeman, William Marshall, June Duprez, Frank Jenks, Dorothy Vaughan, Charles Arnt, Rosalind Ivan, Fay Helm, Bill Kennedy, Connie Leon, Edythe Elliott. Credits: Produced and directed by Alfred Santell. Screenplay by Doris Anderson from the story by Adele Rogers St. John. Photography, Jack Marta.

Plot: A young girl who has been raised in an atmosphere of petty larceny falls into a life of crime with a racketeer. She marries a sailor and bears his child shortly before he is killed in combat. Her baby is taken away from her by the police because of neglect, and she runs away. The racketeer shows up again and finds her after a long search. She has adopted a motherless baby, but eventually her own child is returned to her and she is reunited with the now-honest former racketeer.

Comment: The women will love "That Brennan Girl," for Republic has pulled out all the emotional stops to make it a film with strong feminine appeal. Whether or not it will please the men is of little consequence, for so long as the women can see and enjoy it, that's all that counts; the men will come right along to the box-office. Alfred Santell has given the picture excellent production mountings and has directed it in a smooth, extremely professional manner, maintaining unusual realism. The picture is timely and reflects the vast experience of story-teller St. John in depicting domestic scenes in a modern way. Dorothy Anderson deserves special credit for her tight adaptation of the story, and the dialogue is believable. James Dunn's Academy award for his performance in last year's "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" and Mona Freeman's outstanding portrayal of the Brennan girl, which should do much to further her career, are attributes that will help this picture at the box-office. It should do especially well in neighborhood houses and small towns.

Stairway to Heaven

(Technicolor)

(Reviewed at Royal Premiere)

Universal-International Drama 104 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Enthralling and unusual story of a pilot's fight for his life before a Heavenly Court, brilliantly conceived and presented. A connoisseur's picture with much to commend it to all.

BOX-OFICE SLANT: David Niven and Raymond Massey, plus a star-making performance from Kim Hunter, give this picture, which will be widely discussed, undeniable selling angles.

Cast: David Niven, Raymond Massey, Roger Livesey, Kim Hunter, Marius Goring, Robert Coote, Kathleen Byron, Richard Attenborough, Bonar Coleano, Joan Maude and others. Credits: Written, produced and directed by Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger. Production designed by Alfred June. Color and dye-monochrome processed in Technicolor. Presented by J. Arthur Rank. Released in Great Britain as "A Matter of Life and Death."

Plot: Returning from a raid in a blazing plane, David Niven, an RAF pilot, reports by wireless to an American Wac operator, Kim Hunter, that his crew have baled out and that he has no chance for survival. During their brief conversation, the two fall in love. He jumps without a parachute and his unconscious body is washed up by the sea. When he recovers, he finds Kim. Frequent attacks overcome him when he has hallucinations regarding the other world. During a delicate brain operation, he imagines he is tried by the supreme heavenly court to decide if he should live because of Kim. The operation is a success.

Comment: A colored rose fades into monochrome. That is one of the novel technical touches which distinguish "Stairway to Heaven," a remarkably original and enthralling picture. Emeric Pressburger and Michael Powell have sought the unconventional and made a connoisseur's picture. Heaven in their Technicolored interpretation, as pictured in the subconscious mind of the aviator fighting for his life, is monochrome and reverently run on military if informal lines. Soda fountains await Americans. A giant moving stairway links the two worlds. The picture, strangely, is anti-British in theme. The prosecutor in the Heavenly Court, brilliantly played by Raymond Massey, is an American, killed in the War of Independence and a hater of Britain. He is against Anglo-American marriages and charges Britain with aggression through the ages, pointing to the jurymen who have died in these wars. There is gentle ribbing of both sides but this is handled so as not to give offense. The romance has been tenderly handled and the opening sequence with the two strangers falling in love over the radio is both moving and memorable. David Niven gives a delightful performance and, based on her work here, Kim Hunter is unquestionably in the running for star roles. Excellent characterizations are turned in by Roger Livesey, Bonar Colleano, Marius Goring, Robert Coote, Richard Attenborough and Kathleen Byron, a newcomer with a future. "Stairway to Heaven" is a provocative picture and this, together with David Niven and the fine cast, makes it a fine offering.

SHORT Subject REVIEWS

Northern Rampart (Good)

RKO (63,113) This Is America 18 mins.

This is something of a propaganda film, for it presents most of the good reasons for greater colonization of Alaska. Using a sensitive camera-eye to scan the scenic grandeur of the northland, and accompanied by an excellent musical score, the narrator points up the industrial and agricultural achievements of the pioneers, who have hardly begun to tap the natural resources. Local color abounds, what with totem poles, wild life, and Eskimos clowning for the Secretary of the Interior. Newly-arrived families from the States are shown building their homes, while older residents are seen struggling against the arctic storms which the newcomers have yet to face. The film itself is on a par with others in the series.

Love in Tune (Different)

Para. (K6-2) Pacemaker 9½ mins.

Hal McIntyre and his Orchestra herewith pioneer a new technique in band shorts. Rather than focus on the instrumentalists exclusively, the camera goes afield to present the reactions of various couples or groups to the music. Three numbers are heard, with Thirty Miles an Hour making the easiest transition to live action by means of a record in a juke-box during a soda-store jitterbug session. The younger set will appreciate this short.

The Fistic Mystic (Good)

Para. (E5-7) Popeye 6 mins.

An Oriental magician hynotizes Olive and makes violent love to her. Popeye objects, so the mystic turns him into a parrot and continues his abuse of Olive, involving her in his knife trick. She recovers enough to give Popeye his favorite vegetable, whereupon he comes to life and disposes of the mystic. All ends well as Popeye and Olive return to America on a magic carpet. The laughs are not too frequent, but Popeye fans will be satisfied with this Technicolor cartoon.

Popular Science (Average)

Para. (J6-1) 11 mins.

New aids to barbecue suppers are presented in the first half of this color reel, but they will probably fade from spectator minds as scenes of broiling steaks supplant them. The lowly frankfurter is also shown being cooked by an electronic device. The next sequence shows mechanical men as war-time guinea pigs for research on stratospheric flying conditions. Since reconversion is in this case a plague, it is not surprising to find Fibber McGee and Molly using the robot as a testing device for Fibber's new electronic blanket. The famous radio pair provide a delightful fillip to the reel.

Bath Day (Delightful)

RKO (64,112) Disney Cartoons 7 mins.

Like all kittens, Figaro hates to take a bath, but Minnie overcomes his violent objections with a bubble-bath. Then, be-ribboned and perfumed, Figaro is carried away by the scent of fish from a nearby alley. Investigating, he encounters a mob of tomcats whose leader decides to mangle him, but a lucky accident knocks the leader out. The awed tomcats run away as Figaro parades triumphantly into the waiting arms of Minnie, who immediately decrees another bath. Filmed in Technicolor, this reel will captivate any audience.

RKO (74,202) 9 mins.

Always a lively and laugh-provoking series, this latest "Flashback" maintains that reputation. The first episode shows King Henry III of France and his sister Prunella attempting to solve the castle shortage. Duke Marmalade comes to Prunella's aid, so the King has him killed for interfering. In the second episode, Scarlett O'Amber, a Yankee spy, disrupts the Civil War by giving away the location of the vessel "Ironclad." Gunpowder is rushed to aid the besieged ship, there is a furious sea battle, and the South emerges victorious.

Unusual Occupations (Average)

Para. (L6-1) 10 mins.

Miniature stone replicas of famous cathedrals, the handiwork of Brother Joseph Zoettle of the Benedictine Abbey, Cullman, Alabama, are shown in a natural setting; Mrs. Virginia Gardner of Jenson Beach, Florida, is presented at work on her hobby-turned-business of making sea shells into dolls; Seminole Indians in the Florida Everglades, oblivious to time, carry on their primitive way of life; Swedish mountains provide a handsome backdrop for Rudolph Von Bahr's work as an autogyro pilot who caters to the ski-fanciers. There have been better "Unusual Occupations" than this. The subject is in color.

Dive Hi Champs (Good)

Para. (R5-2) Sportlight 10 mins.

Starting with the "Old Swimming Hole," both country and city versions, continuing through intermediate stages of diving proficiency and concluding with professionals in top form at Deauville Pool, Miami Beach, this film will provide solid support for any program. A three-year-old whiz displays some fancy maneuvers, and the high calibre work of the champions is very easy on the eyes; but the highlight of the short is the diving performance of a group of Canal Zone girls. Photographed to excellent advantage, they seemingly defy the laws of chance in surviving those tremendous dives from Canal Locks.

The Island Fling (Very Good)

Para. (E5-8) Popeye 7 mins.

When Popeye and Olive become shipwrecked on an island where Bluto and his man Friday are in complete control, Bluto makes several plays for Olive but is foiled in each instance by Popeye. At length Popeye overcomes Bluto and returns to civilization with Friday as his servant. This Technicolor reel is loaded with gags and moves at a fast pace.

Col. (8952) Thrills of Music 10 mins.

Machito and his rhumba outfit deliver a conglomeration of the kind of music for which a large segment of the American populace seem to go for in a big way. And they're pretty good at it. The band then presents Betty Reilly, a gorgeous looking blonde, who looks Irish, her name is Irish, but the words are Spanish and the appearance is international! The gal is good. A ballroom dancing team, Paul Vario and Veda, present an interlude of gracefully interpreted precise, dancing. Good as contrast on any dramatic program.

Mousemerized Cat (Fair)

WB (2709 Technicolor Cartoon 7 mins.

Babbitt and Costello, two rats, become involved with hypnotism when Babbitt finds a book on the subject and promptly puts Costello under his spell. The Cat knows a little bit about the subject, however, much to the consternation of the two rats. The aping of the two real movie comedians is not too funny, however.

The Lazy Hunter (Good)

WB (3502) Sports Parade 10 mins.

In the wooded country of Southern California, famous archer Howard Hill is shown with a new technique in his deadly use of the bow and arrow as he follows his game on a beautiful Palomino horse, accompanied by a good looking and intelligent coach dog. Informed by a rancher that a hawk and a coyote are depleting his stock Hill takes off an a hunting trip and kills the two marauders. In Technicolor.

Star Spangled City (Excellent)

WB (3801) Technicolor Adventure 10 mins.

This is a beautifully photographed and intelligently explained travelogue of the nation's capital city at Washington, D. C. The film shows Mount Vernon, the Jefferson, Lincoln and Washington memorials, Ford's Theatre, Arlington Cemetery and many of the government buildings. The Unknown Soldier's Tomb, the White House, the Pentagon Building and other stirring shots are beautifully described and photographed. Excellent for any program with many angles for exploitation.

Looking Down on Hollywood (Good)

Col. (8852) Screen Snapshots 10 mins.

This edition of Screen Snapshots differs from the others in the series in that it presents places, rather than personalities of Hollywood, and in that most of the camera views are seen from above, having been taken either from a blimp or a slow moving plane. Many familiar scenes of Hollywood are shown, including views of most of the movie lots, of Grauman's Chinese Theatre, the broadcasting studios, Hollywood Bowl, the famous "Hollywood Strip" where the well known restaurants and night clubs are located and closes with an interesting series of shots of the Hollywood Park race track, catching a horse race from start to finish, believed to be the first time that such shots from the air ever have been made.

So's Your Antenna (Juvenile)

Col. (8432) All-Star Comedy 17 mins.

Harry Von Zell's "Harry the Hoodlum" radio transcription is overheard by two gangsters who thereupon decide to enlist his aid in a bank robbery. When Harry reneges, the villains shackle him to a stir-crazy murderer and walk out. After a rugged session with the killer, in which Harry is imagined a long-lost elephant friend, the mobsters return only to be captured by Von Zell. The short is pure slapstick, but should go well with the Saturday matinee crowd.

Ten Pin Magic (Fair)

Col. (8802) Sport Reel 10 mins.

The only difference between this bowling short and its many predecessors is that this one introduces a new mechanical pin-setting device which apparently is infallible. Bill Stern's commentary highlights the usual parade of trick bowling shots, and with fifteen million enthusiasts in the country it may be possible to satisfy some members of every audience.

Honeymoon Blues (Dull)

Col. (8422) All-Star Comedy 17 mins.

Private detective Hugh Herbert is assigned to a blackmail case while on his honeymoon. The blackmailer turns out to be a mercenary woman who is led to believe that Hugh is a rich oil man. Herbert gets the letters, only to be discovered in the woman's apartment by both her boy friend and his own wife. Hugh's boss comes to the rescue with a full explanation, but Hugh promptly falls asleep and his wife resorts to a game of solitaire. This short lacks pace, and even Hugh Herbert fans will find it difficult to take.

Surrender (Good)

Col. (8653) Community Sing 10½ mins.

With Dick Leibert at the organ, and the Song Spinners to lead them, any audience should enjoy singing along. In addition to Surrender, the reel includes There's No One But You, Five Minutes More, Who Told You That Lie, and the novelty song, My Fickle Eye.

Narration Assignments

Two narration assignments have been made at Warners by Gordon Hollingshead, short subjects producer. Alan Hale will do the sound track for "The Circus Horse," while Truman Bradley has been set for a like chore on "Action in Sports," both in Technicolor.

Eager Showmanship

Specially designed lobby art, plus advance and current newspaper space, were used by Manager James Wiggins of the Plaza Theatre, El Paso, to sell the Warner cartoon, "Eager Beaver."

MOTHER WORE TIGHTS (Fox). Technicolor. Principals: Betty Grable, Dan Dailey, Jr., Mona Freeman. Director, Walter Lang. Plot: Back in 1900, a young girl joins a vaudeville troupe, in spite of family opposition, and marries the featured comedian. Through the years, their act is a huge success, and two daughters are born to them. The girls attend an exclusive boarding school, where the older one is ashamed of her dancing parents. However, when she falls in love and graduates with honors, she lets her parents know that she is really proud of them.

MILLIE'S DAUGHTER (Col.) Drama. Principals: Gladys George, Gay Nelson, Paul Campbell. Director, Sidney Salkow. Plot: An unhappy girl runs away to visit her mother, whom she has been forbidden to see. She finds her mother living on the fringe of society, a parasite who earns her living catering to wealthy social climbers. Fearing that the girl will fall into the habits she herself has acquired, the mother deliberately becomes the victim of an embezzlement, and the girl promises to return to her respectable home.

BOOMERANG (Fox). Drama. Principals: Dana Andrews, Frank Latimore, Jane Wyatt. Director, Elia Kazan. Plot: An honest state's attorney attempts to solve the baffling

This information should be filed for reference when a picture is played in order that the theatreman may quote classifications of recognized reviewing committees independent of the industry when parents, guardians or local groups inquire as to the suitability of the picture for children and young people.

Feature	National Board of Review	Schools M. P. Committee	National Legion of Decency	General Federation of Women's Clubs
Lady Luck	.....	.....	Adults	Adult
My Brother Talks to Horses.	Family	8-14	Gen. Patronage	.....
Song of the South	Family*	8-14	Gen. Patronage	Family
Wanted for Murder	Mature	.....	Adults	.....

NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW: Founded in 1909 "to represent the interests of the motion picture public," maintains a Review Committee consisting of some 300 men and women of all ages, "representing a cross-section of public taste." Designations: Family—14 years of age and up (recommendations for age groups under 14 by Schools M. P. Committee of the Board); Mature—18 years and up. *—Especially worth seeing.

SCHOOLS MOTION PICTURE COMMITTEE. A committee of the National Board of Review which "represents groups of parents and teachers from public and private schools," whose purpose is to select pictures "suitable for age groups 8-12 and 12-14."

NATIONAL LEGION OF DECENCY: Committee of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae reviews pictures and publishes its moral classifications for guidance of members of the Legion—composed of those members of the Catholic Church who join the Legion Designations: Unobjectionable for General Patronage; Unobjectionable for Adults; Objectionable in Part; Condemned.

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS. The motion picture committee is headed by Mrs. Arretus F. Burt, Chairman, of St. Louis. Two reviewing committees are maintained—Mrs. Harry Lilly, New York, Chairman Eastern Committee; Mrs. John Stearns Thayer, Los Angeles, Chairman Western Committee. Designations: Family—8 years and up; Mature Family—14 years and up; Junior and Senior High School Students and Adults: Senior High School Students and Adults. —Exceptional.

murder of a priest. Believing that justice is more important than politics, he works to uncover evidence which will free a man whom he believes is innocent, although his re-election hinges upon a conviction. At the trial, the evidence is so inconclusive that the judge dismisses the case.

WEB OF DANGER (Rep.) Drama. Principals: Adele Mara, Bill Kennedy, Damian O'Flynn. Director, Philip Ford. Plot: This tells of the problems that beset a bridge crew in their endeavors to complete a bridge span to enable marooned families to cross to safety, and the rivalry of two men in their work and also for the affections of a pretty girl who is stranded at the construction camp.

IT'S ALL THE RAGE!

It set a new all-time Sunday record at the big Capitol, N. Y.

It set a new all-time Saturday night record there also.

It broke the house record in its Los Angeles opening.

It beat many top current hits in its first 27 test engagements.

It is being booked in the biggest first-run theatres in the land.

M-G-M re-introduces Ingrid Bergman • Robert Montgomery in "Rage In Heaven" with George Sanders • Lucile Watson • Oscar Homolka • Screen Play by Christopher Isherwood and Robert Thoeren • Based on the Novel by James Hilton • Directed by W. Thank you!

The thousands of exhibitors and others who cooperated so splendidly in our industry's 1946 March of Dimes will be gratified to read the accompanying final, certified report just completed by the accountants.

Although the final tabulations took considerable time, the actual payment of monies was made to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis long ago, and this money helped greatly in fighting the polio epidemics of the past summer.

Only the unselfish, whole-hearted efforts and support of thousands in our industry could have brought about such wonderful results.

On behalf of the Executive Committee, the State Chairmen and myself, may I express our deep appreciation for your help in this good cause.

Cordially,

National Chairman

November 15, 1946

National Motion Pictures Committee for March of Dimes,
New York 19, N. Y.

Dear Sirs:

We have examined the accounts of your Committee relating to MARCH OF DIMES 1946 CAMPAIGN for the period to November 14, 1946 and reported to you in detail on November 15, 1946. The report contained the following summary:

Total collections		$5,615,907.94
Less—State expenses reported		24,207.20
Net collections to be accounted for		$5,591,700.74
Available for:
Counties	$2,797,094.06
National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc.	2,794,606.68
		$5,591,700.74

Expenses were as follows:

State expenses	$24,207.20
Cost—13,410 Special Trailers (incl. postage)	75,259.85
Other expenses	27,681.06
Total Expenses	$127,148.11

Based on the total collections the ratio of expenses was 2.264% and excepting the appeal trailer the ratio was .924%.

In our opinion, the above tabulation sets forth correctly the total collections as reported and the total expenses of the 1946 campaign as recorded and accounted for in the Committee's records of cash receipts and disbursements for the period to November 14, 1946.

Respectfully submitted,
MILLER, DONALDSON AND COMPANY

(NOTE: The Committee expresses its appreciation to Miller, Donaldson & Co. for its gratis services.)

FOOD FOR THANKSGIVING THOUGHTS

SHOWMANSHIP STILL LIVES. Two "world premieres" in the best top-class tradition of American showmanship took place this week right in the same town—New York—when the 20th-Fox forces brought to a tremendously successful conclusion their great campaign for the opening of "The Razor's Edge" at the Roxy, and Sam Goldwyn's eminently able publicity and advertising experts scored a real bulls-eye with their distinguished handling of Goldwyn's very distinguished picture, "The Best Years of Our Lives."

We can all rejoice in these notable demonstrations because they are not merely isolated instances that showmanship still lives in this industry but also epitomize in spectacular fashion the vigor and virility of the showmanship brains and resourcefulness of the industry's manpower.

This vigorous showmanship always was and is vastly important to the prosperity and progress of the motion picture, as a commerce and an art. (You can have no vigorous art without large audiences to appreciate and encourage it.) But important as has been merchandising of the shows in the past and present, in the very near future this element will be the factor that will decide an issue that the industry seems certain to face.

We are not talking on the pessimistic but the optimistic side when we echo remarks, based on reliable trade indicators, about the drop in attendance and predictions of further recessions.

However, there must be a very general application of the practice of hard work—sweat—as well as inspiration in executing showmanship at all theatres everywhere for all types and kinds of pictures.

In connection with this we wish to recommend again to those very few who are not faithful readers of our "Theatre Management" department the article by Jack Jackson in this issue. You will find a valuable bag of showmanship tricks that you immediately will recognize as "surefire" in that excellent article. And as a further recommendation, might we also urge that you devote even more attention in the future than you have in the past to study of the service material in our "Management" and "Selling the Picture" sections every week.

OLDER AND LIVELIER TOO. High up among the things for which we have reason to be thankful is the kind of theatre operation that continues to progress and improve and be refined through the work and accomplishments of our top-rung theatre organizations. We are reminded of this by the fact that Wilby-Kincey circuit now is celebrating its twentieth anniversary. Think of it—a fifth of a century of life and activity and now more life, more vigor more real youthful "bounce" than at any time in the history of a great showmanship organization.

We venture to say that there are no business outfits in any field of commercial endeavor in the world today that have the advantage of a more intelligent, more realistic and more able leadership and direction from the high command than the W-K outfit under R. B. Wilby and H. F. Kincey. Here are real he-men under the measure of any standard you want to apply. As personalities they have color and personal magnetism. As business men they have the flair for vision, decision and organization. As showmen they personify those things which account for the great stature the motion picture has attained as an entertainment for the masses.

To Bob Wilby and to "Mike" Kincey and to their great organization and all its members, our prettiest bow and best wishes for many more very happy anniversaries.

THE INDOMITABLE GOLDWYN. From what we read in the papers reporting the interview Sam Goldwyn gave to the trade paper boys in New York this week, the reporters were seeing a Sam Goldwyn as vigorous, as doughty and as indomitable as of old. That "old" just doesn't belong in talking of Goldwyn. However, Sam has been such a colorful figure for so many years that he seems a legend while being very much the dynamic force of this business.

Goldwyn is only one of many men in his field—production—who belongs in the gallery to which we can look when counting up the things to be thankful for this Thanksgiving season. However, Sam this week again lived up to his reputation for saying the provocative as well as the controversial thing in his cry of welcome to the sharpening competition which British producers are giving Hollywood.

Goldwyn can make good pictures, as we all very well know, and so can other Hollywood producers. If he and they are going to try even harder to make even better pictures by reason of the hotter competition from Britain, then let's all say thanks to Britain.

NATIONAL NEWSREEL

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

COAL—Technically it may not be a strike. But bituminous coal mining has practically stopped as the miner followers of John L. Lewis refused to work without a contract. Coal shortages, which are certain to follow again, threatened principally the areas east of the Mississippi and north of the Potomac where coal is the principal fuel for heat and electricity; but exhibitors this time seemed in better position to meet the situation than they were last May when Lewis' miners were out on strike. Many theatres reported auxiliary standby equipment to generate light and power; many more had shifted from coal heat to fuel oil.

A series of brownout orders covering some 23 states was expected to be issued to conserve coal.

EXHIBITORS' ORGANIZATIONS—Directors of the American Theatres Association in Washington this week voted to support the Red Cross and The March of Dimes drives by urging their members to give trailer time and help with advertising, exploitation and the like. No collections were to be taken. The ATA set its annual meeting for April in Chicago.

North Central Allied this week voted to affiliate with Allied States and to fight high percentages.

From Detroit Wednesday the Michigan Independent Theatre Owners called upon the Conference of Independent Exhibitor Associations to hold a general meeting in New York with distributor representatives in an effort to get better terms on pictures and to get the backlog of product put on the market.

The Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, Inc., also on Wednesday in Indianapolis went on record against unfavorable publicity and urged producers not to cooperate with columnists or commentators who broadcast ideas harmful to the industry. Trueman T. Rembush was re-elected president, with Sam W. Neall as vice-president; Marc J. Wolf, treasurer; William Carroll, executive secretary; Christine Kock, secretary.

STUDIO STRIKE—John Keenan came to Hollywood from Chicago to serve as an arbitrator for the film industry's jurisdictional strikes. Last week John Keenan went back to Chicago.

That train trip home probably best illustrates the studio strike situation which has seen confusion erupt into violence. The Los Angeles Grand Jury is probing the bombing of several non-strikers' homes; Conference of Studio Unions President Herbert K. Sorrell and 13 associates were charged with "criminal conspiracy" in a Municipal Court and bonded each at $5,000; some 700 strikers were arrested for mass picketing, 400 of whom staged a one-day hunger strike before release. Labor peace seemed nowhere in sight.

In Washington it was reported that the FBI and postal inspectors were investigating Hollywood bombings, particularly of mail boxes.

TAXES—Local or state admission taxes loomed in several more localities this week with Chicago, New Jersey, Menasha, Wis., considering such levies and with a tax committee in Iowa recommending a two per cent ticket tax and the suggestion that such tax rights be reserved by the state.

But in Denver, few citizens voting in a poll conducted by the Post, suggested theatre taxes as additional revenue sources and in Sedalia, Mo., the three theatres which had closed in protest against a gross tax on receipts, reopened when the city council removed that tax, but increased their annual license from $100 to $500 and placed an admission tax, to be paid by the patrons.

APPEAL?—To appeal or not to appeal, seemed to be a moot question before attorneys for the American Theatres Association, the Southern California Theatre Owners Association and some 20 exhibitors of the Confederacy of Southern Associations. All had tried to intervene in the anti-trust suit in New York. All had been denied the right to intervene at the moment but had their briefs accepted as friends of the court and apparently had been promised a hearing when the decree was written. John G. Jackson, representing CSA clients, said that since competitive bidding was the only feature attacked by his clients, there might not be any need to appeal the denial of intervention should the final decree not contain compulsory bidding. The SCTOA was to have the question considered by its Board.

PRODUCTION AND DISTRIBUTION—Louis K. and Joseph C. Ansell, who operate theatres in St. Louis, this week announced that they had formed a company to produce independently at Ensenada, Mexico, with the first picture of a two-picture-a-year schedule to be "Women in the Night," directed by William Rowland. The outfit is temporarily located in Hollywood's Knickerbocker Hotel.

..McGraw Hill this week announced that it had entered the 16-mm. educational production and distribution field.

Monogram sold 1946-47 product to the Griffith Theatres, Tri-States, S. W. Craver and the Smith and Beilder circuit.

The News Spotlight

SAMUEL GOLDWYN, whose latest picture, "The Best Years of Our Lives" had its world premiere on Nov. 21 at New York's Astor Theatre.

BARNEY BALABAN, whose efforts in behalf of racial and religious harmony were honored on Nov. 21 at a dinner attended by over 1,000.

DARRYL ZANUCK, whose latest opulent opus "The Razor's Edge" had its world premiere at the giant Roxy Theatre, in New York on Nov. 19.

Seymour Nebenzal

(The Man on the Cover)

Producer of Nero Films whose pictures for distribution by United Artists have run up grosses that place him among the most consistent makers of money-pictures now turning out films in Hollywood. Nebenzal's most recent release, "Whistle Stop" ranks up high on the list of UA top-grossing films for 1946, and its predecessor, "Summer Storm" scored handsomely at the box-office. His new production is "The Chase." Nebenzal made his beginning as a producer in Europe, where he turned out several features which won great popularity in the world markets. These included "M" and "Mayerling."

'Killers' Holds Over From Coast to Coast

Southern colonels and downeast Yankees vied with sun-tanned Californians this week in giving Universal's "The Killers" extended playing time. The film has five weeks in Detroit, three in Milwaukee, Minneapolis and Boston, two in Louisville, Ky., Springfield, Mass., Glendale, Calif.; St. Paul, Trenton, Lawrence, Mass.; Wichita, Berkeley, Providence and a two-house day-and-date booking at Pasadena.

"Dark Mirror" hit three weeks in Baltimore and Los Angeles, where it is playing five theatres, five in New York, two in Toronto, Richmond, Erie, San Diego and five in Chicago.

Warners' "Big Sleep" entered its sixth week in Chicago and "Deception" held on for a sixth week in New York.

Bergman in Radio Forum on Films

American films are not a photograph of wishful thinking, Maurice A. Bergman, Universal's eastern Advertising and Publicity Director, declared in a forum conducted over WOR in New York Tuesday.

Bergman, who participated in the forum with Bessie Beatty as moderator, Playwright John Gassney, Chief Psychiatrist Dr. Sam Parker of the New York City Medical Department, and Edward Linderman, professor of social philosophy at Columbia, insisted that American films emphasized economic wishes.

MGM Adds 6 Field Men to Reprint Division

MGM this week added six field representatives to the reprint and importation division of its sales department. The names of the six, together with their territories and headquarters, follow:

'5th Avenue' First Release

Monogram will release "It Happened on Fifth Avenue" under the banner of its newly created Allied Artists Association, it was reported in Hollywood this week. Allied Artists is an organization which will work through the Monogram distributing outlet to market high-budget pictures.

Movies—For Free!

Wyandotte, Ky., may be a community of only 12 persons, but it has something that those city slickers from the big towns ain't got—free movies.

It all started when General Store Owner J. T. Kennedy decided to do something about summer trade, which had fallen off. So he rigged up an outdoor movie and showed films free once a week. Crowds came from the surrounding area. Now Kennedy has moved the hay out of his barn and converted it into a theatre where each Wednesday night he shows movies—for free.

Showmen Profit by Experience As Coal Shortage Again Looms

Many Have Special Power Units; Shift to Oil Heat As Result of Last Strike

Faced with the prospect of coal shortages, the nation's theatres in those areas where coal is the main fuel for heat and power, seemed to have profited by past experience and appeared in better position this week to meet power and heat curtailment than they had been during the past shortage in May.

Exhibitor sources did not minimize the damage to business that possible restrictions on coal or hours of operations might do. But many of them had provided auxiliary generators to take care of their power.

In Chicago, which during the past shortage faced one of the worst closing threats known to theatres, the city seemed mainly ready to meet electrical emergencies with auxiliary generating equipment. Balaban and Katz, the Essaness, the Great Lakes Circuit, and Warners neighborhood houses have Diesel engines ready for use. The independents, however, are not so well situated.

30 Days Coal

The Edison Company has coal supplies for about 30 days of ordinary electrical services and to date there have been no plans formulated for restricting theatres. A brownout however, may be ordered.

In St. Louis exhibitors used the summer season to stock up on coal for heating. But the recent cool spell made a dent in coal piles and houses which have small coal bin space have only about enough coal to last for 30 days.

Fanchon and Marco first run houses and about half their second run houses depend upon oil for heating. Some independent theatres use gas heating. Several have emergency lighting provisions.

The Union Electric Company of Missouri, which serves most of the houses, is thought to be able to carry on even if coal gets low through extending the use of two of its hydro electrical plants. This company was estimated in mid November to have five weeks' coal supply on hand.

The Laclede Gas Light Company has about six weeks coal in storage and through a greater use of natural gas in its gas mixtures, possibly could conserve the coal it uses to manufacture gas.

Transportation does not loom as a major trouble in St. Louis since street cars have been largely replaced by busses and there is a supply of the old double deck type busses to be used if an electrical output cut should stop what remaining street car service there is.

Cleveland's utility companies report about 30 days coal supply with hospitals, schools and office buildings scheduled to get preference in case of a coal shortage.

The first run houses get their heat from a municipal heat plant and do not appear to be worried about a shutdown. The subsequent run houses report good coal stocks. None have electrical generators to serve if power is shaved down and all are prepared to close if it is for the public good. During the last coal shortage however, Cleveland declared its theatres essential so that large groups could share in their heat.

Four hundred and fifty houses in Wisconsin and upper Michigan seemed in little fear that any coal shortage faced them.

The Wisconsin Electric Power Company sees no cause for worry. Outside of officially imposed restrictions which might be placed upon electricity, Milwaukee has some 6,880,000 tons of soft coal which were shipped to its docks, William F. Ehmann, manager of the Wisconsin Coal Bureau, Inc., said. The total tonnage received this year is said to be nearly a quarter of a million tons greater than for the same period in 1945.

Fox Wisconsin Theatres saw no threat of cuts, though intimated a voluntary brownout would be put into effect if needed. The houses are all equipped with standby generating units and are supplied by heating from a central steam supply.

Harry Perlewitz, business manager of the Independent Theatre Owners of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, which operate some 80 houses in Milwaukee, some 300 outside of the city and some 40 in the upper peninsula of Michigan saw no grounds for any shut downs. About 10 per cent of his houses have auxiliary electric systems, others get heat from office buildings.

Philadelphia's electrical companies have a 30 day coal supply and the Public Utility Commission reports that it is ready to put coal conservation measures into effect but will rely preferably on voluntary cooperation. This may mean a repetition of last year's curtailment of electricity for signs and transportation.

Harrisburg OK

In Harrisburg, Penn., all theatres depend on city steam for their heat supply. The coal situation is reported excellent since the coal is dredged directly from the Susquehanna river which flows past the city. The Pennsylvania Power and Light Company dredges the river for the coal and reports at least a two-year supply on hand in mountainous banks at the present time.

Albany, N. Y., does not feel electricity will be affected by any coal shortage though the companies are down to a two weeks supply.

Win Tax Fight

The man who makes news by biting the dog had a bit of competition this week as the three theatres in Sedalia, Mo., won their 14-month shutdown strike against a gross tax on their receipts.

The exhibitors did not come out hands-down winners in the scrap however, for the city council raised the annual license fee from $100 to $500 per theatre and passed a flat one-cent admission tax on each ticket sold. The latter tax will be paid by the patron.

When the municipal council first passed a gross receipt tax, Fox Midwest closed their Fox and Liberty theatres in protest and J. T. Ghosen, an independent running the third theatre in that city, also closed.

Exhibitors' Screens Ready for 'Important' Government Films

Theatremen of All Areas Attend Washington Meet; Set 'Planning' Committee

That the film industry generally and the exhibition branch particularly is anxious to cooperate with government agencies in bringing messages of public import to people via theatre screens was demonstrated Tuesday in Washington when more than 50 representatives of motion picture business assembled at the White House in response to an invitation from Reconversion Director John R. Steelman for discussion of ways and means of channeling public information films to theatres.

Following addresses by Steelman, Under-Secretary of State Will Clayton, General Omar Bradley and Attorney General Tom Clark, the meeting named a 10-man committee to "study" possibilities of closer industry-Government relations in screening these message films. The committee, which held its first meeting in New York Thursday, includes:

Aware of Responsibilities

Exhibitors, keenly aware of the responsibility involved in giving screen time to message films through experiences during the war, and after, dominated in numbers and in influence as well, the entire meeting. Of the 61 acceptances to Steelman's invitation a total of 40 were from exhibitors.

Consensus of the expressions in informal discussion by those attending the meeting was that any pictures selected for distribution must be in the public interest and free from political or controversial elements; exhibitors must be free to show the particular reel or reels or reject them in accordance with individual discretion and knowledge of what the patronage of the particular theatre will accept; costs of production, necessary raw stock and prints must be financed and furnished by the government.

Many Present

Included among the exhibitors and exhibitor organization representatives who attended the meeting were: John Q. Adams, Interstate Circuit, Dallas; C. B. Akers, Griffith Theatres, Oklahoma City; Benj. Berger, No. Central Allied, Minneapolis; Harry Brandt, ITOA, New York; Robert Coyne, ATA, New York; Wm. Crockett, ATA, Virginia Beach, Va.; Guthrie W. Crowe, Kentucky Association of Theatre Owners, Louisville; Si Fabian, ATA, New York; Henry Griffing, Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, Oklahoma City; H. D. Hearn, TO of North and South Carolina, Charlotte; Herman Hunt, ATA, Cincinnati; Mack Jackson, S. E. Theatre Owners Association, Alexander City; W. K. Jenkins, Georgia Theatre Co., Atlanta; Harry Kalmine, Warner Bros. Theatres; Fred Kent, State Theatres, Jacksonville; Edward Lachman, Allied New Jersey, Boonton, N. J.; Herman Levy, MPTOA; Roy Martin, Martin Theatres, Columbus, Ga.; John R. Marony, Interstate Circuit, Dallas; Lee W. Newbury, Allied States, Manasquan, N. J.; E. V. Richards, Richards-Paramount, New Orleans; J. Edward Shugrue, ATA, New York; Kermit C. Stengel, Crescent Amusement Co., Nashville; Jess L. Stern, CIE, New York.

Representatives of distribution and production present included: M. J. Clofine, News of the Day; Francis Harmon, MPAA; Donald M. Nelson, Society of Independent Motion Picture Prooducers; William T. Powers, 20th-Fox; Frederick Pride, 20th-Fox; Charles M. Reagan, Paramount Pictures; A. J. Richard, Paramount News; Wm. F. Rodgers, Loew's, Inc.

Hollywood's 'Laziness', Exhibitors Who 'Go Fishing' Irk Goldwyn

Hollywood's "fat-cat complacency" and exhibitors who "go fishing" came in for the blunt censure of Producer Samuel Goldwyn in New York Monday at a mass press interview.

Goldwyn's comments on exhibitors was not in his prepared statement, which lambasted Hollywood for getting too "far away from the average person" and ignoring the problems of today.

It came after Goldwyn had recommended fewer pictures as a solution to some of the things he regarded as ills. Asked if exhibitors were not now complaining of the picture scarcity and whether fewer pictures would not hurt theatres, Goldwyn said:

"The exhibitors have lived for the last four or five years. They've had a helluva good time. They had a lot of pictures. They made a lot of money. They never gave a picture the run it ought to get. It was a buyer's market. That day is over.

"The exhibitors, most of them, have made it their main job to buy a picture as cheap as they can and then go fishing. If fewer pictures are made, they will be better."

Goldwyn denied that long first runs hurt a picture in its subsequent runs, declaring that the contrary was a fact. With fewer pictures, he said, first runs would remain in the extended class and subsequent runs would have to be extended to "one week instead of two days."

"With few exceptions," he said "what most of Hollywood doesn't recognize is that the American people are going through a postwar emotional reaction. They are faced with many problems, personal and worldwide, and what they want is not pure escapism in their pictures but some reflection of their own emotional turmoil. That's why I believe now, more than ever, that a picture, first of all, must be entertaining. But beyond that, it must have something to say."

Asked if current subjects such as jurisdictional strikes would make acceptable screen material, Goldwyn replied that any topic which might get reaction would make good screen material if presented in an entertaining way.

"Hollywood," he added, "is dry of things to say because it has gotten too far away from

Admissions in General Rise, Filmack Observes

A general rise in theatre admissions of from two to three cents for children and from five to eight cents for adults, seems to have taken place throughout the country during October and the first 10 days of November, Filmack Trailers of Chicago reported this week.

Filmack based its observation on the fact that the bulk of its special trailer business during those months were announcements of higher admissions. Reasons advanced by the exhibitors were increased film rentals, higher salaries and higher operation costs.

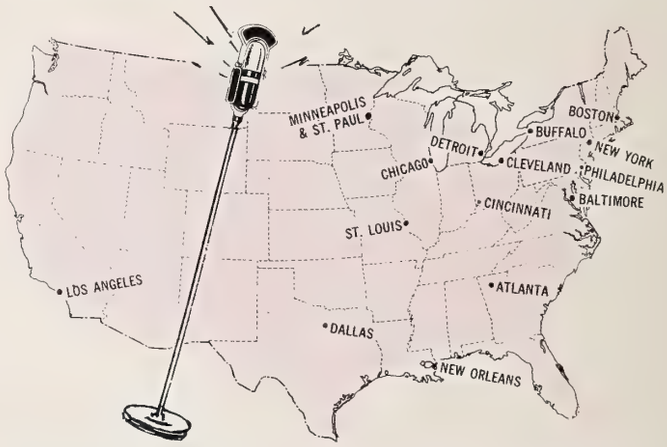
Magnificent Doll

Backed by a pre-selling campaign as big as the picture itself....

NATIONAL MAGAZINES

THE millions of readers of Life, Look, Ladies Home Journal and Woman's Home Companion, have seen the beautiful full page two color advertisements announcing MAGNIFICENT DOLL.

Each magazine ran a different type of advertisement, directed in copy and art approach to the individual type of readership that magazine has.



IN A tremendous tie-up with the Lipton Tea Company, four color advertisements on MAGNIFICENT DOLL will appear during the months of December and January in two issues of Life, Look, This Week, Ladies Home Journal, McCall's, Better Homes and Gardens, Country Gentleman, Family Circle and Southern Agriculture.

This is one of the most comprehensive tie-up campaigns ever accorded any motion picture and guarantees readership in your city wherever you are.

NATIONAL RADIO

FROM early November through December, through national hookups and local announcements, your audiences will be hearing about MAGNIFICENT DOLL.

For three consecutive weeks in advance of the premier playdate, MAGNIFICENT DOLL will be the featured on the "Ladies Be Seated" program, one of the highest rating afternoon programs on the air, with an estimated daily listening audience of four million people. It is carried over the American Broadcasting Company through more than 200 stations.

The key of this promotion will be a radio search, concentrated in twenty key cities, for the identification of a "Magnificent Doll" by the program listeners.

WINDOW STREAMERS AND ADS

More than 200,000 window streamers are being posted in grocery stores throughout the country announcing the rules for this unusual contest.

Special newspaper advertisements announcing the tie-up and contest will be run in all the newspapers in the twenty cities used for the contest.

200 STATION LOCAL TIE-UP

In another tie-up with the Dolly Madison Cake Company, newspaper and radio spot announcements will be used in advance of your opening in all the territories where the merchandise is available. It is anticipated that more than 200 local stations will participate in this program, directly tied up with your playdate wherever possible.

. . . a magnificent campaign . . .

NATIONAL PROMOTION

MORE than 5,000 24-sheets will be posted by Royal Crown Cola during November and December in a tie-up with MAGNIFICENT DOLL (see above).

In addition, car cards will be used in all key cities, giving a combined estimated circulation in excess of forty million. Truck banners will be displayed by all Crown Cola delivery trucks.

NATIONAL FASHION SHOW

The famous Lilly Dache, creator of the hats worn by Ginger Rogers in MAGNIFICENT DOLL, displayed these creations in her national fashion show in New York on October 15th. Fashion editors and buyers from all over the country attended the show and it was covered by newspaper and radio syndicates. Leading fashion merchants in thirty-one key cities will display these hats in their stores and windows.

NEWSPAPER WOMEN TIE-UP

In a country-wide tie-up with Theta Sigma Phi, national newspaper woman's fraternity, Ginger Rogers will present a silver-plated typewriter to the winner of the title "The Most Magnificent Doll among American Newspaper Women." The anticipated publicity from this contest will reach into every city and town in the United States.

ICE CREAM TIE-UP

500,000 posters, window strips and give-aways will be distributed in connection with the far reaching tie-up with the International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers announcement of the "Magnificent Doll Sundae," commemorating the fact that Dolly Madison was the first White House lady to serve ice cream.

DAY AND DATE CAMPAIGNS

FOUR different and distinct types of newspaper advertisements have been tested for their penetration values in more than a dozen typical situations. Each proved highly successful and will be made the basis for a rounded campaign to suit your particular requirements.

Above are the four best ads used. The advertisement used in Campaign "C" will be made up into a full page newspaper size as the key ad in the special hand-tailored campaigns that will herald the key city openings. These campaigns will set the pattern for all subsequent runs.

The majority of theatres have converted to oil or are about to do so. Transportation is no great problem since automobile service is considered adequate.

In Boston operators are frank to confess worry over a possible coal shortage. Only a small percentage of theatres are heated by other means than coal and electricity is also a problem. The theatres called a meeting this week to discuss emergency measures, but no plans were announced. Fuel Administrator Worden Covel said that no definite campaign could be planned until the full extent of the anticipated shortage was known.

Washington, D. C. anticipated a brownout and curtailed theatre activities not only in the capital city but along the eastern shores.

The Virginia State Corporation Commission was studying conservation measures. Last year it ordered approximately two-thirds of the state's theatres closed.

Whole sections of the country will not be directly affected by a coal shortage. Situations where fuel oil or gas provides the greater part of the fuel for heat, or where water power or some other fuel other than coal is used to generate electricity, are not expected to feel the pinch.

Roughly speaking the affected areas would be everything east of the Mississippi River and north of the Potomac, excepting large sections of New England where water power is used. Ohio, New Mexico, Wyoming and Indiana are dependent upon coal. Montana, Idaho and Minnesota for the most part use water power. The Pacific coast uses both water power and fuel oil. Louisiana and Texas use natural gas. Central New York and the Buffalo area use water power.

the average person. That comes of being too rich, which has led to laziness.

"That's why I'm glad that British films are gaining popularity. I think that they may provide the threat that Hollywood needs to stir itself out of its fat-cat complacency.

"I think that they (British pictures) get nearer to reality than most pictures made in Hollywood. . . . Rank has done a very smart thing. He is working with individual units. No large companies making a lot of pictures. Every one is going on their own."

Goldwyn said he was not exempting himself from some of the criticism leveled at Hollywood.

"Include me in," he laughed. "I come from Hollywood. I love Hollywood. I want Hollywood to keep its position. For the first time we're getting some competition. We're going to meet it."

Asks 1st-Run Films

Thomas McConnell, attorney in the Jackson Park Theatre case which made industry history, this week appeared in the area again representing Nate Barger of the Rialto Theatre and asking Chicago exchanges for first-run films.

Mail Box Bombings Result In Coast Inquiry by Government

County Grand Jury Opens Investigation of Violence As Studio Strike Continues

Mail box bombings in Hollywood this week had apparently aroused the interest of the United States Government with reports from Washington, D. C., stating that both the FBI and postal inspectors were investigating the bombings.

At the same time the confused studio labor situation appeared no nearer solution and the Los Angeles County Grand Jury launched an investigation into terroristic acts said to have arisen out of the strike.

The grand jury inquiry was in turn preceded by a criminal conspiracy complaint filed at the behest of the district attorney's office in the Municipal Court against Herbert K. Sorrell, president of the striking Conference of Studio Unions, and 13 associates. All those charged, with the exception of one who was ill, surrendered immediately. Bail was fixed at $5,000 each.

Mass Arrests

Earlier mass arrests of CSU striking members until approximately 700 were in jail pending bond, resulted in a one-day hunger strike staged by some 400. Bond later was provided by a bonding company and some more were released on their own recognizance.

Hope for arbitration floundered, however, as Joseph D. Keenan, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, who came out to Hollywood upon invitation to be an arbitrator, returned to Chicago.

"The stumbling block at this time," Keenan said, "is the inability of some of the unions involved to agree on the application of the Dec. 26, 1945, AFL arbitration award."

It was said that the FBI might be investigating complaints of civil liberties violations while the postal inspectors apparently were looking into unexplained mail box bombings of such industry personalities as Bing Crosby, Allan Dwan and Donald Nelson, President of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers.

The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes signed a contract for its dissatisfied costumers' union, procuring wage increases of 35 to 50 per cent and raising the average wage from $88.45 weekly to $133. This move was thought to have settled a rebellion brewing in that Local's ranks.

Charge Fourteen

Charged with Sorrell in the Municipal Court complaint are: Carl Head, Painters' Union business agent; James Skelton, carpenters' business agent; Edward Higby, carpenters' picket dispatcher; Edward Gilbert, business agent, Screen Set Designers, Local 1421, of the Painters' Union, Edward Dridlik, member of the set designers' union; Matthew Mattison, president of the Story Analysts; Roy Tindal, local president of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; Andrew Lawless and Louis Whitman, CSU pickets; Russell McKnight, Norval Crutcher and John R. Martin, of Technicians' Local 683 (this is the IATSE local which refused to cross CSU picket lines despite orders to do so); Averill Berman, radio commentator who is a CSU supporter.

A total of $31,000 in rewards has been offered to date for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the bombers. The offers were made up by the IATSE, the Los Angeles City Councils, several individual donors, and a total of $5,000 jointly contributed by Columbia, Loew's, Paramount, RKO, Samuel Goldwyn, 20th Century-Fox, Universal-International, Republic, Technicolor, Hal Roach and Warner Bros.

Publicists Ask Raise

The Screen Publicists Guild Tuesday night in Hollywood voted to approve the recommendation of its board for a five-day week and a 20 per cent wage increase, based on increased living costs.

Urges U. S. Law Against Jurisdictional Strikes

One of the first steps taken by the new Congress should be legislation prohibiting jurisdictional strikes, Byron Price, board chairman of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, told a luncheon of the American Automobile Association last Thursday in San Francisco.

Byron Price

Price, who termed jurisdictional strikes a "national disgrace," said the American Federation of Labor's refusal to outlaw such strikes had "booted away the last, best hope that stern legislative action would be unnecessary."

"The only remaining hope," he continued, "of a nationwide solution affecting all industries now lies on the doorstep of Congress and the Administration.

"To avoid involvement with other explosive labor issues, where the public interest may be more in doubt, the legislation should deal with the jurisdictional strike and nothing else."

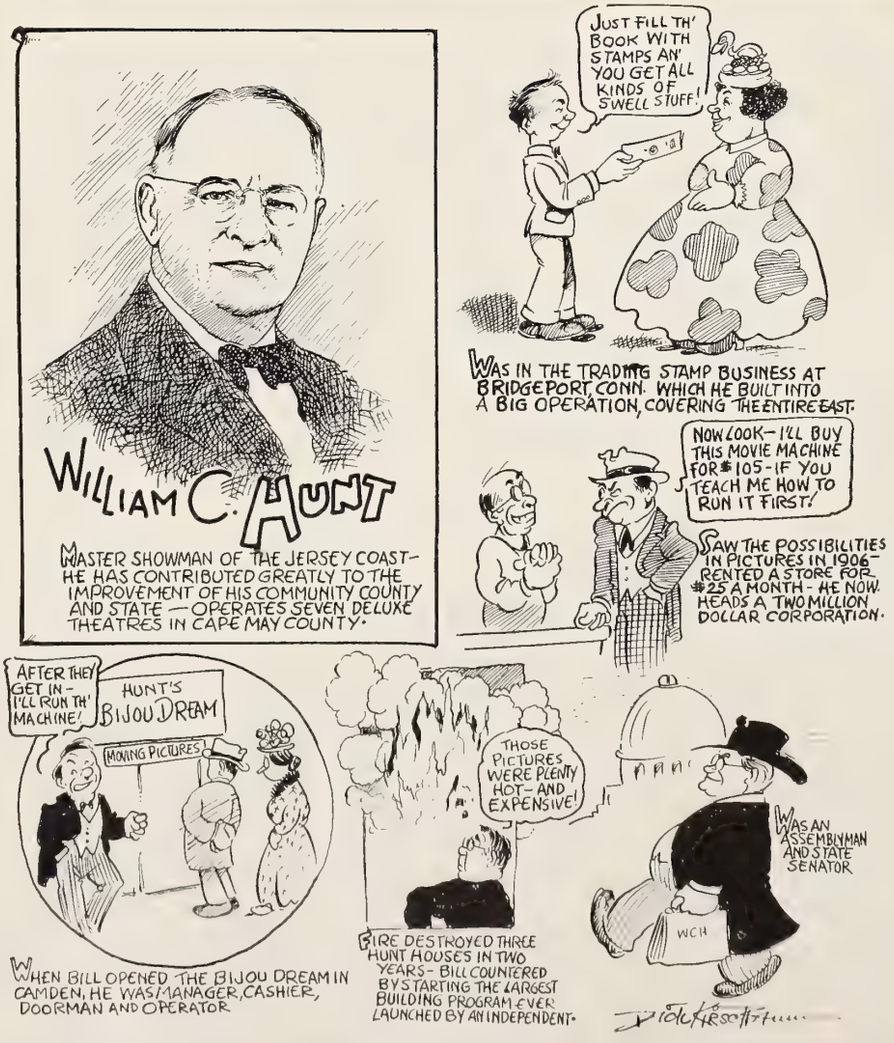
Max E. Youngstein, advertising and publicity director for Eagle-Lion Films, returned to New York this week.

By using almost every one of the seven basic arts—drama, music, painting, poetry, dance, architecture and sculpture, the screen has created an eighth art which deserves a high place, Albert S. Howson, scenario editor and director of censorship for Warner Bros., told the Motion Picture Course of the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

Irving Maas, vice-president and general manager of the Motion Picture Export Association, arrived in Berlin this week on the second leg of his Continental tours. Following conferences with military officials in Berlin and inspection of the facilities handling the distribution of U. S. product in the American-occupied zones, Mass will proceed to Vienna and thence to Prague.



Bob Weitman, managing director of the New York and Brooklyn Paramount Theatres, was the 1946 recipient of the Picture Pioneers' Scroll of Honor Wednesday. The award was made by the Pioneers' executive committee on the basis of Weitman's war and charitable work and the presentation was made at the annual harvest dinner at the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf-Astoria.

MGM's Vice-President and General Sales Manager Bill Rodgers was a Washington visitor during the week.

RKO Television President Ralph B. Austrian left New York last week for Mexico City where he will coordinate the move from the construction phase to the operational phases of the RKO Studios at Churubusco. Austrian will also study possibilities of television in that city. While he's away, Fred Ullman, Jr., of RKO Pathe, will handle production in New York for RKO Television.

Sam Goldwyn received a certificate of appreciation from the Philadelphia Club of Advertising Women this week for his "vision in advancing the cause of international understanding and for his contribution to wholesome standards of motion picture entertainment."

Next Week ..... JOHN DANZ

21 Rank Features Scheduled for Release

The J. Arthur Rank Organization this week anticipated the release of 10 features in the United States during the remainder of 1946 and the early part of 1947, with 11 more ready for release at some time during the coming year and another seven now in production.

Those scheduled for 1946-47 are "The Wicked Lady," "Stairway to Heaven," "My Heart Goes Crazy," "This Happy Breed," "Bedelia," "The Overlanders," "The Adventuress," "Beware of Pity," "The Magic Bow" and "School for Secrets."

Those scheduled for 1947 release are "Black Narcissus," "Great Expectations," "Green for Danger," "Odd Man Out," "The Man Within," "Nicholas Nickleby," "Daybreak," "The Upturned Glass," 'Hungry Hill," "The Brothers" and "The Root of All Evil."

In production are "Green Days and Blue Days," "Frieda," "Captain Boycott," "Fame Is the Spur," "The Loves of Joanna Godden," "Dear Murderer" and "Uncle Silas."

Movie Dance Moves In

"Movie Dance" this week moved into Columbus, Ohio, to give local exhibitors added competition in a competitive field including everything from ice carnivals to bowling alleys.

The new type of competition, which was first and exclusively described in Showmen's Trade Review (June 8, p. 10) is playing Smith's Dance Gardens, in the university district. It offers three hours of filmed dance music and "floor" show, with such bands as Shep Fields, Al Donahue, Charlie Spivak, etc. Smith is charging 75 cents a person—just 10 cents higher than the downtown theatre rate—for movie entertainment and dancing to boot.

NATIONAL NEWSREEL

Plan Tribute to Skouras, Sherwood, Irving Berlin

Approximately 30 members of the film and allied industries met at the Waldorf-Astoria Monday to discuss plans for the testimonial luncheon to be held Dec. 12 when the National Conference of the Christians and Jews will honor 20th Century-Fox President Spyros Skouras, Playwright Robert E. Sherwood, Composer Irving Berlin, for the work they have done to promote understanding among creeds and races.

The meeting, which was presided over by Louis Nizer in the absence of J. Robert Rubin, ill, appointed an executive committee consisting of RKO Executive Vice-President Ned Depinet, MGM Vice-President William Rodgers and American Theatres President Si Fabian. A public relations committee consisting in part of Sam Shain, 20th-Fox, ATA's Ned Shugrue, and Publishers Martin Quigley, Ben Shlyen and Don Mersereau was also appointed. David Weinstock of Raybond Theatres was placed in charge of the luncheon, and attempts will be made to get several prominent speakers and to fill to capacity the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria, where the event is to be held.

The luncheon also considered ways to raise an operating fund for the coming year.

To Honor Professions

Also discussed was the "Thanks for Thanksgiving Dinner" which will be held in the main ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria on Nov. 24 at 6:30 p.m., at which time awards will be made to motion pictures, press, magazines, radio, advertising and the legitimate theatre. The motion picture presentation will be made by Max Cohen of Cinema circuit; Will H. Hays will be respondent. The legitimate theatres' presentation will be by Emil Friedlander and two representatives of Actor's Equity; Marcus Heineman will respond. Robert Swezey of Mutual will make the radio presentation to A. D. Willard, executive vice-president of the National Association of Broadcasters, while William Randolph Hearst, Jr., will make the press presentation to Edwin B. Friendly, accepting on behalf of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. Arch Crawford, chairman of the National Publishers Association, will make the magazine presentation to NPA President Walter Fuller. The advertising award will be presented by Reginald Clough of Tide to James Young of the Advertising Council, responding for the industry.

RKO 3rd Quarter Nets $3,082,553

RKO this week announced a consolidated net profit for the third quarter of 1946 amounting to $3,082,553 after deducting taxes and other charges, in comparison with the $1,520,052 netted for the same quarter in 1945.

The company's consolidated net profit for the first nine months of 1946 after deduction of taxes and other charges was $9,963,906 compared with $3,941,830 for the same months in 1945.

Warners Declare Dividend

Warner Bros. this week declared a quarterly dividend of 37½ cents a share on its common stock payable Jan. 4, 1947.

Passed Up Theatres

Leave it to the citizens of Denver and apparently there won't be any more new taxes on their theatres.

In a poll recently conducted by the Denver Post to get suggestions from its readers as to what new tax sources could be tapped to find added funds needed for pay increases in the police and fire departments, the percentage who thought of theatres as a new source of added revenue was slight.

Quick Tax Cuts By U.S. Now Thought Unlikely

"Flush-of-victory" pronouncements of immediate tax cuts by the new Republican-controlled Congress were beginning to be scaled down in Washington this week as a number of solons pointed out the importance of studying taxes in relation to spending and the retirement of the national debt.

The "cut at any cost" philosophy of Representatives Joe Martin of Massachusetts and Harold Knutson of Minnesota ran into a roadblock when it was urged upon members of the Senate Republican Steering Committee.

While Martin and Knutson may be strong enough to put an immediate cut through the House, the chances for speedy similar action in the Senate are extremely slim.

Far more likely to come early it was said, is the paring down of the admissions levy, with the 20 per cent rate likely to be discarded by summer, but the pre-war ten per cent rate is certain to be retained, however.

New Amusement Tax Bills Face Exhibitors

Two additional taxes on amusements appeared again this week in localities as far apart as Trenton, N. J., and Chicago.

In New Jersey it appeared certain a state measure placing a three per cent tax on amusements, liquor and tobacco would come before the legislature when it convenes.

In Chicago a city tax is again being proposed to bring in an estimated income of two million dollars. It would tax seats under 30 cents one half per cent and place a one-cent tax on seats selling from 30 to 50 cents. A two per cent tax would apply to seats from 50 cents to $1, and three per cent on admissions over $1.

Menasha, Wis., Considers Tax

The Menasha, Wis., city council reportedly is waiting on a report from the city attorney before taking under consideration a tax on local theatre admissions. If Mensasha passes such a tax it will be the first municipal box-office levy in Wisconsin.

Hughes Sues to Clear 'Outlaw' for N. Y. Showing

"The Outlaw" added another booking to its series of court appearances in New York this week as the Hughes Tool Company filed suit in the state supreme court seeking a judgment which would rule that neither License Commissioner Benjamin Fielding nor Police Commissioner Arthur W. Wallander had the right to censor or prevent showing of a film passed by the state board of censors.

The suit also seeks to enjoin both Fielding and Wallander from threatening to arrest or or arresting any one exhibiting "The Outlaw" and, additionally would enjoin Fielding from revoking or threatening to revoke the license of any theatre showing the picture.

"The Outlaw" has played in New York State but its scheduled opening in three New York City theatres for Oct. 26 was canceled after Commissioners Fielding and Wallander had told Exhibitors Harry Brandt and Arthur Mayer that they would lose their licenses and possibly face prosecution under the penal code if they showed the picture, even though it had been passed by the state censor board.

United Artists attempted to compel Brandt and Mayer to execute their contracts by suit but lost the first round when the court found it could not compel an exhibitor to lay himself open to posible prosecution.

N. Y. Houses in Run Suit Over 'Canyon Passage'

The New York State Supreme Court on Monday indicated that it would issue an early decision in the suit of the Normandie Theatre for an injunction preventing Universal from booking "Canyon Passage" into Walter Reade's new Park Avenue Theatre until seven days after it had completed its run at the Normandie.

The action arose over clearance. The Normandie originally followed the Plaza and the 52nd Street Translux. Universal gave the Park Avenue the Plaza run when the Plaza canceled the picture. Counsel for the Normandie, which is booked by Harry Brandt, claimed that according to industry practice, a subsequent-run house moves up when the prior run is canceled.

Universal Counsel Louis Nizer denied this and claimed that Universal had the right to book into the Park Avenue, since the Normandie contract specifically denied clearance.

Donald Meek Dies

Screen character actor Donald Meek, 66, died early this week of leukemia in the Presbyterian Hospital in Hollywood. He is survived by his widow, the former Belle Walken.

Boston Club Owner Pardoned

Massachusetts' Governor Maurice F. Tobin this week pardoned Barnett Welansky, owner of Boston's ill-fated Cocoanut Grove, from a 12- to 15-year manslaughter sentence he was serving. The pardon was subject to the executive council's approval.

Welansky was sentenced four years ago on charges growing out of the catastrophic fire in his club in which 492 lives were lost, including those of 16 Boston Variety Club members, their guest of honor Buck Jones, and many film industryites and their relatives

Tobin said Welansky was suffering from an incurable malady and no good would be accomplished by confining him in prison. The night club owner was found guilty through failure to have proper fire protection and exits.

Get 14,000 Replies in Strand's 'Verdict' Query

The Albany Times-Union and the Warner Strand Theatre in that city were snowed under by more than 14,000 answers to a contest query publicizing "The Verdict" in which newspaper readers were asked to "Identify Screen Stars by Their Eyes." Two-column cuts of the eyes of Sidney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre and others were published.

Another promotion for the same picture was the hiring of ten telephone girls to call doctors, nurses, lawyers, state office workers and others picked at random from the telephone book. The girls asked "Do You Know The Verdict?" and upon receiving any kind of answer replied "See it at the Strand."

The Liberty Theatre, Sharon, Pa., used a different approach, mailing out several thousand teaser post-cards with this message, "You are hereby notified to report for Jury Duty on (date) at which time you will be required to render your verdict on the most baffling and intriguing mystery ever presented — Sidney Greenstreet and Peter Lorre in 'The Verdict' at the Liberty Theatre." The picture also was screened for the Mayor, Chief of Police, District Attorney and the press, followed by interviews in which the reporters quizzed the city officials and law enforcers on the subject of circumstantial evidence.

'Best Years' Title in Magazine Forums

"The Best Years of Our Lives," title of the Samuel Goldwyn production, is also the subject of an article to be featured in the January issue of Reader's Digest and which may become a department under that title. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, internationally known clergyman and radio speaker, has written the first contribution, and Quentin Reynolds will do the second, according to plans.

The Reader-Reporter Panel of Woman's Home Companion is already questioning its vast circulation on "What Are the Best Years of Our Lives," with answers to form an article for the February issue. The Inquiring Reporter of the New York Daily News ran a column with the same inquiry, and the Goldwyn office is using the idea as a discussion platform in a radio forum being transcribed for national distribution.

Ronnie Ames Joins Field Force of PRC

Ronald R. (Ronnie) Ames, former exploitation man for Paramount and RKO Radio, has joined PRC Pictures as field exploitation man for the Kansas City territory, to work directly under exploitation manager Lige Brien.

Ames, who will make his headquarters at PRC's Kansas City exchange, was originally a Pittsburgh newspaperman before shifting to the field of publicity and exploitation for radio artists and orchestras. In 1942 he entered the field of motion picture exploitation.

Premiere in Int'l Broadcast

Marking the first time that a world premiere has been transcribed for international broadcast, the gala opening of Samuel Goldwyn's "The Best Years of Our Lives" took place Thursday evening at the Astor Theatre on Broadway, with an impressive array of Hollywood and Park Avenue names in attendance. Activities of the gala affair, the proceeds of which will go to aid the Lighthouse's work in caring for 4,000 blind people of all ages and creeds, were broadcast not only domestically by WCBS and the Columbia network, but also transcribed for re-broadcast to Spanish-, French-, Portuguese- and English-speaking nations and their possessions, and South America.

Several dinners were held prior to the premiere. At one of these Mr. and Mrs. Goldwyn entertained Mr. and Mrs. Darryl Zanuck of Hollywood, Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York, William Paley and Robert Lehmans. Robert E. Sherwood, who wrote the film's script, was a guest, with others, of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor.

J. W. Thompson Forms Coast Ad Department

A motion picture advertising department equipped to handle art, copy, media, research, publicity, production and exploitation has been opened in Los Angeles by the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency for clients in the motion picture field.

Personnel of the department includes W. C. Lewellen, service; Leon Benson, copy, and Charles W. Meggs, art.

Essig Joins Fairbanks

Appointment of Albert C. Essig as national sales director of Jerry Fairbanks, Inc., producers of the Speaking of Animals, Unusual Occupations and Popular Science short subject series released by Paramount, was announced this week. Essig is well known in the advertising field through the national agency bearing his name and has had long experience in sales promotion.

Combine Talents for 'Clementine' Campaign

Growing popularity of the old-time square dance was capitalized upon by Managers Lou Cohen of Loew's Poli and Fred R. Greenway of Loew's Poli-Palace, Hartford, to publicize the showing in both theatres of 20th-Fox's "My Darling Clementine." They set up a Clementine Square Dance at a local dance hall which called for costumes of the Clementine period, with the girl wearing the best costume crowned My Darling Clementine. The winner also received prizes.

This was the highlight of an extensive exploitation campaign which included two radio contests, a horse-and-wagon street ballyhoo, the use of a large lettered umbrella at local football games, a newspaper contest in which readers were asked to name pictures in which Henry Fonda has appeared, and another newspaper contest in which readers were asked to supply missing lines in the song, Clementine.

A store dummy dressed in frontier clothes and a juke box playing western tunes were used for lobby displays. Six news trucks were bannered before and during the run of the film and several window and counter displays were other features of the campaign.—HFD.

Republic, Calendar Firm In Promotion Tieup

Plans have been completed between Republic and Brown & Bigelow, calendar and remembrance advertising organization, for national promotion highlighting Jane Frazee and Republic's forthcoming "Calendar Girl."

The "Calendar Girl" painting in the film, which is the work of Zoe Mozert, prominent calendar artist, will be reproduced as a 1947 calendar with credit to Miss Frazee and "Calendar Girl" on over two million calendars. In addition, there will be a "Calendar Girl" contest, with the winner getting a week's vacation in Hollywood, New York or Chicago, and her portrait painted for a 1948 calendar.

'Margie' Essay Contests

With United States Savings Bonds as prizes, essay contests are being conducted on "Margie" in New England high schools by Al Fowler, 20th-Fox publicist.—BOS.

FANNIE HURST,
famous author, says:

ROMANCE IS BACK! Anyone who doubts, should see Rex Harrison, of Anna and the King of Siam distinction, in his new dazzle, 'NOTORIOUS GENTLEMAN'.

Dashing, sardonic, careless with his women, his morals, his life, Rex Harrison seems to be the modern inheritor of the mantle of romance, which has lain away in mothballs these many years.

Like a covey of quail, rising off the nest with excited little cries, the heart-beats of the ladies are about to be set in accelerated motion by Rex Harrison's what-it-takes.

His appeal is as ancient as the Garden of Eden and as modern as radar. Ladies who leave rouged cigarette-tips on demi-tasse saucers and carry walkie-talkies in their handbags are going to swoon of medieval ecstasy over 'NOTORIOUS GENTLEMAN', that magnificent rotter who lives his short life so dangerously, catering to feminine weaknesses with the know-how of a Casanova and the tenderness of which every woman dreams in her man.

Lilli Palmer, herself lovely as love, who plays opposite him, achieves this tenderness from the 'NOTORIOUS GENTLEMAN', but pays for it with the punishment which women so mysteriously seem to covet from their right man.

Yes, when Rex Harrison trails that slow glance of his along the beauty of his celluloid ladies, the ladies in their spectator-seats are going to know in a big way that Romance is back on Hollywood's agenda.

Stars, Notables at 'Razor's Edge' Premiere

Television, Newsreels and Radio Record Glitter and Color of the Formal Event

Before a brilliant audience of nearly 6,000, including stars and notables of the motion picture industry, United Nations' delegates and members of international society, Darryl F. Zanuck's "The Razor's Edge" had its world premiere Tuesday evening at the Roxy Theatre. The formal occasion, one of the most colorful in theatrical history, came as the climax of two years of production effort and an unprecedented advertising and publicity campaign.

While floodlights illuminated the vicinity of the Roxy as some 30,000 people pressed against wooden stanchions to get glimpses of the Hollywood stars and celebrities, NBC television cameras recorded the glitter and color of ceremonies inside the theatre for transmission over their four-city hookup. Celebrities were interviewed over the video-screen by Ben Grauer and interviewed by Mel Allen over station WNEW. Crowds in the streets were kept informed of the activities by Johnny Grant, who spoke over the Roxy public address system.

An hour before the opening, the New York police had put in motion an elaborate traffic control plan designed to facilitate the movement of cars carrying ticket-holders to the brilliantly lighted entrance of the theatre. Busses were rerouted off 7th Avenue, and all southbound traffic from 51st Street was detoured into surrounding thoroughfares, in order to clear the way for the notables arriving for the opening.

Police Act as Bodyguards

Arriving in a motor cavalcade escorted by motorcycle police, were the stars of the picture and other Hollywood notables. Shortly after 8 p.m., Edmund Goulding, director of "The Razor's Edge" put in an appearance to be followed by Tyrone Power and wife, Annabella, Gene Tierney, Clifton Webb, Maureen O'Hara, William Eythe and Lon McCallister. Each car was manned by a member of the New York police department, who acted as bodyguards to the stars.

The premiere had all the trappings of an international event with the presence of dignitaries of the United Nations and foreign governments, including Senator and Mrs. Warren A. Austin, Ambassador and Mrs. Henri Bonnet, Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo and the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, as well as U. N. delegation chairmen and members of U. N. military staffs.

Seventy-two out-of-town motion picture critics representing newspapers in key cities in the east, middlewest and south attended the premiere as the guests of 20th Century-Fox.

A press reception for local and visiting newspaper people, with Power, Miss Tierney and Goulding as guests was given by Charles Schlaifer, 20th-Fox director of advertising and publicity, on Monday afternoon at the Hampshire House. Following the premiere, Spyros P. Skouras, 20th-Fox president, gave a reception and supper party at the Hotel Pierre for Goulding and the visiting stars.

First public showing of the film on Wednesday established an all-time high record, with the day's gross of over $20,000 surpassing the Roxy's record last Christmas Day on "Leave Her to Heaven."

An estimated 30,000 persons congregated at and around the Roxy Theatre, New York, for the world premiere Tuesday night of "The Razor's Edge." Above, a fragment of the tumultous panorama that spread around the big showhouse to observe the celebrities who attended one of the most widely-ballyhooed premieres since the end of the war.

'Well, The Radio Salesman Said...'

And that's how it started, according to Jack J. Engerman, director of advertising for Sterling Theatres, Seattle. Engerman's friendship with a radio station time salesman gave him the information that the station had a sustaining program it was trying to sell, but because of insufficient listener interest it could find no sponsor.

So-o-o Engerman, being a guy who doesn't have to be hit by lightning to come up with an idea, suggested a Mystery Tune program from 4:15 to 4:30 every day except Sunday with listeners writing correct answers postmarked no later than the same day to receive passes to one of Sterling's downtown theatres. Of course, the name of pictures playing are plugged during the daily broadcasts with the only cost to the theatres being the paper on which the script is written. It's sponsored now and looks as if it will go on for some months to come.

Ableson's Memo Book Is Held Unique Slant on Showmanship

The showmanship of Art Ableson, manager of the Lake Theatre, Devil's Lake, N. D., is well known to readers of SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW. When it comes to keeping his theatre and its attractions before the public, Art never takes a rest—unless, of course, he is laid up by illness or accident, such as that which caused a three-week delay in reporting a new slant on theatre advertising. Nevertheless, even when confined to his home or the hospital, Art sees to it that showmanship does not perish in his community.

That new slant—it may not be new to some exhibitors, but it's likely to prove new to most—is the printing and distribution of a Handy Reminder and Memo Book. The copy sent us measures four and one-half inches by seven and one-half. The day and date is imprinted at the top of each page, as well as the Lake's attraction for that day. In some cases, two-column slug mats are used; in others, type. The dates run from October 20, 1946, to November 30, 1946, and the book contains 50 numbered pages.

There are attractive features to the Memo Book. For example, the inside front cover is used for an institutional ad which carries this copy: "Lake Theatre—The Bright Spot of the Community. The Lake Theatre is the hub of this community. Around it revolves all the substantial citizenry we call home. Through its doors pass friends and merchants we like to meet. The greatest people on earth, bringing together and keeping families closely knit... keeping alive the community spirit that makes us an important cog in life. Pictures on the Lake Theatre's screen bring us all the happenings of the world...offering in abundance grab bags of glamor, happy tears, romance, adventure, songs, dances and laughs. Make the Lake your 'Castle of Relaxation' where you can ease your mind after a tiresome day at home or at the office."

Two pages feature four puzzles, one of which can be chosen by a reader for use in competing for guest tickets. Sample Puzzle: "Can you arrange eight checkers on a checker board so none will intercross in any direction?"

Following the last definite playdate in the book, one-column slug mats are used to advertise coming attractions. Then a page is devoted to "Thoughts For Any Day." Sample thought: "Goodwill is the one and only asset that competition cannot undersell or undermine."

The last numbered page points out that the Lake manufactures its own weather, admonishes moviegoers to refrain from indulging in unnecessary conversation "so that you may enjoy the presentation of our picture," and asks that patrons notify an attendant "if you are annoyed by anyone talking, acting boisterous or tampering with seats."

Showman Ableson knows the importance of maintaining friendly relations with the churches, so he has devoted the inside back cover to this worthwhile message: "Your church is a symbol of service. It is your sanctuary, your spiritual home. Your church stands ready to help you when you need comfort or solace or strength. Make yourself a part of it. Attend church regularly.

The back cover has been utilized to announce a slight increase in admission prices because of "increased costs of operation, film rentals, salaries, taxes, etc." "Regardless of this very slight increase," Ableson assures his patrons, "motion pictures are still your best and least expensive entertainment."

The Devil's Lake theatreman does not reveal his method of distribution or how the Memo Books were received. But since they are useful as well as informative, we have no doubt but that they were grabbed up in a hurry.

Follow 'Milkman' Theme In N. O. 'Kid' Campaign

By following the "milkman" theme of "The Kid From Brooklyn" and tieing up with a local dairy company, managers Victor Meyer and John F. Loveridge of the Orpheum and Liberty theatres in New Orleans covered the town with an exploitation campaign in which they were assisted by Charles Kinney, RKO field expoiteer. The tieup was with the Cloverland Dairy Company which covered the entire retail trade by means of 25,000 milk bottle collars and by the company's 80 trucks and tank trucks carrying banners about the picture five days in advance of opening.

An early "milkman's matinee" was held preceding a street parade in which the entire fleet of 80 bannered trucks proceeded to the theatre. After being interviewed in front of the theatre by Henry Dupre of WWL's Dawn Busters program the milkmen attended an early showing of the picture. By special permission of the police department the trucks were parked in vantage points throughout the midtown section.

Another facet of the Cloverland Dairy promotion was a letter contest on "Why I Like Milk" to which the dairy company devoted its entire newspaper and radio advertising space and time. Prizes offered in the contest were an Admiral Portable Radio which was donated and advertised by the local Admiral radio distributor; a 30-day supply of milk; five one-gallon cans of ice cream and guest tickets to see the film. Radio broadcasts on three stations plugged the picture, including the "Milkman's Matinee" interview which was recorded and rebroadcast on a later program.

The Maison Blanche department store featured a "Kid From Brooklyn" window display in connection with its line of Milkmaid Cosmetics and the campaign was topped off with front and rear dashboard cards on all trolleys. The dashboard cards were sponsored by the Royal Crown Cola distributor.

SOME OF THE 300,000 persons who lined Atlanta's streets on Armistice Day to see the five-mile long parade that preceded the world premiere of Walt Disney's "Song of the South" may be seen here behind one of the colorful floats. If you look closely you can see a soldier, a sailor, a marine, a couple of pretty girls and several life-sized enlargements of Disney cartoon characters from the film aboard this flower bedecked float. Hollywood stars, newspapermen from 20 cities, RKO Radio and Walt Disney officials, Walt and Mrs. Disney, the mayor of Atlanta and William K. Jenkins, president of Lucas and Jenkins Theatres, were on hand for the ceremonies.

Campaign Sells Theatre Before It Is Built

Watts Arouses Interest of Osage Townsmen With Idea Suggested by Jack Jackson

Alert theatremen work on the principle that showmanship begins with the blueprints of the new showhouse, and in accord with that concept is the campaign staged in Osage, Iowa, by J. H. Watts, operator of the Osage theatre and now building a new picture house for the town.

The campaign used by Mr. Watts follows the lines suggested to him by Jack Jackson during the latter's cross-country trip in connection with his articles on Theatre Management for SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW. In reporting the campaign, Watts stated that he worked out the details of the "New Theatre Contest" idea suggested by Jackson as follows:

"Judges of the contest consisted of a local minister, a bank official and a doctor's wife. Incidentally, the results of the judging proved beyond a doubt that Mrs. Watts and I, as theatre owners, had no influence in the final judging: the first prize (a family pass for one year) was awarded to a family of ten; second prize (a family pass for six months) to a family of six.

"I might add that the voting was almost a tie, which gave us a legitimate excuse for holding up the announcement of the final choice of location. In the meantime our architect was able to visit our city to consider both locations in regard to construction details as well as other factors.

"Needless to say, under present conditions, it is impossible for us to proceed with construction, but we are keeping our plans alive and before the public by posting an enlarged sketch of the exterior of what we propose to be our new theatre."

As illustrated in the reproductions on this page of newspaper advertisements, ballots distributed at the Osage theatre and other places about town, as well as a lobby display, the contest was for the selection of the site for the new theatre.

Many theatremen who have looked over the campaign used by Watts declare that all exhibitors now in a location where they plan to build a new house would do well to employ the basic ideas so successfully used in Osage as a result of Jack Jackson's suggestion.

At right are reproductions of the teaser newspaper advertisements (top), the contest idea featured in newspaper ads as well as the voting ballot also used in advertising as well as giveaways, and at bottom the lobby display in the Osage Theatre, for which J. MEET TO DISCUSS 'GALLANT BESS' TOUR. William R. Ferguson, MGM director of exploitation met recently with his southern exploiteers in Atlanta to discuss the personal appearance tour of "Bess," equine star of "Gallant Bess" and other forthcoming MGM attractions. Shown above are James Thames, Memphis; William Ornstein, home office; Ken Prickett, New Orleans; Emery Austin, Atlanta; Ferguson; Ed Gardner, Oklahoma City; Howard Herty, Los Angeles, advance man for the tour; E. B. Coleman, Dallas; Al Burks, Charlotte, and Bernie Evens, Kansas City.

Campaign No Miracle— Just Good Showmanship

Because he never let up on the use of available selling angles, Harry A. Rose, manager of the Loew-Poli Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn., came through with flying colors in his campaign on MGM's "The Cockeyed Miracle." One of the most effective of his gags was the promotion of a Cockeyed Miracle Sundae at Liggett's Drug Store—ice cream on top, fruit and nuts on the bottom.

Rose also distributed 5000 booklets to the girls of the community. The cover carried this copy: "Confidential—for Girls Only. How to Win Boy Friends and Influence Proposals. If Your Boy Friend Hasn't Popped the Question, Try the Griggs Shorthand Method to Matrimony." Inside the booklet were photos and copy showing the steps taken by the heroine of the film to win the heart of the bashful hero.

On the window of a local meat market, just after OPA controls had been lifted, Rose placed a banner with this copy: "It Won't Be a 'Cockeyed Miracle' If You See Plenty of Meat Here Soon." And in the window of a candy company he placed a display which offered ten guest tickets to those who guessed nearest the correct number of candy kisses Keenan Wynn's hat would hold. Two express trucks were bannered with this copy: "The impossible we do right away . . . 'Cockeyed Miracles' take a little longer."

Rose also planted an ad in Sporting News, which is distributed to barber shops, billiard parlors and taverns. And, still not through, he placed cards in buses and store windows, planted a Guess-a-Tune contest on the radio, and used a 40x60 display in the lobby (with live objects), which he moved to a Novelty Shop window during the film's engagement.

Schuette Joins MGM

Richard L. Schuette, for many years in the theatre field, has joined MGM as exploitation representative for the Seattle and Portland territories. Schuette replaces Norman Linz, recently assigned to the territory, who will again take charge of the company's Showbuilder Unit No. 1.

'Story of Pope' to Have Broadway Premiere

"The Story of the Pope," a feature-length historical film providing the first glimpses into the daily life of Pope Pius XII to appear on any screen, will have its premiere at the Republic theatre just prior to Christmas, according to Bernard Brandt, president of Chapel Films Corp., the producer. Francis Cardinal Spellman will appear in an introduction, and the narrator throughout will be Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen.

A part of the proceeds from the Broadway showing, as well as from national distribution, is earmarked for War Relief Services, Inc., an agency that distributes food and clothing to the war-stricken peoples of the world.

UNUSUAL. This lobby display served two purposes at the Newman, Kansas City, in a tieup made by Myron Talman, assistant to Manager M. D. Cohn. The projection reading machine shows reading matter on ceilings and is used in veterans' hospitals. Stills on "The Big Sleep" were used for demonstration purposes and a box on the table was for contributions for purchases of machines for the hospitals. Tieup was with Heart of America Lodge of the B'nai B'rith.

'Renegades' Exploited by Well-Rounded Campaign

The exploitation campaign arranged for the opening of "Renegades" at the Earle Theatre, Washington, D. C. by Frank La Falce and Fred McMillian, publicity director and manager, started rolling with an arrangement for an "Evelyn Keyes Look Alike Contest," which was promoted daily, starting a week before opening, over the Easy Gwynn afternoon radio program on station WOL. A 60x40 display was placed in the theatre lobby, containing credits for the radio station, photos of Evelyn Keyes, and details of the contest. A $25 Savings Bond was announced as the prize. Pictures of the winner broke in the Times-Herald.

A comprehensive radio campaign was also arranged. Nancy Osgood on WRC and Ruth Craine over WMAL gave the picture mention in connection with prearranged fashion, beauty and cooking tieups. Additional plugs were received from station WRC and on the Captain Cash program over WEDC. The theatre, attraction and opening date were also plugged on the "Teen Time" and "Meet the Mrs" programs over WWDC and WTOP.

Pictures of the seven usherettes who formed the Earle Riding Club were taken in the lobby of the theatre with the local riding club. Newspaper breaks also were received on this stunt.

La Falce sent unusual invitations in the form of a "hold up" card to the critics, inviting them to a dinner and preview showing of the picture two days before opening. The card featured Larry Parks, star of the film, brandishing a six-shooter. The dinner took place with the critics, their assistants and escorts in attendance. An old-fashioned stagecoach, identical to the one used in the picture, picked up the guests in front of the theatre and conveyed them to the famous "Stables" eatery, where the dinner took place. From there, the party proceeded to Warner Bros. screening room. Mention and photos of this dinner and screening broke in the papers the next day.

Cooperation of the famed Six-six club of Washington was enlisted and they were invited to the opening, so that they could view their favorite star, Willard Parker. Pictures were taken in the lobby of the president of the club reading a telegram from Parker requesting membership. This stunt received newspaper breaks.

E-L, Red Cross Tieup

A tieup has been arranged with the American Red Cross on Eagle-Lion's forthcoming film, "Amy Comes Across," starring Franchot Tone and Ann Richards, whereby all publicity stills showing Red Cross workers will be released by the national information department of the service organization to special publications distributed by the 3,755 chapters in the group. The material will be reelased to the more than 30,000,000 volunteer workers in the Red Cross.

Sells 'Gallant Journey'

Manager Morris Rosenthal, Loew's Poli, New Haven, dug up a 1921 Haynes automobile for use as a street ballyhoo for Columbia's Gallant Journey." He also arranged for the playing of oldtime tunes via station WELI, with a contest angle, and had 15 window displays for the film.—HFD.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management*

WHATEVER YOU DO, DO SOMETHING

By Jack Jackson

Lissen fellas; your show's slippin'—or your grosses are!

Perhaps there are a few situations where that declaration may be false but from what I hear—and from what I experience—receipts, in most places, are down out of the stratosphere and skid chains are needed if they are to be kept off the toboggan slide. Most of you know—and those who don't are in for one of life's more rugged experiences—what a trojan job it is to pull a theatre out of a nose-dive and the sweat and sinew (to say nothing of the grey matter and greenbacks) needed to drag the cash-box back up to profit levels.

Just what part the long series of strikes, shortages and restrictions may have had in bringing the drop in theatre business is a matter of conjecture and your guess is as good or better than mine. One thing is certain. The mind of the public is not at ease and an epidemic of unrest and dissatisfaction is evident on all sides. It must be admitted that such conditions are more conducive to stimulation of membership in the corner store debating clubs than to theatre attendance. The public pocketbook is still bulging but it remains for us to stir up some kind of a potpourri of theatricals that will prove sufficiently irresistible to make them forget all about political and economic problems and line up at our box-offices again.

This business being what it is, I'd hesitate to make any definite recommendations, but the necessary ingredients for whatever heterogeneous mixture you decide on as a local "hypo" is easily accessible wherever you are.

It's going to take some sound planning and involve the spending of a few dollars—perhaps many dollars—but when your business is doing a Niagara it's plain silly to start quibbling about the price of water wings and tow ropes.

Revamp, Refurbish Magnets of Past

Just what to do and how to do it is something you'll have to figure out for yourself but the Golgotha of currently extinct theatre practices fairly bristles with ideas of proved box-office punch. True, these infallible magnets of the past will have to be revamped and refurbished until they acquire a '46 brand of gloss and glitter. The old timers are overly familiar with stunts that put paybottoms in those empty seats back in the early '30's. But just in case their memories are faltering—and for the benefit of the many who "joined up" during the flush war years—let me list a few of the things I am doing—and contemplate doing—to counteract the multiple factors of opposition and revive faltering interest in the programs of our theatres.

We've put in an amateur night in one house! The same old stuff as of yore except that it is presented differently and at a minimum of expense to the theatre. We paid for the screen trailer and three lobby cards and put $8.00 (yes I mean eight dollars) in the prize money kitty. The rest of the advertising and the two capital prizes as well as a swell outfit consisting of fur coat, muff and matching hat to be given as a door prize—and I almost forgot 1,500 small door prizes—are paid for by a live and wide-awake merchant. There's nothing new about that except that it puts a stop to the currently overworked alibi "that all the merchants have so much business they are not interested in theatre tieups." It just goes to prove that if you make your proposal attractive enough—and present it in a business-like manner—merchants are as eager as ever to get their name and wares effectively presented to the greatest concentration of potential buyers ever gathered in one place—the paying audience of any theatre.

I'll give you the details of what and how, but before you pass this up with a casual "So what?" let me tell you what it has meant at the box-office.

The first week receipts—on our poorest night, of course—went up 90 per cent, and on the second, just passed, the rise was 110 per cent. Does that interest you and convince you that there is still plenty of life in those "old dogs" that led them up to the box-office during the tough '30's?

Well, here's how it was done:

We prepared a sizable list of select names of the particular class of people we considered as being the most likely prospects for attendance. We even resorted to city maps showing neighborhoods and the city directory for names and occupations. While this was going on (it took several weeks) we ran a trailer on the screen and put a card in the lobby and rest rooms asking for talent to report to the manager. We wound up with more than 1,000 names and, after culling out undesirables, some 27 acceptable acts. With this ammunition we started hunting for a co-operating merchant—one whom we considered as being interested in contacting the class of people to which our theatre catered. Yes, we got some turndowns but it wasn't long before we struck pay dirt. And we didn't make the mistake of trying to give away the theatre, but spent more than a week working out the details.

We insisted on a fair price, in donated prizes and advertising effort, in return for the privileges and assistance we were in position to offer. It was decided that the merchant was to give the capital prize in merchandise and $10.00 in cash for a four week period and the theatre insisted on a letter authorizing the giveaway of the merchandising displayed in the lobby (in a showcase provided by the merchant with contents insured against loss by the merchant). In addition he paid for the services of a girl who worked in the the-

'Roxy Service, Sir . . .'

There have been many instances of theatre patrons remembering service staff employes in their wills with fairly heavy bequests. And this may be considered 'tipping.' But even if it is, tipping as such in the theatre business, is considered a practice to be avoided.

General courtesy precludes the possibility of accepting tips in theatres, and any member of the service staff who accepts them should be instantly dismissed.

The answer to a proffered tip should be something like, "Thank you, sir, but that is just part of the Roxy Service. . . ." The patron usually will be pleased if his tip is politely rejected.

atre addressing messages about his store and its co-operative effort with the theatre to the names on our list. All printing, stationery and mailing costs were his obligation. In addition, 20,000 coupon cards were printed at his expense and are being given to patrons by the theatre service staff for the big door prize on the last night of the contest. I should say the last night of the original four week period. The merchant is so well satisfied that he has asked that the tieup be continued through the holidays.

You can do the same in your town with similar results.

Reviving Song Slides

Remember the old time song singer and slides? Well, we're going to do that one again. But this time we'll have the Hammond organ in shape and be mighty careful about the selection of songs to be rendered and who—and how— they are rendered. We're going to ask our audiences to pick out their own hit parade and offer the specialty five times daily with two of the periods broadcast over a local radio station. We pay for the trailer announcing the specialty and asking for requests. The trailer gives due prominence to the radio station hookup and in return the station pays the charges of picking up the program from our theatre and carries it as either a sponsored or sustaining period—we don't care which since all we are interested in is the city-wide publicity.

We are now contacting the singing, dancing and musical instrument teachers and schools with a view of presenting an "All Kiddie Revue" the week before Christmas. We think we'll be ahead of all others and be able to interest the tutors in using our stage as an advertising medium and attracting new students by showing the general public what progress their prize scholars have made under their respective tutelage. It will be excellent advertising for the teachers and schools and should fill many seats that would otherwise be empty during the pre-Christmas season.

We are working on a giveaway night—which should be under way before this article reaches the printing press—where we will have cost-free advertising with 22 merchants who are also providing us with 60 valuable prizes that will be given away to customers one night each week—our poorest grossing night. We are not accepting small prizes and our arrangements to now are such as will guarantee every lucky patron an article of useful merchandise of equal or higher value than the price of admission to the theatre. This took a lot of work and considerable selling because we refused to make mention of the cooperating merchants on our screen. Their participation is advertised in the lobby and from the stage as their merchandise is awarded. All other advertising, heralds, coupon tickets, etc. are being paid for by the merchants. We expect the results from this activity to equal if not better the amateur night receipts. It'll take time but you can put it over if you're willing to plan your sales argument and work at the job consistently. It took us six weeks. Get going and see how much time you can shave off our record. But be sure you get a lot of prizes.

One Out of Every 12

As we see it now there should be about one of every 12 patrons carrying away valuable merchandise from our theatre for the six weeks preceding Christmas. That in itself should bring plenty of business but we're going further in hiring a good MC who will give the crowd a couple of songs and some entertaining comedy patter to make the events interesting and worth while even for those who don't win.

We've located a downtown garage that

THEATRE MANAGER'S NOTEBOOK
Maintenance

BUILDING STRUCTURES — Maintenance II

(From an Outline of Talks Presented to the Classes in the Wilby-Kincey School of Maintenance)

PLASTERED WALLS

When inspecting plastered walls and ceilings, look for the following defects:

1. Cracks.
2. Loose plaster and loose plaster ornament.
3. Moist areas.
4. Blistering and peeling of paint.
5. Efflorescence (salty deposit).

Efflorescence, which appears as a salty deposit on plaster, may in severe cases reduce the plaster to a soft powder. It is usually caused by the presence of moisture and soluble salts in the structural backing. Wood or metal lathing generally prevent efflorescence. Efflorescent defects first appear as small, discolored spots. These are followed by white crystal formations which finally break through the paint and leave exposed, crumbling surfaces.

Remove all such areas, waterproof the supporting structure behind them, and replaster.

With respect to the other defects listed above—cracks, loose plaster, moist areas, blistering of paint—try to locate the cause before making any repairs. Unless the cause is removed, the condition is likely to reappear no matter how many times the surface is replastered. Roof leaks, wall seepage, broken laths and sagging beams are among the principal causes of interior plaster trouble.

PAINTING PLASTER

Accepted practices for painting plaster are as follows:

1. Before applying paint, inspect the surfaces carefully to make sure the plaster is tight.

2. Wherever the plaster has been applied directly on tile, brick or cement, before applying paint examine the surfaces carefully for signs of efflorescence. Remove any affected areas, and waterproof the structural wall before replastering and painting.

3. Be sure the surface is clean before painting.

4. If the plaster is new, be sure it is dry and well cured, before painting.

5. Never use zinc sulphate solution on plaster.

6. Do not use glue or varnish size.

7. Use oil base, not varnish base, paints, to assure against blistering and peeling troubles.

STAIRWAYS

Even under the best conditions stairways are a source of danger.

Keep treads clean, and especially, keep them free of

is not enjoying the best of night business and we're working on the old "discount for parking" when the ticket is stamped by the theatre. With the parking problem what it is in our city we had to give screen space for this but we've put the theatre in for the big credit as just another service rendered our customers.

We're going for the old gag of having our ushers wear special ornaments or lettered ribbons to advertise coming attractions. We've recently put out a bride and groom street ballyhoo. We're contacting the merchants who have windows facing prominent bus stops in the downtown area and giving them passes in return for displaying cards on our attractions.

Athletic Nights Planned

In contemplation—with the ground work spaded and building under way—is a series of athletic nights with amateur boxers and wrestlers contending for the Junior Championship. We're trying to get the agencies working on juvenile delinquency to work with us on this and hope that a little more effort and argument will convince them that such activities tie well into the swell work they are doing. We'll also go after the YMCA, grade school recreation teachers and others in similar capacities in an effort to make the events as representative as possible of the general effort being expended to give the youngsters something to do aside from breaking windows and other vandalism.

All of the foregoing is either already in effect or in process of working out details. There are many other activities such as public weddings, guessing contests, new baby week, first baby of the year awards and others too numerous to mention. Consequently no showman has an excuse for accepting the drop in business without putting up a stiff fight.

As I mentioned at the start, there is nothing new in any of these except the modern trappings in which they are presented. We've found that polishing the "oldies" saves a lot of time and does the job of "getting them in." Why not give it a try?

Plan Snow Removal

If heavy snow has not arrived as yet, make plans to have it removed when it does come, during early morning or late at night to alleviate danger of heavy accumulations falling from marquees on passersby. Have someone assigned to keep sidewalks comparatively clear during snowfalls.

Children's Shows Set At Six RKO Theatres

Ten weeks of Saturday morning shows for children, selected from The Children's Film Library sponsored by Eric Johnston and ten film distributors, will be a contribution to holiday entertainment by six RKO theatres beginning December 28.

The six theatres selected by Sol Schwartz, vice-president and general manager of RKO Theatres, for the presentation of series are the 23rd Street, Manhattan; Kenmore, Brooklyn; Midway, Forest Hills; Madison, Ridgewood; Fordham, the Bronx, and Proctor's, Mount Vernon, One of the famous Children's Film Library features will be presented each Saturday morning augmented by 10 selected color cartoons.

Special subscription booklets of tickets covering the entire series of 10 shows have been prepared to sell at $2.50. Single admission tickets for each show go on sale one week in advance.

Keep the Exits Clear

A recent series of inspections in New York City by the Department of Licenses found one theatre with its fire exit doors tied in place so kids in the neighborhood couldn't sneak in. Maybe it kept the kids out, but the License Department inspector found the practice so dangerous he closed the theatre for two weeks in addition to levying a heavy fine.

If an emergency should occur be happy your exits are clear, in working order to permit anxious crowds to stay just anxious and not panic stricken. Keep the exits clear!

all oily or slippery substances.

Keep stairs and railings in structurally sound condition.

Keep constant watch for chipped, splintered or broken step nosings, and repair them at once whenever found.

Keep all hand railings securely fastened.

All hand railing areas in contact with the hand must be kept smooth.

Torn carpet on stairway treads should be repaired immediately.

Loose carpet on stairways is a hazard that should be corrected immediately.

LADDERS

Ladders are always dangerous.

Be sure all ladders are structurally sound at all times. Pay special attention to the condition of the rungs. Replace defective rungs immediately.

Be sure all ladders are well secured at both ends.

Form the habit of inspecting ladders whenever they are being used.

STAGE RIGGING

By the very nature of their use stage rigging, lofts and fly galleries are likely to be overloaded beyond their designed capacity.

Avoid overloading.

See that all structural members—sheaves, ropes and cable are kept in a high state of repair.

In inspecting stage rigging, look for:

Loose or defective sheaves and sheave fastenings.
Wrong size sheaves.
Rotten or frayed rope.
Rusty or frayed cable.
Loose or slipping cable clamps.
Cracked or loosely threaded battens.
Poorly secured or structurally weak pin rails.

FLOORS

Check concrete floors for:

Cracking.
Chipping.
Dusting.
Surface moisture.

Check ceramic tilefloors for:

Slippery surfaces.

Loose or broken tiles. (Loose tiles should be reset, and broken ones replaced, immediately, to prevent progressive damage to the floor.)

Check terrazzo floors for:

Slippery surfaces.
Bad cracks.
Loose sections.

Before attempting to paint concrete or wood floors be sure they are clean and dry. If they are badly deteriorated, have them inspected by a competent building engineer who will advise on repairing them. Paint will not cling to oily, greasy or damp surfaces.

FOUNDATION WALLS

Inspect all accessible foundation walls and footings for water seepage. Consult a competent building engineer promptly on correction of any such condition that may be found.

(All of the foregoing comprises verbatim quotation or paraphrase of a chapter in the book issued to members of classes in the School of Maintenance of Wilby-Kincey Theatres circuit. The book was made available to Showmen's Trade Review for such quotation by the company, which is headed by R. B. Wilby and H. F. Kincey, and is recognized as one of the most progressive and efficiently operated circuits in the United States. The book, according to Mr. Wilby, was prepared not as a manual, but merely to serve members of the classes (which are conducted for managers of the circuit) as a notebook to spare those attending the classes the effort of making their own notes during the talks and demonstrations.)

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

'Ghost' on the Screen Is No Fun for Patrons

One of the most common projection faults and one of the easiest to correct is that gremlin, "travel ghost." And it can happen in the best regulated theatre.

For the benefit of the uninitiated, "travel ghost" is that effect which has its cause in the projector which results in "pulling" of white images over blacks on the screen. It is caused sometimes by the loosening of the set screw which holds the shutter tightly connected with the shaft, thus causing lack of synchronization of the shutter with the frames of film passing before the lens. Another cause is worn gears and still another can be just one or two worn sprocket teeth, causing lost motion which translates itself into a "travel ghost."

Motion picture projection machines are excellent examples of the best in finely machined precision work, manufactured to tolerances of one ten-thousandths of an inch. The parts are of fine, hardened steel and made to stand hard wear. But they can't last forever. It is false economy, now that parts are more readily available, to continue projection with "travel ghost" that causes eye-sight strain as uncomfortable in its after-effects as any innocent amusement-seeker could possibly experience, excepting just the well-known hangover. And it is a question which can cause the worst headache.

A careful check-up on projection equipment now probably will eliminate trouble that sooner or later will keep the customers away.

Reade Circuit Pushes Kiddie Show Publicity

The success of kiddie shows in theatres of the Walter Reade circuit has prompted the setting up of a special committee in the home office to arrange unit trailers and mats in conjunction with each of these shows, it was announced by Walter Reade, Jr., at a meeting of city managers held last week at the new Park Avenue Theatre.

At the same time, Reade cautioned all city managers to be watchful and concerned with bad prints and faulty sound equipment. Said Reade: "What you are selling is your screen, and therefore you must make every effort to have the image on it and the sound coming from it perfect."

Reade also announced that plans are being made to air-condition the Community Theatre, Morristown, N. J.; Mayfair and St. James theatres, Asbury Park, and the Strand, Plainfield. Installations are scheduled for some time this winter.

Present at the meeting were: Murray Meinberg, Plainfield; Harry Burke, Saratoga Springs; Edwin Gage, Jack Harris, Jim Watson, John Marzula, Steve Brener and Reade, Jr., of the home office; Nick Schermerhorn, Asbury Park; Roy Blumenheim, Long Branch; James Mullen, Freehold; Tony Hunting, Red Bank; Rocco Dilione, Guy Hevia, Morristown; Julius Daniels, Perth Amboy, and Robert Case, Kingston.

If You're Going to Deliver a Speech, Heed These Pointers

By ERNEST W. FAIR

Every theatre owner at one time or another reaches that point in his business career when he is invited to deliver an address, or several of them, to perhaps a civic group, or a trade show or some public gathering. And when that time comes it is most important that he make the best possible speech in the best possible manner.

A theatre-owner friend of the writer found himself in such a dilemma the other day and asked that we give him some ideas that would help. We put some pertinent questions to several public speakers, did some "boning" among the sages on the subject and emerged with a list of suggestions which enabled our friend to pull through with the proverbial "flying colors." He suggested that there were undoubtedly many other theatre owners who would benefit from the following pointers:

1. Say it your own way—if you would avoid sounding like a stuffed shirt. In other words, speak in the same style and language you use in your everyday life. It'll come natural; any other will be forced. If you pick up some data or information somewhere, present it in your own words, not those of the source.

2. Talk louder than you have to—not only will you be sure you are being heard clearly but, instinctively, you will put more effort into what you say when you talk louder than normally.

3. Change the pitch of your voice—one pitch becomes horribly monotonous. Whisper some, yell out on another point and use your normal voice, but change the pitch throughout your speech.

4. Keep your points down—you will make a much more lasting and worthwhile impression if you limit your message to three or four well emphasized points than if you attempt to "snow under" the audience with a deluge of facts and fancies.

5. Leave things alone—that means the necktie, the watch chain, the spectacles or anything else. Such nervous activity distracts the attention of the audience. They do not hear what you are saying because of their attention on what your hands are doing.

6. Look good—a good appearance means much toward getting the favorable attention of your listeners; so don't do as so many business men have a habit of doing: delivering their talks in the same clothes they've squirmed around in the their office chairs all day!

7. Watch for repetition—nothing ruins a good speech more quickly than constantly repeating a pet cliche or even a pet word. If it's good, it'll register the first time; if not, then it's best not even mentioned that one time.

8. Stand still—stand in the same position as much as possible; don't put on a military drill in front of your audience. They are not interested in such antics and, besides, it detracts from what you are saying.

9. Don't droop—it pays to stand on your toes when you talk, not to sag or relax. It also pays to stay alert throughout the whole ordeal no matter how tired you may be; to give the audience the impression that you are full of energy and rarin' to go every minute you are talking.

10. Put on a good show—your speech should be the high point of the evening's program; do your best to see that it is. He who begins his speech firmly convinced that he can, and WILL, deliver a better speech than the "guy" who preceded him or the one who spoke the week before, IS going to give a better speech!

11. Work hard on the ending—it doesn't pay to have a top-notch speech and an excellent delivery only to have the whole thing ruined by a poor ending. Say or do something the audience can enter into, can feel a part of, and feel that they have really heard something which was worth the time and energy they spent in listening to you.

12. Never apologize—for the weather, the speech, its length, the hour, your voice or anything else. People don't want to listen to such things and besides, if you call attention to some small thing, the imagination of your audience will seize upon it and magnify it. If there's anything wrong, it is better to cover up the whole business and forget it; maybe no one will notice the situation anyway.

13. Time yourself carefully—the most common mistake of the first-time speaker is to go to one of two extremes, either make his speech too short or too long. No good point can be effectively put over in the average speaker's short speech (few of us can ever reach the heights of Lincoln at Gettysburg), and on the other hand dragging something out only buries it in dreariness. Timing is of the utmost importance.

14. Be careful of jokes—a joke which has no point in your message doesn't belong there. If you must pull 'em, make sure they are well placed, well told and have some relation to your speech. And avoid dialect jokes; it takes an expert to put them over!

Stops the Pops!

Manager Elias Garbett of the Avalon Theatre in Des Moines solved a problem on how to stop his young patrons from blowing up their empty popcorn sacks and popping them in the theatre. He simply took scissors and cut small holes in the bottom of the sacks.— DMO.

Door Checks Noisy?

Those door checks sometimes become short of fluid, are noisy in action. Sometimes the anchorage becomes loose. Place this checking task on the maintenance man's list and eliminate the possibility of noise from this source.

Change the Volume

That heavy winter clothing absorbs sound is a well established fact. Have someone made responsible for raising volume when the theatre fills, assuring correct sound reproduction.

Xmas Tree Ordered?

By placing an order now for the kind of Christmas tree you expect to have for your theatre lobby, you'll have the pick of the crop.

SAN ANTONIO CRACKS DOWN ON JUVENILE SCHOOL ABSENTEEISM

C. D. Leon, Jack Bettis and C. H. Brooks have received a state charter for Starlite Theatres, Inc., Dallas, to do business with $50,000 authorized capital stock.

"Clean up or close up" was the order issued last week in San Antonio to a few theatres. The city juvenile authorities also declared they would prosecute theatre managers, who harbored truant school children, under the laws relating to contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

The Wichita Theatre at Wichita Falls, Interstate's top house there, was closed temporarily last week because a hard rain had loosened plaster on the north wall of the auditorium.

The third of the Sack Amusement Enterprise Negro films, "Dirty Gertie From Harlem, U.S.A.," has been completed at Sack's new studios here. It's an all-Negro picture, as is the whole series, and the entire production was filmed here. Laboratory work on the prints is now being done by Consolidated in Hollywood.

Griffith-Lowenstein have dropped their lease on the Texas Theatre at Gainesville, and C. L. Dennis has announced that he has secured the lease and will remodel and rebuild the theatre. He operates one other house in Gainesville.

D. B. Smith, formerly with the Doak & Smith Booking Agency here, has been added to the staff of the Allied Theatre Owners of Texas local office to serve as film contract representative for members of the organization.

The Kay Theatre at Huntington has been put on a full operating schedule by B. G. Partin and J. B. Reeves.

Duke Clark, Paramount district manager, back from that regional meeting at Memphis.

Bob O'Donnell has been re-elected chief barker of the Variety Club of Texas; Julius Schepps and Fred Honescheidt were re-elected assistant chief barkers, and Harold Schwarz was re-elected dough guy.

WASHINGTON

The Police Boys Band played a concert in front of Loew's Palace Theatre in honor of the theatre's 28th anniversary.

MGM Booker Sandy Singer has resigned to go into the contracting business in Baltimore. Bob Ellsworth, Jr., formerly with the MGM Home Office, has replaced him.

Warnerites celebrating long anniversaries with the company were Charles E. McGowan, contact manager, 28 years; Louis F. Ribnitzki, booker, 18 years; Fred McMillan, manager of the Earle Theatre, 16 years; Charles Pfeiffer, 16 years.

William McCraw, National Executive Director of the Variety Clubs of America, was the guest of the Variety Club of Washington, Tent No. 11, at its Annual Dinner Dance at the Mayflower Hotel on Nov. 23.

New members of the local MGM office are Roberta Elston, cashier dept., who is on transfer from the Home Office for a period of several weeks, and Regina Pearlman, who has been transferred from the Home Office to the local contract department.

TRADE RUMORS RIFE ABOUT ORPHEUM AND MAINSTREET

Work is nearing completion on reconstruction of Dickinson's Windsor Theatre at Windsor, Mo., a new front being the main part of the job.

Trade rumors have it that the Orpheum Theatre here is due for a change of ownership and that the 3,000-plus-seat Mainstreet, which has been closed for over eight years, will be purchased and reopened. Big companies are involved and announcements will probably be forthcoming from New York with RKO and Fox Midwest being chief parties involved in the deals.

The Star Theatre at Warrensburg has a new screen and new screen maskings, and manager Roy Tucker says new projection equipment will be installed shortly.

Mark A. Raymon has been appointed special sales representative for Eagle-Lion Films, Inc., with headquarters here. He will also have supervision over exchanges in St. Louis, Des Moines and Omaha.

Mrs. Clifford D. Miller has sold the Strand at Eskridge, Kansas to Albert Payton of Topeka.

Harold Cohen, formerly MGM salesman in this territory, is now with Cinema Theatre Corporation of Denver.

HARTFORD

Harold H. Maloney, manager of the Loew's Poli, Worcester, celebrated his 10th anniversary as manager of that Poli house last week. The theatre's 20th anniversary was also noted. On hand to wish Maloney the best of luck were numerous show world personalities, including Georgie Jessel.

The Connecticut theatre business held a minor "convention" of some size last week when it was dinner host to retired Connecticut State Police Theatre Inspector, Earl Morin, at the Fairfield Inn. In attendance were theatre men from throughout the state.

Funeral services were held in Hartford last week for Larry LaPenta, 52, stage manager at Hartford's Colonial Theatre. LaPenta is survived by his wife, a daughter, and several nieces and nephews.

Erwin G. Neumann, Connecticut and Western Massachusetts district manager for Interstate (Boston) Theatres Circuit, and Mrs. Neumann are the parents of a baby boy, born at Woodstock, Conn.

COLUMBUS

EARLY XMAS SHOPPING BLAMED FOR CURRENT LOW GROSSES

Local first-runs suffered greatly diminished matinee grosses, and evenings are off too, with managers inclined to blame early Christmas shopping for the slump. "Sister Kenny" had a four day run at the Palace, but then failed to move over to the Grand. The latter theatre has advanced its opening day again, this time to Friday, when it brought in a dual revival bill. "No Leave, No Love" followed an excellent week at Loew's Ohio with a big week at the Grand. "Two Smart People" was off in its week at the Ohio.

Hartman Theatre manager Bob Boda had a big housing-shortage headache when the troupe of "Up in Central Park" came to town. With a cast of 112, Boda was forced to spot them as best he could around town. Newspaper appeals to citizens had little success, so he had to utilize the YMCA, boarding houses, and even some Pullman cars that were idle in Union Station.

Former All-American football star Gaylord R. "Pete" Stinchcomb has joined the staff of the Heart of Ohio, Inc. That organization is currently out to get Federal Communications Commission approval to operate a radio station on a frequency of 660 kilocycles.

Walter Kessler, Ohio manager, was right on the ball when nominees for the title of Homecoming Queen were announced by the university; he had the six girls appear on his stage two days before the big Ohio State-Michigan game.

The Columbus Real Estate Board has placed a $749,275 evaluation on the eleven acre Civic Center site which was chosen for the Frankin Center site which was chosen for the Franklin County Memorial Auditorium.

LAFFMOVIE SWITCHES TO FIRST RUN FOR 'BRINGING UP FATHER;' LOEW'S PARTY SET FOR NOV. 26

The Laffmovie on 42nd Street, which hitherto operated as a subsequent run house with feature comedies and shorts, switched Wednesday to a temporary first run policy for the world premiere of "Bringing Up Father." The opening was in Hollywood style with celebrities attending and tied in with the 34th anniversary of the widely-known King feature comic strip whose daily satire of acrimonious marital life, intermingled with social aspirations, corn beef and cabbage and rolling pins, has a world-wide circulation.

Cinema Lodge, B'Nai B'rith will feature a Hillel Night at the Hotel Astor on Nov. 26. Among the presentations will be a short color film and an address by Dr. A. L. Sacher, national director of Hillel Foundations.

More than 400 Loew theatre managers and their wives will attend the first post-war Thanksgiving party, as guests of President Nicholas M. Schenck, at the Hotel Plaza on Nov. 26, beginning at 11 p.m. On the same date, 20th-Fox will hold a dinner-dance at the Henry Hudson Hotel, featuring turkey in the main course, and including door prizes and the general gamut of festivity trimmings.

Frank L. Fowler, former general manager for the Lyon and Wilder circuits in Virginia, has joined the St. Cloud Amusement Corp., of Washington, N. J., in the same capacity.

"Gallant Bess" will have its New York opening at Loew's State on Thanksgiving Day, and not at tha Criterion Theatre as was previously announced.

He creates reality...

• Only a model wreck . . . but intensely real on the screen . . . thanks to the director of special effects.

Because of his ingenuity and inventive art, pictures are made that without him would be impossible. And when audiences exclaim, laugh, or sit in silence before stark drama, it's often an unknowing tribute to his imagination and technical skill . . . to his power to create reality.

But if he is to exercise this creative power to the full, he naturally requires superior film, perfectly adapted to the particular problem at hand. That's the reason why so many directors of special effects prefer to use Eastman Background-X, Eastman Fine Grain Duplicating Negative, Eastman Fine Grain Duplicating Positive, and other members of the large and well-known family of Eastman motion picture films.

BRIDGEPORT

Among the Bridgeport fans of Cathy Downs, star of "My Darling Clementine," is Mrs. Emma Bracken, of this city. Mrs. Bracken and the actress, whose home is at Port Jefferson, L. I., directly across Long Island Sound from Bridgeport, became fast friends when Miss Downs was on location in Arizona making the picture. Mrs. Bracken was on hand, with her Cathy Downs scrap book, for the opening performance of the film at Loew's Poli, and showed it to many persons in the lobby before and after the show. Astute Matt L. Saunders, manager of the house, made good use of the friendship of the star's fan in his publicity and the Bridgeport Sunday Post commended the picture as "grand entertainment."

OMAHA

CITY COUNCIL PLUGS FILM; 6,000 JAM LISCO, NEB., FOR ARMISTICE DAY CELEBRATION

For the "benefit of all amusement lovers of these United States, and for the citizens of Omaha who have taken him to their hearts and hold him in their esteem," Fred Astaire was enjoined, by the City Council, to reconsider his announced retirement from the screen. The resolution was proposed by Mayor Charles Leeman and passed unanimously by the Council at a recent meeting. That Astaire is a native of Omaha was undoubtedly given due consideration, but the impending release of his starring vehicle, "Blue Skies," may also have been given more than second thought. In any event, visiting Paramount publicity men Milt Mohar of New York, Jim Castle of Kansas City, and Bob Quinn of Denver were around when it happened.

Lisco, Neb., with a population of 231, was deluged with 6,000 Sand Hill residents on Armistice Day, where Robert Taylor and Wallace Beery appeared as the main attraction in the special celebration. Later the stars retired to famous Duck Lore Lodge for a week of hunting, but the expected heavy duck flight failed to arrive during their visit.

CLEVELAND

MOVIE COUNCIL OBJECTS TO PSYCHOLOGICAL FILM DRAMAS, CLAIMS FANS FEEL SAME WAY

A resolution expressing disapproval of the excessive number of pictures based on mystery and murder, and the large number of stories presenting abnormal people with peculiar psychiatric aspects to their characters, was passed by the Motion Picture Council of Greater Cleveland. The Executive Council expressed itself as believing that the field of drama as a whole should certainly include all of these, but that the superabundance of such features reveals a poverty of interesting and varied story material, "overemphasizes the sordid, abnormal and criminal," disregards the large number of children in the theatre on the one hand, and offers to discriminating adults on the other, only a montonous repetition of one type of drama. The Council, whose membership represents the heads of local civic, educational, PTA and women's clubs, claims that this resolution reflects the opinion of a majority of movie fans.

BOX OFFICE SLANT

Appassionata

(Swedish Dialogue, English Titles)

Saga Films Drama with Music 93 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Except for snatches of fine piano concert music and introduction to America of Viveca Lindfors, a talented new star, this picture has little entertainment to offer.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Suitable only for the "art" theatres.

Cast: Viveca Lindfors, George Rydeberg, Alf Kjellin, Georg Funquist. Credits: Written and directed by Olof Molander. Piano compositions played during the film, by W. Witowsky. Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 played by the Stockholm Philharmonic Orchestra.

Plot: A concert pianist meets and marries a young girl and dominates her life. In an insane jealous fit he shoots a friend of the girl's and goes to prison for three years. His best pupil falls in love with the girl. Realizing he can never make her happy, the husband commits suicide.

Comment: Judged by American, British or French standards of production values, "Appassionata" suffers considerably by comparison. And the direction and editing lack smoothness. There are long stretches of dialogue without benefit of interpretative English titles, a factor that will prove irritating to persons with no understanding of the Swedish language and, temporarily at least, breaking the continuity in the minds of average audiences. The recording is only fair, with some sequences "booming" from the speakers, losing the illusion that the dialogue comes from the lips of the persons speaking. Viveca Lindfors, for whom Warner Bros. are now beating the publicity drums in advance of her coming American debut in "Night Unto Night," gives every indication by the excellence of her acting and her electric personality that she will do well in this country. Georg Rydeberg, too, as the dominating pianist, is very good. The picture is best suited for the so-called "art" theatres, where sufficient exploitation of Miss Lindfor's appearance in the film should be enough to make booking it worth while.

The Mighty McGurk

MGM Comedy 85 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Wallace Beery fans and most average audiences will enjoy the star's homely comedy.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do well where ever Beery is popular. May not be strong enough to play alone in some situations, but good as a leader on double bills.

Plot: Ex-heavyweight champion Wallace Beery, a bouncer in the saloon owned by Edward Arnold on the old Bowery, blooms in the adulation of the saloon habitues and is held to his job by Arnold, who threatens him with the exposure of facts he allegedly has about Beery's winning the title by paying his opponent to "take a dive" or to let Beery win dishonestly. At the docks Beery comes upon a youngster, Dean Stockwell, just arrived from England to meet his uncle. Strong affection springs up between the two and Beery adopts the youngster after many trials and tribulations as reform elements attempt to take the child from him.

Comment: While "The Mighty McGurk" follows a stereotyped story, reminiscent of other pictures in which Beery has appeared, it provides plenty of hearty laughs, mostly engendered by the star, but aided no little by the clever characterization of the immigrant boy by young Dean Stockwell. The picture has been given excellent production and direction, and succeeds well in its mission of providing 85 minutes of laughable entertainment, interspersed with a few touching scenes between Beery and Stockwell. Edward Arnold and Aline McMahon are welcome character additions to the cast and the love interest is nicely handled by Cameron Mitchell and lovely Dorothy Patrick. "The Mighty McGurk" should do well wherever Beery is popular, and while it may not be able to stand alone in some situations, it is still good enough to top double bills.

It's Great to Be Young

Columbia Musical Comedy 68 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Entertaining musical comedy that will provide an hour of laughs and enjoyment.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will do nicely on double bills. No strong box-office names, but word-of-mouth will help.

Cast: Leslie Brooks, Jimmy Lloyd, Jeff Donnell, Robert Stanton, Jack Williams, Frank Orth, Ann Codee, Jack Fina, Pat Yankee, Frank Supply, Grady Sutton, Vernon Dent, Milton DeLugg and his Swing Wing. Credits: Producer, Ted Richmond. Director, Del Lord. Screenplay, Jack Henley, from story by Karen DeWolf. Photography, Henry Freulich.

Plot: When three ex-servicemen return from Europe and try to break into show business, they end up with an engagement at a remote mountain resort. En route, they pick up an attractive girl, also heading for the lodge. They put on a gala show that proves to be a great hit. The girl turns out to be the daughter of an old trouper who had objected to her stage ambitions, causing her to run away. But all ends well.

Comment: Admittedly, this moderate-budget production is low on story content and not too sharp on production mountings; but all in all it's an entertaining feature that will please the average audience. "Swing" fans—and young people, especially—will go for the fast music and Milton DeLugg's jazz arrangements. Outstanding number is Bumble Boogie, played and written by Jack Fina (the arrangement has since become highly popular in the country's jazz circles). Leslie Brooks is an extremely attractive girl, but her talents are dubious. However, she's accompanied by a very able cast, including personable Jimmy Lloyd, comedienne Jeff Donnell and veteran character actor Frank Orth. Crooner Bob Stanton does well by several songs.

20th-Fox Drama 146 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: Those millions who have read the novel here transcribed in terms of superb cinematic expression will find the vital characters created by Somerset Maugham aglow with even more warmth and life than in the book's pages. The millions who have not read the novel but who will see the picture are equally certain to be tremendously impressed. This is an important picture that people will rank as a "must" and will remember as a most impressive experience in the theatre.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The potency of "The Razor's Edge" as an attraction was demonstrated even before its first public showing by the spontaneous reaction to advance exploitation and advertising for the premiere at the Roxy Theatre, New York. Pre-release engagements are certain to establish this important screen work as one of the big popular successes.

Cast: Tyrone Power, Gene Tierney, John Payne, Anne Baxter, Clifton Webb, Herbert Marshall, Lucile Watson, Frank Latimore, Elsa Lanchester, Fritz Kortner, John Wengraf, Cecil Humphreys, Harry Pilcer, Cobina Wright, Albert Letondal, and others. Credits: Produced by Darryl F. Zanuck. Directed by Edmund Goulding. Screenplay by Lamar Trotti. From the novel by W. Somerset Maugham. Music, Alfred Newman. Director of Photography, Arthur Miller. Art direction: Richard Day, Nathan Juran.

Plot: Larry Darrell (Tyrone Power) is deeply in love with Isabel Bradley (Gene Tierney) but even her refusal to marry him and share the life he wants to live on his small income is insufficient to dissuade him from a burning desire to find a peace of mind that deserted him when, as an aviator in World War I, his friend had given his life to save Larry from an attacking enemy plane. His search leads him to Paris where he studies with great concentration, to work as a coal miner in Northern France, to the Orient, there he becomes the pupil of a holy man whose teachings bring him to that which he sought: "God's beauty." Returning to Paris he finds Isabel, now married to the formerly very wealthy Gray Maturin (John Payne), living at her uncle's apartment with her husband and two children. They have been wiped out by the market crash of 1929. There is a happy reunion and Isabel's smoldering love for Larry again flares—so much so that she deliberately puts temptation in the way of Sophie (Anne Baxter) whom both she and Larry knew as a girl in Chicago, after Larry has induced Sophie to marry him. Sophie, reduced again to a piteous condition as an alcoholic seeking to forget the tragic death of the husband, ultimately is found dead, and Larry knows that Isabel had deliberately put temptation in her way. He is not bitter but forgiving, however. Isabel knows she has lost Larry forever when he tells her of his plans to return to America.

Comment: An exceptional screen work which brings to life an exceptional novel—one in which there has been combined a raw earthiness with undertones and overtones of soaring spirituality—"The Razor's Edge" is a credit to the American film industry as well as something which long will shine as one of the greatest achievements of the company sponsoring it—Twentieth Century-Fox. Surely, this is a most finished work and a picture that gives evidences, by the rich simplicity with which it tells its story, of the great care and sincerity that has gone into its production. Admitted that one feels it should be shortened, there is no question of the picture's ability to hold its audience from opening title to final fadeout. Seldom has a more carefully-chosen cast given a more painstaking portrayal of every character in every scene of a motion picture. Tyrone Power is a tower of strength to the entire story—he IS the story and the dynamic force that gives vitality to this moving human drama. The range of emotional excitement inherent in this picture is extraordinarily wide. There is nostalgic charm in the scenes recreating the era of the "lost generation" following World War I; romance of a robust and charmingly tender quality; violent human reactions to the violence of accident and death; tremendously moving spirituality in the words and the deeds of the hero in his search for happiness; shafts of glinting frivolity in the hedonistic manners of the character so well played by Clifton Webb; shocking moments of sordid degradation in the terrible fate of Sophie (an "actress" part superbly handled by a consummate actress—Anne Baxter); kaleidoscopic patterns of the "eternal enigma—woman" in the flashing, yet warm, alluring, yet brittle Isabel as very adroitly—and most personably portrayed by Gene Tierney. Producer Darryl Zanuck has said he regards this production as one of the most important he has ever undertaken, and the polish and great skill with which it has been contrived into a finished work is eloquent testimony of the painstaking effort that has gone into the picture—from its expert screen treatment by Lamar Trotti on through the casting, direction photography, musical scoring and editing. This is a picture wrought with consummate artistry and grasp of the technique of production. The result is that no spectator will be conscious of any "mechanics," or tricks of acting or photography—the only feeling is that all this on the screen is naturalness itself; that these characters couldn't do other than as they do in living out the hours and days and years encompassed by the events covered by this story. That is something to the enduring credit of all of the showmen, the artists and technicians associated with the production of "The Razor's Edge."

The Magnificent Rogue

Republic Comedy-Drama 72 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A "sleeper" that will keep the audience laughing throughout its running time. A well produced, smartly directed picture.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will do more than get by on double bills, very neatly filling its niche as a companion feature.

Plot: A veteran returns from the war to find his wife very capably running his advertising agency and about to become involved with a wealthy playboy. With the aid of a scheming woman-photographer who is in love with the husband, they create a marital mixup which terminates in a breach-of-promise suit from a burlesque queen for the playboy and reconciliation for the couple.

Comment: Here is a surprisingly well done light comedy-drama which will please any audience that likes to laugh—and most of them do. Most of the credit should go to Director Albert Rogell for extracting the very most from the situations handed him. Scenarist Dane Lussier turns in a smooth script, and Gerald Adams and Richard Sokolove deserve credit for their clever original story. The cast seems to have had as much enjoyment in making the film as audiences will in watching it. Pretty Lynne Roberts and promising young Warren Douglas do well in the leads. Stephanie Bachelor as the scheming woman-photographer, Adele Mara as the unlettered burlesque queen and Gerald Mohr as the playboy all handle their assignments deftly. The picture has a fast pace that never lets down and can be classified as one of the real "sleepers" among light comedy-dramas of this season.

The Best Years of Our Lives

RKO Radio Drama 172 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A rich, emotional experience. Unquestionably one of the finest motion pictures ever made, it is certain to meet with enthusiastic approval from all types of audiences, with the possible exception of the immature.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: An impressive cast and the extensive national advertising and exploitation campaign already in full swing, plus the certain word-of-mouth approval for the film should make this one of this or any year's top grossers. Long running time may cut into some income, for full houses are almost certain.

Cast: Myrna Loy, Fredric March, Dana Andrews, Teresa Wright, Virginia Mayo, Cathy O'Donnell, Hoagy Marmichael, Harold Russell, Gladys George, Roman Bohnen, Ray Collins, Steve Cochran, Minna Gombell, Walter Baldwin, Dorothy Adams, Don Beddoe, Victor Cutler, Erskine Sanford, Marlene Aames, Michael Hall, Charles Halton, Howland Chamberlin. Credits: Produced by Samuel Godwyn. Directed by William Wyler. Screenplay by Robert E. Sherwood. From the novel, "Glory For Me," by MacKinlay Kantor. Photographed by Gregg Toland. Art direction, George Jenkins and Perry Ferguson.

Plot: Three veterans come home together. One of them canot find his wife, so he spends the first night of his return to civilian life at his buddy's apartment, where he meets their young daughter. When he does locate his wife, she soon becomes restless and seeks the company of other men. He leaves her, realizing his love for the daughter of his friend. Discouraged, he almost leaves town forever, but comes back to find the young girl waiting for him. The third veteran finds his family unprepared for the sight of the hooks he now uses for hands, but he eventually finds the courage to ask his old sweetheart to marry him.

Comment: It is unfortunately too seldom that the motion picture business presents truly fine entertainment such as that in "The Best Years of Our Lives." The combination of an understanding story, perfect casting, superb acting, deft, smooth direction and perfection in production has brought forth a rich, emotional experience. This is not a picture from which any actor, any situation or any other facet may be selected for particular praise; rather it is that rare blending of important elements that brings to audiences near perfection on the screen and leaves them with the realization that here, indeed, is one of the finest motion pictures ever produced. Harold Russell, who plays the young sailor who has lost both hands in the war, is non-professional and Mr. Wyler's pursuasive direction has brought forth, even from this young man, a performance that will convince any viewer of his capability as an actor. His ability to use what he so euphemistically terms "hooks" which Uncle Sam equipped him with, rather than the hands he lost, is inspiring. His problems, his disturbance at the pity with which he is treated by sympathetic but non-understanding persons—even his own family—is an important motivation for part of the plot. Russell, incidentally, actually did lose his hands in the war. Fredric March, Myrna Loy, Dana Andrews, Teresa Wright, Virginia Mayo and newcomer Cathy O'Donnell, plus Hoagy Carmichael and others in supporting roles each deliver inspired performances. The picture as a whole is superb. Its 172 minutes of running time is quite long and may necessitate eliminating one showing from daily performances, but even this sacrifice, if it is one, is worth while to be able to show a picture as fine as "The Best Years of Our Lives." The national advertising and exploitation campaign will help much. Local exploitation should be of the best. No picture ever deserved more. Business should be the best in a long, long time.

Susie Steps Out

United Artists Comedy-Drama 65 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Mildly entertaining comedy-drama lacking smoothness of performance but filled with tuneful songs and music.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will not mean anything extra as a draw, but can be expected to satisfy as a musical comedy supporting number on double bills.

Cast: David Bruce, Cleatus Caldwell, Howard Freeman, Grady Sutton, Margaret Dumont, Percival Vivian.

Adolph Zuzor inaugurated Paramount's 25 Year Club here with a staff evening at the Carlton Theatre when he presented gold watches to the 38 founder members. Prominent among them was Marjorie Booth who has handled periodicals' publicity since 1918. Other notable young old timers were David Gilpin, Jimmy Stratford, Bill Savage and "Eadie" the elevator girl.

Ray Milland surprised many with a really first class impromptu pep talk and Mr. Zukor assured all that when Ray finishes acting he will be found a job on the sales staff. George Weltner and James Perkins also spoke.

Best moment was when films of early conventions and socials with bowler hatted, stiff collared salesmen, were screened. Early shots of a slender Pat O'Connor, now with Ealing, and a tussle haired Reggie Woolf were also revealing.

After screening extracts from early successes and "Calcutta," an excellent thick-ear drama, the evening ended with dancing on the stage.

A nice feature was that Paramount went to the expense of hiring the same dance band for their staff party as they did for their full dress launching of Jimmy Perkins at the Savoy. It is not surprising that many more are almost eligible for the 25 Year Club.

POSTPONE EXHIBITOR MEET DUE TO HOTEL STRIKE; VARIETY TENT POSTPONES BANQUET

Convention co-chairmen William Blatt and William Finkel have announced that the annual convention of the Associated Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania, which was to be held in the William Penn Hotel here on Nov. 25-26, has been indefinitely postponed because of the local hotel strike, which is now in its eighth week and has not yet been settled. At present the strike situation seems just as hopeless as in the beginning.

Another affair which is being delayed because of the hotel strike is the first postwar annual banquet of Tent No. 1, of the Variety Club, which before the war was always held during the month of October. According to tentative plans, contingent upon eventual settlement of the strike, this banquet wlil be held on February 2.

TORONTO

ADVERTISERS HEAR BRITISH SHORT SUBJECT EXPERT

The program of the convention dinner of the Association of Canadian Advertisers at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, organized by the Motion Picture Producers Association of Canada, was featured by an address from Ian Cremieu-Javal of London, England, director of short subjects in the J. Arthur Rank organization. He told of production progress in the United Kingdom, saying that Rank is turning out a film each week to demonstrate Britain's accomplishments since V-J Day. One objective, he pointed out, was to get British films into the schools of the United States and the British Commonwealth and, eventually, into those of the Soviet Republic, to show what Britain is doing.

"We feel that in the production of documentary films we are doing something national. It is a supreme job," he declared.

The entertainment feature of the function was the presentation of a film produced by Audio Pictures Limited, Toronto, showing scenes at the convention still in progress and leading into a musical number by a Toronto choral society. The picture faded out and the chorus was picked up by the choir itself which was revealed with the disappearance of the screen and the parting of the stage drapes.

The president of the Motion Picture Producers Association of Canada is Frank O'Byrne, general manager of J. Arthur Rank's Queensway Studios Limited at New Toronto.

"Men of Tomorrow," the Warner Bros. short dealing with the program of the Boy Scouts, is causing a flurry in early Canadian engagements, following its official endorsement by General D. C. Spry, Chief Commissioner for Canada. At the Lincoln Theatre, St. Catharines, Ont., all Scouts and Cubs paraded to performances as guests of the St. Catharines District Association, the formal order of the district commissioner being included in a theatre advertisement. Manager Mel Jolley of the Marks Theatre, Oshawa, Ont., timed the picture with a local visit of Commissioner Spry and secured a neat tie-up in the news columns of the Oshawa daily newspaper in conjunction with the story on the Boy Scouts' chief. The Oshawa office of the association issued a bulletin on the film.

After enjoying favorable fall weather, the Skyway Drive-In Theatre at Windsor, Ont., has finally called it a season, the other open-air theatre at Stoney Creek, Ont., having closed a short time previously.

Firemen dashed into the Odeon Capitol at Hamilton, Ont., during the Saturday night performance with the theatre packed when smoke filtered through the auditorium. There was no excitement as the fire was traced to a chesterfield in the ushers' room and the show continued without break. The waiting crowd outside merely shouted at the fire-fighters to take their places at the rear of the queue.

Chairman O. J. Silverthorne of the Ontario Censor Board, Toronto, tempted the fates by announcing that no complaints had been received on "The Outlaw" after it had played many Odeon theatres throughout the Province and is now showing at units of 20th Century Theatres, an associate of Famous Players.

Manager Les Preston of the Capitol Theatre, St. Thomas, Ont., has been elected president of the Kiwanis Club in that city, thus indicating his place in the community life there.

After weeks of waiting, the protest committee of the Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario, Toronto, has received no reply from the Canadian Moving Picture Distributors Association regarding the dispute over the revised 1947 Canadian License Agreement covering the increased percentage terms for participating pictures. Because of the deadlock, circuit companies and others have declined to sign new-season rental contracts, a procedure which is customary in August. The film exchanges have asked for a percentage on all sources of theatre revenue, including refreshment sales and property sub-leases.

Odeon Theatres of Canada Limited, Toronto, has been granted a permit for the erection of its $300,000 theatre at Ottawa, Ont., but work will not start until next year because of conditions in the construction industry. Protests have been made to the Dominion Government that all materials should be diverted to essential housing.

Production Continues Below Normal as the Studio Labor Situation Remains in a Confused State; 40 Pictures Before Cameras Also Plagued by Illness

With the labor situation in Hollywood still in a confused state, production continues below normal, with only 40 pictures before the cameras. Pickets are being arrested in unprecedented numbers as arbitration efforts continue. Although a number of pictures are in preparation and still others in the cutting rooms, those before the cameras are far below normal in number. Along with the foregoing factors, the studios have been running into bad weather, necessitating a slowdown in schedules and causing some illness among casts and crews.

One Starts at UA

United Artists managed to put a new film into the running, despite the troubled situation, when Sam Coslow started "Copacabana." Steve Cochran, fresh from his success in "The Chase," gets the romantic male lead.

Joseph Calleia was signed for Hunt Stromberg's "Personal Column," which co-stars George Sanders, Lucille Ball and Charles Coburn. Calleia plays the role of an international jewel thief with a weakness for young and beautiful girls.

The Selznick-United Artists trouble made headlines but actually does not affect present production schedules, since Selznick is not shooting anything at this time.

Production Suspended

Hakim-Litvak's "The Long Night" suspended production for several weeks until Barbara Bel Geddes, female lead, could recover from an appendectomy. The picture, which RKO will release, resumes in late November. It is already over schedule two weeks.

Jane Greer, co-starring in "Build My Gallows High" with Bob Mitchum, was forced to bed by influenza, causing a five-day delay in the starting date for her appearance in the film. Director Lynn Shores, handling the second unit, had further difficulties at Lake Tahoe when heavy snow forced him to move the company to San Francisco. Paul Valentine was added to the cast as the leading heavy in the picture.

RKO put "Flight" into work November 21, with Steve Brodie and Audrey Long cast as romantic leads. Anthony Mann, who wrote the screenplay with Dorothy Atlas, is also directing the picture. Michel Kraike produces under the executive supervision of Sid Rogell. Director William Wellman moved "Magic Town," first of the Robert Riskin Productions for RKO, from the Pathe lot to an extremely large set at RKO Studios. Set represents the central business section of a town whose residents accurately voice the opinions of the nation in quiz polls.

RKO finally managed to put "Seven Keys to Baldpate" into production, but only after considerable sweating and fuming. Jack Haley decided to withdraw shortly before the film was to start, and then Boris Karloff had to be replaced. Phillip Terry substituted for Haley and Eduardo Ciannelli was rushed into Karloff's spot. Director Lew Landers put the remake of a once-famous picture into operation, with Margaret Lindsay another last-minute replacement, subbing for second femme lead June Clayworth, who was hit by flu. The picture, which is shooting at RKO Pathe, is being produced by Herman Schlom under executive producer's Sid Rogell's supervision. Jacqueline White is the feminine lead.

Busy Schedule at Monogram

Monogram remains active, with a Jimmy Wakely western started November 18, called "Drifting Through." Weather delayed production. Kay Morley has the feminine lead. Ford Beebe directs for producer Barney Sarecky. Lee "Lasses" White continues to be featured with singing cowboy Wakely.

Bonita Granville celebrates her 50th screen role in "The Guilty," being produced by Jack Wrather for Monogram release. Also shooting for the studio is "Fall Guy." Walter Mirisch is producing and Reginald LeBorg directing.

Conte for Stack

Richard Conte went into Enterprise's "The Other Love," the David Lewis production directed by Andre de Toth. He replaces Robert Stack, whose serious illness forced him to

Cagneys Take Over General Service Studios

Cagney Productions this week officially began its 25-year tenancy at the General Service Studios, of which William Cagney became vice-president last August after purchasing a sizable interest in the ownership and management of the Las Palmas Avenue lot.

The move-over, originally scheduled for January, 1947, was accelerated by the impossibility of completing production on "The Stray Lamb" within the shooting period allotted to the Cagneys at the Formosa Avenue address.

The General Service Studio deal provides Cagney with stage space and technical facilities for a minimum of two pictures annually, a complete office building for the Cagney personnel, and a private bungalow for James Cagney.

As soon as restrictions on building and materials are lifted, the new Cagney headquarters will proceed with its million-dollar expansion program, which includes additional stage space and television studios against future contingency.

Five Hopalongs Finished; Sixth Starts in April

With five of the six William Boyd-Hopalong Cassidy westerns to be released by United Artists for the 1946-47 season completed "Strange Gamble," sixth in the series, will be put into production early next April, according to Producer Lewis Rachmil.

Completion of this picture will allow the Hopalong company to go into its 1947-48 schedule, calling for six more features in that period, around May 1. With no actual shooting scheduled until April, Rachmil and Boyd are currently assigning writers to the six scripts for 1947-48 program, and expect to have scripts, casts and location spots lined up and ready to go on a one-a-month schedule beginning in May.

Prepare for 'Turtle'

Alfred de Liagre, producer of the play, "Voice of the Turtle," and author John Van Druten, have reported to Warner Bros. Studio to prepare for an early filming of the story. "Turtle" is slated to be one of the top productions on Warners' 1947 schedule.

Buys 'Sleep My Love'

Triangle Productions, Inc., has announced the purchase of Leo Rosten's Collier's magazine serial "Sleep My Love" which will follow "The Bat" on Triangle schedule. The company is headed by Mary Pickford, Buddy Rogers and Ralph Cohn.

'Tower' Next for Dmytryk

Edward Dmytryk, who recently completed "So Well Remembered" in England, will direct "The White Tower" as his next chore for RKO Radio. The script is now being written by Paul Jarrico.

withdraw from the cast. Conte was borrowed from 20th Century-Fox to play the part of a wealthy sportsman. Stack's scenes, including location sequences and a Monte Carlo bathing pool sequence, will have to be re-made.

Screen Guild Ends One

"Return of Buffalo Bill," which has been retitled "Buffalo Bill Rides Again," has been completed by producer Jack Schwarz. William Berke, who produces and directs for SG, is in New York with a camera crew to shoot backgrounds for "Shoot to Kill" and "Judy."

J. S. Burkett, producing under the banner of Hillcrest Productions for SG release, was set to start "Bells of San Fernando" on November 14 on location at the Monogram Ranch, with Terry Morse directing.

Columbia Western Starts

Paul Campbell, Broadway importation, was cast in the juvenile lead of "Stranger from Ponca City," latest in Columbia's series of "Durango Kid" westerns co-starring Charles Starrett and Smiley Burnette. Virginia Hunter has the feminine lead and Derwin Abrahams is directing.

When Penny Singleton's little girl came down with bronchial congestion, shooting schedules had to be rearranged on "Blondie's Holiday" to permit Miss Singleton to remain at home with her ailing child. Orson Welles brought back his "Lady from Shanghai" troupe from Mexico after five weeks of locationing there.

Bogart Film on at WB

Humphrey Bogart returned to his home lot for the first film under his unique 15-year contract and is making "Dark Passage" with his wife, Lauren Bacall. Rory Mallinson was given the part of Bogart's trumpet-playing pal in the mystery-melodrama. Delmer Daves is directing the film, which is being shot in San Francisco almost in its entirety.

Wayne Morris returned last week from Washington, D. C., to check back into the cast of "Deep Valley," in which he co-stars with Ida Lupino and Dane Clark. Morris was gone for a week to serve on the Naval Reserve Policy Board during its first post-war meeting. He is a lieutenant commander. John Abbott was added to "The Woman in White," starring Alexis Smith, Eleanor Parker, Sydney Greenstreet and Gig Young. Curt Bois was signed to play Abbott's eccentric servant in the mystery thriller. Peter Godfrey is directing.

20th Starts 'Captain'

Director Henry King left Hollywood last week in his own plane for Morelia, Mexico, where he will start the Technicolor picture, "Captain from Castile," on November 26. Film stars Tyrone Power and Lamar Trotti produces. Chris-Pin Martin will play an innkeeper and Alan Mowbray will enact the role of a hard-bitten professional soldier.

Ruth Nelson won the part of the teacher of Betty Grable's two children, Mona Freeman and Connie Marshall, in the Technicolor musical, "Mother Wore Tights." Sig Ruman was also added last week as a family friend who encourages Miss Freeman to follow her mother in a stage career.

Added to "Forever Amber" were Richard Haydn, Gilchrist Stuart, Martin Lamont and Paul England, the last named returning to the screen after five years in Washington as representative of the British government. Leo G. Carroll, who is playing Amber's foster father, finishes his role next week and goes to New York for stage appearances. This is his first picture in over two years.

A & C Film Begins

Abbott & Costello are making their first film for the recently formed Universal-International and are also breaking the deadlock of U-I having just one film before the cameras. That film is "The Egg and I," well into its eighth week before the lenses. The comedians' current opus is "Buck Privates Come Home." Robert Arthur is producing and Charles Barton directs the picture, now in its initial week.

Rogers Film in Work

Saddened by the untimely death of his wife, following the birth of a child by caesarean section, top cowboy star Roy Rogers nevertheless started "Bells of San Angelo" for Republic on November 21. Being directed by William Witney, the picture has the usual Rogers lineup. Edward J. White is associate producer.

Sickness struck at Republic, with Virginia Bruce forced out of "Wyoming" because of illness. Virginia Grey replaced Miss Bruce as the second feminine lead. Cast is headed by William Elliott, Vera Ralston and John Carroll and features George "Gabby" Hayes, Albert Dekker and Maria Ouspenskaya.

One of the studio's "important" productions of 1947 will be "Indian Territory," an original story by Martin van Laas, which Republic bought last week for production in Tricolor.

Paramount Producing Two

With the completion of DeMille's "Unconquered" and Hal Wallis' "Desert Fury," Paramount has only two features in production. They are the all-star musical, "Variety Girl," being produced by Danny Dare, and the aviation story, "Blaze of Noon," which Robert Fellows is producing. Pine-Thomas are scheduled to start their biggest effort to date, "Albuquerque," very shortly.

'Red Stallion' Back Home

PRC's most ambitious undertaking to date, "Red Stallion," is winding up a long shooting schedule with interiors at Eagle-Lion studios. Producer Ben Stoloff, on loan from E-L, is bringing the Cinecolor job to a finish, with a cast that includes—besides the many animals—Robert Paige, Noreen Nash, Ted Donaldson and Jane Darwell.

'Life' Begins at MGM

Metro started "The Rich, Full Life," but opening scenes had to be held up because of Elizabeth Taylor's cold. She finally managed to report to the studio and did her first scene—a girl in bed suffering from a cold. Cast includes George Murphy, Mary Astor, Spring Byington and Gene Lockhart. Edwin Knopf is producing and Robert Z. Leonard directs.

"The Romance of Rosy Ridge" finally returned to the Culver City home base after 13 weeks of locations. Roy Rowland is directing the Van Johnson civil war period piece, which features Thomas Mitchell, Marshall Thompson, Selena Royle and Charles Dingle. Longest shooting picture at the lot, however, is "To Kiss and to Keep," which has been before the cameras over 115 days.

E-L Film Sans Title

Eagle-Lion continues to have censorship troubles with its Franchot Tone-Ann Richards starrer, which has been called everything from "His Wedding Night" to what-have-you, with no title thus far suitable to the Johnston office. Flash—Latest title for the film, now nearing its finish, is "Amy Comes Across."

Veiller Joins Liberty As Associate Producer

Anthony Veiller has been signed by Liberty Films to a long-term contract in a production capacity. Veiller will act as associate producer on productions planned for producer-directors Frank Capra and George Stevens, developing the subjects they select to the point of production.

Liberty's 1947 production schedule provides for at least one major feature production from each of the company's producer-directors. George Stevens is preparing "One Big Happy Family," the Joseph Fields romantic comedy to go before the cameras in January. Capra, having completed "It's a Wonderful Life," Liberty's first production starring James Stewart and Donna Reed, is now turning his attention to the Alfred Noyes drama "No Other Man," and Jessamyn West's "The Friendly Persuasion," one of which will be his next production. William Wyler is expected to announce the subject for his first Liberty Film shortly.

Hayes Opposite Scott

George "Gabby" Hayes, 30-year veteran of western films, has been signed by Pine-Thomas to co-star with Randolph Scott in "Albuquerque," a Paramount release. Arleen Whelan gets the top feminine lead, and Ray Enright has been signed to direct.

John Berkes, Joseph J. Greene and introducing Nita Hunter. Credits: Produced by Buddy Rogers and Ralph Cohn, Associate producer, Selmer L. Chalif. Director, Reginald LeBorg. Screenplay by Elwood Ullman from an original story by Reginald LeBorg and Kurt Neumann. Additional dialogue, Fred Freiberger. Photography, Robert Pittack.

Plot: Lack of funds at home causes a young minor to masquerade in her sister's clothes in order to get a job at a night club. Her sister, who worked for an advertising agency, had lost her position because the agency's star singer had fallen in love with her thus causing the employer's jealous wife to have her fired. The youngster, meanwhile, loses her singing spot when the night club impresarios learn she is underage. So she goes to the advertising agency chief to straighten out the mess. Everything ends well when the older sister and the star find a way to their happiness and the youngster is hired for a television show.

Comment: There are several entertaining moments in this release, but inadequate performances, especially on the part of the two feminine leads, Nita Hunter and Cleatus Caldwell, help bog the picture down. Fifteen-year-old Miss Hunter has an excellent voice for a youngster but misses the mark as an actress. Miss Caldwell, an ex-beauty champion, fails to screen well and delivers her lines unimpressively. David Bruce is satisfactory as the male lead, and veteran character actors Howard Freeman, Grady Sutton and Margaret Dumont perform in their usual smooth style. Elwood Ullman's screenplay is adequate, but the dialogue is often corny and the situations too pat. Brightest spots in the film are when songs by Hal Borne and Eddie Cherkose are delivered; plenty of musical value is represented. In spite of its shortcomings, the picture will get by as a middling musical comedy.

Cross My Heart

Para. Comedy-Drama with Music 83 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Highly entertaining comedy-drama that will generate enough laughs to satisfy any fun-seeking audience.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should bring extra dollars to the ticket window because of the Betty Hutton-Sonny Tufts marquee draw, plus the worth of the picture itself.

Cast: Betty Hutton, Sonny Tufts, Michael Chekhov, Rhys Williams, Ruth Donnelly, Alan Bridge, Iris Adrian, Howard Freeman, Lewis L. Russell. Producer, Harry Tugend. Director, John Berry. Screenplay, Harry Tugend and Claude Binyon. Additional dialogue, Charles Schnee. Based on play by Louis Verneuil and Georges Berr. Photography, Charles Lang and Stuart Thompson.

Plot: To get publicity for her lawyer's fiance, a young singer permits herself to be tried for murder. Her finance defends her and in spite of her protests of innocence when she realizes she's likely to be found guilty, he proceeds with the trial and wins her freedom. Once free, she finds the man who committed the crime just in time to keep him from adding her fiance to his list of victims.

Comment: This picture, made almost two years ago, has more than its share of laughs, if one isn't too discerning about the consistency and believability of the plot. It is wrapped around the premise that Betty Hutton, as a pretty young singer, is an incorrigible fibber. How her fabrications always get others into trouble, from which they have to be extricated, provides some clever situation-writing on the part of veteran scenarists Harry Tugend and Claude Binyon. Tugend also produced the film in noteworthy style, and John Berry's direction maintains a neat pace for the most part. Betty is outstanding because of the opportunity to display her thespian talents as well as her singing. She has several excellent tunes, especially one number utilizing a ventriloquist act. With its star names and entertainment values, "Cross My Heart" should mean happy days for the average exhibitor everywhere.

The Magnificent Doll

Universal Drama 94 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Ginger Rogers in a costume picture that is quite a departure from her customary type of role does a fine job. With the excellence of the story and its other entertainment attributes, this film is an attraction that most moviegoers are bound to enjoy.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Title and name draw should attract the initial patronage. From then on it should bring in the expected returns wherever fine dramatic fare has a following.

Cast: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Burgess Meredith, Horace McNally, Peggy Wood, Frances Williams, Robert H. Barrat, Grandon Rhodes, Henri Letondal, Joe Forte, Erville Alderson, George Barrows, Francis McDonald, Emmet Vogan. Credits: Produced by Jack H. Skirball. Directed by Frank Borzage. Original story and screenplay by Irving Stone. Photography, Joseph Valentine.

Plot: This is the story of the penniless young Dolly Payne, destined to become First Lady. Wooed by both James Madison and Aaron Burr, the choice is a hard one until she sees in Burr the lust for power that later proves his downfall. She marries Madison, then Secretary of State, and becomes mistress of the White House. When Burr is imprisoned under charges of treason, she goes to Richmond and succeeds in freeing him.

Comment: A costume picture, this is quite a departure for Ginger Rogers. But that should not hinder its reception in any situation, for it is unusually good dramatic fare, numbering among its many entertainment attributes an excellent historical story, splendid performances and a charming romance. It has an appeal that is quite different from most films in a number of respects. First, it concerns a period in history that almost duplicates our present conditions, which makes it timely; and second, it carries a message that is not only well presented, but offered with such unobstrusive good taste that the entertainment worth of the picture is never interfered with. For thinking people, it is a natural. For all others, it is the kind of dramatic fare they are sure to enjoy. In the role of Dolly Madison, one of the most famous of White House hostesses in American history, Ginger Rogers is excellent. She turns in a delineation of the "Magnificent Doll" that is bound to win the admiration of her many fans, and also win for her many new admirers. David Niven is splendid as the infamous Aaron Burr of history and Burgess Meredith does an outstanding job in the role of the gentle James Madison. Fine, too, are Horace McNally as Dolly Madison's first husband, Peggy Wood as her mother and Robert Barrat as her father. Credit for production excellence goes to Jack H. Skirball, and Frank Borzage has directed capably.

Betty Co-ed

Columbia Comedy 71 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Strictly for adolescents. Mature persons are likely to find its theme uninteresting.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Obviously intended as a supporting feature for double-bill programs. It will fill its intended niche.

Cast: Jean Porter, Shirley Mills, William Mason, Rosemary LaPlanche, Kay Morley, Jackie Moran, Jane Isbell, Edward Van Sloan, George Meader, Patsy Moran, Ray Bennett. Credits: Original screenplay by Arthur Dreifuss and George H. Plympton. Directed by Arthur Dreifuss. Produced by Sam Katzman. Photography, M. A. Anderson.

Plot: Jean Porter, carnival singer, enters snobbish Upton College, becomes popular on the campus and incurs the enmity of Shirley Mills, president of the only sorority on the campus. Jean is framed by Gloria to appear guilty of fraud in a campus election. She is cleared, however, and the two girls become friends.

Comment: The strongest appeal inherent in "Betty Co-ed" is for adolescents. Mature persons are likely to find its theme uninteresting. Acting and directing are just about average for this type of film, and production values are satisfactory. Jean Porter's rendition of one song, Put the Blame on Mame, should be well received. The picture will find its intended niche on a double-bill program.

The Perfect Marriage

Paramount Comedy-Drama 87 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A domestic comedy that should amuse the sophisticates. Especially good fare for the folks who enjoy this type of story (the marital troubles of the rich) and for the Loretta Young-David Niven fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should garner the best returns in the urban and Class A houses, although it is entertaining enough to be favorably received wherever played.

Cast: Loretta Young, David Niven, Nona Griffith, Eddie Albert, Virginia Field, Jerome Cowan, Rita Johnson, Nana Bryant, Charles Ruggles, Luella Gear, Howard Freeman, Zasu Pitts. Credits: Produced by Hal B. Wallis. Directed by Lewis Allen. Screenplay by Leonard Spigelgass. Based upon the play by Samson Raphaelson. Director of Photography, Russell Metty.

Plot: On their tenth wedding anniversary, a man and his wife come to the decision that something has gone out of their marriage. Each one gets mixed up with an old flame. Things look pretty black so that even the in-laws on both sides try to help. But just before the situation reaches the point of divorce, they are able to reconstruct the happiness they thought had been destroyed.

Comment: For the sophisticates "The Perfect Marriage" is good, amusing entertainment; one of those domestic comedies that should draw well in the urban and Class A houses. But for the great middle class, its reception will depend on the draw of the star names, and whether or not the theatre numbers among its patrons people who like the type of story presented: the marriage problem among the rich. For those who do, there is enough delightful entertainment to assure the film a favorable reception wherever played. "The Perfect Marriage" has been given the benefit of excellent production resources, among which is the exquisite wardrobe Edith Head designed for Miss Young. This in itself, will probably attract considerable word-of-mouth, once the women get a peek at it. Miss Young is excellent as the young matron who tries to straighten out her marital troubles and David Niven, back after a long absence, does very well in the role of her spouse. Virginia Field stands out with the splendid way she handles the part of the divorcee seeking some happiness and little Nona Griffith is quite appealing as the child involved. Splendid, too, are Jerome Cowan, Rita Johnson, Charles Ruggles and the other members of the supporting cast. This is a Hal Wallis production, a factor that speaks for itself, and Lewis Allen gets credit for the direction.

The Return of Monte Cristo

Columbia Drama 91 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Actionful, entertaining story of daring deeds that should satisfy average audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The title is exploitable but the marquee names are not strong enough for the film to stand successfully on its own. Good for double-bill programs.

Cast: Louis Hayward, Barbara Britton, George Macready, Una O'Connor, Henry Stephenson, Steven Geray, Ray Collins, Ludwig Donath, Ivan Triesault, Jean Del Val, Eugene Borden, Crane Whitley, John Cory. Credits: An Edward Small production. Screenplay by George Bruce and Alfred Neumann from an original story by Curt Siodmak and Arnold Phillips. Produced by Grant Whytock. Directed by Henry Levin. Photography, Charles Lawton Jr.

Plot: Edmond Dantes, third Count of Monte Cristo (Louis Hayward) and his attorney submit the first Count's will for probate but through the conniving of a judge, the chief of police and a banker their will is declared a forgery and a beautiful young lady, ward of the banker, is declared the rightful heir to the Monte Cristo fortune. Dantes is sent to Devil's Island under the name of a convict who has died, but he and a friend escape, return to Marseilles and one by one dispose of the conspirators. They find, too, that the girl is innocent of knowledge of the plot. Dantes and the girl marry.

Comment: "The Return of Monte Cristo" is well enough produced and directed and the acting is convincing, but the story is weak and improbable. Hayward and Miss Britton make a nice romantic team and George Macready is properly menacing as the chief of police who tries to make Hayward's life a hell on earth. Steven Geray as a patriotic actor whose public rantings against the emperor was the cause of his conviction and sentence to Devi's Island, also is a standout. The picture, as a whole, has enough action and daring deeds to make it enjoyable entertainment for average audiences. The title, of course, is exploitable, but the lack of marquee names may bar single billing.

ADVANCE DATA
On Forthcoming Product

BLAZE OF NOON (Para.) Drama. Principals: Anne Baxter, Sterling Hayden, Sonny Tufts. Director, John Farrow. Plot: Four flying brothers join a commercial airmail line. One of them marries and his wife finds out she has married all the brothers—plus the airmail. The boys live a perilous life; the youngest is killed, another is crippled, and then the husband loses his life in a self-sacrificing crash, but his son carries on in his name.

THE CORPSE CAME CALLING (PRC) Mystery. Principals: Hugh Beaumont, Cheryl Walker. Director, Sam Newfield. Plot: A man dies mysteriously, with a baggage check clutched in his hand. A detective finds several others interested in the check. When he runs down the clues, it develops that the checked bag contains loot from a robbery. He returns the loot to its owners and the criminals are brought to justice.

THE EGG AND I (U-I) Comedy. Principals: Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray, Marjorie Main. Director, Chester Erskine. Plot: A city-bred girl's brand-new husband takes her to a primitive mountain ranch to raise chickens. As a farmer's wife, she does a man's work from dawn to dark and copes with all sorts of unsavory characters. However, these earthy, shiftless people show their true worth in time of need. The couple overcome a threatened domestic triangle, too, and start anew on a modern ranch.

VARIETY GIRL (Para.) Comedy-with-music. Principals: Mary Hatcher, Olga San Juan, De Forest Kelley. Director, George Marshall. Plot: Suggested by the history of the Variety Clubs of America, this relates the amusing adventures of two girls when they crash the gates of Hollywood. At the climactic Variety Clubs convention, both girls land minor screen contracts.

AUDIENCE CLASSIFICATIONS OF NATIONAL REVIEWING COMMITTEES

This information should be filed for reference when a picture is played in order that the theatreman may quote classifications of recognized reviewing committees independent of the industry when parents, guardians or local groups inquire as to the suitability of the picture for children and young people.

Feature	National Board of Review	Schools M. P. Committee	National Legion of Decency	General Federation of Women's Clubs
Able's Irish Rose	Family	.....	.....	Mature Family
Dick Tracy vs. Cueball	Family	.....	Adults	Adult
Never Say Goodbye	Mature	.....	Objectionable in Part#	.....
The Welldigger's Daughter	Mature*	.....	Objectionable in Part#	.....

NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW: Founded in 1909 "to represent the interests of the motion picture public," maintains a Review Committee consisting of some 300 men and women of all ages, "representing a cross-section of public taste." Designations: Family—14 years of age and up (recommendations for age groups under 14 by Schools M. P. Committee of the Board); Mature—18 years and up. *—Especially worth seeing.

SCHOOLS MOTION PICTURE COMMITTEE. A committee of the National Board of Review which "represents groups of parents and teachers from public and private schools," whose purpose is to select pictures "suitable for age groups 8-12 and 12-14."

#—Objection: Suggestive dialogue.

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS. The motion picture committee is headed by Mrs. Arretus F. Burt, Chairman, of St. Louis. Two reviewing committees are maintained—Mrs. Harry Lilly, New York, Chairman Eastern Committee; Mrs. John Stearns Thayer, Los Angeles, Chairman Western Committee. Designations: Family—8 years and up; Mature Family—14 years and up; Junior and Senior High School Students and Adults; Senior High School Students and Adults. —Exceptional

for the LOVE of MIKE

Greater love hath no man in this business than he who elects to spend a second 20 years at the same studio.

Twenty years is far more than the life expectancy of average studio relationships with stars and directors. But that's how long Mike Curtiz has worked for and with Warner Bros.

You'd think both parties would have developed an acute case of cabin fever by this time. It hasn't worked out that way. Our joint and individual struggles have resulted in a strengthening of mutual respect.

Mike still loves us and we're proud of it. As for us, we love him.

Mike is a truly great director. He has been much in demand. He could have written his own ticket—anywhere in the industry. He chose to write it at his home studio.

We applaud Mike and to him go our best wishes for continued success.

TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF TALKING PICTURES

Jack L. Warner

Saying It With Shows

This corner, which has remarked on the potential danger of what seemed to be a well-organized campaign of ridicule of Hollywood for an "escapist attitude" (whatever the hell that is), now begins to feel quite a bit reassured about it all.

And why?

Well, Hollywood is answering back. With some good verbiage, like Darryl Zanuck's retort to Sam Goldwyn's cracks about Hollywood's "fat cat" complacency, to be sure. But that's not half so eloquent as the answers Hollywood is giving right up there on the screens. Which is precisely how Hollywood should answer.

Look at the record.

Columbia's current "The Jolson Story" is in its eighth week at Radio City Music Hall. And, cousins—wherever you are—that's a lot of weeks to run at a theatre where the seating capacity is just about 6,000.

M-G-M recently has screened for the press two pictures titled "Till the Clouds Roll By" and "The Yearling." And just wait till the public gets a look at those sensational shows. You'll think you are seeing double when you look at the crowds lining up if you play them.

Paramount currently has on show at its big theatre in New York a film called "Blue Skies" and the public loves it for just what it is—a grand and glorious show of surpassing eye and ear appeal.

RKO, as the purveyor of the creations of Samuel Goldwyn, now has on view at the Astor Theatre, New York, "The Best Years of Our Lives," and if it is not one of the greatest pictures of all time, it acted an awful lot like that when we saw it. Also, RKO offers "Song of the South," new, perfectly grand Disney work that is sure to influence millions of people and win new friends for films.

Twentieth-Fox gave a world premiere to "The Razor's Edge" in New York, and the crowds ever since have been storming the Roxy theatre at a rate that has given the big showhouse a new all-time money record.

That's just a few of the pictures—many other big ones are now making their rounds of the later runs.

It's a very lively answer to the criticism of Hollywood. And on the evidence we don't think you will get very far selling Hollywood.

Which Message?

The three branches of the motion picture industry, through responsible representatives, now are engaged in an effort to comply with a request from government officials to co-operate in giving circulation to "message films" that may be necessary, or at least helpful, to government agencies in the performance of their work. There is no doubt of the sincerity of this industry's stand that every effort, even if it means a sacrifice of valuable screen time, will be made to work with the government for the welfare of the country as a whole.

The difficulty, which it may be hard for the government officials to grasp, lies in the film itself. It's an old story to this business, that, no matter how fine the plans may be for a picture, there is only one way to judge the value of a film as a prospect for a booking at the commercial theatre. That, of course, is when the final print of picture is ready for screening. That's very late—so far as the investment of the producer is concerned—but it's the earliest time at which a showman can tell whether or not the picture belongs on his screen.

Due to the situation, the government agencies and the national charity organizations which may appeal for screen time must make an investment in script, production costs and a finished print and on the basis of the finished work take the verdict as to whether the film gets a lot of showings, a few, or none at all.

Observations

As a sidelines observer, we don't think those exhibitor leaders who are harping on the "artificial shortage" theme are getting very far with it as a means of indicting, or even needling, the distributors.

For one thing, the shortage situation is rather spotty—acute here and there hardly noticeable, according to individual territorial situation.

For another thing, there's nothing "artificial" (in the commercial sense) about it, and the people who are yelling about it know that very well.

The reason the distributors are releasing fewer pictures is that the market cannot absorb them faster. The bottleneck, of course, is the first run situation.

Our congratulations and best wishes to United Artists and Enterprise on the distribution deal concluded between them this week.

Congratulations are in order for each, because both have made excellent choices of a working partner.

It follows that both will have the best wishes of large numbers of industry people—there's a lot of fine fellows in each of the two outfits.

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

COAL—As John L. Lewis fought a contempt of court action and soft coal miners stood by idle, a fuel-saving brownout bowed in once more in over 21 states of the nation. Business for the first few days of dimmed marquees dropped throughout the areas, and showmen were wondering whether this was just a temporary reaction which would wear off, or whether it was another headache to add to a series of headaches in the exhibition field.

Theatres everywhere were complying with brownout and fuel-conservation requests. From Chicago, first word of a possible theatre shutdown came as Essaness reported some of its houses' coal piles were low and that the theatres would close when fuel ran out. Several other circuits and independents were said to be in the same position. In St. Louis the Solids Fuel Administrator warned theatres that when their coal ran out, there would be no more.

The dark picture was lightened by several factors: (1) Many houses burn oil or have a sufficient coal stock; (2) Business and labor seemed to be making an effort to get the coal situation settled outside the government.

LITIGATION—The law front continued to be an active one in the industry.

In Baltimore the Linden Theatre settled its suit against the majors and Rome Theatres for the Met, one of the Rome houses, and a revised system of clearance which splits product between the Rome, Rialto and the Linden, and which gives the Met first neighborhood run.

In Washington Sidney Lust, two-time loser of his Kaywood Gardens Theatre clearance fight—once before the arbitration board of appeals, once more in the New York statutory court which refused to assume jurisdiction in the matter—filed another suit in federal district court. Lust is now giving the legal-minded a chance to argue whether a complainant, after voluntarily submitting to arbitration, has the right to appear in court.

From Illinois would come another friend to that court of many friends—the New York federal statutory court which is writing the decree that will run the industry. The Palace Theatre of Cicero claims it has information on buying which might prove of help and asks to be admitted to the crowd of amicus curiae.

The winding up of the Philadelphia Goldman-Erlanger case is expected soon, with the court giving both sides two weeks to write a decree together. Otherwise, the court will write it.

And way out on the west coast, a hung jury in the suit of Venetian Theatres and Theatre Investing Company against National Theatres and the majors, has caused the plaintiffs to ask for a new trial. In Chicago, the Libery Theatre has hired Lawyer Louis Philon to buy film for it. Claim is that delay in the reopening of the recently acquired theatre, a former Manta and Rose house, is being caused through lack of product.

The United States Court of Appeals at Kansas City dismissed an appeal of the St. Louis Amusement Company against Paramount et al, on the grounds that it was taken prematurely. The dismissal was on technical grounds and did not pass upon the merits of the damage suit.

EXHIBITION—RKO plans to build a series of showcases in the Latin American field, with hopes of eventually taking in all localities where a house could gross normally $2,000 a week, Latin American Field Supervisor Jack Osserman declared this week. Osserman thinks dubbing is out in that field and that titled films will do the job better.

The Motion Picture Theatre Association of Ontario this week was advised in Toronto that the Canadian Motion Picture Distributors Association did not intend to collect on the sale of candy or other confections.

In Harrisburg, Pa., two houses were playing reissues, evidently because of a tight product situation, but in New York, the Century Circuit finds that there is an ample number of pictures and states that it believes single featuring of big pictures is advisable.

LABOR—The Hollywood coast strike continued quietly this week with apparently no progress toward settlement. CSU President Herbert K. Sorrell and 13 associates were indicted for "criminal conspiracy" by the county grand jury and the inquiry into violence continued. Harrisburg, Pa., Painters and Paperhangers, who were to discuss the question of cooperating in a theatre boycott if called by CSU, failed to do so at their recent meeting due to a press of other business, it was explained.

PRODUCT—MGM may hold down production in 1947 to 26 pictures, a move thought likely because the company at present has 31 unreleased pictures. Paramount announced production of 16 features on a high-budget basis.

* * *

TAXES—Vermont is considering a 10 per cent tax on amusements admissions estimated to yield $225,000 and a reel tax of 50 cents a reel for each showing of a reel. Tulsa, Okla., is seeking a tax on theatre tickets of one cent on each 10 cents of admission prices.

The News Spotlight

HERBERT J. YATES, president of Republic Pictures this week declared Hollywood "as entertainment" leader of the world had a responsibility to buoy the public spirit and dispel talks of recession. Yates spoke as cameras turned on Republic's "Gallant Man" directed by Frank Borzage, first of three top budget features costing $4,000,000.

FRED WEHRENBERG, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Association of America, who this week foresaw a future of better pictures accompanied by longer engagements which would include fewer changes a week in the subsequent-run field.

Homer E. Strowig

(The Man on the Cover)

Owner and manager of the Plaza and Lyric Theatres, Abilene, Kansas, and president of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Owners Association. Strowig assumed the presidency of the exhibitor organization recently. He has been active in the association for the past fifteen years, having served as Director or Officer and as vice-president. He entered the theatre field in 1927 when he purchased the Seelye Theatre, Abilene. Two years later he acquired the opposition house, the Lyric. A past commander of the American Legion, Strowig is an active organization man; holds membership in the Veterans of Foreign Wars, is a past president of the Abilene Lions Club, is chairman of Abilene's "Will Bill Hickok Rodeo." He served as Mayor of Abilene from April 1945 to April 1946; was elected as City Commissioner in 1943 and re-elected for another three-year term this year. In his theatre operations he is associated with his two sons, Robert and Calvin, both of whom have worked in every department of theatre operation and management. Strowig's hobby, as well as that of his sons, is aviation; all three of the Strowigs hold pilots licenses and make all lengthy trips from home by air.

Plan On Gov't Films Sent to Organizations

Methods of clearing government and charitable association films for playing time on the screens of the nation's theatres this week awaited ratification of an all-industry cooperative plan submitted to leading exhibitor, producer and distributing organizations.

That the ratification would not be speedy was indicated by the fact that as late as Wednesday only one reply had been received—and that from an exhibitor association which said it would have to poll its directors for approval, a move that might extend into the New Year.

The present plan calls for a 12-man industry committee. It was evolved by meetings of a special committee appointed to study the matter as an aftermath of a meeting held last week in the White House with John Steelman.

The 12-man committee would comprise members from National Allied, Conference of Independent Exhibitors Association, American Theatres Association, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, the Confederacy of Southern Associations, National Distributors Committee, Motion Picture Association of America, Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, the newsreels and the trade press.

Reviewing Committee

Further suggestion was made that a reviewing committee consisting of Allied, ATA, CSA, MPTOA, Independent Theatre Owners of America, the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners and the National Distributors Committee, be organized.

All films passed upon would have to be factual, of important public interest, non-political and non-controversial, and be identified by their sponsors so the public could know the source of the film it was viewing.

The organizations that were to be part of the committee were asked to consider the suggestion promptly and report back their reaction.

United Artists Sells To Chicago's Essaness

United Artists this week broke away from Balaban and Katz and the Great States circuit in the Chicago territory to sell first and subsequent runs to the Essaness circuit.

Et tu, Brute . . .

Theatrical costs have risen so that dramatists must look to the motion picture rights of their plays for profits, Shakespearean actor Maurice Evans, who appeared in Milwaukee with his "GI" version of "Hamlet," said in that city.

"Theatrical productions these days," Evans declared, "costs so much money that they must play a couple of years before they meet the investment. As a result, playwrights and backers must depend on the sale of their play for motion pictures as the source of profit on their venture. So writers keep an eye on Hollywood instead of concentrating on the theatre. And so we get few plays that will last."

Express Rates Up Dec. 13

Exhibitors throughout the nation will face a substantial increase in their express rates on film after Dec. 13 when the new rates of the Railway Express Company go into effect.

The rate scheduled in localities will vary with distances involved, but a general increase of 20 cents on 100-pound shipments, with shipments under 100 pounds facing a proportionately greater increase than those of 100 pounds or over, was announced.

The average feature film shipped in a metal container is said to weigh about 105 pounds. Newsreels usually average 12 pounds while shorts of 2000 feet total 18 pounds. Exhibitors playing several changes a week may be able to bulk shipments on several items to get into the 100-pound category and avoid the proportionately higher rates on shipments of less than 100 pounds.

The raise applies to all express shipments with the exception of newspapers, milk and related merchandise.

Brownout Bows in With Coal Strike; Business Bows Out

Dim Lights Hit Nation's Grosses; Houses With Low Coal Piles Hint at Closing

Broadway's monster-sized signs went dark Monday night at 6 p.m. giving dramatic impact to a coal-conserving brownout making itself felt in 21 states and the District of Columbia.

While normal theatre operations continued in all section and while coal supplies for ordinary fuel needs and heat were said to be fairly good, the first night of the brownout was met with a drop in theatre attendance which carried over into the week.

Showmen, who figured that war experience would make their patrons take a brownout as a matter of course, especially since the streets in most affected communities were well lighted, were surprised at this sudden turn of affairs. Some believed that the initial drop off was the usual Monday night business worsened a bit probably by the situation. Others thought that it was particularly noticeable in theatres which were nearing the end of their regular runs.

In New York the majority of Broadway houses as well as the neighborhood circuits found business off. Oscar Doob of Loew's, Inc., said he did not know what the cause was but "everything went to pot" Monday night. Loew's operates both downtown and neighborhood houses in the greater New York area.

Supporting Doob's views were the Cinema circuit, operating houses which depend upon flashy fronts in a great measure for their patronage. A spokesman for that group said that business was decidedly off.

Crowds Decrease

The Paramount Theatre also noted a drop, while Montague Salmon of the Rivoli said he did not know whether or not it was because his picture was nearing the end of its run but there had been a drop in his attendance. On Monday he said he noticed a decrease in crowds passing his theatre, adding that the only time the street was crowded was when the legitimate shows "broke."

The Roxy, which is playing "The Razor's Edge" said their Monday afternoon business had topped previous Monday afternoons by a large sum, but their night business was off. Associate Director Irving Lesser added that a check showed that fewer unescorted women attended the theatre than usual and wondered whether this was not due to the early stage of the brownout and would wear off later.

Two more Broadway houses estimated their

Settle Linden Trust Suit Out of Court

Baltimore's $225,000 damage anti-trust suit of the Linden Theatre against the rival Rome Theatres, Paramount, Universal, United Artists, Columbia, 20th Century-Fox, Loew's (MGM), Warner Bros., and RKO, was settled out of federal court Tuesday with the defendants agreeing that the Linden should acquire a theatre belonging to Rome and get a revised clearance setup.

The suit, first of its kind reportedly settled out of court in recent years, was filed last March.

The settlement provides that the Linden Theatre will acquire the Met Theatre, hitherto owned by Rome, located about half a mile away from the Linden. In addition it provides for changes in clearance whereby the Met, under Linden operation, will enjoy a first neighborhood run without clearance over either the Linden or the Rome Theatres' Rialto, which is across the street from the Linden.

The Linden will become a first-run neighborhood house for the product of Warner Bros., RKO, United Artists and one half of both MGM and Paramount. Its clearance over the Rialto will be 14 days.

The Rialto will be first run for 20th Century-Fox, Universal, Columbia and the remaining half of MGM and Paramount, having 14 days clearance over the Linden.

Before the suit Rome played Warner Bros., Paramount, RKO and United Artists on first neighborhood run at the Met, while it played the remainder of the major defendants' product at its Rialto. The Linden played Warner Bros., Paramount, RKO and United Artists 14 days after the Met.

receipts at 50 per cent off, though the pictures playing there had been running for several weeks.

Tuesday crowds continued to seem comparatively slim on Broadway, which may have been due to the weather.

Reports from the remainder of the country observing blackout however, indicated that there was a noticeable drop which in some instances reached very high proportions.

Exhibitors on the whole would be inclined to believe that any loss caused by brownouts would soon remedy itself as the people grew accustomed to darkened marquees. However, the economic results of the present situation is what is worrying the majority of showmen who have given the matter a thought.

$4,000,000 Daily Wages Lost

At present estimates are that wages lost by miners directly attributable to the strike is $4,000,000 a day. This amount, it was pointed out, is bound to have an impact on the communities where the miners live and spend their money. On this basis miners who have been idle since last Wednesday have lost $42,500,000 in salaries. Added to that will be salary losses due to indirect results of the strike on industries which have to close down because of coal shortages. This mounting sum is bound to be reflected in decreased purchasing power, it was pointed out, which in turn will have an affect on the box-office eventually.

In addition to the District of Columbia, 21 states were under a brownout order. These are, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin, all were under brownout.

To date no reports of any violations had been filed against theatres, though merchants in many sectors had received warnings about keeping their display windows lighted at night.

In the St. Louis area, where some 600 theatres were said to be cooperating in the move to conserve coal, theatres, schools, restaurants and taverns had been warned by the Solid Fuels Administrator that when their coal supplies were exhausted, they would receive no new ones.

Fred Wehrenberg, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, a resident of St. Louis, wired President Truman pledging the MPTOA's "whole-hearted support and cooperation in the emergency now facing the American people," and asking the President "to take a firm stand against the illegal walkout of the United Mine Workers of America."

Essaness May Close Houses

First of the circuits to indicate that the coal situation was grave insofar as it was concerned and would cause a disruption of operations was the Essaness circuit in Illinois.

A spokesman for that group in Chicago said that some of its houses had only a few days fuel on hand and unless more could be procured, these houses would be closed until the emergency is over.

Other circuits and some independents in that area were said to be facing similar prospects before the week was out. Several houses have discontinued matinees, which was due in part to the coal situation and partly to decreased business due to the Thanksgiving holidays.

Cancellation of railroad runs out of many exchange areas due to the coal strike was not affecting film shipment deliveries in this area. Most of the motion picture theatres served out of these areas receive their film by motor delivery and those who did not were able to meet such threats by the use of private automobiles.

A number of theatres in southern Illinois where the communities are largely dependent upon the mining industry and its works for a livelihood, feared that a prolonged strike would eventually hurt the box office. Past experience shows that during the early part of a strike, business actually improves as the idle workers seek something to take up their time.

Hint Strike Settlement; Indict Sorrell, Others

Hollywood's jurisdictional strike continued to plod on this week, but rumors late Wednesday from the coast hinted that a settlement of the many-angled dispute might be in the making. Studios seemed also to be getting a little more work done.

The Los Angeles County Grand Jury returned indictments against Herbert K. Sorrell, President of the Conference of Studio Unions, which called the jurisdictional strike, and 13 of his associates for "criminal conspiracy" in connection with the strike. Investigations into the bombings of the past weeks continued.

Rank Buys Entire Control of Odeon

Full ownership of Canada's Odeon Theatres was acquired this week by J. Arthur Rank through purchase of the interests held by Paul Nathanson, son of the circuit's founder, N. L. Nathanson. Rank also bought out Nathanson's interest in Eagle-Lion and Monogram Pictures of Canada. Canadian Odeon has approximately 100 houses.

Didn't Talk Boycott

Whether or not to boycott or picket Harrisburg Theatres if such a request were received from the Conference of Studio Unions in Hollywood as part of its reported nationwide plans to attack major producers and actors who have disregarded their picket lines, was not discussed by the Painters and Paperhangers Local 411 (AFL) at its meeting in that Pennsylvania city last Friday.

The subject had been scheduled for discussion but Business Agent I. W. Wood said the members had so much local business on the agenda that the matter was not reached. Wood added it might come up at the Dec. 13 meeting if national headquarters issues any instructions on the subject. The Carpenters union was to discuss the matter this week.

'Strange Woman' in 8 Cross-Country Holdovers

United Artists' "The Strange Woman," deprived of its New York opening through theatre difficulties, got off to strong starts in cross-section openings over the country and Friday had entered the second week of its runs in Atlanta, Dayton, Toledo, Harrisburg, Reading, Pa., Richmond, Norfolk and Syracuse.

Other United Artists bookings holding over are "Bachelor's Daughters" at the Seattle and "The Chase" in New York.

Warners' "The Big Sleep" was boasting a seventh week in Chicago, while "Deception" held for that long also in New York.

Universal's "The Dark Mirror" was closing this week in New York after reaching six weeks; continued to run through five weeks in Chicago, through three in five Los Angeles theatres, and was ending its third in Baltimore. Two-week runs were reported for Erie, Pa., San Francisco, Long Beach, Calif., San Diego and Champagne, Ill.

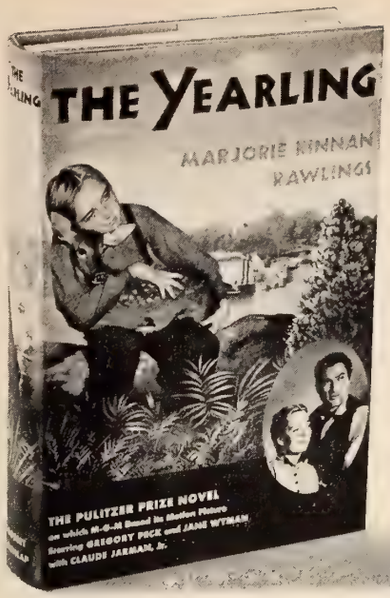
"The Notorious Gentleman," in its third week in Los Angeles, entered a second in New York, while "Brief Encounter" was running up 14 weeks in New York, six in Los Angeles, five in San Francisco, and two in Providence. "The Years Between" rounded out its second Boston week.

"The Killers," returning to Broadway, went into a second week at Loew's State, with the Thanksgiving opening of "Gallant Bess" being held up.

In Philadelphia, the English documentary "The Raider" held over for a fourth week at the Capitol, the first fourth week run in the history of the house.

Columbia's "The Jolson Story," in its eighth week at Radio City Music Hall, went through five weeks in Buffalo and San Francisco, and four weeks in Los Angeles, Oakland and Cincinnati.

Keegan Northio Manager



Appointment of Jack Keegan as general manager of Northio Theatres Corporation to succeed Harry David, resigned, was announced this week by Leonard H. Goldenson, vice-president of Paramount Theatres operations. Keegan will assume his Northio post on January 1, taking over the 20 theatres operated by that Paramount partner in Kentucky and Ohio.

Portland Robberies Jump

Theatre robberies in the Oregon area took a jump this week with authorities warning exhibitors to be especially careful. Among the losers was the Paramount Theatre of Portland when Cashier Betty Campbell was compelled to turn over $300 at gun point, and the Kenton Theatre in Portland's suburbs where bandits got $100.

Rank Representatives to Meet

Sales representatives of the J. Arthur Rank division of Universal Pictures will meet for the first time at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago on Dec. 5-6, Rank Division General Sales Manager William J. Heineman announced this week. The national sales policy for Rank product distributed by Universal will be discussed.

Lust Sues on Clearance In Kaywood Gardens Case

Washington, D. C. Exhibitor Sidney Lust Tuesday filed suit under the Sherman Act in the federal district court at Washington against Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, Loew's (MGM), Columbia, Universal, United Artists, RKO and the Louis Bernheim Theatre Company.

The suit is for injunctive relief and for $200,000 damages, which under the law can be tripled to $600,000. It is another round of the Kaywood Gardens Theatre fight which Lust lost before the arbitration appeals board and lost again in New York when the federal statutory court refused to take jurisdiction.

Lust claims that the Bernheimer Village and Newton theatres are receiving preferential clearance over his Kaywood Gardens Theatre. The Village, he claims, receives pictures 21 days after Washington downtown houses, with the Newton following them on a moveover basis. The Kaywood plays behind both these houses.

Expect Verdict in Goldman Suit Soon

Philadelphia's exhibitors this week wondered what would be the ultimate effect of the decision which is shortly expected in the suit of William Goldman against several major distributors and theatre chains over the claim that he could not get product for his Erlanger Theatre.

The court this week gave both sides two weeks in which to agree upon a decree, stating that if such an agreement could not be reached, the judge would write the decree himself.

Seattle Suit Ends With 'Hung' Jury

Counsel for the Theatre Investing Co., Seattle, and the Venetian Theatre Company this week said they would seek a new trial in the suit of those plaintiffs against National Theatres and several major distributors under the Sherman Act.

The suit, which had been heard for seven weeks, ended in a mistrial Monday when the jury was "hung" seven to five after over 50 hours of deliberation. The plaintiffs had claimed the defendants had sought to set admission prices and had denied them product. All defendants denied the charges.

Attempt to Gain Run By Injunction Fails

Attempts of the Normandie Theatre in New York to procure an injunction restraining Universal from booking "Canyon Passage" into the Park Avenue Theatre failed late last week when the state supreme court denied the injunction. Th Normandie had claimed it was entitled to move up a run and take over that which had formally been granted the Plaza Theatre when that house canceled the "Canyon Passage" showing.

2 Houses Boost Prices

The Oklahoma City Uptown Theatre has raised its top price for adults to 50 cents, a five-cent boost. A similar boost to 40 cents has also been put into effect at the Villa.

Turkeys, But Not on Screen

Alliance Theatres of Illinois estimated this week that it will use up more than 500 turkeys for giveaways on Thanksgiving and Christmas in its houses. The turkeys are part of local tieups with merchants.

UA Approves Enterprise Domestic Release Pact

The Directors of United Artists this week approved a distribution deal for the domestic distribution of Enterprise Pictures which was referred to the Enterprise Board of Directors for ratification.

Under its terms, which presumably cover the Enterprise announced schedule of six pictures, first of the features to be released would be "Arch of Triumph." Foreign distribution of Enterprise's program reportedly will be handled by Loew's International.

Enterprise, which was founded by David Loew and Charles Einfeld, originally had a distribution deal with Universal which was canceled when the production unit of that company was merged with International to form Universal-International.

The United Artists directorate also voted to extend a distribution contract with Jules Levey for two pictures.

Academy Changes Rules For 'Oscar' Competition

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, which issues the industry "Oscars," revised its by-laws this week to meet the current situation whereby delayed playing of motion pictures would have barred a good percentage of 1946 product from entering the competition.

Under the revision, pictures which hitherto had to play to the public in a regular theatre to qualify for the competition now may qualify by playing seven times before Academy nominating bodies. The producer must, in addition, notify the Academy in writing of his intention to enter the picture in the competition.

Hires Lawyer to Buy Film

Louis Philon, who recently took over the Liberty Theatre at Michigan City, Ind., from the Manta Rose circuit, this week retained the service of Attorney Seymour Simon to see if film could not be procured for the house. Philon claims that he had not been able to buy product satisfactory to him, which is causing a delay in reopening the house upon which he says he spent $50,000 for repairs. The Liberty was formerly the Lake.

RKO Seeks Latin American Showcases

RKO plans to expand its theatre holdings into the Latin American field, with the eventual aim of having "a showcase in every good sized town," Jack Osserman, RKO Supervisor for Latin America, declared in New York Wednesday.

By a "good sized town," Osserman said, he meant a situation which could be normally counted upon to average $2,000 a week gross.

The RKO supervisor predicted the eventual elimination of dubbed films, stating that they seemed to have failed their purpose and predicted they would be supplanted by films with superimposed titles or films made in Spanish whose quality equaled that of American-made product.

Speaking of dubbed pictures, Osserman said that he felt the dubbing could accomplish good only in the interior sections where there is illiteracy. This interior theatre business, he said, represented only 20 per cent of the Latin American business and the 80 per cent came from the metropolitan areas where, he claimed, he had found dubbing was resented.

"In all my experience," said Osserman," I have found that the Latin feels a little bit offended if you try to make him believe that it's Cary Grant or Ingrid Bergman talking."

Boston Forms 'Art' Film Society

Formation of the Boston Film Society to show foreign and domestic films not usually considered suitable for the commercial screen was announced this week. The Society will start its screenings on Dec. 20 at the Fogg Museum in Cambridge, operating under a season subscription ticket basis.

Among the films to be shown are: "A Trip to the Moon," "The Great Train Robbery," "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "Possibilities of a War in the Air," "Queen Elizabeth," "M," "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," "The Dance in Film," Fred Astaire in a sequence from "Swingtime," "A Nous la Liberte," a Charlie Chaplin feature, and "The Thin Man."

20th-Fox Managers Meet

Discussion of national release plans highlighted the sales meeting of 20th Century-Fox in New York last week. Present were Distribution Vice-President Tom Connors, General Sales Manager William J. Kupper, Division Managers Herman Wobber, Harry Ballance, William C. Gehring, Andrew H. Smith; and District Managers C. E. Peppiatt, E. X. Callahan, Paul S. Wilson, Philip Longdon, J. H. Lorentz, J. J. Grady, M. A. Levy, W. E. Scott, Sydney Samson, Charles L. Walker, Bryan D. Stoner, and branch managers from the exchange centers.

Another Friend

That court of many "friends"—the New York federal statutory court which is writing a decree to govern the exhibition and distribution of film, had a request to have another friend admitted into the case this week as Attorney Seymour Simon of Chicago filed a petition to have his client, the Palace Theatre Corporation of Cicero, Ill., admitted to the anti-trust suit as amicus curiae.

Simon told the court that his clients had uncovered some information since the hearings in November which might prove of assistance to the court in writing its decree. He asked permission to submit this information by memorandum.

26 May Be Maximum MGM Production for 1947

Indications that MGM would hold down its production during 1947 to 26 pictures were seen this week as Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., the parent company, returned to New York after Hollywood conferences with Louis B. Mayer.

Nicholas Schenck

The conferences covered production and releasing plans for the coming year. The MGM trend toward production curtailment, it was explained, is based on the fact that the company has an inventory of 31 unreleased pictures. This inventory was built up, it was said, because there is a "slower absorption of important pictures" by the preesnt market.

Schenck announced that "The Hucksters," with Clark Gable; "Cass Timberlane," with Spencer Tracy; "The Pirate," with Judy Garland and Gene Kelly; "Speak to Me of Love," with Greer Garson, and "Song of the Thin Man," with William Powell and Myrna Loy, were scheduled to go into production after the first of the year.

The MGM inventory of product upon which camera work has been completed but which has not yet been shown upon the screens of the nation is, according to the booking guide of SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW:

"Undercurrent," "A Love Story," "A Woman of My Own," "The Arnelo Affair," "The Beginning or the End," "The Birds and the Bees," "Fiesta," "Green Dolphin Street," "High Barbaree," "It Happened at the Inn," "It Happened in Brooklyn," "Lady in the Lake," "Little Mister Jim," "Love Laughs at Andy Hardy," "Merton of the Movies," "The Mighty McGurk," "My Brother Talks to Horses," "The Personal Touch," "The Rich, Full Life," "The Romance of Rosy Ridge," "Sea of Grass," "The Secret Heart," "The Show-Off," "Summer Holiday," "Tenth Avenue Angel," "This Time for Keeps," "Till the Clouds Roll By," "To Kiss and to Keep," "Undercover Maisie," "The Unfinished Dance," and "The Yearling."

Republic this week declared its regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on preferred stock payable Jan. 2, 1947, after a meeting of the directors in New York.

Capra Film Bows Dec. 21

World premiere of Frank Capra's first Liberty production, "It's a Wonderful Life" will take place in the Globe Theatre at New York on Dec. 21. James Stewart is co-starred with Donna Reed.

Product Shortage?

What some theatremen said was the result of the strike, what others regarded as a product shortage due to long runs and holdovers apparently was making itself felt in Harrisburg, Pa., this week as two theatres went in for reissues simultaneously. The Colonial, one of the leading houses, booked an old Sam Goldwyn film, "The Westerner," and the Senate Theatre revived "Gunga Din."

Daylight Saving vs . . .

St. Louis' Board of Aldermen have set Dec. 2 for a hearing on a proposal to repeal the ordinance which provides for daylight saving in that city from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in September. The ordinance, ever since its passing, has been a fighting point for various interests, with theatres opposed to one hour longer of daytime.

Century Head Feels No Present Product Shortage

Product shortage has not affected theatre booking in the New York area, Sam Goodman, head of Century Circuit's film department told SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW Wednesday.

Goodman said that Century believed in single features where the product was strong but was held back by the policy of rival circuits, and that he believed short subjects, which Century found difficult to run on a dual bill policy, were very important when single feature bills were played.

"Good pictures should always play single," Goodman declared. "We would want to play more singles than we do now. But in most instances we follow the circuits who set the policy and consequently we must dual. However, in almost all locations where we have no competition, we adhere to a single policy."

Goodman says Century has found that shorts are not in demand where a dual policy is in effect, since the audience resents the length of the program. Properly bought and properly booked on single-feature programs, though, he added, they are important.

Zanuck Favors Liquidation Of Hollywood's 'Oracles'

Twentieth Century-Fox Vice-president in charge of Production Darryl F. Zanuck this week took issue with fellow producer Sam Goldwyn's remarks that Hollywood had "run dry of ideas" and suggested that the film industry capital's alleged ailments could be cured by the "liquidation of self-appointed oracles."

"There is nothing wrong with Hollywood," Zanuck declared from that city, "that cannot be cured by the liquidation of self-appointed oracles. It is remarkable that Mr. Goldwyn has only now discovered that the screen is a medium of enlightenment as well as of entertainment. Most Hollywood producers discovered this long ago and practiced it both during and before the war."

20th-Fox Profits Up $8,690,528 for 39 Weeks

Twentieth Century-Fox and its subsidiaries, including National Theatres, has reported a consolidated net profit for the 39-week period ending Sept. 28, 1946, of $16,219,815, compared to a net of $7,529,287 for the same period in 1945.

The company also announced the following cash dividends on its stock for the third quarter: Common, 75 cents, plus an extra 75 cents a share, payable Dec. 23, 1946; Convertible Preferred 37½ cents a share, payable Dec. 23, 1946; Prior Preferred, $1.12½ a share, payable Dec. 16, 1946.

Wehrenberg Sees Better Pictures, Longer Runs

That the practice of extending holdovers on first runs and even on subsequent runs would not only continue but might even increase in the future, was seen in St. Louis this week by Fred Wehrenberg, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

In an optimistic interview wherein he saw little to worry about over the foreign field, Wehrenberg said that he believed pictures of the future would improve steadily, with producers striving for quality in each release and concentrating on fewer films. This, he intimated, would in turn require longer runs.

The MPTOA chief said that theatres which had been changing their bills three and four times a week would probably reduce the number of changes to two while two-a-week houses would probably extend their playing time for one feature to a full week.

Wehrenberg did not challenge a previously expressed opinion by Producer Walter Wanger that American pictures were losing out in the foreign field. He said he believed it natural that foreign nations would try to give their pictures first place, but that American technique still was the leader. Concerning television, he saw no great competition from that source and regarded it as an adjunct to motion pictures to be used chiefly for portrayal of "spot news" events.

Budget $34-$35 Million For Paramount Production

Paramount will produce from 16 to 18 pictures during the calendar year 1947 at an estimated total cost of from $34 to $35 millions, Vice-President in charge of Production Henry Ginsberg told trade paper representatives in New York last week. In addition to the Paramount-made pictures, the company will have three pictures by Hal Wallis and six by the Pine-Thomas company.

The budget for next year, Ginsberg said, represents an increase of from 25 to 30 per cent over last year. He added that production costs have mounted from 65 to 75 per cent during the past three years.

The company now has a total of 25 pictures either completed or nearing completion, Ginsberg said. (At the releasing rate which obtained during the current calendar year, that is more than enough product for the 1947 releasing schedule, since Paramount by Dec. 31 will have released 22 new pictures and two reissues during the calendar year 1946).

The Paramount studio head said that his company has been little affected by the strike. Since Paramount studios had seven pictures before the cameras at the time the strike broke. Five of these pictures, Ginsberg said, have been completed with the other two, "Variety Girl" and "Blaze of Noon," well along toward completion.

If They Burn . . . No

Chicago's fire marshal this week notified all theatres and other places of amusement that Christmas trees and other holiday decorations not fireproofed would not be permitted this year due to fire hazards. The edict may crimp several plans for elaborate Christmas lobbies.

Arthur Rank organization has two new faces now, with Joe Gins, who broke in with Tiffany Stahl in Washington and then went to United Artists, Columbia and later to PRC, taking over as a sales supervisor for the Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Indianapolis, Minneapolis and Detroit area, and Jules Weill moving up from a sales representative for Rank in the Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha and Des Moines territories.

Seymour Schussel has been named district manager for New York over at PRC. Schussel had 14 years with Columbia and later joined Film Clasics, from where he moved to PRC.

Hal Wallis, who produces pictures for Paramount release, will be one of the speakers at the Nobel Anniversary Dinner on Dec. 10 in New York.

Jack Keagan of United Detroit Theatres came to New York this week to confer with Paramount Theatre Operations Vice-President Leonard Goldenson and Paramount Theatres Service Corporation Vice-President Edward L. Hyman.

Pay Increase Won By Chicago Theatre Janitors

Chicago janitors received $171,500 back pay this week under the terms of the new agreement signed between the building employes' union and the theatres.

The back pay is retroactive to May 1. The contract will expire July 1, 1947, and calls for a 44-hour week with a minimum of $1.05½ an hour for women and $1.07½ an hour for men, with time and a half for overtime and two weeks' vacation with pay.

Wild West Drive Pays Off Winners

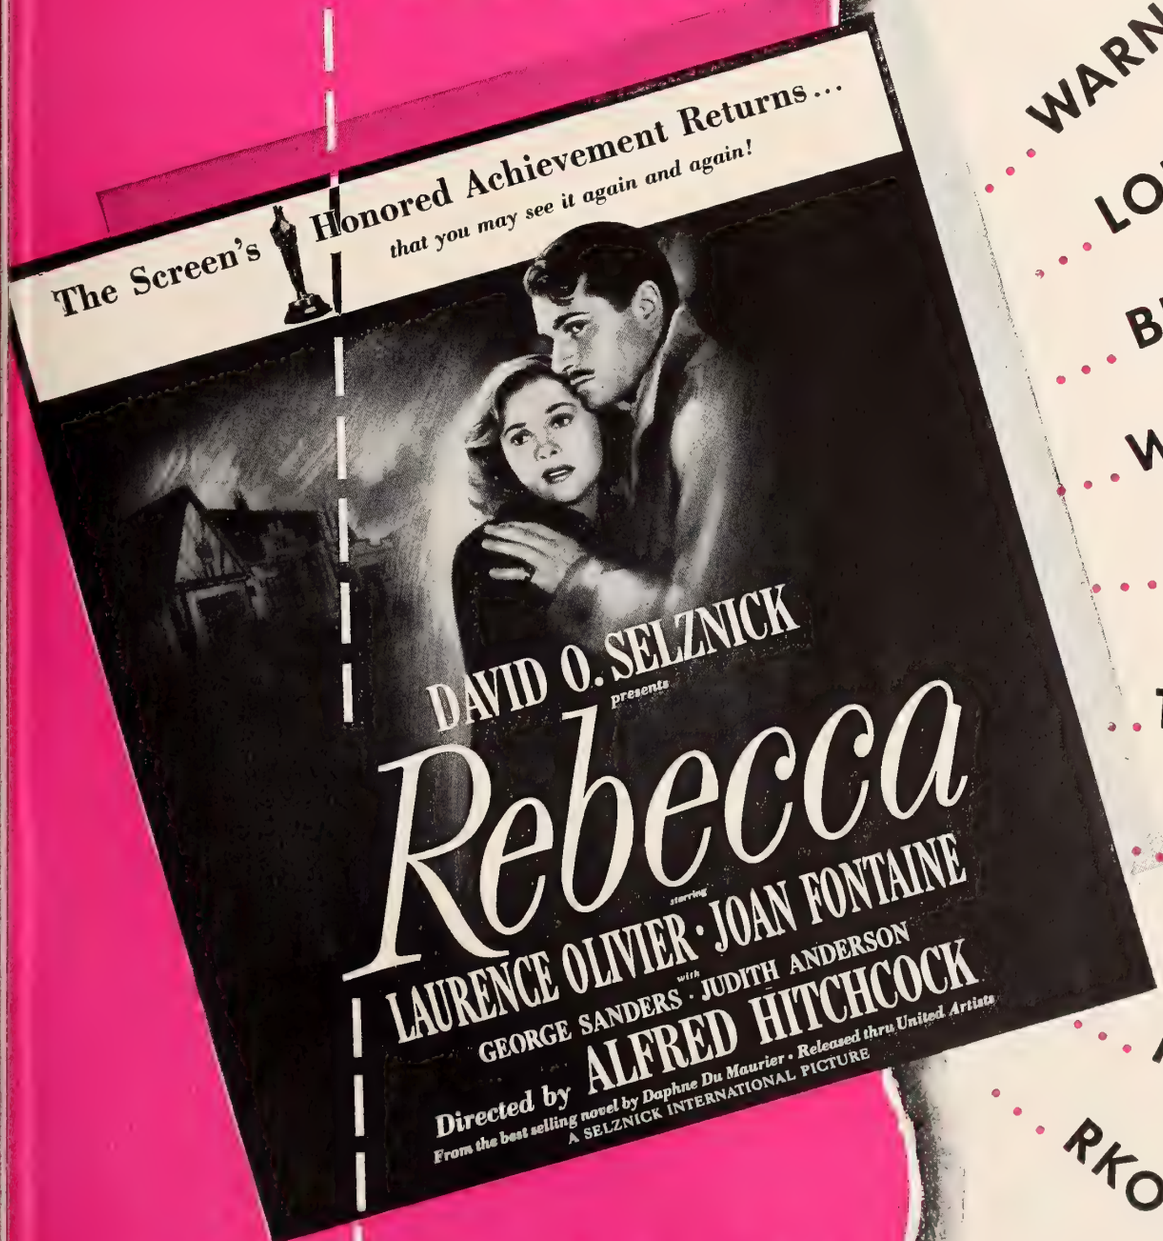
Warners Bros.' Wild West Show sales drive paid off in prizes this week, with successful participants all over the country coming in for either automobiles or government savings bonds.

The top winners were: District Manager contest, Manager Hall Walsh of the Prairie District; Branch office contest, Manager George Lefko, of Des Moines; Salesmen, D. Webster of Salt Lake City.

Warners' Meet Set

First of Warner Bros.' territorial sales meetings was set to open Nov. 30 in Atlanta, with six more scheduled in December, Vice-President and General Sales Manager Ben Kalmenson announced. The other meetings and their dates follow: Dallas, Dec. 5; Los Angeles, Dec. 9; Kansas City, Dec. 16; Minneapolis, Dec. 10; Cleveland, Dec. 20, Boston, Dec. 23.

Only High Budgets for PRC



PRC will confine its future activities to high-budget pictures, President Harry Thomas said in Hollywood this week. The PRC head cited the success of "The Enchanted Forest" and more recently, "Her Sister's Secret," to prove that the new policy was right.

Movies vs. Crime

Motion pictures in general have a trend to dissuade people from committing crimes, United States Attorney General Tom Clark told a meeting of the National Conference for the Prevention and Control of Juvenile Delinquency in Washington last week.

"I do not personally believe," the attorney general declared, "that any but a few, in an extremely small minority, would characterize a motion picture performance as an instigator of a crime, and I do not believe that the general trend in motion pictures is to have an effect of dissuading people from committing crimes."

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management*

ANNIVERSARY CAMPAIGNS FOR PROFIT

By Jack Jackson

Ever since this series started over a year ago I've been receiving requests for anniversary campaigns. On two or three occasions I scheduled an article on the subject but something always happened to shunt the matter aside in the interest of more topical subjects.

Maybe I'd better confess, also, that I've probably been guilty of dodging the issue, since it is one that does not lend itself readily to generalizing and requires considerable of the "put and take" type of mental effort.

Now, thanks to Frank O. Starz and his cohorts at the Interstate Circuit office in Dallas, the material for a comprehensive and workable campaign—suited to all classes and sizes of theatres in cities and towns of varied population—is at hand. So, placing as little strain as possible on my own fragile mentality, I'll attempt to recount in the following paragraphs some ideas you might find helpful when you go about the important business of persuading the people of your community to be on hand for the celebration of your theatre's birthday.

Just in case you never thought of it in this way before, let me state emphatically that essential to a good job is your personal conviction of the importance of the event and, therefore, attendance by the people of the community is an absolute obligation. Your customers—every one of them from the highest town or city dignitary to the lowest menial—have received more benefits from the theatre than from any other institution or establishment catering to their wants, needs or desires. If you doubt this assertion for an instant a few moments of honest reverie and sincere contemplation will recall so many instances of priceless favors and services rendered to persons, parties and populace that your personal regard of yourself and your business will be jet-propelled to stratospheric heights. That's the mood you should be in when you start planning your theatre party.

Now let's get on with the chronicling of things to do. You pick out the type of endeavor that best suits your particular theatre.

Bring Your Party Close to the Folks

Go after the city, town or community executives and have them give official recognition to the celebration either by proclamation or by a guarantee of their personal presence on one or more evenings. Every politician loves to talk and will welcome the opportunity to show off his oratorial gifts to your customers.

Explore the newspaper files for happenings to folks of the community on the day or week of your opening. Who was born, married, held parties, etc., etc.? Invite them as honored guests on the eve of the anniversary of their experiences and arrange to have a good narrator welcome them and give some details of their experience. Don't overlook the sporting pages on this. Maybe the high school football, baseball, basketball, track or swim team won a victory and some of the members are still in town. Remember, the more prominent the people the better for the prestige of your theatre. Make every effort to bring your party as close to the folks as possible and this can best be done by making the celebration apply to their personal experiences as well as your theatre opening.

For a week or two before the celebration prevail upon the newspaper publisher to run a front page contest using the headlines of events of past years with prizes of tickets as reward for best answers.

Get after the music and record shops and have them procure music and records of the popular songs of the period of your opening and display them with an appropriate tie-in advertising card in their windows. You can—if you think best—switch this to use a card in your lobby by displaying a card and playing the records there.

The business manager of the newspaper should be able to sell a complete section by perusing the files of the week your theatre opened and compiling ads for local merchants that lead off with "blank years ago this store offered these sensational bargains." List a few of the old desirables and then go on into what they have to sell today. The result should evoke an amazing amount of attention. Be sure your theatre is tied in.

Try to get a parade under way by offering prizes—passes good for limited periods—for the oldest car, truck, dress, hat, etc., etc. of persons participating. Go further and offer a theatre party to the school band playing the oldest popular piece of music, the oldest married couple, the youngest married couple. Just let your imagination run riot with this one and you may be able to outdo the circus.

Try to get a contest going in the newspapers with theatre passes to the readers identifying pictures of present-day commercial establishments that were taken the year your theatre opened.

Even if the radio station is a new one you can tie in on a sustaining period with the narrator relating interesting experiences of the early days of the radio. A display in your lobby of the oldest sets in town may serve to put this one over.

Go after the banks and loan companies, etc. for participation in a newspaper page with lead lines such as: "blank years ago when the Blank Theatre was built this institution had (?) customers and (?) resources. Today ——."

It's possible—if you plan thoroughly and work hard—to get every merchant and institution in your town interested in your party by tying it to their personal experiences. And, let me say right now that holding your principal effort in this groove is the surest and best way of attracting both attention and attendance.

Now let's take a look at the super-swell campaign prepared for Interstate's 40th Anniversary to cover over 100 theatres by Frank Starz, Ray Beall and their enterprising satellites.

Trailers, front banners and institutional newspaper ads were supplemented by streamers for the three- and twenty-four sheet boards. House campaigns with customers solicited for suggestions for service improvement, be-ribboned service staffs and decals for auto windshields as well as a liberal distribution of properly labeled safety match books served to background a series of "stunt" activities that garnered reams of publicity, brought an appreciable increase in business and indelibly impressed on the minds of thousands the Interstate slogan: "Four Decades of Community Service."

Flesh shows of top professional quality were added in the major situations and the suggestion made to the smaller operations to solicit cooperation of dancing schools, etc. to enliven their stages.

Screen Birthday Films

A cooking contest with prizes for the best cakes prepared by patrons; the cakes to be auctioned off and proceeds to some charity, and a local miller to be solicited for sacks of flour to be given as door prizes or on "numbered tickets" to matinee patrons.

Get the house staff on your side by giving an advance screening of birthday films for the staff, their dates and their families. Limit the number of guests but make sure the number is large enough to spread the desired word-of-mouth ballyhoo.

If you have a picture booked that rates that "certain-to-appeal-to-everybody" label hold a screening for the barbers and beauty parlor operators. This group is recognized as the most loquacious in any community and can be depended on to tell each and every customer about the swell entertainment. Be sure of yourself and your feature on this.

Book a few golf shorts and conduct a mail canvas to the country club group for "special draw." This is good for matinee only or for all day showing. Of course the veneral public is to be admitted.

Put a "reverse" vacation angle on a mail campaign to the housewives who did not get vacations and book a couple of special travel reels for the occasion.

Ben Serkowitz's stunt on Columbia's "Renegades" where local stores were solicited for scarce items, such as nylons, to be given away with theatre passes was twisted from its original "Why I Think Technicolor Pictures are best" to "Interesting memories of the blank theatre" or "What I remember about the year (?)" Radio stations will go big for this one. Be sure you put it on well in advance.

Contact every sponsor of a local radio program and get them to offer a "salute" to the theatre on its anniversary.

Get the recreation and athletic directors of schools and colleges to cooperate by sending their best trained teams of cheer leaders, tumblers, wand handlers, etc. to display their proficiency on your stage. The football season is best for this but there is some kind of sport going on at all times that the coaches and directors are anxious to call to the attention of the general public.

Hold a Bathing Review

There has been a dearth of bathing reviews since 1940. Get one under way with a modest cash prize from the theatre supplemented by gifts from merchants, etc. as prizes. This requires a lot of work but the "take" at the box-office usually relieves whatever aches and pains are encountered.

A fashion show can be arranged on the same basis that will pull the women folk away from kitchens, baby cribs and bridge tables.

If you can dig up an old stage coach, surrey or ancient auto it will make a swell street ballyhoo.

Don't forget to tie in with the radio station or newspaper on a basis of passes, dated for expiration in 60 days, to be

Maintenance

PROJECTION EQUIPMENT — Maintenance I

(From an Outline of Talks Presented to the Classes in the Wilby-Kincey School of Maintenance)

PROJECTORS

To insure proper and smooth operation all projectors should be kept clean, well lubricated and in proper adjustment.

Cleaning should be carried out as a daily routine to avoid the hardening of lubricating oils under the heat of the projection lamp (once baked onto any surface, they are much more difficult to remove); and also to avoid accumulation of dust, which will harm the moving parts of the projector and greatly accelerate its wear.

Lubrication should be carried out as specified in the manual that comes with the machine, and under no circumstances neglected.

The modern projector requires very few adjustments in the course of operation. Those needed are always covered in the manufacturer's instruction manual for the mechanism in question. They may include timing the shutter, focusing the lens and adjustments to other parts of the projector.

Tinkering should be scrupulously avoided. Projectors are designed by highly trained engineers to fulfill set fundamental operations and require no further improvements by local forces to furnish good projection.

SPROCKETS

The condition of projector (and soundhead) sprocket teeth is very important and should be carefully inspected at frequent intervals. Worn teeth not only produce an unsteady picture but damage the sprocket holes in the film. If there is any visible undercutting in the form of a small notch at the base of the contact side of the teeth, the sprocket should be replaced. If the teeth are considerably reduced in width at their base, they are equally harmful and the sprocket should be replaced.

The intermittent sprocket should not have any independent motion. This can be checked by rocking the sprocket back and forth with a finger while the movement is "on the lock." The adjustment is correct when the flywheel rotates freely and there is no lost motion while the locking ring is engaged with one of the star quarter-circles.

RECTIFIERS

The proper maintenance of bulb type rectifiers requires the following procedures:

1. Keep the rectifier clean and dry.
2. Clean the bulb and socket contacts periodically with Number 00 sandpaper.
3. Keep all connections tight.
4. Pre-test all spare bulbs and keep them in a convenient given the parents of babies born during your celebration.

Invitations for couples being married to attend your theatre with their entire wedding retinue as your guests is also good for newspaper and radio hookups.

Search the morgue of your local papers for pictures of the city's first theatre and have the newspaper editor use it—together with a picture of your front—as a "Then and Now" story. You may amplify this by allowing the paper to act as hosts to citizens who were in attendance the night the old house closed, to any persons formerly employed at the old establishment, etc., etc. This is as big and broad as your imagination can make it and will get plenty of attention if handled properly.

'Old Fiddlers' Contests

"Old Fiddlers" contests—regardless of what you may think of them personally—are still drawing big crowds. The stunt fits well with an anniversary celebration.

The High School Bands might be prevailed upon to help you celebrate by attending the theatre in marching order and playing a few numbers on the street before entering. If your town is big enough to boast more than one High School, how about offering a capital prize in a battle of music contest.

Get out an old-time program—the way it was done back in the early days of the movie—use the old walking "A" board or sandwich man; Put a barker in front of the theatre to cry the subjects and length of the program; Do all the other things associated with old-time advertising campaigns. They're corny, sure, but American theatregoers are famous the world over for paying a higher price for "corn" than they will for "caviar."

If you have a big mezzanine or lobby, how about a display of "made in our town" merchandise. Separate the old timers from the newcomers and have the display educational in that each cooperator is asked to display the oldest work of his company and the newest in order to illustrate the local March of Progress. The cooperators should—and will—buy quantity tickets for their employe group and take space in the local newspaper and time on the radio to call attention to the exhibition. There is also the possibility of "giveaways."

Hold an Old Folks party on some midweek matinee. Give free admission to all who attended your first night. Be sure the indigents in the Old Folks Home are among those present and try to get some merchant to give each a present of some kind. You should be able to get the photographer to take pictures of the group for his window. Your merchants will be glad to provide prizes for distribution to the oldest man, the oldest lady, etc., etc.

Try to interest the newspaper in having pictures taken of the crowds at some certain hour each night. Let the editor place a circle around two or three in each picture who will be given trip or period passes to your theatre.

Free Rides to Theatre

The local transportation line could be interested in putting its oldest street car or bus in service for the occasion with free rides to all persons holding ticket stubs from your theatre. You can probably promote this but even if you have to pay for the passengers it is well worthwhile. Be sure you put banners on the vehicle advertising your celebration.

This could go on forever, but space is limited and my fingers are getting callouses from banging away at the typewriter. There should be enough material listed above to get a swell birthday party under way for any theatre and once you get started planning you'll harvest a whole crop of personally grown ideas that are tailored-to-measure for your theatre. Just be sure you don't treat your theatre like you do your wife and forget the anniversary date.

location so all replacements can be made with a minimum of delay.

5. Pre-test all spare fuses and keep them in a convenient location so all fuse replacements can be made with a minimum of delay.

The proper maintenance of stack type rectifiers requires these procedures:

1. Keep the rectifier clean and dry.
2. Keep all connections clean and tight.
3. Never over-fuse.
4. Keep pre-tested fuses in a convenient location so all fuse replacements can be made with a minimum of delay.
5. Keep relay points clean. Burnish them when necessary.
6. Never overload the rectifier.
7. If the rectifier is out of use for a lengthy period it should still be operated every 90 days for a sufficient length of time to dry it out completely.

MOTOR-GENERATORS

1. Keep the motor-generator set clean throughout.
2. Use the exact size and kind of brushes originally supplied by the manufacturer of the machine.
3. Be sure the brushes make good contact with the commutator over the entire surface of the brush.
4. See that the brushes press against the commutator with a pressure of 1¼ to 1½ pounds per square inch of contact area—or at other pressure if such should be specified by the manufacturer of the machine.
5. Be sure that brushes fit in their holders snugly but without binding. A loose brush will chatter and make poor contact; a tight one will stick in the holder and produce harmful sparking.
6. Keep the commutator surface clean. It should have a smooth, glazed, brown appearance.
7. The mica insulation between the commutation bars should be 1/32nd to 3/64th inch below the surface of the commutator bars. Have it undercut if necessary to maintain this depth.
8. The soldered connections to the commutator bars must be perfect.
9. There must be no sparking (or at worst a negligible amount of sparking) at the commutator.
10. Commutator bars should not be allowed to wear down unevenly.
11. If the machine is old, do not keep it in service when the commutator bars have worn down until they are too thin to carry the current without heating. Have a new commutator installed.
12. See that all bearings are lubricated with the oil or grease recommended by the manufacturer, and at the recommended intervals. Old oil and grease should be flushed out and replaced at intervals recommended by the manufacturer.
13. See that all wires and switches associated with the motor-generator are large enough to carry their normal current without undue resistance.
14. Generator and motor temperature should be checked daily. Any increase in normal operating temperature calls for immediate investigation and correction of the cause.
15. Do not permit overloading under any circumstances.

(All of the foregoing comprises verbatim quotation or paraphrase of a chapter in the book issued to members of classes in the School of Maintenance of Wilby-Kincey Theatres circuit. The book was made available to Showmen's Trade Review for such quotation by the company, which is headed by R. B. Wilby, and H. F. Kincey, and is recognized as one of the most progressive and efficiently operated circuits in the United States. The book, according to Mr. Wilby, was prepared not as a manual, but merely to serve members of the classes (which are conducted for managers of the circuit) as a notebook to spare those attending the classes the effort of making their own notes during the talks and demonstrations.)

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

500,000 British Children in Rank's Junior Cinema Clubs

By JOCK MacGREGOR

London—Every Saturday morning nearly 500,000 British children between 7 and 14 attend the 400-odd cinema clubs.

This movement owes much to GB's Divisional Publicist Vic Powell. Some 17 years ago he read about a children's matinee in an Australian trade paper and drew Publicity Director Jimmy Forsyth's attention to it.

The GB Junior Clubs were born. Odeon followed with "Mickey Mouse" Clubs, but the wartime veto on gatherings of children suspended both.

About this time, J. Arthur Rank was starting his movie colossus. Already a confirmed believer in the cinema as a medium for combining culture and better citizenship with entertainment, he lifted the ban with the lull in the blitz and in 1943 formed the Children's Cinema Club, a non-profit non-political and non-sectarian setup.

One Saturday recently I accompanied Vic Powell, now GB Junior Club organizer, to some clubs. Each has its own committee, consisting of the manager, children and local authorities. (In 99 percent of the locations this includes the Chief of Police and in 75 percent also the Educational Officer). Regular meetings are held when the activities and programs are discussed and the minutes forwarded to London.

The children take an active part in running the clubs and older members, wearing armlets, help the staff marshal and keep the youngsters in order. Cinema manners are stressed with running in the aisles forbidden and orderly living emphasized. Damage to property is negligible. If a kid is a consistent nuisance—and this is rare—his membership card is temporarily withdrawn. Occasionally expulsion is the last resort.

If members are in a hurry to get into the cinema, they are in a greater hurry to get out and Road Safety is plugged in every program. A policeman always controls traffic when they leave.

GB and Odeon stress safety so strongly that in some districts they have no club because of the road hazards. In others, membership is restricted. Where the gallery is steeply raked, for instance, kids are kept to the stalls, while elsewhere front rows are off limits. The Clubs aim at one attendant for 50 kids against the ordinance of one for a hundred.

Membership is free and toilets with coin boxes are unlocked, but the kids pay ten cents for a 2½-hour show. The program generally opens with community singing when members who have had birthdays during the week appear on the stage. A cartoon follows and the manager, known as "Uncle" (the personal touch is stressed throughout) tells members of the Club's objectives, activities and next program before introducing an interesting short and the feature. This may be varied by a stage turn or the kids putting on a show. The matinee ends with a serial. Newsreels are taboo.

Programs provide a growing problem. The demand is for action and laughs and virtue must triumph. Westerns are naturally tops. Every film must have a "U" Censor's Certificate and British Film Institute's top grading before it is even viewed.

J. Arthur Rank, who is keenly interested in the clubs, is so concerned with the lack of suitable children's films that he is producing his own with a budget of $1,000,000 for 1946, partly provided by the balance from matinees. Projects are passed by the Central Advisory Council for Children's Films of Government representatives under the chairmanship of Lady Allen of Hurtwood. Already a weekly screen magazine is appearing while features and a serial are on the way.

GB and Odeon Clubs are often in the same street and there is much rivalry when interclub quizs and contests are held. Many kids are members of both, and in consequence the serial is run concurrently.

Club activities are not restricted to the cinema and include sports, indoor pastimes and contests. Pen Pals are encouraged. Some houses have an abandoned cafe or large room where the kids can go every night. Car parks are used for pet shows and other stunts.

Publicity depends on membership requirements. In some locations, the marquee is used and press ads carry plugs—Odeon has a series of cuts up to six-inch double-column available. All have display boards and Vic Powell recommends that these be placed outside the cinema.

Other services include birthday cards, and when it is known that a member is ill, a committeeman will write describing the matinee.

ABC, Granada and some independents have similar clubs and can use Rank's juvenile productions.

Many showmen will think of the work involved. There is a lot, but most managers find the happy gatherings on Saturday justify it.

Nearly 500,000 British children between the ages of seven and 14 attend 400-odd cinema clubs. In the top photo road safety plays an important part in the GB-Odeon Junior Clubs' programs at the Gaumont, Chelsea, as tape stretched across the front of the house is released to permit children to cross the street while the constable holds up traffic. Center photo shows the emphasis placed on cinema manners as officials supervise orderly lineup at the box-office. Typical of the civic interest in the GB Junior Clubs is the bottom photo taken at the Gaumont, Doncaster. The mayor and mayoress, the chief constable and members of the committee go on the stage. Hebron Morland, the manager, is on the left. The personal touch is stressed in all Junior Club meetings.

Daab, Katz Named to Selznick Publicity Posts

David O. Selznick's plans for world wide exploitation of "Duel in the Sun" and his other forthcoming productions took definite shape last week as Paul MacNamara, Selznick's National director of publicity and advertising, announced the appointment of Hy Daab as head of the foreign publicity department and also announced the engagement of Alfred Katz, of the firm of William Friedberg and Alfred Katz, to handle Latin American field exploitation and publicity for the Selznick International organization.

In addition to Latin America, Katz will set up publicity representatives in the Near and Far East. Daab, who recently returned from ten months in Europe, will remain in Hollywood permanently. MacNamara disclosed that he plans to expand Daab's department by hiring field men in England, France and other European countries within the near future and they will operate directly under Daab.

Katz who is now in Hollywood conferring with Selznick, MacNamara, Daab and other Selznick heads, leaves for Mexico City on December 3 as the first step in his southern travels for "Duel in the Sun." He will proceed from Mexico City to Brazil, Argentina, Chile and Peru before returning to Hollywood. Katz handled the Latin American campaigns of "Since You Went Away" and "Spellbound" for the Selznick organization and he is taking a six-months leave of absence from his firm to be in charge of field exploitation and publicity in Latin America.

Set Capitol Campaign On 'Song of the South'

Walt Disney's latest Technicolor feature, "Song of the South," announced as Christmas attraction at B. F. Keith's Theatre in Washington, will have the benefit of a full-page series of newspaper advertisements through a tie-up with the Hecht Co., leading department store in the nation's capitol.

Built around a Christmas window display with an all-Disney motif, the campaign consists of 10 full-page illustrated advertisements to appear between now and Christmas in the Washington News, Post, Star and Times-Herald.

KINE SHOWMEN AWARDS. CEA President Fred Prior presents Odeon's Harry Murray with Kine Weekly's 1946 award for showmanship in ceremonies at the Savoy, with Joint Editor A. L. Carter looking on. GB's Frank Bradley received second prize. Runners-up were ABC's Mrs. Barbara Bradford, first woman to receive an award since the competition started more than 20 years ago, and C. E. Paice, Portsmouth independent.

Newspaper Campaign To Launch 'Outlander'

One of the largest newspaper advertising campaigns in its history will be launched by PRC to introduce to the public "The Outlander," which the company has acquired from Ewing Scott, for release on its 1946-47 schedule. Scott produced and directed the picture on location at Silver Springs, Fla., with a cast headed by Gaylord Pendleton, Mikel Conrad, Leigh Whipper, Mary Conwell and Athea Murphy.

A highlight of the feature, which was adapted for the screen by Paul Gerard Smith and Taylor Caven, is a number of spectacular fight scenes between men and alligators. The sequences were filmed under the technical suprvision of Ross Allen, famed alligator hunter of Silver Springs.

FIRST 20th-FOX REGIONAL MEETING FOR EXPLOITEERS. The first of several 20th Century-Fox regional exploitation meetings was held recently in Chicago at the Blackstone Hotel. Seated around the table, reading clockwise, are: Al Winston, Chicago; Richard Owen, Dallas; Spence Pierce, Atlanta; Jim Keefe, Cincinnati; Sid Blumenstock, assistant exploitation manager; Charles Schlaifer, director of advertising-publicity-exploitation-radio; Morris Kinzler, Kayton-Spiero agency executive; Seymour Freedman, Kansas City; and Robert Kaufman, Virginia Seguin and Eddie Solomon of the Chicago exploitation staff.

Tap Junior Groups for Dog Film Ad Approach

For the first time in motion picture history, a national survey of teen-age and junior groups has been conducted by Gilbert Surveys of Chicago to determine the proper selling appeal of the forthcoming PRC release, "The Return of Rin Tin Tin," to this section of American audiences.

On the basis of the Gilbert Surveys' findings, large scale national advertising campaigns in all magazines reaching the juvenile audience are now being prepared by Albert Margolies, advertising director of Romay Pictures, Inc., the company which produced the picture; Arnold Stoltz, PRC national director of advertising and publicity, and Charles Amory, account executive of Buchanan & Co., advertising agency.

Another survey, conducted for PRC by the Market Research Service of New York under the supervision of Buchanan's research department, reveals that Rin Tin Tin is the best known motion picture star ever to appear on the screen. Over 70 per cent of those people queried—ranging in age groups from 6 to 15 years, 16 to 25, 26 to 35, 36 to 45 and over—knew the name of Rin Tin Tin, and 94.6 per cent identified him correctly as the animal star of motion pictures. Queried as to their reasons for wanting to see "The Return of Rin Tin Tin," 77.5 per cent replied: "I like dogs and dog pictures."

Release of "The Return of Rin Tin Tin," which stars Rin Tin Tin III, grandson of the first immortal dog to bear that name, has been set for early next year. The picture was photographed in Vitacolor, new color process, in the Valley of the Missions in California. Donald Woods, Bobby Blake and Claudia Drake have the leading human roles. William Stephens produced and Max Nosseck directed.

Wollaston Sets Plans For Second Jamboree

Recalling the success of the first "Bobbysox Jamboree" last March 20, when literally thousands of teen-agers and adults fought and shoved to get into the State Theatre, Harrisburg, for the two performances, Gerry Wollaston, manager, is busy planning a similar stunt.

Tentative date for the second program is December 18, when Wollaston again will sponsor a "jitterbug" contest, air some local talent in a competition, and present Red McCarthy's Band and the Kenny Shaffer Trio in conjunction with Monogram's "High School Hero." At present Wollaston is looking for a sponsor.

Boyd in Macy Parade

William Boyd, star of the Hopalong Cassidy series released by United Artists, was scheduled to take part in Macy's Thanksgiving Day parade this week. Boyd, now in New York as the guest of UA, is accompanied by his wife, the former screen actress, Grace Bradley, and Lewis Rachmil, producer of the Hopalong Cassidy series.

'Stay on Screen' Plea Spreads

Whether it was spontaneous on the part of Mayor Charles Leeman and the Omaha City Council or the brainchild of an astute exploiteer, the resolution of the mayor and council asking Fred Astaire, Omaha's No. 1, citizen, to reconsider his retirement from the screen, has caught on as a publicity stunt for Paramount's "Blue Skies" and is spreading across the country—right to New York, for example, where the Paramount Theatre also started a movement to induce the dancing star to continue his career. Manager Bob Weitman set up a petition in the lobby which patrons wishing the star to stay in pictures were asked to sign.

Weitman's campaign to keep Astaire on the screen includes a special trailer. Up to this week, several thousand names had been signed to the petition.

Children's Film Library Plan, Other Kid Shows in Ascendancy

Although there are no statistics available from the Motion Picture Association on the national acceptance by exhibitors of its Children's Film Library Plan, scattered reports from exhibitors themselves seem to indicate that the plan fills a long felt need, and that the only thing wrong with it is that it is limited to ten weeks, that being the number of features for children made available by the various exchanges under the plan.

Enthusiastic Response

In Harrisburg, Senate Theatre Manager Bob Sidman reports enthusiastic response from the youngsters and excellent cooperation from Parent-Teachers Association and civic groups in publicizing the plan. Manager Jack O'Rear at the Colonial has started his Saturday Morning Movie Club with admission for adults and children at 25c. Although both houses are in Harrisburg there seems to be no indication that the competition and necessary repeating of the same shows is going to make any difference to the two managers.

Slanted Toward Juveniles

Also in Harrisburg, the Rio and Loew's Regent are holding Saturday morning cartoon shows, slanted for the children's business, while the State continues its Kiddies Karnival Saturday mornings from the stage of the theatre.

In the Minneapolis area the Film Library Plan is being used at the Capitol, Aberdeen, S. D.; State, Minot, S. D.; Chateau, Rochester, Minn.; and the State at Winona, Minn.

Cartoon shows also are being used successfully in this area, with the unusual booking of an all-cartoon show consisting of 15 cartoons and a newsreel—just that and nothing more—at the Minnesota Amusement Company's Gopher Theatre, Minneapolis as an all-day policy. This is the first time that a downtown loop theatre in this area has adopted such a policy.

Experiment, Then Act

Originally cartoon shows were tried out in smaller towns in the territory in response to agitation from civic groups for more suitable movies for the youngsters. Two-day bookings of this type of program were experimented with at Grand Forks and Fargo, N. D. and the success of the venture resulted in the decision to book the same type of program for a first run. Another factor that resulted in the decision was the booking of a Mickey Rooney featurette and several cartoons in 10 independent theatres during the two-day school vacation for the teachers convention in Minneapolis. Most of the business had to schedule additional shows to take care of the demand for tickets. The Minnesota Amusement Company's Uptown theatres in Minneapolis and St. Paul also put on morning cartoon shows during the convention with excellent results.

The Filmack Trailer Company of Chicago reports that orders for special trailers on the Saturday Morning Children's Movie Plan have been much greater than expected, indicating strong support for the plan.

'Journey' Well Publicized By Brown and Rosenthal

A street ballyhoo with an old-time automobile, window displays based on bicycle tieups, plenty of radio time and even editorial comment in a New Haven newspaper were highlights of the intensive exploitation campaign essayed on Columbia's "Gallant Journey" when it played Loew's Poli. Manager Morris Rosenthal and Poli Theatres Publicity Director Lou Brown set up the campaign.

The 1921 Haynes touring car was dug up somewhere and, suitably bannered, toured the Yale campus; high school areas at "school's out" time, the city's suburbs and during rush hours visited the downtown business district.

By using a still of Glenn Ford and Janet Blair on a bicycle-built-for-two, window displays were obtained in a couple of bicycle sales and rental centers. Other stills of Ford smoking a pipe and wearing various types of sports and business clothes were used to obtain other window displays in appropriate store locations.

In addition to the usual publicity the New Haven Register carried an editorial on the picture, basing its comment on the early-days-of-aviation angle and comparing it with modern flying progress as exemplified by Yale University's Aeronautical Engineering Department.

A woman commentator and a disc jockey on WELI gave frequent mention to the film and WNHC also plugged it.

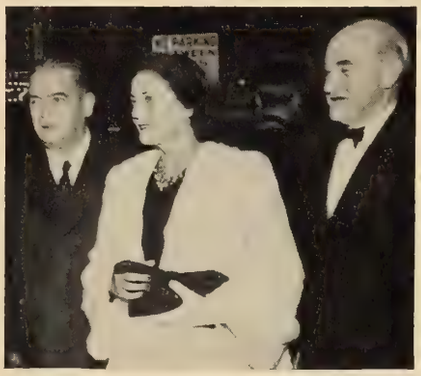
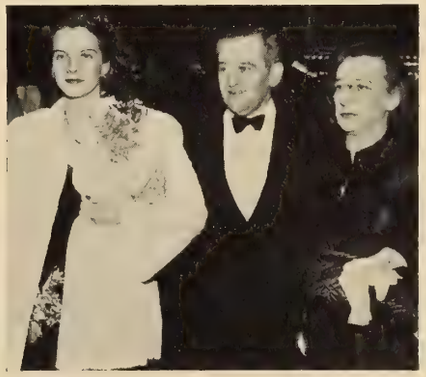
Gala Premiere for Goldwyn 'Years'

There's lots of magnetism for the crowds, be the location Broadway or main street, in the appearance of Hollywood stars and celebrities, as was illustrated last week in New York with a one-two demonstration involving two world premieres within three nights.



Samuel Goldwyn's "The Best Years of Our Lives" drew a glittering crowd of theatrical, social and official personages and brought out crowds that had special police details working at top speed to keep order.

The premiere for the picture which RKO is distributing was a benefit performance with the proceeds going to the Lighthouse for aid to the blind.



Among the distinctive features of the premiere was an international broadcast of events taking place at the first showing of the film which Producer Goldwyn declares is the 'most important' picture he has made.

The lights shone bright and the crowds elbowed their way up close to the Astor Theatre entrance for the premiere in New York last week of "The Best Years of Our Lives."

Producer Samuel Goldwyn, accompanied by Mrs. Goldwyn and Mayor O'Dwyer arrive at the Astor for the Premiere.

Fine Campaign Hails 'Doll' Chicago Opening

The world premiere last week of Universal's "Magnificent Doll," Skirball-Manning production, at Chicago's RKO Palace Theatre, climaxed one of the most extensive advertising and exploitation campaigns afforded a Universal release. The campaign was handled by Universal's Publicity Director Al Horwits, Special Events Director Al Simonelli and Regional Publicity Director Ben Katz, with RKO Radio Palace Manager Lou Mayer. In conjunction with the premiere, the American Broadcasting Company network program Ladies Be Seated, was broadcast from the stage of the Palace via 200 stations from coast-to-coast, launching a key city "magnificent doll" identification competition which will be repeated in other key cities during the coming weeks as part of a national contest.

The advance campaign on the premiere was officially launched with the personal appearance of Ginger Rogers, star of the picture, in Chicago ten days before the opening to screen the film for motion picture critics and other newspaper representatives and to meet them.

Full-page advertising started a week in advance of the opening in all the Chicago dailies on a stagger basis, with the newspapers devoting art and story to Miss Rogers as a result of interviews. All Chicago newspaper columnists devoted space to the premiere. The Chicago Daily Times ran a two-week children's Quiz-Down Contest devoting newspaper space and radio spots to the contest.

Miss Rogers appeared on the ABC Network "Breakfast Club" program while in Chicago, with the interview by Don McNeill going out over 206 American and Canadian stations of the network.

Kay Daumit, nationally-known cosmetician, ran a special 600-line advertisement on Miss Rogers on the day before the opening in the Chicago Tribune in addition to servicing over 1,500 local drug stores with special "Magnificent Doll"-Ginger Rogers window streamers.

Royal Crown Cola posted 80 24-sheets on their "Magnificent Doll" tieup in addition to bannering 30 of their delivery trucks and distributing 4,000 window and tack cards. All of this Royal Crown material had a definite theatre name and playdate tie-in.

Local radio stations joined in plugging the premiere and the picture. The 23 Lerner Group papers front-paged a special "Magnificent Doll" coloring contest.

The day before the opening, Chicago's motion picture critics, columnists and motion picture department heads attended a special presentation of a bust of Miss Rogers to Riccardo, one of Chicago's outstanding art sponsors.

Five of Chicago's loveliest models, wearing the original Ginger Rogers "Magnificent Doll" gowns acted as hostesses at the premiere.

A special fashion preview of the gowns worn by the models was held at the Palace Theatre a few days in advance of the opening for advance newspaper coverage.

Valerie Kopecky, Chicago University student selected by the editorial board of the University's newspaper, The Maroon, represented the University at the premiere as their "Magnificent Doll."

Foundation Works With Morton on 'Sister Kenny'

RKO Radio's press book on "Sister Kenny" was the inspiration for Bill Morton's campaign for the picture's showing at the RKO Albee, Providence. Morton contacted the local branch of the Sister Kenny Foundation and based the main effort of the campaign on the positive cooperation of that organization.

More than three weeks before the film's scheduled opening Morton and the Foundation heads planned a special screening of the film which eventually was attended by Foundation workers from every city and town in the state. Immediately following the screening a 15-minute transcription was made of a forum on the picture, with remarks from a cross-section of the audience recorded for broadcasting which had been arranged to take place on the air the day before opening. Time for the transcribed broadcast was donated by the radio station.

The Sister Kenny Foundation sponsored several other forum meetings with different groups before the opening and abundant material on the film was displayed at each meeting.

The nine libraries in Providence used display material on the picture and on the book "They Shall Walk" from which it was adapted. Bookmarks also were distributed to leading book stores. Other window and counter displays also were obtained and five restaurants carried copy about the picture on the bottom of their menus.

Boston Area Premiere Set for 'San Quentin'

World premiere of RKO Radio's "San Quentin" has been set for December 5 at the Boston Theatre with over 100 houses in the Boston area participating. Lawrence Tierney, star of the picture, will make an in-person tour of surrounding cities and will be present at the premiere ceremonies. Barbara Hale and Bill Williams, RKO contract players, will also be on hand, together with Mike Mazurki, Dewey Robinson and George E. Stone, all in behalf of the film. An added feature will be the appearance of a masked "Mr. X" who will speak from experience on the subject of "Crime Does Not Pay." Cheri Lawes, daughter of Warden Lawes, who was born at Sing Sing while her father was in charge, will also be a special guest.

Harry Reiners, of Terry Turner's exploitation staff, has lined up radio schedules which will have 33 stations on the Yankee Network plugging "San Quentin" for ten days preceding the premiere, in addition to local promotions. The radio build-up will also be supplemented by programs over WNOC, Norwich; WSTC, Stamford; WELI, New Haven; WKNB, New Britain; WKNE, Keene; WMAS, Springfield; WNBH, New Bedford; WCOB, Hyannis and WGAN, Presque Isle, Maine.

To Handle 'Long Night'

Foote, Cone and Belding, advertising agency, has been signed by Hakim-Litvak Productions to conduct the national advertising campaign, in connection with the forthcoming RKO Radio release, "The Long Night." First national magazine advertisements are scheduled to appear early in March.

NEW YEAR'S EVE. A blowup of a still like this can serve as the center of a setpiece to advertise that coming New Year's Eve show. The still reproduced above is of Mryna Dell, featured in RKO Radio's "Nocturne," and if ordered far enough in advance (the still—not Myrna), might be obtained from your RKO exchange. The number is MD 84-C.

20th-Fox Field Men Discuss Ad Plans

Plans for the subsequent engagements f "The Razor's Edge" throughout the country during Christmas week were discussed at a meeting of 20th Century-Fox exploiteers in New York last week. Charles Schlaifer, director of advertising, publicity, exploitation and radio, was in charge of the session.

The campaign which preceded the world premiere will be carried out nationally. Advertising and exploitation campaigns on "Margie," "My Darling Clementine," "13 Rue Madeleine," "The Brasher Doubloon" and "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim" were also outlined, and departmental discussions were led by Rodney Bush, exploitation manager, and Sid Blumenstock, assistant exploitation manager.

Field men present were Mike Weiss, Philadelphia; Wally Allen, Pittsburgh; William Michelson, Washington; Al Fowler, Boston; James Gillespie, Atlanta; Walter Hoffman, Minneapolis; Harry Weiss, Cleveland, and Ralph Stitt, New Haven.

Song Contest Highlights New's 'Margie' Campaign

The Baltimore News-Post and the New Theatre co-sponsored a song contest in connection with the showing of 20th-Fox's "Margie" as the highlight of the theatre's exploitation campaign on the picture. A $25 Savings Bond and other cash prizes were offered for the best list of old song titles submitted, together with a brief letter telling about the tune that haunted the writer most, and the reasons for the conclusion.

Other contests included an essay in high school papers.

Radio Debates, Screenings, Forums Plug 'Deception'

Several theatres have reported considerable success in exploiting Warners' "Deception" by tieing up with beauty shop operators in an advance screening stunt, suggested by the Warner home office, by which the beauty shop women discuss the film following the screening and then post signs in their shops similar to, "I saw Bette Davis in 'Deception' at the Blank Theatre. Ask me about it."

At the Warner Theatre, Oklahoma City, the forum consisted of a discussion on the subject, "Women Film Stars' Influence on Women in General." Style of hair dress, clothes, hats, etc., also were discussed. The Warner also obtained several window displays by playing on the word of the title. A drug store window was set up with a card, "Beauty is Deception," as its theme, and another one with a fur store had a card in the window reading. "There is no 'Deception' in Van Dyke's Furs." The Warner also played up the orchestral music in the picture by having the Oklahoma Symphony Orchestra organization send out by mail several thousand cards calling attention to the music.

Charles A. Smakwitz, assistant zone manager and advertising director for Warner Theatres in the Albany territory, also set up the special screening for beauty shop women, followed by a spirited forum.

The State Lake, Chicago, plugged "Deception" via a radio debate on the subject "Is 'Deception' ever justified?" on Elizabeth Hart's popular program on WMAQ and also arranged a round-table discussion on the same subject for broadcast from the Y.M.C.A. College.

Marine Aids 'No Leave' For Cohen and Horowitz

A nice break came the way of Manager Lou Cohen and his assistant Sam Horowitz of Loew's Poli, Hartford, when they came upon a former Marine who lives in Hartford and who had served as one of the technical advisors during the making of MGM's "No Leave, No Love," Van Johnson starrer. They invited the Marine to be a guest of the theatre and arranged for newspaper stories about the young man.

As an additional tieup they arranged with the U. S. Marines recruiting service for Marine Corps lobby displays.—HFD.

LOCAL CHECKERS, PRODUCER'S PROFITS UNDER FIRE AS INDEPENDENTS CONVENE

The annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan was characterized by the two-fisted uproar generally expected of an Allied meet. Local checkers, long a favorite target of theatremen, wound up on the shooting end of a strongly-worded resolution seeking an end to their use, along with producer and distributor practices which attempt to follow court decisions. Tie-in plans which seek to introduce a sliding scale in the producer's take, in addition to a three-for-one plan, were shown by speakers to yield as much as four times the profit for the producer-distributor as for the exhibitor.

It was decided to increase dues from 15 to 20 cents per theatre seat in order to pay for the services of a regional canvasman who would solicit new members, as well as keep members informed and promote the cooperative work of the organization.

Officers for the coming year are: President, William F. Ainsworth of Fond du Lac; Vice-President, Charles W. Trampe of Milwaukee; Secretary, Russell Leddy of Green Bay; Treasurer,, George Langheinrich of Milwaukee. Harry Perlewitz of Milwaukee will continue as business manager.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN STUDY BILL TO BAN SUNDAY SALE OF CANDY; MAYOR FAVORS INCREASED TAXES

Backed by the Retail Druggists Association, Alderman Carl W. Guetscho, (R., 23 Ward), introduced a bill to prohibit the sale, or offering for sale, of any goods or merchandise on Sundays, with only three exceptions: restaurants, delicatessens, and prescriptions compounded in drug stores. This bill, if passed, would void Sunday sales of candy, popcorn, and other standbys in movie theatres. It seems the big gripe of the Druggists Association is, oddly enough, the sale of household goods in super drug stores on Sundays, when merchants in that field must remain closed.

The Metropolitan Plan Association recently announced its estimate of a two-million population for St. Louis by 1960. The region covered in the predicted population increase includes St. Louis and St. Charles counties in Missouri, and Madison, and St. Clair counties in Illinois. Upon hearing this news, both Fred Wehrenberg and Fanchon & Marco's Harry C. Arthur came alive with plans for new theatre construction in the metropolitan area which would take advantage of the census jump.

Father William F. Glynn, former head of Father Dunne's Newsboys Home, is in Hollywood for conferences with producer Phil Ryan, scripter Herman Mankiewicz, and William Rankin, who is credited with the original story, relative to production of a film based on the activities of the Home.

Mayor Aloys P. Kaufman, speaking at the Chamber of Commerce dinner on Nov. 15, asked for the backing of business organizations in a program of either increased taxes, or new ones, or both. Mayor Kaufman predicted economic chaos for the city, should no additional sources of revenue be discovered; at the same time he spurned the suggestion that property taxes should be increased, claiming that such a move would discourage prospective new residents.

City Court Judge Joseph B. Catanzaro recently subjected a group of traffic violators to a screening of the MGM safety short, "Traffic With the Devil." The judge told the assembled defendants that he thought it "worthwhile to take up 20 minutes of the Court's time to show it to you as an educational feature." The showing marked the first presentation of the film in any courtroom.

Fred R. Rodgers has replaced Thomas A. Mullen as clerk of the St. Louis tribunal of the American Arbitration Association. Rodgers has behind him an impressive law career, and comes to his post from the Curtiss-Wright Company, where he specialized in labor relations.

Harry C. Arthur has confirmed the sale of Fanchon & Marco's and Sam Komm's stockholdings in Screen Guild Productions of St. Louis, Inc., to Andy Dietz, local manager of the exchange.

John J. Powers, Vice-President of the McCabe-Powers Auto Body Co., will be Chairman of the 1947 Mile-O-Dimes campaign in St. Louis and St. Louis county, scheduled to run from Jan. 15 to the twentieth.

Manager Harry Crawford, of the F&M Missouri Theatre, died on Nov. 19 in Boston, where he had gone to visit friends. Crawford began his career as an actor and producer, and became known in this locality for his wide charity work. On the same date Louis Albers, musician, passed away at the age of 91. Coming to this country from Germany, he began work in his profession here at the old Standard Theatre, and later played in film theatre orchestras.

$2,000,000 DUBINSKY BROTHERS SUIT BEGUN IN JEFFERSON CITY

The trial of the Dubinsky Brothers suit against Edward H. Durwood, 62, seeking equal shares with him in 13 theatres in Kansas City, St. Joseph, Jefferson City and Leavenworth, Kansas, and their profits, began in circuit court at Jefferson City last week. It involves an estimated $2,000,000. The three are Barney Dubinsky, 53, Irvin Dubinsky, 46, and H. W. Dubinsky, 42. The brothers claimed in an opening statement that tax returns and other evidence would show that the theatres were the property of an equal partnership, and that they were entitled to equal shares with their elder brother. William Boatwright, attorney for Durwood, countered in his opening remarks that the three plaintiffs were entitled only to a percentage share of the profits as set out in operating partnership agreements which he said they signed. He claimed the property itself actually belongs to Durwood and his children.

FAMOUS PLAYERS UPS DIVIDEND RATE; BRITISH NATIONAL FILMS PLAN NEW CANADIAN STUDIO

Famous Players Canadian Corp. has raised the dividend rate for its common stock, split three for one last February, by declaring a quarterly payment of 20c for Dec. 31, plus a bonus of 5c. This makes the total 1946 dividend the equivalent of 70c, as compared with the annual total of $1 on the old stock in recent years. Net income for 1945 was equal to $1.17 per share, it is stated, and earnings for the first half of 1946 are reported to be substantially higher than for the same period last year. In the sale of 375,000 shares of the new common this year, the cash was used to retire bond indebtedness thus giving the company a strong cash position for its expansion program.

Eastern Canada is destined to have another film-producing enterprise, according to the information brought from England by Robert Beatty, British star of the screen, stage and broadcasting, who, with his English wife, was home on a visit to his native city of Hamilton, Ont., for the first time since 1938. Plans have been laid for the opening of a major studio in the Dominion by British National Films Limited as soon as arrangements can be made with the Imperial Government for the transfer of necessary funds for the project, it was disclosed by the actor in an interview. Beatty also intimated that Sir Alexander Korda had become interested in studio plans in Canada.

Theatre organs are in the news again, for two different reasons. At Kingston, Ont., the Odeon Theatre has installed an electric organ for the presentation of a short program each evening. At the same time, the long-silent pipe organ of the Regent Theatre in Ottawa, Ont., has been sold to a church in that city. The massive instrument was installed in the Regent back in 1915 but had been used very little in the last decade.

Thousands of tickets were sold for the ball and carnival of the Canadian Picture Pioneers, Nov. 27 at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, the most brilliant function ever sponsored by the organization headed by L. The Ontario Provincial Chapter of the Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire, caused a surprise in Toronto theatre circles when, at a meeting at the local headquarters of the patriotic organization, endorsement was given to a proposal for the reduction of the age limit for attendance of unaccompanied children at film houses from 16 to 14 years. The Ontario law, which applies to performances after 6 p.m., provided discrimination for capable young people who were already in high school and yet were unable to attend an evening show unless accompanied by parent or adult guardian. The rules actually hindered bright students, it was argued.

Canadian communities have recovered from a wave of poliomyelitis which affected theatre attendance but now there are serious outbreaks of measles to cause civic alarm.

Sioux City Sue

Republic Western with Songs 69 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A nice, thoroughly entertaining western with music that returns Gene Autry to the screen.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do very well, indeed, in almost every situation, and in most spots it can lead a double bill.

Cast: Gene Autry, Lynne Roberts, Sterling Holloway, Richard Lane, Ralph Sanford, Ken Lundy, Helen Wallace, Pierre Watkin, Cass County Boys and Champion. Credits: Associate producer, Armand Schaefer. Directed by Frank McDonald. Original screenplay by Olive Cooper. Photography, Reggie Lanning.

Plot: A girl talent scout and a song writer look for a singing cowboy whose voice is to be dubbed with a cartoon donkey. Autry takes the job and a fake test is arranged (supposedly with no film in the camera) to placate him while voice recordings are made. When the cartoon is premiered Autry is ridiculed and returns to his ranch. There was film in the test camera, however; a producer sees it and Autry returns to Hollywood to star in a series of westerns with music.

Comment: Whatever quality Gene Autry possesses that made him the top western star for six years and one of the ten most potent box-office attractions in any category for three years he still has after his four years in the Army Air Forces. In "Sioux City Sue" Autry sings, rides, fights and is the pleasing personality liked by movie fans. The picture has been given top production values, has a believable script. is well directed and lacks the "corn" associated with most westerns. This has one very effective sequence made in miniature (although that is not apparent to the average observer), of the blowing up of a dam and flooding a valley full of cattle. There are many delightful comedy sequences with Sterling Holloway and Lynne Roberts, who has plenty of feminine appeal and a good reason for being in the picture. In addition to the title song Autry delivers a number of others in a pleasant style and with the accompaniment of the Cass County Boys. "Sioux City Sue" is altogether a nice, entertaining western with music that may not be featured as a wow on Broadway but is sure to do very well indeed almost everywhere else. Can lead double bills in most spots.

20th-Fox Fantasy with Music 91 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) The entire family, if they like fantasy without delving too closely in the rhyme or reason for it, will find some entertainment in this Technicolor fantasy with music. Has several good song numbers.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Satisfactory for those situations where the name draw brings them in.

Plot: This is the tale of an old man and his dreams; of a homemade schooner that sails imaginary seas; of a little girl whose unwavering faith inspired the strangest voyage ever made in the Louisiana bayous; of a boy who went to war and came back a man, and of a girl who waited.

Comment: "Wake Up and Dream" is not a musical in the accepted sense of the word, for there are no musical or production numbers; it is fantasy with a musical background. Made in Technicolor, it is a hard-to-believe story about a boat that travels through the streets of a town, pushed along by a gale. Name credits go to John Payne and June Haver, although Payne appears only in a few sequences at the beginning and the end of the picture. Most of the picture revolves around Connie Marshall, Clem Bevans and June Haver, with John Ireland filling in the footage during Payne's absence. The title will be thought by most moviegoers to be that of another entertaining musical, of the type 20th-Fox has been turning out so successfully. So be sure to stress the fact that this is not so in all your advance advertising; sell the film for what it is: a fantasy which the children will enjoy. In supporting roles are such fine performers as Charlotte Greenwood, George Cleveland and Lee Patrick, but there is little chance for them to show their capabilities. The picture is based on the novel, "Enchanted Voyage," by Robert Nathan. Lloyd Bacon directed and Walter Morosco produced.

The Man from Morocco

English Films Drama 89 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Mildly entertaining story of spy intrigue just following the Spanish Civil War and before the American landings in Morocco.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A little long for the purpose but good enough for a supporting spot on double-feature programs.

Cast: Anton Walbrook, Margaretta Scott, Mary Morris, Reginald Tate, Peter Sinclair, David Horne, Hartley Power, Charles Victor, Sybilla Binder and others. Credits: Produced by Warwick Ward. Directed by Max Greene. Screenplay by Edward Dryhurst with additional dialogue by Marguerite Steen. Original story by Rudolph Cartier. Adapted by Warwick Ward.

Plot: Volunteers from the International Brigade who had fought a losing fight in the Spanish Civil War make their way to the French border. At the orders of the German commanders in that sector they are conscripted at forced labor, to build a railroad for the Germans on the Sahara Desert. Leader of the International group is Anton Walbrook who had fallen in love with Margaretta Scott when they met en route to the French border. Walbrook escapes from the Sahara, is entrusted with a list of French patriots for delivery to American intelligence, and succeeds in his mission. He is reunited with Margaretta.

Comment: Although this film has the essential ingredients for a good "cloak and dagger" adventure it doesn't quite come off, due largely to what is sometimes termed "ham acting" on the part of some of the principals and to a jumpiness in the continuity that occasionally makes the theme difficult to follow. Since most of the action is filmed on location there is not much that can be said for or against production values, although a few interiors apparently have been given lavish handling. Direction seems to have been handled "off the cuff," so to state, apparently just following the script. With all of its shortcomings the picture has a few dramatic moments and a mild degree of overall entertainment, at least enough to make it suitable for a supporting spot on most double-bill programs.

Abie's Irish Rose

United Artists Comedy 96 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Few patrons will want to miss this film version of the play that made theatrical history, for although it has no star names, it has those qualities that have appealed to, and attracted the American public these many years.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: If sold correctly, far enough in advance of showing, this picture should attract heavily. Play up the title, for that has a potential drawing power that runs well into the millions.

Cast: Joanne Dru, Richard Norris, Michael Chekhov, J. M. Kerrigan, George E. Stone, Vera Gordon, Emory Parnell, Art Baker, Bruce Merritt, Eric Blore, Harry Hays Morgan. Credits: Produced and directed by A. Edward Sutherland. Original play by Anne Nichols. Screenplay by Anne Nichols. Photography, William Mellor. Presented by Bing Crosby Productions.

Plot: A Jewish boy and an Irish girl meet overseas after World War II, fall in love and get married. He gets back to America ahead of her, but fails to prepare his father for the news of his wedding. This causes no end of trouble when she arrives, for neither parent is willing to accept the marriage. Matters are finally adjusted when twins are born to the young couple.

Comment: "Abie's Irish Rose" is based on the play of the same name, written and produced by Anne Nichols in the early '20s, and still going strong in different parts of the world. It is a show that made American history as the most widely produced play in modern times, and has since become such a part of the American stage and radio, that there are few persons who do not recognize the title for what it is. With this background, therefore, the picture has a potential drawing power that runs well into the millions, for even in the small towns, some road company or other theatrical group have, at one time or another, given the play. Originally made as a silent film in 1928, this latest version is a modernized conception of the original idea. The entertainment worth is the same. It still possesses the human appeal most folks found in the play, which makes it an attraction that will draw by title alone, regardless of lack of names. The cast has been well-chosen, each player fitting his respective role with ability and turning in a good delineation. Though unknown to the average audience, patrons will find that

Joanne Dru is fine as Rosie and Richard Norris quite satisfactory as Abie. Michael Chekhov and J. M. Kerrigan play the fathers, and Art Baker and Emory Parnell are the rabbi and priest, respectively. Particularly good are George E. Stone and Vera Gordon as the two loyal friends. Credit goes to A. Edward Sutherland, who produced and directed for Bing Crosby Productions. This picture has tremendous exploitation possibilities, especially if sold through the cooperation of the different denominational groups in your vicinity. So get started well in advance of your playdate, for by doing so, returns should be more than satisfactory.

The Yearling

(Technicolor)

MGM Drama 135 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Superlative is the word for this extraordinary production destined to rate as one of the outstanding motion pictures of all times.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will score at the box-office of any theatre, regardless of its situation. Certain to bring excellent grosses everywhere.

Cast: Gregory Peck, Jane Wyman, Claude Jarman, Jr., Chill Wills, Margaret Wycherly, Forrest Tucker, Clem Bevans, Henry Travers, Donn Gift. Credits: Director, Clarence Brown. Producer, Sidney Franklin. Screenplay by Paul Osborn from the novel by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings. Photography, Charles Rosher, Leonard Smith and Arthur Arling.

Plot: Life in the Florida scrub country is a constant struggle for existence, and a little boy's desire for a pet to relieve his loneliness is refused by his parents. When the father becomes seriously ill, the boy must take his place and become the man of the house. He brings home a fawn which he calls "Flag," but because "Flag" destroys the crops as fast as they come up, the boy is forced by his father to shoot the animal. Embittered, the youngster runs away from home, but soon returns, more mature, ready to take his place as a man on the farm.

Comment: "The Yearling," already a Pulitzer Prize novel by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, gains even greater stature as a magnificent film. No one particular facet of the production can be designated as better than another, because the picture is as near to perfection as any that has ever been made. Certainly, Producer Sidney Franklin and Director Clarence Brown deserve plaudits for their faith in the story, which MGM bought in 1938 and has since spent eight years and a great deal of money in developing. Gregory Peck is ideal as the gangling, strong-principled Florida farmer; Jane Wyman surprises with an unusually authentic characterization of a long-suffering, poor farmer's wife, and youngster Donn Gift delivers an unforgettable portrayal of the lame boy with great dreams and a poet's outlook on life. But there can be little doubt that MGM and motion pictures have made a most important discovery in 11-year-old Claude Jarman, Jr., who portrays the central figure of the film. It is the boy's strong love for his pet, the fawn, that actuates the entire plot. And Jarman is more than equal to the exacting demands of the part; in fact, his is a performance that should garner some sort of special Academy Award. The photography, by three crack cameramen, is artistic and in keeping with the other outstanding qualities of the picture. Color further enhances the natural beauty of the Florida locations. Superlative is the word for this extraordinary production destined to rate as one of the outstanding pictures of all times. It should bring excellent grosses to any theatre in any situation.

Sweetheart of Sigma Chi

Monogram Musical 75 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) This entertaining musical will amuse the entire family. Has some outstanding and popular songs among the many fine individual numbers presented.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Much above-the-average for a program offering. Should attract considerable business because of the popularity of its musical numbers.

Cast: Phil Regan, Elyse Knox, Phil Brito, Ross Hunter, Tom Harmon, Paul Guilfoyle, Ann Gillis, Edward Brophy, Fred Colby, Alan Hale, Jr., David Holt, Marjorie Hoerner, William Beaudine, Jr., Emmett Vogan, Jr., Ruth Allen, Robert Arthur, Fred Datig, Jr., The Slim Gaillard Trio, Frankie Carle and His Orchestra. Credits: Produced by Jeffrey Bernerd. Photographed by L. W. O'Connell. Screenplay by Michel Jacoby. Original story by George Waggner. Directed by Jack Bernhard.

Plot: The girl who has been chosen "Sweetheart" of a co-ed college makes a play for the only man she has never been able to attract. He is quite an athlete and a very important member of the racing crew. When he does fall for her, he tends to neglect his athletics. There is a mixup between the girl, the young man, and an older man who runs a night club in the vicinity, all of which ends happily when the misunderstanding is cleared up.

Comment: Such numbers as Five Minutes More (a song that made the Hit Parade), Penthouse Serenade and And Then It's Heaven—all very popular plus a catchy number, It's Not I'm Such a Wolf, It's Just You're Such a Lamb; the amusing musical antics of The Slim Gaillard Trio and the piano playing of Frankie Carle with his Orchestra, have all been combined to make "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" a fine musical for the entertainment of average audiences. The story is just a light-weight college comedy, but it is sufficient to tie all the individual numbers together smoothly, fitting them into the pattern without any change in pace. Better-than-average as the run of musicals go, this one should attract considerably more patrons at the box-office than a regular program offering. In top spots are Phil Regan, Elyse Knox and Ross Hunter, all quite capable in their respective roles. Regan presents two numbers, but it is Phil Brito, a new discovery making his motion picture debut, who is responsible for the excellence with which most of the song numbers are presented. Others in the cast are also quite satisfactory. Credit for production and direction goes to Jeffrey Bernerd and Jack Bernhard, respectively.

The Secret Heart

MGM Drama 97 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) An absorbing story with psychiatric overtones that should thoroughly entertain adult audiences. Primarily of interest to women. Immature persons may not understand it and probably will not be interested in its theme.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Strong cast names and exploitable theme are factors that should produce substantial returns, if handled intelligently.

Cast: Claudette Colbert, Walter Pidgeon, June Allyson, Lionel Barrymore, Robert Sterling, Marshall Thompson, Elizabeth Patterson, Richard Derr, Patricia Medine, Eily Malyon, Ann Lace, Dwayne Hickman. Credits: Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Produced by Edwin H. Knopf. Screenplay by Whitfield Cook and Anne Morrison Chapin, based upon an original story and adaptation by Rose Franken and William Brown Meloney. Photography, George Folsey. Musical score arranged by Bronislau Kaper.

Plot: A young wife devotes her life to the care of her two step-children, following the suicide of her husband. The stepdaughter is a moody, sensitive adolescent, devoted to music, which had been her father's avocation. Ten years later the wife meets a man who had been in love with her before her marriage. The stepdaughter believes she is in love with her stepmother's friend. When she learns that her stepmother and the friend plan to marry, she almost follows in her father's footsteps, and it is not until the brutal facts of her father's financial defalcations, which had caused his suicide, are brought to her mind that she becomes normal and falls in love with a boy of her own age.

Comment: Although Director Robert Z. Leonard has made only a casual attempt to explain in easy stages the cause of the "father fixation" afflicting June Allyson in this absorbing story, through the device of having psychiatrist Lionel Barrymore make something of an explanation of the causes to stepmother Claudette Colbert, there exists an early lack of clarity (which later in the plot's development is cleared up). Except for this, the story follows a clear course and an entirely entertaining one. Miss Colbert is entirely believable in a difficult role and Miss Allyson seems to have progressed considerably in acting ability. As the adolescent stepdaughter who falls in love with Walter Pidgeon, primarily because he had been her father's best friend and later just for the sake of being in love, she is convincing at all times and plays one emotional scene that probably will bring forth many a handkerchief. Walter Pidgeon is excellent, too, as the man who fell in love with Miss Colbert just before her wedding and who, years later, renews his courtship successfully. Robert Sterling, Marshall Thompson and Patricia Medina also are fine in important supporting roles. As a whole, "The Secret Heart" is good entertainment for adult audiences, although immature persons may not understand it. The top cast names and the exploitable theme should produce substantial returns in most situations.

My Brother Talks to Horses

MGM Comedy-Drama 93 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A refreshing theme expertly contrived, well produced and directed, and acted with warmth and understanding, makes this a picture that will please and delight the entire family.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The popularity of "Butch" Jenkins and the intriguing, provocative title should do much toward making

STUDIO ROUNDUP

Despite the Continued Strike, Hollywood Studios Manage to Adjust Schedules, Permitting Production Activities to Progress Without Too Much Trouble

Production is swinging back to something approaching normalcy in Hollywood, with a gain in the number of pictures going before the cameras. The strike is still in progress, but the studios have managed by this time to adjust their schedules to a degree where shooting can progress without too much difficulty. Over 45 films are before the cameras, including every lot in town, large and small. A distinct threat to studio operations was averted when the costumers decided to take new terms and not join the Conference of Studio Unions on the picket lines. Replacing the costumers would have been an extremely tough job.

Paramount Starts One

A new film, "Deadlock," was scheduled to roll this week at Paramount. With Byron Haskin directing, the cast so far includes Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas and newcomer Kristine Miller. The Hollywood garden party sequence for "Variety Girl" was finished by Director George Marshall, who used all of a huge stage in recreating a garden with swimming pool, orchestra stand, barbecue pit, patio and landscaped terraces.

Warners Add to 'Pursued'

Robert Mitchum returned November 25 to Warners to appear in added scenes for "Pursued," U. S. Pictures production to be released by the Burbank lot. Another player who came back for more footage was Judith Anderson, who checked in after four weeks in Europe.

Arthur Edeson, currently photographing "My Wild Irish Rose," celebrated his 36th year as a cameraman on November 25. Since 1910, he has guided the cinematography of 50 important pictures.

It is possible that before the start of December "The Unfaithful" will get the "go" sign. Ernest Haller has been assigned as lensman for the Ann Sheridan starring vehicle, which Vincent Sherman is directing and Jerry Wald producing.

Monogram Filming Four

Monogram is at a production peak, with a quartet of films before the lenses—a better record than several of the larger studios. Irving Allen, producer-director of "High Conquest," for which he has already photographed 60,000 feet on Switzerland's Matterhorn, returned to Hollywood after three days of scouting locations in the Lake Arrowhead area. The film started November 29. Regis Toomey has been announced as a leading player.

Texas multi-millionaire Jack Wrather, producing his first picture, "The Guilty," for Monogram release, optioned his director, John Reinhardt for another film. After two-and-a-half weeks of shooting, young Wrather increased his budget by $100,000, adding nine scenes.

Because of the Cinecolor difficulties, "Black Gold" has been called off for the time being. Cleo Ridgely, old-time silent screen star, was added to Walter Mirisch's "Fall Guy."

PRC Adds 'Outlander'

PRC announced the purchase of a C. and S. C. film for its release called "The Outlander." (See Selling the Picture) President Harry Thomas closed a deal with John Sutherland to produce "Love Lessons," to start at Sutherland's own studio early in December. Meanwhile, "Red Stallion" is winding up a lengthy schedule at Eagle-Lion Studios.

Columbia Reveals Secret

Up to now it has been impossible to reveal that Columbia's sensational new star, Larry Parks, was secretly making a picture. For reasons best known to the studio, the news was kept quiet. Now it can be told that Parks, Ellen Drew, George Macready, Edgar Buchanan, Ray Collins, Marc Platt and Michael Duane are all in this Technicolor drama, "The Swordsman." Burt Kelly is producing, while Joseph H. Lewis directs.

The latest "Crime Doctor" started November 29, with William Castle directing and Warner Baxter starring. "The Crime Doctor's Vacation" is the title. Just before Thanksgiving, Columbia called 135 extras for courtroom sequences for "Lady from Shanghai," Rita Hayworth-Orson Welles starrer. Carl Frank, former member of Welles' Mercury Theatre, makes his film debut in the picture. The company left for San Francisco the day after Thanksgiving for two weeks location in and near that city.

"Assigned to Treasury," which Sidney Buchman is producing for Columbia with Dick Powell starring, goes before the cameras December 2. Jay Richard Kennedy, who wrote the screenplay, is also associate producer. Anne Nagel, former star, was given a supporting role in "Blondie's Holiday," 20th in the series. It is her first screen role in over a year.

2 Careys in UA Film

Harry Carey, Sr. and Harry Carey, Jr. are both in Howard Hawks' "Red River," joining John Wayne, Montgomery Clift, Walter Brennan and John Ireland. Benedict Bogeaus started a new film for United Artists release, "Christmas Eve," starring George Raft, George Brent, Randolph Scott and Joan Blondell. Bogeaus produces, assisted by Carley Harri-

Pine-Thomas Seek Theatremen's Ideas

With the intention of obtaining theatre managers' suggestions for the screenplay of "Albuquerque" and their ideas on how the forthcoming Technicolor film should be publicized and sold, Paramount's Pine-Thomas has sent 100 copies of Luke Short's "Dead Freight for Piute" to managers over the country. The film will be adapted from the book.

Twenty-five of the books have gone to selected leading theatres and the other 75 to managers picked at random. They have been asked to send in their suggestions after reading the book.

'Paradine Case' Set for Production on Dec. 9

David O. Selznick has set December 9 as the starting date of production on Alfred Hitchcock's "The Paradine Case." Budgeted at $3,000,000, the picture will have an all-star cast of players including Gregory Peck, Ann Todd, Louis Jourdan, Ethel Barrymore, Charles Laughton and Charles Coburn. Only the role of Mrs. Paradine remains uncast.

Travis Banton, Hollywood designer, is designing the costumes for the feminine stars of the film.

Jane Murfin Settles U-I Pact, Leaves Lot

Jane Murfin, who was scheduled to produce "Time Out of Mind," Universal-International's screen adaptation of the Rachel Field novel, has settled her contract with the studio by mutual consent and checked off the lot.

The picture is scheduled to go into production this week with a cast headed by Phyllis Calvert, Robert Hutton, Ella Raines and Eddie Albert. Robert Siodmak will direct the film under the production supervision of the U-I front office.

RKO's 'Close-Up' to Be Filmed in New York

"Close-Up," an original story by James Poe whose ancestor was Edgar Allen Poe, has been bought by RKO Radio and will be the first big feature to be filmed entirely in the new RKO-Pathe Studios in New York City.

Scheduled for production early next summer, the film's screenplay will be written by Martin Rackin. Nat Holt will produce under Jack Gross's executive supervision.

Blondell in Bogeaus Film

Joan Blondell has been signed as the first feminine star for the forthcoming Benedict Bogeaus screen production, "Christmas Eve," which United Artists will release. The picture will have as its male stars George, Raft, Randolph Scott and George Brent and is to be directed by Edwin L. Marin.

HOLLYWOOD

Pickford-Cowan to Start $7½ Million Schedule

Preparations for an immediate start on the first of four pictures with a combined budget of $7,500,000, all to be produced during the coming year for release through United Artists, has been announced by the new combine of Mary Pickford and Lester Cowan.

The Pickford-Cowan organization has announced also that it will operate under the name, Artists Alliance, with Miss Pickford as president and Cowan responsible for the creation and delivery of the program. The association is said to be an equal partnership.

First picture will be "One Touch of Venus," for which Harry Kurnitz has been signed to write the script. It will be in Technicolor. Others included in the program are, "Babylon Revisited," "Sorrel and Son" and an original, "The President's Husband."

PRC Readies Two for Holiday Season Release

Two key productions of PRC's 1946-47 schedule, "Born to Speed" and "The Devil on Wheels," have been given top studio priority and are being readied for early release to coincide with the Christmas holiday season and the company's December booker-salesman drive.

"Born to Speed" has a cast headed by Johnny Sands and Terry Austin, and includes Don Castle, Frank Orth, Geraldine Wall and Joe Haworth. Cast of "The Devil on Wheels" is headed by Noreen Nash, with Darryl Hickman and Jan Ford featured in important roles. Others in the film are Damian O'Flynn, Sue England, James Cardwell, Lenita Lane, William Forest, Robert Arthur and Ann Burr.

Added to 'Fugitive'

Additions to the cast of "The Fugitive," the Argosy Pictures feature to be directed by John Ford for RKO Radio release, include Leo Carrillo, Robert Armstrong, Chris-Pin Martin, Fortunio Bonanova, and the Mexican actor Pedro Armendarez. The latter will be featured in both the English and Spanish versions.

'Conspiracy' to Vanguard

"Conspiracy," an original story written directly for the screen by Vicki Baum, has been purchased by Vanguard Films. Cary Grant and Dorothy McGuire are considered the ideal team to enact the leading roles in the comedy drama which Dore Schary will produce.

Pens New Story

Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, author of the Pulitzer Prize winning novel, "The Yearling," which MGM has produced and will release soon, has written her first story especially for the screen, "A Family for Jock" which MGM will screen with Claude Jarman, Jr., and Lassie as its stars. Robert Sisk will produce.

Signs Doris Anderson

Doris Anderson has been signed by Paramount to work with Walter DeLeon on the script of "Catalina," Technicolor musical film based on an original story by N. Richard Nash.

man, and Edwin Marin directs.

Sam Coslow also got under way with "Copacabana," being directed by Alfred E. Green. Cast so far includes Carmen Miranda, playing a double role; Groucho Marx, for the first time appearing as himself and without the brothers; Steve Cochran, Andy Russell and Gloria Jean. Coslow is also writing songs for this musical.

Walker Busy at MGM

MGM's Robert Walker really knocked himself out last week for the "Roaring Lion." He started work opposite Katharine Hepburn in "A Love Story," then reported for additional recordings on "Till the Clouds Roll By," completed work on "Sea of Grass" and wound up with a dramatic additional sequence for "The Beginning or the End." Henry Daniell was put into "Love Story" for the part of Franz Liszt; he leaves Broadway, where he is appearing in "Lady Windermere's Fan," to come to Hollywood.

Pat Emery, statuesque redhead, makes her film debut as a rival of Lana Turner and Donna Reed for the affections of Richard Hart in "Green Dolphin Street." One of the largest outdoor sets in MGM's history has been completed for the film, a waterfront of early day Wellington, New Zealand. Anna Q. Nilsson, once of Hollywood's top silent stars, won a major role in "The Rich, Full Life"; she portrays Elizabeth Wilson's high school teacher. S. Z. "Cuddles" Sakall was also added to the cast as Elizabeth's singing teacher.

Filming on the Butterfly Ballet sequence in "The Unfinished Dance" began November 20.

RKO Finishes 'Tarzan'

Sol Lesser finally completed "Tarzan and the Huntress," which was in production for a record number of days for such an effort. The picture, which had the usual combination of Johnny Weissmuller, Brenda Joyce and Johnny Sheffield, plus Patricia Morison, was before the lensmen over 66 days. Kurt Neumann served as associate producer and director. The second unit of "Build My Gallows High" ended its work at Lake Tahoe under the direction of Lynn Shores. Dickie Moore is an addition to the cast.

With the recovery of Barbara Bel Geddes, who is making her first picture following a meteoric stage career, Hakim-Litvak's "The Long Night" resumed shooting at RKO. Anatole Litvak is serving as producer with the brothers Hakim, as well as directing. The other independent unit releasing through the studio, now shooting, is Robert Riskin's "Magic Town." The studio, itself, is working on "Seven Keys to Baldpate" and "Flight," to which former prizefighter Freddie Steele has been added.

U-I Filming Three

Universal-International added a third picture to its production list. With "The Egg and I" now in its eighth week, and "Buck Privates Come Home" finishing its second, "Time Out of Mind" becomes an additional U-I worker. Starring are English importation Phyllis Calvert, Robert Hutton, Ella Raines, Eddie Albert and Broadway veteran Leo G. Carroll. Robert ("Spiral Staircase") Siodmak is directing and Fred Frank assists. Tom Brown, Nat Pendleton and Beverly Simmons are additions to the Abbott & Costello comedy.

Dr. Miklos Rosza started conducting the U-I orchestra for prescoring on "Time Out of Mind."

Enterprise Film Addition

At the suggestion of Barbara Stanwyck, who stars with David Niven in Enterprise's "The Other Love," 27-year-old Jimmie Horne was tested and cast in the picture last week. He plays Richard Conte's racing car mechanic. A brother-in-law of Jackie Cooper, Horne was recently discharged from the service.

3 in Work at Republic

Republic is shooting three pictures, including Producer-Director Frank Borzage's "Gallant Man." The picture features Don Ameche, Catherine McLeod, Roscoe Karns, Joe Frisco and Kitty Irish. Lew Borzage is assisting his brother in the production. The Nelson Eddy-Ilona Massey musical drama remains untitled at this point. Added to "Wyoming," now ending its first month before the cameras, is veteran character comedienne Minna Gombell. Joe Kane is serving as both associate producer and director on the extra-budget outdoor story.

Illness Delays 'Amber'

It looks like Producer William Perlberg of "Forever Amber" would do well to weight his pockets down with four-leaf clovers and horseshoes to try to counteract the bad luck following his production at 20th Century-Fox. The latest was Margot Grahame, who became suddenly ill with a respiratory ailment while working on location at Del Monte. The troupe is back now, with Miss Grahame reportedly much improved and ready to work.

By mutual consent, Helen Walker's contract with 20th-Fox has been canceled. Barbara Salisbury, recently seen in "The Razor's Edge," has been signed to a new contract.

Eagle-Lion's comedy-drama, "Amy Comes Across," was completed last week after a month-and-a-half of shooting. Starred are Franchot Tone and Ann Richards, with Tom Conway, Frances Rafferty and Clarence Kolb. Lee Marcus produced and Leigh Jason directed.

Forbstein Back on Job

Leo Forbstein, head of the Warner Bros. Studio music department, returned to his office this week after being out nearly three weeks due to illness.

Hunter in Western

Virginia Hunter, under contract to Columbia as a dancer for two years, has been cast in "Stranger from Ponca City," latest in Columbia's Durango Kid series. Paul Campbell has been named juvenile lead with Derwin Abrahams directing.

Kellogg's Top Role

John Kellogg has been cast by Columbia for a top role in "King of the Wild Horses" in support of Preston Foster and Gail Patrick.

WB's Next "Two Guys" Will Be in Technicolor

"Two Guys From Texas," second in the series of "Two Guys" productions that began with "Two Guys From Milwaukee," has been set by Warner Bros. as a Technicolor picture.

The "two guys" will again be Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson, with Janis Paige and Martha Vickers as the girl friends, while David Butler and Alex Gottlieb, who respectively directed and produced the first picture, will again handle the new production.

Republic '46-47 Output Close to Schedule

With only six weeks remaining of this year, Republic studios will wind up with over two-thirds of its major 1946-47 productions completed and ready for release, it has been announced by Allen Wilson, vice-president in charge of studio production.

Ten top-budgeted productions were scheduled for delivery during 1946-47 and, of these, one is already in release, three are being edited, and three more are currently before the cameras and slated to finish before the new year, with the remaining three scheduled to start early in 1947.

Name Ad Counsel

Marshall Grant, Inc., motion picture producers, have appointed Ruthrauff & Ryan as advertising counsel on their forthcoming film, "Moonrise," which has been adapted from Theodore Strauss' novel. The picture, scheduled to go into production shortly, will be promoted through publication advertising, point of sale material and merchandising aids.

Buys Two Plays

American Eagle Films has announced the purchase of two plays produced on Broadway by Edgar and Archie Selwyn. The properties are "Nightie Night" and "Cherries are Ripe," which will be made by American Eagle, according to President Sam Howard. Howard, Leo J. McCarthy and Louis Berkoff recently formed the new company.

Next Brown Western

"The Law Comes to Gunsight" has been set as the next Monogram western starring Johnny Mack Brown with Raymond Hatton. J. Benton Cheney is preparing the script, and Barney Sarecky will produce. Starting date is December 9.

Buys Two Stories

Purchase of two original story properties has been announced by Monogram. Stories are "Son of the Tiger," by R. C. Wright, and "The Idol's Eye," by Thomas Benton. The former will be a high-budget special, filmed in color.

Selznick Signs Valli

Valli, Italian dramatic actress, has been signed by David O. Selznick to a long-term contract and may make her American debut in Alfred Hitchcock's "The Paradine Case," if she is able to come to America immediately.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

Zukor Leads Pleasant Parade Down Memory Lane; CEA Blasts GFD Percentage, Resists News Price Lift

By JOCK MacGREGOR

Quite the pleasantest function in a long while was Adolph Zukor's lunch for the Cinema Veterans of '03—those grand not-so-old-boys who have made the industry what it is and some of who are still working. Everybody was in a reminiscent mood.

MacGregor

Mr. Zukor held his audience with stories of the '93 days when he was first attracted to films at the Chicago World Fair.

Unfortunately President E. G. Turner was indisposed, but Tommy France, the trade's raconteur, made an excellent stand-in. He told of early achievements . . . of the days when he bought Zukor pictures outright for the four northern counties for $500 . . . of other veterans like Bill Barker who was filming 51 years ago and at 82 was recently copped for speeding . . . of Jimmy Squire, F. W. Baker, Col. Bromhead, Major Gale and the 117 living members, including one in Australia.

Tommy also referred to the recent and less pleasant affair when at the November CEA General Council Meeting rentals were discussed and Paramount was congratulated on fair dealing.

At the CEA meeting, delegates strongly criticized the change that had recently come over Rank's GFD and the terms asked for "The Overlanders."

Originally booked to Odeon Circuit and London independents with Para's "Bride Wore Boots" as a dual bill at 25 per cent each, both proved "sleepers." After the initial success, it is alleged, independent provincial showmen were asked 40 and 50 per cent for the British half whereas Para maintained their original terms of 25 per cent where played with "Overlanders" or 33 1/3 per cent if played solo with supporting shorts.

The meeting decided to send a deputation to Major R. P. Baker, of the producers who are alleged to have requested the increase.

Delegates suggested that the change of GFD's policy had taken place without Arthur Rank's knowledge; this has since been denied by Mr. Rank, who stated that British films should be paid for according to their merit.

A GFD spokesman has described the situation as a "storm in a tea-cup." The fact remains that a lot of mud has been slung and the American company has come out with credit.

A CEA delegation will also meet the Newsreel Association on proposed increased charges. Owing to stock shortages many houses share newsreels though still pay-pre-war charges.

The Denham trade press conference for "October Man" was not unlike a War Office affair. Producer Col. Eric Ambler headed the Army Production Branch when I was in charge of Distribution and Exhibition and Director Roy Baker made some of the best training films.

Eric is better known as the author of such thrillers as "Mask of Dimitrios."

Walt Disney, en route to Ireland to study leprechauns and other pixies for a new cartoon, held a press conference at the Savoy. His future features will introduce more humans to ease production difficulties.

That enthusiastic cinemagoer, HM The Queen Mary, attended a GB Junior Club Saturday morning matinee at the Kilburn State and afterwards expressed enjoyment of the program and interest in the movement. J. Arthur Rank, John Davies and their wives were presented to Her Majesty.

BOX-OFFICE SLANTS

this picture a formidable box-office contender throughout the country. Word-of-mouth comment will build grosses.

Cast: "Butch" Jenkins, Peter Lawford, Beverly Tyler, Edward Arnold, Charlie Ruggles, Spring Byington, O. Z. Whitehead, Paul Langton, Ernest Whitman, Irving Bacon, Lillian Yarbo, Howard Freeman, Harry Hayden. Credits: Produced by Samuel Marx. Directed by Fred Zinnemann. Story and screenplay by Morton Thompson. Photography, Harold Rosson. Special effects, Warren Newcombe. Art direction, Cedric Gibbons, Leonid Vasian. Musical score, Rudolph G. Kopp.

Plot: In Baltimore lives an eccentric family with two boys. The older, who works in a bank, is afraid to ask his girl to marry him. The small brother, who loves animals, claims he can talk to horses. Because of this amazing talent, gamblers hope that the boy will give them the dope on how to bet. He loses his strange ability and, in a brawl with the gamblers, his older brother emerges freed of his old fears, leaves his unbearable job, and determines to marry the girl he loves.

Comment: "My Brother Talks to Horses" may not be the outstanding picture of the year; advance publicity is not likely to enthuse over its spectacle, its magnificent, soul-stirring performances or its all-star cast. And yet, the majority of moviegoers will find it one of the most enjoyable films they've seen in a long time. For while it makes no bid for the best-picture-ever-made title, it nevertheless succeeds in bringing to the scren a refreshing theme expertly contrived, well produced and directed, and acted with warmth and understanding. A child couldn't possibly talk to horses—the idea is ridiculous—but as the situation is presented here the spectator finds himself believing it, and he falls right in with the mood of the picture. "Butch" Jenkins, who has already carved a niche for himself in the screen hall of fame, is magnetically appealing, and he wins complete audience sympathy from the very first scene. And while the picture is definitely his, there are other performances to be reckoned with, including those of Peter Lawford, Beverly Tyler, Spring Byington, Charlie Ruggles, Ernest Whitman and O. Z. Whitehead. Fred Zinnemann, the director, and Samuel Marx, the producer, have avoided the pitfall of treating their subject in a farcical vein; instead, they have wisely blended fantasy with realism, and in the process have injected a warm and human touch into the proceedings. The result is a picture that is sometimes amusing, sometimes serious and emotional, yet always entertaining. It is, in short, a picture that will please and delight the entire family. The popularity of "Butch" Jenkins, and the intriguing, provocative title should do much toward making "My Brother Talks to Horses" a formidable box-office contender throughout the country. Word-of-mouth comment will build grosses.

Wild West

(Color)

PRC Western with Songs 73 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A better-than-average western with plenty of action and some nice songs.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: With Eddie Dean's popularity on the upgrade, this should fill nicely on double bills.

Plot: Eddie Dean, special investigator for the Rangers, and his assistants, Roscoe Ates and Al Larue, are assigned to aid the telegraph company get its lines through to a designated spot 300 miles away. A lawless band is determined to stop the telegraph's progress and to prevent bringing in law and order to the section. Eddie and his pals see that the line is completed and dispose of the outlaws.

Comment: Considerably more production care has been given this Cinecolor version of the Eddie Dean series and there has been much more action than has been usually associated with Dean's pictures, although they have not been short of action themselves. Dean exhibits his pleasing baritone in several songs, including, Ride on the Tide of a Song, Journey's End, I Can Tell By the Stars, and Elmer, the Knock-Kneed Cowboy. There is little new in the plot, with the bad guys getting their just deserts, and Eddie and his friends proceeding along the trail to what audiences know will be other adventures. One new note has been added by Al Larue, who demonstrates a facile use of a bull whip to defeat his adversaries. A better-than-average western that should fit nicely into any double-bill program.

Lady in the Lake

MGM Mystery 105 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A new story-telling technique—one that makes the audience an associate of the leading character in solving a murder case—should attract special attention to this excellent mystery drama. Star-director Robert Montgomery deserves most of the credit for this progressive step in the style of picture presentation.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The manner in which audiences accept the new technique remains to be seen. Nevertheless, it is a factor whose exploitation should draw considerable, curious patronage to the box-office. There are marquee qualities in the cast, and word-of-mouth comment should do much to increase grosses.

Cast: Robert Montgomery, Audrey Totter, Lloyd Nolan, Tom Tully, Leon Ames, Jayne Meadows, Dick Simmons, Morris Ankrum, Lila Leeds, William Roberts, Kathleen Lockhart, Ellay Mort. Credits: Produced by George Haight. Directed by Robert Montgomery. Screenplay by Steve Fisher. Based on the novel by Raymond Chandler. Photography, Paul C. Vogel.

Plot: Private detective Phillip Marlowe finds himself involved in a murder when asked to find the missing wife of a publisher. He uncovers the murder of two women and finds the man who was involved with them killed by an unknown assailant. Detained as a suspect himself, the detective talks fast, gets himself released from jail and solves the crime.

Comment: The outstanding feature of this excellent mystery drama—another of the Phillip Marlowe detective stories by Raymond Chandler—is the new story-telling technique employed, a technique that makes the spectator an associate of the leading character, thus placing members of the audience on their mettle to help solve the crime. This is done by using the camera in front of the leading character, so that the story, as projected on the screen, is seen through the eyes of the individual telling the story. The technique is actually a series of close-ups, for Robert Montgomery, who plays the lead and directed the picture, is seen only when the camera flashes back to his telling the tale—in this instance, to the theatre audience. In all other instances, he is only heard while the other characters are seen as he talks with them. Whether this new method of story-telling will be the beginning of a new form of projection is problematical. Certainly it is unique and a matter of discussion that will attract attention to the picture. Taking the other side, it may be that audiences, who will constantly have to follow the camera in search of evidence, may find that this technique is more tiring than the ordinary method and that it may tend to divert their interest from the story itself. However, that remains to be seen. In any case, most moviegoers (including mystery fans) will find "Lady in the Lake" an entertaining mystery well performed by Montgomery, Audrey Totter, Lloyd Nolan, Leon Ames and Tom Tully. The performances are particularly worthy of note, since this new technique demands more real, convincing portrayals than the players would otherwise be called upon to delineate. For a progressive step in the style of picture presentation, most of the credit must go to Montgomery, who directed, and to George Haight, who produced. Steve Fisher turned in a fine screenplay from the Chandler novel.

Branch manager Jack Ellis, of United Artists, recently celebrated his seventh wedding anniversary.

Republic billing clerk Pauline Gidds lost a week on account of illness, and United Artists Booker Tony Agoglia suffered an attack of grippe. Joe Burke, 20th-Fox office manager, is making a fast recovery from his recent operation.

Mrs. Ruth Stransky, of Paramount, has been displaying a gold, heart-shaped bracelet with "I Love You" inscribed in seventeen different languages, which is about all the ways her husband, Arthur, could think of saying it.

Warner Bros. salesmen Leo Jocobi and H. P. Decker finished fourth and fifth, respectively, in the 1946 sales drive just concluded.

WASHINGTON

KIDDIE SHOWS GIVEN WIDE PLAY IN THREE-STATE AREA

Warner zone manager John J. Payette has announced that the response of parents and children to shows drawn from the Children's Film Library of the Motion Picture Association has been more than sufficient to warrant a second series in the seven local neighborhood theatres which participate in the plan. In addition, eight theatres in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia will adopt the series for Saturday morning shows, starting with the first week in December. Managers Alan Bachrach, Raymond Burch, Kenneth Davis, Claude Land, Lawrence Snoots, Henry Coon and James Glennon participated with Warner advertising manager Frank La Falce in exploiting the programs. Out-of-town theatres ready to inaugurate the series are: Capitol, Winchester, Va.; Academy, Hagerstown, Md.; Tivoli, Frederick, Md.; Apollo, Martinsburg, W. Va.; Arcade, Waynesboro, Pa.; State, Lexington, Va.; Masonic, Clifton Forge, Va., and the Virginia in Harrisonburg, Va.

Audrey Poulos, of the MGM billing department, is a senior hostess at the Club Teen, and also is on the committee arranging for a fashion show to be sponsored by a local department store for presentation at the club.

W. Vincent Dougherty, formerly Paramount salesman, has switched to Universal-International in the same capacity.

Earle Theatre assistant manager Floyd Haines has been talking to a publisher about the choral music he composes as a hobby.

MGM auditor Carl Gentzel has returned to the local exchange for a few weeks of work. At that exchange, Sylvia Cool has joined the billing department and John Procter is new in the shipping room.

FALL GUY (Mono.) Mystery. Principals: Bob Pierce, Teala Loring. Director, Reginald LeBorg. Plot: A young man, full of dope and covered with blood is questioned about murder. He escapes the police, and his girl and a friend try to help him recall the party he attended the night before. They return to the scene, with the police on their trail, and find the murdered body of a young girl. Two more murders are committed before they trap the real killer, who was trying to frame the young man.

THE GUILTY (Mono.) Mystery. Principals: Bonita Granville, Don Castle. Director, John Reinhardt. Plot: Attracted by his faithless sweetheart, a young man goes back to his home town, which he had left a year before when his sweetheart's twin sister was mysteriously murdered. He discovers that he no longer loves the girl, who now seems to have many men-friends. Returning to the scene of her sister's murder, he is arrested on new evidence. It is proved that he killed the sister, under the impression that she was his unfaithful girl-friend.

Magnificent Doll	Family*	.....	Adults	.....

NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW: Founded in 1909 "to represent the interests of the motion picture public," maintains a Review Committee consisting of some 300 men and women of all ages, "representing a cross-section of public taste." Designations: Family—14 years of age and up (recommendations for age groups under 14 by Schools M. P. Committee of the Board); Mature—18 years and up. *—Especially worth seeing.

SCHOOLS MOTION PICTURE COMMITTEE. A committee of the National Board of Review which "represents groups of parents and teachers from public and private schools," whose purpose is to select pictures "suitable for age groups 8-12 and 12-14."

NATIONAL LEGION OF DECENCY: Committee of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae reviews pictures and publishes its moral classifications for guidance of members of the Legion—composed of those members of the Catholic Church who join the Legion. Designations: Unobjectionable for General Patronage; Unobjectionable for Adults; Objectionable in Part; Condemned.

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS. The motion picture committee is headed by Mrs. Arretus F. Burt, Chairman, of St. Louis. Two reviewing committees are maintained—Mrs. Harry Lilly, New York, Chairman Eastern Committee; Mrs. John Stearns Thayer, Los Angeles, Chairman Western Committee. Designations: Family—8 years and up; Mature Family—14 years and up; Junior and Senior High School Students and Adults; Senior High School Students and Adults. —Exceptional.

"RAGE in HEAVEN"

THE reports that roll in on the return engagements of "Rage in Heaven" after five years, have a happy bearing on our frequent contention that the motion picture has arrived at a maturity which confers abiding values on the better product.

Figures from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer indicate that in a series of presentations in widely diverse locations, the Poli Theatres in Worcester, the Palace in Washington, in Boston, Rochester, Dayton and Altoona, the picture is grossing somewhere near three times the figures for original release in 1941.

Observers tend to consider that the manifestation is considerably controlled by the rising fame of Miss Ingrid Bergman. No doubt that is a help. It cannot be the complete answer. There is plenty of Bergman product around. The money laid down at the box office indicates that the customers like the show and talk about it enough to send the neighbors.

THIS COULD BE IT!

A milestone in the history of the film industry was erected in New Orleans this week when representatives of all branches of the business assembled in response to a call for the organization of a Motion Picture Foundation as an institution to carry on what might be called human welfare work for those in need who serve or have served in the industry.

It is quite likely that this record-shattering response set a precedent not only for film business but for any one industry in this country. The gathering, by reason of the numbers and the widespread and far-flung representation encompassed, undoubtedly was the first truly all-industry event in motion picture annals.

Only those who were there to observe for themselves could truly appreciate the scope, the earnestness, the real vitality of the movement as shown by the quality and quantity of the representation drawn to New Orleans for the meeting.

It really could be that here, at long last, the film industry has found the rallying point around which there can be formed a true united front. It really could be that the events stemming from this momentous meeting can influence for incalculable good the human relations within all industries for the greater good and progress of mankind everywhere.

From the purely selfish industry standpoint, the selfless attitude reflected in the enthusiastic, sincere and truly social-conscious thoughts, words, deeds and actions at this meeting, can be recognized only as a most genuine manifestation that the film business of this country is at the very threshold of a greater era of service to its own and to all mankind than it has ever known.

If only a modest portion of the tremendously promising results are achieved in the future, this will have been one of the most constructive gatherings of business men and women in the history of this great country of ours.

An observer could not be other than moved with an overwhelming sense of the ruggedly human character, mature viewpoint, far-reaching vision, and exceptional ability of motion picture people as a class.

The meeting chose a most able, energetic and potent leader as permanent chairman when E. V. Richards was elected to that post.

Look for great things from this budding organization. Primarily, of course, things which will make us all prouder to be members of an industry which has taken the lead in effecting an over-all welfare program. But, also, things which will help in bringing about a greater understanding between all branches of the industry.

More of Same, Please!

If it is no little discouraging to see the extent of potential tax raids on the motion picture theatre by money-hungry municipal governments, it is entirely encouraging to note the display of prudent, effective planning, smooth teamwork and able execution of defensive moves that have been made in many sections where tax onslaughts have been attempted against theatremen.

In Chicago some little time ago, the theatremen got together and local showmen working together for mutual protection put up a united front which enabled their side, on which justice rested, to prevail in the Illinois State legislature. That fine job of work was done by both independent and circuit exhibitors, with Jack Kirsch and Johnny Balaban prominent in the fight that won.

In St. Louis, exhibitors under the leadership of Fred Weherenberg have put up a great fight against added tax burden proposals. They are still deep in the woods, but these showmen in old St. Loo are doing a job to warm your heart.

In Sedalia, Missouri, a big circuit and an independent got together to win a rough and tumble fight over unfair tax proposals, when Fox Midwest and local exhibitor J. T. Ghosen closed shop (being showmen, most reluctantly, of course) when it became necessary to take such drastic action in depriving the town of movies, in order to prove their side in the tax argument.

These are isolated instances and many more heroic examples have occurred to prove that theatremen today are working far more effectively for their self protection than has been the case in the past.

The evidence again makes it abundantly clear that local exhibitor organization and cooperation is vital—is the very foundation upon which strong national organization can be built.

Observation

Paramount is calling attention to "Blue Skies" with a reminder that it's 17 days to Christmas. Now can somebody tell the industry how many days it is to a decision by the Three Judges as to how, when and where pictures are going to be bought and sold in this business?

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

WELFARE—Two days of hard-working committee sessions at New Orleans brought the Motion Picture Foundation into being with a program of raising a fund in the millions for industry aid. The money, to be raised within two years from several sources, will be used to aid members of the exhibition and distribution divisions of the industry either through directed help, educational scholarship and scientific and industrial research of benefit to all. The Foundation did not appoint the trustees which are to rule it, but will be governed by groups from 31 exchange centers who will in turn appoint the governing group.

COAL—Exhibitors in the brownout areas were worried this week that further electrical curtailment might be ordered, which in many instances would have the effect of shutting houses down altogether.

The Civilian Production Administration said that immediate steps in this direction were not necessary, but to date the saving of electricity from brownout and other conservation measures seemed slight, with the Edison Electric Institute reporting Wednesday that the nation had conserved in the seven-day period of Nov. 23 to Nov. 30 only 317,000,000 kilowatt hours of electricity. The consumption for the week ending Nov. 23 was 4,764,718,000 kilowatt hours. This dropped to 4,448,193,000 kilowatt hours for the week ending Nov. 30.

Theatres using coal for fuel purposes were also worried, since the end of the strike seemed remote. Government agencies praised the cooperation given them by theatres and in Washington exhibitors presented figures to show that the amount of electricity theatres saved with brownouts in the Capital city was negligible compared to the amount spent in homes.

EXHIBITION—In Chicago, Essaness is trying out a wider policy of single features in its "C" houses, using "The Killers" for the tryout. Chicago kids are also going for special shows.

In New York, Walter Reade leased his swanky Park Avenue Theatre, effective Dec. 22, to Universal as a Rank showcase. House will use reserved seat policy. McKee Theatres, which builds houses for established exhibitors on a mass production basis, announces that it has signed for 20 in this area.

In England, a government committe studying the motion picture industry recommends that 500 theatres be bought from the three big circuits and divided into circuits of 250 each, which would be run by a small board of experienced showmen under government control. A similar move would be made in distribution and exhibition. The idea is to prevent monopoly.

LABOR—Stiffening resistance on the part of producers in Hollywood this week tended to the belief that the end of the studio labor strike was not near, or even as near as it had been last week. Producers are demanding that the Conference of Studio Unions agree to abide by the AFL jurisdictional directive, by previous salary agreements and to strive to prevent terrorism and restrain mass picketing before they will accept the CSU invitation to confer.

Observers believe that the studio stand is a prelude to a possible studio shutdown which they see coming around March 1. Whatever the possibilities, at the moment labor peace seemed dim. The CSU has ruled its members may take non-studio jobs and refrain from picketing but must pay $15 weekly into the strike fund if they do so. Walter Ruf, who helped guide strike strategy as a public relations man, resigned, to be succeeded by Al Weintraub of the IATSE-rebelling Film Technicians Local 683. Ted Ellsworth, of the IATSE Film Costumers, Local 705, has resigned in protest of the pact which the IATSE signed for the union he belonged to.

Some 86 members of Local 78, United Association of Steamfitters and of Local 212, International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers, Welders and Helpers, who had been backing the CSU strike, returned to studio work this week, while William Pomerance, executive secretary of the Screen Writers Guild, resigned in protest because his organization is not supporting the CSU. The Screen Actors Guild, which hitherto has crossed CSU picket lines, has a petition from 200 members to reconsider the matter.

On Dec. 14 all labor—both striking and non-striking—will probably get together for a mass protest rally against the use of injunctions against picketing.

Members of Local 174 Film Row White Collar workers, rejecting a 10 per cent pay raise offer to their demand for a 20 per cent raise voted to strike but set no strike date.

TAXES—Senator Glen Taylor, (D. Idaho) wants to lift taxes from admissions, and in Omaha, Neb., the mayor has promised all tax recess till next summer when he expects to get the report of the special businessman committee volunteering to study new tax sources.

NATIONAL NEWSREEL

Brownout, Shopping, Fail To Stop Run of Holdovers

Browned-out areas combined with the pre-Christmas slump made a dent in the nation's weekly grosses, but pictures with drawing power held both their runs and most of their business in the majority of locations.

In Chicago Warner Bros. lay claim to some sort of a record with holdovers on four pictures in as many houses in the Loop area. "The Big Sleep" went into its eighth week at the Apollo; "Deception" entered its fifth at the State-Lake, while "Cloak and Dagger" saw its third at the Roosevelt and "Nobdy Lives Forever" its second at the Chicago, largest of the Loop houses.

PRC, proud of its first million-dollar picture, "Her Sister's Secret," claimed a house record smash at the Lee Theatre in Fort Meyers, while Monogram's "Bringing Up Father" went into a third week at the New York Laffmovie where it was world premiered.

United Artists reported holdovers in four Los Angeles houses for "The Bachelor's Daughters" and a third week for "The Strange Woman" in Atlantic City and Philadelphia, holding over in Minneapolis.

Universal's "Dark Mirror" is in its fifth week at Chicago, its fourth at Los Angeles, its third in San Diego and its second in Syracuse, Oakland, Boston, Cincinnati, Washington, Rochester, Sacramento, Allentown, Atlantic City, Harrisburg, Philadelphia and Reading.

"Magnificent Doll" to date has had second-week holdovers in all spots it has booked—Chicago, Toledo, Cincinnati and five Los Angeles theatres, day and date.

RKO finds Walt Disney's "Song of the South" is establishing some record or other in split week localities as well as big sections. The picture now has a second week in Knoxville where split week is a policy and is entering a second week at Macon, another split week town. In addition it has entered four weeks in Atlanta and four weeks in Birmingham as well as holding strong despite bad weather in New York.

"Notorious" has three weeks in Washington, two in Seattle, Oklahoma City, Allentown, Glendale and in Jamaica, L. I., where two weeks run are an exception, it is still going strong.

Wanger Hits Censorship As Retarding Adult Films

Attacking censorship as a "nasty problem" which retards adult treatment of film subjects, Producer Walter Wanger Tuesday night told the Survey Associates in New York that the English system which classified films into adult and children groups and banned child attendance to the adult film, "would allow freedom of expression but prevent children from seeing adult subjects."

"I do not wish to give the impression that every film is a masterpiece," Wagner said, ". . . but if we are to have better product, we need more adult treatment of many subjects, and censorship is still a nasty problem. . . .

"Censorship as it exists today, with pressure groups and local censorship boards, is obviously not justified by any constitutional concept of freedom."

Deny Illinois Theatre Plea

The three-judge federal statutory court in New York last week denied a petition filed by the Palace Theatre of Cicero, Ill., to appear as amicus curiae in the anti-trust suit.

Motion Picture Foundation Formed with Humanitarian Goal

Quick action in raising an as yet undetermined welfare fund, which would be in the millions, was predicted in New Orleans Thursday. Following the formative meetings which marked the birth of the industry's first welfare body for which an eventual all-inclusive program is planned. The organizational meeting opened in New Orleans Tuesday.

The newly-organized body did not elect officers but set up a group of five committees: Co-ordination, Scope, Finance, Organization and Public Relations. Members of the Co-ordinating committee plus the head of the Scope, co-chairmen of the Finance, Chairmen of the Organization and Public Relations Committees were named as a steering committee to function pending the set up of a permanent organization.

According to formulated plans, the Foundation, will seek to raise its fund within two years.

Foundation to Help

The aims of the Motion Picture Foundation will be to assist all members in what presently amounts to the exhibition and distribution branches. It would provide direct aid to the needy based on recommendations of local governing groups to be established in exchange centers, for educational benefits such as scholarships, for medical and scientific research directed at the welfare of the individual and of the industry.

In connection with its aims, it was suggested, but not acted upon at the meet, that the employes of the industry might like to contribute through obtaining membership in the Foundations. No contributions, it was emphasized, would be obtained through theatre collections.

Richards Presides

The meetings opened Tuesday in New Orleans with E. V. Richards as permanent chairman. After listening to greetings from Mayor deLesseps Morrison and reading telegrams of support and commendation, committees were appointed to draft plans. The committees immediately went into executive sessions which ran on into the night.

Appointed chairman of permanent committees were Barney Balaban, Coordination; Ted Gamble, Scope; Karl Hoblitzelle, Finance, with Sam Pinanski and Mitchell Wolfson, co-chairmen; Leonard H. Goldenson, Organization; Charles E. ("Chick")Lewis, Promotion and Public Relations.

Showmen Comply with Dimout 100%, See Further Current Cut Possible

Showmen in the brownout areas this week were either looking at diminishing coal piles and wondering how long they would furnish heat or wondering whether further curtailment in electrical consumption for theatres would be ordered.

As box-offices felt the nicking effect of brownouts, weather and pre-Holiday slumps, figures of the Edison Institute showed that only slight electrical savings had been made.

Those states which are now operating under curtailment orders of the Civilian Production Administration have, according to advice from Washington, cut their lighting to a safety minimum. Further cuts would force many theatres to close their doors, the CPA admitted, adding: "We haven't yet reached that point."

The CPA also made it plain that it had general praise for the cooperation it is getting from exhibitors throughout the country in carrying out its orders to conserve electricity.

Officials of that agency said that reports coming from the nation indicate compliance by theatres "far above" that ordered by the government.

Indications are that if further cuts, which are expected if the coal strike is of long duration, are ordered, they will first be put into effect in states which have not to date been included in the CPA order.

In Washington the exhibitors of the capital city, through A. Julian Brylawski, addressed the Board of District of Columbia Commissioners with a letter urging that theatres should be among "the very last class of users to be curtailed."

Brylawski makes the point that the Potomac Electric Power Company last spring during a similar emergency took a cross-section of Wash-

Diogenes' Lantern, 1946 Model

Where there's a will—and a little smart showmanship—there's a way.

Tony Peluso, manager of Fanchon and Marco's 5,000-seat Fox Theatre in St. Louis, didn't like the idea of a brownout glooming things up around his theatre. For Tony, like all showmen, knows that crowds flock to light like moths to a flame and that even in the classical ages a showman named Diogenes, with the aid of a lantern, pulled off quite a publicity stunt for whatever he was selling.

So Tony got permission to place an automobile truck carrying a gasoline-driven electric generator next to his theatre. And when he plugged floodlights into the power system, presto! a blaze of light illuminated the immediate neighborhood.

It not only is attracting crowds, but it's legal.

13 Companies Face New Year With 229-Feature Inventory

'Backlog' Sufficient For 1947 First Run Needs at Present Rates of Release

Thirteen distributing companies entered the final month of the year with a product reserve of 229 features (exclusive of western series films) either completed or in actual production, according to SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW product data. Added to this number are a total of 24 features which were dated for release after the first of the current month.

This "backlog" is nearly sufficient to supply the needs for all of 1947 at the rate of consumption which has prevailed this year.

The 229 total includes 18 features produced in England and now definitely set for distribution by American companies in this market.

With such a heavy inventory of feature product held by thirteen distribution companies the reserve on hand for the beginning of a new year hits a mark which indicates that while studio strikes may have boosted the costs of production to astronomic heights, the stoppages so far have not threatened supplies.

According to trade observers, the backlog also makes it apparent that unless some radical change comes suddenly to alter the situation it will be a long while before strikes could cause a pinch from actual shortage of product. Thus far any change from the present high rate of holdover runs—which slow up the flow of availabilities—is not in sight on the basis of returns from key run situations.

The 229 features in the backlog are listed by titles in the following breakdown by distribution companies:

Columbia: (22) "Blind Spot," "Blondie's Big Moment," "Blondie's Holiday," "Cigarette Girl," "Down to Earth," "Dead Reckoning," "Framed," "The Guilt of Janet Ames," "Johnny O'Clock," "The Jolson Story," "King of the Wild Horses," "The Lady from Shanghai," "Last of the Redmen," "Lone Wolf in Mexico," "Millie's Daughter," "Mr. District Attorney," "The Return of Monte Cristo," "The Swordsman," "The Thirteenth Hour," "Twin Sombreros," "Assigned to Treasury," "Three Were Thoroughbreds."

Eagle-Lion: (7) "Amy Comes Across," "Bedelia," "Born to Speed," "Devil on Wheels," "I See a Dark Stranger," "It's a Joke, Son," "The Adventuress."

MGM: (29) "A Love Story," "A Woman of My Own," "The Arnelo Affair," "The Beginning or the End," "The Birds and the Bees," "Cynthia's Secret," "Fiesta," "Green Dolphin Street," "High Barbaree," "It Happened in Brooklyn," "Lady in the Lake," "Little Mister Jim," "Love Laughs at Andy Hardy," "Merton of the Movies," "The Mighty McGurk," "My Brother Talks to Horses," "The Rich Full Life," "The Romance of Rosy Ridge," "Sea of Grass," "The Secret Heart," "The Show-Off," "Summer Holiday," "Tenth Avenue Angel," "This Time for Keeps," "Till the Clouds Roll By," "To Kiss and to Keep," "Undercover Maisie," "The Unfinished Dance," "The Yearling."

Mnogram: (5) "Black Gold," "The Fall Guy," "The Guilty," "High Conquest," "It Happened on Fifth Avenue" (Allied Artists Release).

Widen Singles Front

The beachhead for single features was widened in the Chicago area this week as the Essaness circuit tried "The Killers" in their "C" houses as a single bill. "The Green Years," as well as "Night and Day," will also play these bookings as singles.

Essaness has been testing the draw of singles against duals for some time and to date the single policy has been reported successful in the circuit's Oak Park theatres, its west side suburbs and the Devon Theatre.

'Hopalong Cassidy' Aims At 12,000 Theatres

By what they term a new approach to westerns, which combines economic, low-budget production with story and production value, the revived "Hopalong Cassidy" series is being slanted for a booking potential of 12,000 theatres, Producer Lewis J. Rachmil and Actor William Boyd, partners in the new enterprise which distributes through United Artists, declared in New York last week.

Both Boyd and Rachmil said that the success of their formula can best be judged from the fact that the first of the current "Hopalong Cassidy" six, "Devil's Playground" is playing Warner's Philadelphia Capitol on percentage, and added that other percentage deals are in the making.

The producers claimed that westerns for the most part had fallen into disrepute because they seemed to be produced either for children or grownups with the mental approach of children. Their series, they said, will combine tightly-knit stories with characterization and competent acting. To date, through production efficiency, the costs have been kept down to $123,000 a feature.

UA Inventory Placed At $250,000,000 Value

United Artists executives this week were headed for Hollywood to inspect what is said to be the largest inventory of product ever held on that company's books, an inventory embracing some 29 pictures valued at $250,000,000.

Heading the group which will spend 10 days on the coast are Distribution Vice-President Gradwell L. Sears, General Sales Manager J. J. Unger, Foreign Manager Walter M. Gould, accompanied by Sales Manager Edward M. Schnitzer, Maury Orr, their district managers and Publicity Manager Tom Waller, Exploitation Manager Mori Krushen, Advertising Manager Howard Lesieur, and Advertising and Publicity Director Paul N. McKee's 20 Building Contracts

McKee Theatres, which builds houses for established exhibitors who wish to expand their holdings, this week announced that it had contracts from 20 exhibitors for construction on a lease-buy agreement. They are located mainly around New York and will seat up to 1,000.

Sees Prize Winners

Delegates to the United Nations Wednesday night had the opportunity of seeing the foreign-produced Cannes festival prize-winning films in New York at a special showing in the auditorium of the Museum of Modern Art. The screening, which was arranged by Glen Allvine and the Motion Picture Association, presented the Swedish documentary short "Shadows on the Snow"; the Polish educational film, "Salt Mines in Poland"; the Czechoslovakian animated cartoon "Brigands and Animals," the Russian scientific short, "Life of the Bees," and the Grand International Prize winning French film, "The Battle of the Rails," which dealt with railroad sabotage during the war.

Eagle-Lion Has Program of 14 for Coming Season

A forthcoming program of 14 features, four of which are now ready for release and 10 more of which are in various stages of preparation, was announced for Eagle-Lion by Vice-President and General Sales Manager Alfred W. Schwalberg in New York Monday at the first sales meeting of the company in the Hotel Warwick.

A. W. Schwalberg

Schwalberg told the assembled Eagle-Lion sales heads that all pictures would be backed by a strong national pre-release advertising and publicity campaign buttressed by local cooperative programs.

The four Eagle-Lion features ready for release, Schwalberg said, are: "Bedelia," with Margaret Lockwood and Ian Hunter; "It's a Joke, Son!" with Kenny (Senator Claghorn) Delmar; "Andy Comes Across" with Franchot Tone and Ann Richards, and "The Adventuress" with Deborah Kerr.

In preparation are: "Prelude to Night" with Zachary Scott and Louis Hayward; Joan Leslie in "Repeat Performance"; "Kenny"; "Out of the Blue"; "Love from a Stranger"; the King syndicate feature, "Prince Valiant"; "Clementine"; "Montana," in color; "The Man Without a Country," and an untitled adventure picture with Arturo de Cordova.

Attending the three-day meeting which opened last Saturday and closed Monday were Special Sales Representatives Herman Beiersdorf, L. E. Goldhammer, R. L. McCoy, Harry Mandell, Joseph Minsky, Mark Raymon, Henry C. Segal, William Shartin and Max J. Weisfeldt; Exploitation Director Arthur Jeffrey; Jock Lawrence of the J. Arthur Rank Organization; Paul Lazar, executive assistant to Bryan Foy, vice-president in charge of production; Jerry Edwards of Philips, Nizer, Benjamin and Krim, and T. H. Bierce, comptroller of Pathe Industries, Inc.

Asks Jury Trial

Michael Manos, head of the Monessen Amusement and Indian County Theatres, Inc., this week asked for a jury trial in the federal court civil action brought against him by the major distributing companies charging fraud in box-office reports.

Up and Up and Up

Federal taxes on amusement admissions continued their upward climb, with October, 1946, showing a collection of $48,598,428.08, or $6,208,056.24 more than the October, 1945, total of $42,389,371.84. The October total also surpassed the total taxes of $38,559,485, collected in September, 1946.

Supporting this upward trend also was the amount of taxes collected from July 14, 1946, through Oct. 31, 1946 which reached a mark of $166,942,935.51, an increase of $28,342,035.67 over the same period in 1945, when the total was 138,600,899.84.

Strike Showdown Likely As Casey Rejects CSU Parley Bid

Observers See Firm Stand As Possible Prelude to March Production Halt

Hollywood studios appeared this week to be lining up their forces for a showdown labor battle which some observers thought might result in a 12-week shutdown of all production around March 1.

The stiffening resistance on the producer front in a situation which last week hinted at some settlement possibility, was noted when Producer Labor Representative Pat Casey informed the Conference of Studio Unions that the producers saw little use in conferring with the CSU unless the CSU was prepared to recognize the American Federation of Labor committee's jurisdictional award of last December.

The demand for recognition of these awarded jurisdictions, which were the basis of the present strike, had reportedly been agreed to earlier in the season. Casey also demanded that CSU agree to abide by a wage scale agreement (reached July 2, 1946) and pledge not to effect any further work stoppages. Casey added that the union must give "adequate assurances" that they would take steps to prevent further "acts of violence and mass picketing."

Producers Irked

Producers have long been incensed over jurisdictional strikes and they are said to be indignant over the trend which this inter-union strike has taken toward getting additional pay raises.

Hollywood's labor violence, which has been the subject of accusation and counter accusation, is being investigated by the county grand jury. Labor in addition has been indignant over the producer-obtained injunctions restraining the number of pickets which can be used at a studio.

Some regard the Casey message, which was an answer to a CSU invitation to producers, as indicative of a coming showdown.

These sources point to the fact that all companies now have a backlog of product, which at present release rates, will allow them to serve their first runs for practically all of 1947. Furthermore, the product which is now being completed in Hollywood, slowed up as it has been by labor difficulties, should be finished within the next 60 days.

Shutdown?

Whether a studio shutdown—if it takes place—will last more than 12 weeks is doubtful. Most studio star contracts allow a six- to eight-week payless layoff due to strikes. After that period the studio either has to start paying again or the star may cancel the contract. Another clause, not thought applicable to strikes, permits a 12-week payless period between productions during a one-year period.

The present strike, one of a series which has kept the labor front unsettled for over a year, began on Sept. 23 when the Conference of Studio Unions called out picket lines in support of its member union, the AFL United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners. It was denounced as a jurisdictional strike by Producer Spokesman Byron Price.

The Carpenters and Joiners were claiming the right to build interior sets in studios, using a "clarification" of the jurisdictional allocation made by the AFL committee on Dec. 26, 1945. The AFL International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes maintained that the jurisdic-

Denied Percentage in Negro Houses, Savini Plans to Roadshow with 16-mm.

(See The News Spotlight)

Challenging the alleged refusal of Negro theatres to play Negro features on percentage, Astor Pictures President Robert M. Savini this week threatened to print his next full-length Louis Jordan feature on 16-mm. only and to roadshow it through halls and auditoriums.

Savini cited several instances where Negro pictures were not getting the maximum revenue or the maximum run from Negro theatres. He spoke of New Orleans where he claimed, one of his features had lines running around the corner of the theatre, with all-day packed houses during its run.

"And then," he said, "all they'd pay was flat rental and they pulled the picture after five days. With 16-mm. equipment, we can rent a hall and run for two months."

The Astor president, recently returned from a tour of the West Coast and the South, said that the 16-mm. roadshow policy would not apply to Astor's white production. Astor, he pointed out, is now in the production field for both white and Negro pictures and will expand its activities there, while at the same time continuing to distribute reissues.

Savini sees reissues in a stronger position than ever in 1947 because, he predicts, there will be but one A picture released for first run where now there are three.

The Astor-produced white product for 1947 will include, Savini said, "The Danger Ring," a seven-reeler with "Iron Man" Mazurki, a Western Attractions film produced by Jack Elliott and directed by Bud Pollard; "Harmony Trail," with Eddie Dean and Ken Maynard, set for February, 1947 release; an untitled picture on venereal diseases based upon "No Greater Sin," with Quentin Reynolds participating, scheduled for March release; Bing Crosby's "The Road to Hollywood," made from Crosby's four first two-reelers in which he sang his hit songs, and eight three-reel musical westerns with Hoot Gibson.

Disney Profits Off

Walt Disney Productions this week reported a net income of $196,000 for the fiscal year ending Sept. 28, a drop from the $350,532 net of the 1945 fiscal year. The current returns amount to 26 cents a share of common stock as compared to 1945's 31 cents a share. Disney management had predicted a drop and present figures do not reflect the possible earnings of either "Make Mine Music" or "Song of the South."

Directors of RKO this week declared a dividend of 30 cents a share of common stock to be paid Jan. 2, 1947.

School Days 1946

Fox Intermountain Theatres this week entered the avocation of educating the young in a big way by offering six of its oil- or gas-heated theatres in Denver to serve as classrooms for an hour and a half on week-day mornings. Denver schools, heated by coal, are closed.

Fox Intermountain further offered to furnish appropriate films, either shorts or features, to tie in with the program of the school board. Each theatre would serve as a classroom from 9:30 a.m. to 11 a.m. Houses offered for use to the school board are the Aladdin, Esquire, Webber, Bluebird, Ogden and Mayan.

ington theatres to see what savings there were in brownout regulations.

The check made on two downtown theatres and four large neighborhood theatres showed that theatres used up about 8 watts per person attending, whereas the power company's records on home consumption showed, from a survey of 40,000 families in the District of Columbia, that the average consumption of watts was about 71 per person in the home. The point is made that the person attending the theatre is actually consuming less current than if he were at home.

Claim Low Power Use

The letter further claims that the power consumed by 60 theatres in the District of Columbia is around 12,000 kilowatt hours per day, whereas the total output of the Potomac Electric Power Company at this season of the year in Washington is 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 kilowatt hours, thereby indicating that the savings gained by closing theatres would be one-fifth of one per cent.

Columbus, Ohio, which did not put the brownout into effect until after Thanksgiving because the city felt that a brownout would not save a large amount of electricity, found theatres enjoying a brisk holiday trade. At present all theatres are cooperating with the dimout as theatres are using their 60-watt marquee allowance in various ways. One theatre had a single bulb above the box-office. Others uses six 10-watters and a few have recently purchased fluorescent tubes.

Harrisburg, Pa., which thought that ample coal supplies, obtainable right from the Susquehanna River which passes through the city, would allow it to escape a brownout, found out differently and obeying orders, went dim.

No Demand for Diesels

In Milwaukee, where coal supplies are said to be in excellent shape, exhibitors appeared unworried and were cool to offers to buy Diesel driven generators, regarding them at present as too big an expense.

From Indianapolis came word that the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana was advising its members that government surplus portable generating plants could be had through several companies.

Reports from across the country indicate that no houses have been compelled to close to date. In the Rocky Mountain area where the weather went viciously cold, theatres, burning fuel oil or gas, were open while schools closed. In Denver Fox Intermountain offered six of its houses for an hour an a half daily as classrooms. The Public Service Company, which heats some houses with steam, estimated it had a 45-day supply of coal on hand.

Taxes

Taxes continued to hold an important place in exhibitor circles this week, with with the latest spurt to discussion being caused by Sen. Glen Taylor, (D. Idaho), who disagrees with the Republican program for tax reduction and would take off amusement taxes on admissions.

Second cause for discussion was remote, coming from Havana where Cuban authorities were said to be considering a 50 per cent increase in amusement taxes.

Favor Hollywood Red Hunt

Representatives of the House Committee on un-American activities met in Hollywood Monday and after a closed hearing said that Communist activities in the motion picture industry should be investigated by the full committee next spring.

After the hearing, Committee Counsel Ernie Adamson said that sifting of documents and other information established it as a fact "not open to debate" that the Communist party was boring into the motion picture industry as part of a prepared plan.

Summoned to appear at the hearing were Conference of Studio Unions President Herbert K. Sorrell, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes' Roy Brewer and Radio Commentator Averill Berman. Representative John S. Wood (D., Ga.) held the hearing with Adamson.

Studio Shutdown Likely As Producers Take Stand

tion decision had awarded the carpenters construction of all outdoor sets and the IATSE construction of sets within studios.

When other CSU unions refused to touch IATSE-built sets, discharges resulted and the CSU strike call followed. The IATSE unions crossed CSU picket lines and began furnishing IATSE replacements for CSU strikers.

Later, the IATSE processing technicians union Local 683, revolted, apparently due to a contract difficulty and, defying the IATSE, refused to cross CSU picket lines. Deprived of the vitally important film processors, studio operations slowed down and practically stopped in color film laboratories. The IATSE attempted to seize the rebelling union but was prevented by guards, whereupon the IATSE organized another processing union and ordered all members loyal to it not to pay dues into the other local.

Eventually, the AFL committee (which had written the original jurisdictional allotments) reported that the IATSE claim to construction of sets within the studios was correct and that it had never written a "clarification." All parties were said to be in agreement, and the CSU was reported to have accepted the AFL committee ruling. Hope for labor peace, however, foundered, on the rocks of by-products of the original strike—demands for re-opening wage discussions, signing contracts which reportedly had not been signed, and insistance by the IATSE that the replacements it had brought in for striking CSU workers, be provided for.

It is in this welter of confusion that what originally started out as a jurisdictional matter —on the fact of the reasons ascribed for the strike anyway—now stands.

Gross Tax Back

St. Louis' bill to impose a gross tax weekly on amusement admissions was back in the lap of the municipal Legislative Committee this week in a rewritten form which reduced the proposed tax from the original five per cent to three per cent.

The original bill, with its five per cent tax, was in the Legislative Committee for several months but was finally brought out, amended and ordered back to the Legislative Committee, presumably to give the affected industries an opportunity to be heard on the tax in its reduced form. The amended measure would require each theatre to post a $2,000 bond or $1,000 cash deposit to guarantee payment of the tax.

The measure is an outgrowth of the city's financial difficulties.

152 Theatres, 19 Circuits In 'Quentin' Premieres

A record total of 152 theatres, involving 19 circuits, participated in the New England premiere this week of RKO Radio's "San Quentin." With the Boston Theatre in Boston as the spearhead, other circuits opening the film simultaneously included M & P (Paramount), RKO, Warners, Western Massachusetts, Schine, Fieber & Shea, Maine & New Hampshire, Interstate (Boston), Ralph Snider, E. M. Loew, Andrew Tegu, Fabian Theatres, Kallet Circuit, Dipson Theatres, Nathan Yamins, Harry Zeitz, Joseph Mathieu and the Berinstein Brothers.

Appearing in person in connection with the area premieres were Lawrence Tierney, star of "San Quentin," Barbara Hale and Bill Williams, RKO contract players, and Mike Mazurki, Dewey Robinson and George E. Stone.

Aiding in assuring the success of the affair was the entire RKO northeastern division under Gus Schaefer and including Ross Cropper, Elmer Lux, Barney Pitkin and Max Westebbe, plus a number of RKO field representatives.

Koret, Princess Pat in Monogram Film Tieups

Koret of California photographed June Preisser and Noel Neill for its second big nationwide tieup on Monogram's Teen-Agers series. Cooperative effort on "High School Hero" was so effective that Koret bounced back with even bigger magazine campaign for "Vacation Days," soon to be released. In addition to magazines used in previous campaign, Koret will use Charm and a large group of garment trade magazines.

Princess Pat cosmetics, which has also used Miss Preisser in its Liptone advertising, also photographed her in color last week for a renewal on the same campaign, plus an additional campaign on rouge. Ads will hit Harper's Bazaar and other class fashion magazines.

SWAMPED WITH REPLIES. Manager Leo Rosen of Warners' Strand, Albany, N. Y., is literally snowed under as Sally Richardson of the Times-Union delivers replies from the newspaper's readers who were challenged to guess the identities of the two stars of Warners' "The Verdict." Eyes of the stars provided the only clue. Replies included 46 telegrams, 250 specials and over 11,000 letters.

Revives 'String' Stunt

One of the most effective gags used to exploit any picture in a long time was the "string" stunt used by manager Dick Peffley of the Paramount, Fremont, Ohio, on "The Big Sleep." On entering the theatre during the week prior to the film's showing each patron was given a length of string to keep. Then in the middle of the newsreel a trailer told audiences, "As you entered the theatre you were given a string. Please take the string from your purse or pocket. (Pause) Now tie this string around your finger to remind you to see 'The Big Sleep' starring Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall, etc."

One-City Campaign Set For 'Arch of Triumph'

A one-city exploitation campaign in New York on behalf of "Arch of Triumph" has been effected by Enterprise with the Aquatogs Company.

The campaign, which begins in March, will include full-page ads in color (where reproduction permits) in all metropolitan newspapers as well as in 15 "slick" magazines, car cards in all intra-city transit lines and commuter trains, and extensive radio spot announcements tieing in with department store campaigns three weeks prior to the New York premiere of the film.

The entire campaign will be tested for consumer penetration by the advertising agency placing the space and used as a basis for similar campaigns in 11 other large cities in advance of their playdates.

'Red House', the Post In National Tieup

A national tieup has been ararnged by United Artists with the Saturday Evening Post on Sol Lesser's "The Red House" whereby the magazine will feature a scene still and copy on the picture in its national ads running in 26 key cities throughout the country.

Special advertising in the amusement sections of newspapers in smaller communities is also being planned by the Post. Lon McCallister, who has a co-starring role with Edward G. Robinson in the picture, will be featured in special publicity by the Post's promotion department.

Stanley Lambert Named Filmack Ad Director

Appointment of Stanley Lambert as advertising director of the Filmack Corporation was announced this week by Sales Manager Irving Mack. Lambert will be in charge of the company's advertising department, which is being enlarged to handle both special trailers and the forthcoming prevue trailer service.

Lambert, well known in midwest theatre circles, comes to Filmack from the Alexander Film Company of Colorado Springs. He was also formerly associated with Warner Theatres in Chicago and Wisconsin. Harold Perlman, editor of the Filmack publication, "Inspiration," will continue in that capacity.

Benefit Premiere Opens 'U' Cincinnati Showcase

The opening of the new Keith's Theatre in Cincinnati on Thanksgiving Day as a new Universal first-run showcase assumed the proportions of a major civic event spearheaded, as it was, by a special benefit premiere on Thanksgiving Eve for the Cincinnati effort on behalf of the War Nurses' Memorial Fund.

Ginger Rogers, star of "Magnificent Doll," the Jack H. Skirball-Bruce Manning production with which the house was opened, appeared in person heading a group of actors and entertainers present for the benefit show. Miss Rogers presented the check, which represented the contributions obtained through the benefit, to the committee headed by Roger H. Ferger, publisher of the Cincinnati Enquirer, chairman of the Ohio State committee for the fund-raising campaign.

The Nurses' Fund benefit and the formal opening of the theatre as a Universal showcase, the company's first outside of New York where it has a long-term lease on the Winter Garden Theatre, was given an extensive promotion campaign with Universal representatives from New York, including Al Horwitz and Charles Simonelli, participating.

Newspaper advertising in the Cincinnati papers starting more than a week in advance, heralded the theatre's reopening and announced the opening film. "Everything is new but the name," said one of the ads.

No tickets were sold for the benefit but receipts for contributions of $5, $10, $15 or more to the Nurses' Memorial were exchanged for seats for the performance at the city's Hospitality House on Fountain Square. Renovation of the theatre was rushed to completion for the opening. The Cincinnati and Ohio effort on behalf of the War Nurses' Memorial Fund was part of a national effort to raise $2,500,000 for a recreation building in Washington dedicated to nurses who served in the Armed Forces of World War II.

There was extensive newspaper coverage of Miss Rogers' appearance, including editorials.

FEMININE INTEREST. Fashion windows on Paramount's "Blue Skies" are declared to be arousing feminine interest in the Technicolor musical. Such a display is that shown above, one of three used at the R. H. White department store in Boston. The tieup was arranged by Arnold Van Leer, Paramount representative in that city.

Said to be the first world premiere of a major motion picture aboard a regular passenger train, "Temptation" will make its bow on the Chesapeake and Ohio's "The George Washington" on the locomotive's regular run from Washington to Cincinnati, December 10.

As guests of the railroad for the premiere of the International film for Universal release will be 35 motion picture critics from Washington, New York, Philadelphia, Norfolk, Richmond, Cincinnati, Chicago and Detroit. The Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad plans to take newspaper advertisements in these cities to announce the event and will distribute programs on the train.

Adolescent Appeal Tops 'School Hero' Campaign

That there's gold in them thar bobby soxers is known to one and all in the business of exhibiting motion pictures. But it has remained for manager Emil Franke of the Orpheum, San Diego to go all out in his appeal to the younger set (a gamble if you wish) but doing such a good job of it on Monogram's "High School Hero" that lines began to form early and continued until late. Mr. Franke took a chance—and won!

Monogram had set up a national tieup with Koret of California, manufacturers of teen-age sportswear, so Franke took the line of least resistance by going direct to Koret, who said, "Why not?" and obtained six sports outfits to go to that number of fortunate high school debs. He also got plenty of help from Monogram which saw to it that June Preisser, Freddie Stewart and others in the cast of the picture appeared at the theatre. But Franke's main job was in letting the high school crowd know what the Orpheum had to offer.

The local outlet for Koret plugged the show over station KFSD and by buying quarter-page newspaper ads. Franke set up a special lobby display in turn, and the store's "Hi-Debber" Club told its members by direct mail that they could go to the Orpheum before 2 p.m. on the Saturday matinee for 50 cents instead of the usual 55 cents. Stars of the picture also appeared on the store's sponsored radio program via WFSD.

Yes, sir! There was plenty of action at the box-office, again proving that there's gold in them thar bobby soxers. And Franke proved it.

Extra Newspaper Ads Set For 'Wicked' Premieres

Extensive newspaper advertising has been scheduled for local insertion to back key city openings of the J. Arthur Rank production, "Wicked Lady" with seven-column display ads to be features of the campaigns, according to plans completed by Maurice A. Bergman, Universal's eastern advertising and publicity director. The newspaper linage will follow the extensive magazine advertising campaign now under way.

A "Wicked Lady Flying Squadron" of home office promotion representatives to be headed by William E. Danziger of the J. Arthur Rank division of Universal, has been organized to visit the key cities to aid in opening campaigns, with Loew's circuit houses in many of the key cities scheduled to play "Wicked Lady" within three weeks.

Air Breaks Aid L.A. Premiere of 'Daughters'

Fifteen separate air breaks on The Twilight Song from Andrew Stone's "Bachelor's Daughters" were heard via six Los Angeles stations for the picture's showing at the Four Music Hall Theatres, through the efforts of Manager Cliff Geisemann and Mike Gould, local distributor for the music publishers. They also arranged window displays on the music angle of the film at Glen Wallich's Music City two weeks in advance of showing featuring blowups of the stars. Schirmer Music stores used similar displays.

Newspaper interviews with Ann Dvorak, Adolphe Menjou, Gail Russell and Eugene List centered attention on the film's opening and all Rexall stores used promotional material featuring Menjou. Rexall also used cooperative newspaper advertising covering 52 key city newspapers and 130 other daily papers.

Lawes Visits Prison In 'San Quentin' Tieup

Warden Lewis E. Lawes visited the prison at Thomaston, Me., last week in connection with the New England premiere of RKO Radio's "San Quentin," scheduled for December 5.

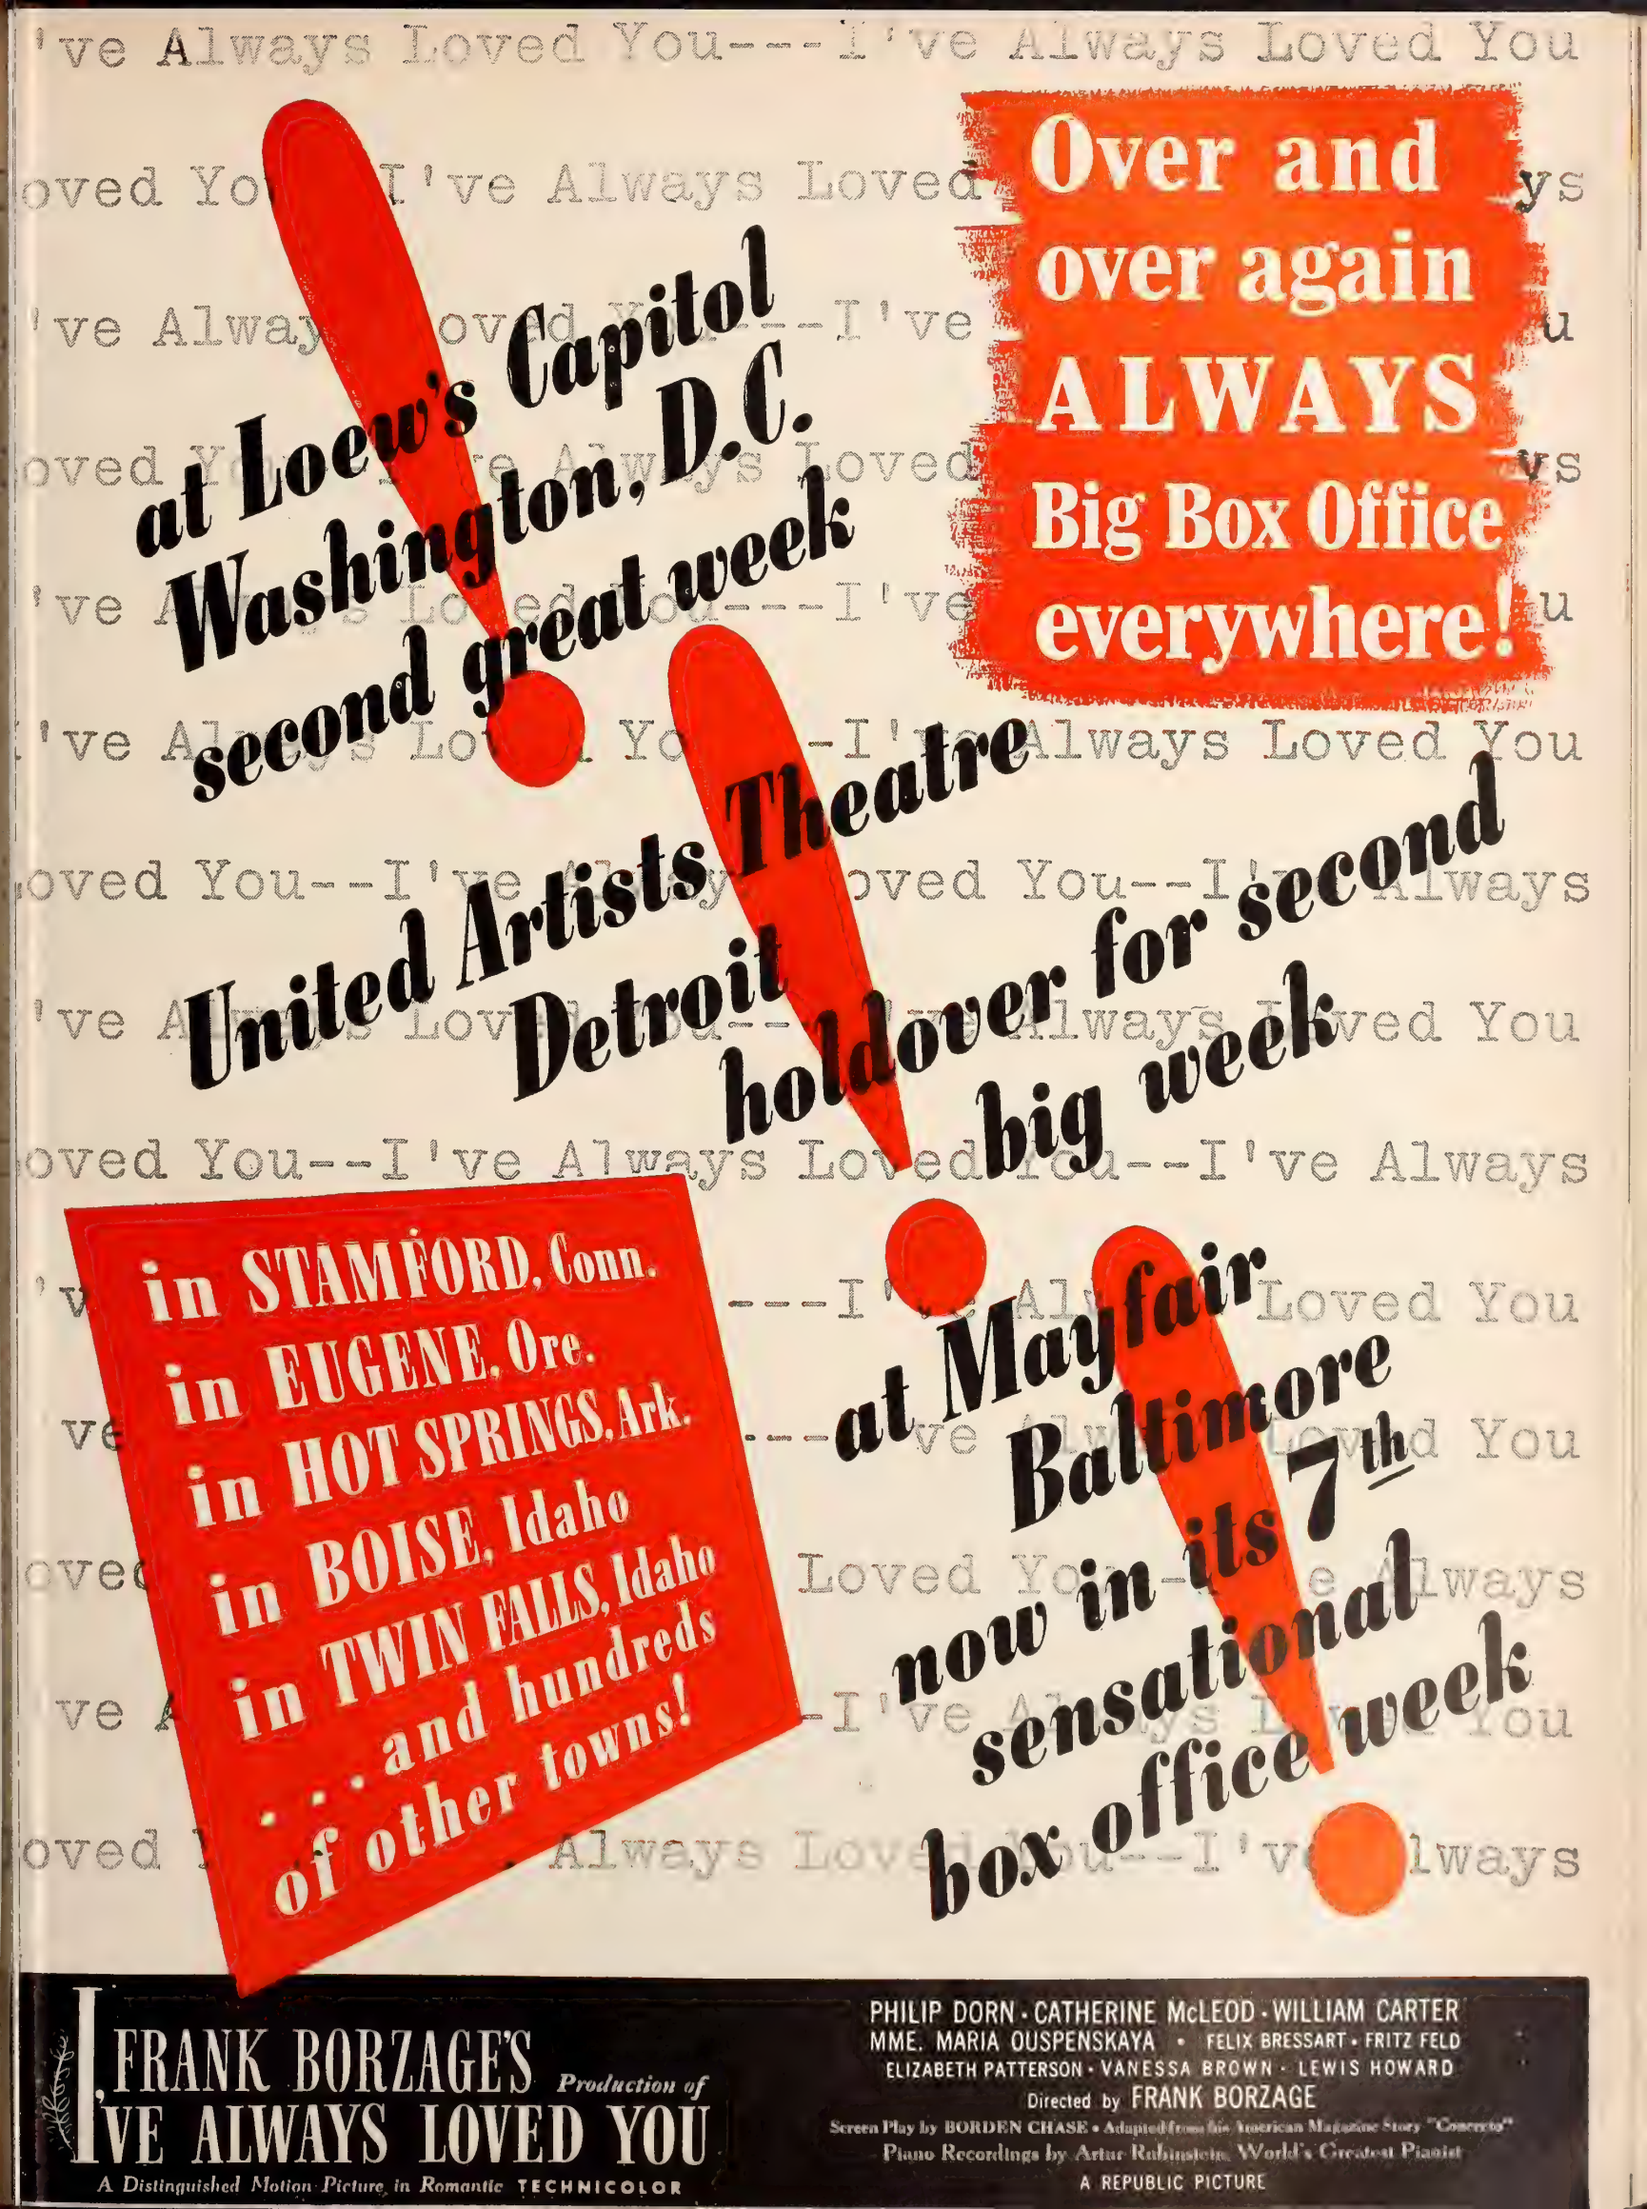
A special screening of the picture was held for the 300 inmates, after which Warden Lawes addressed the men and held a roundtable discussion with a group of inmates. The discussions were recorded on the spot by the Yankee Network for rebroadcast in advance of the forthcoming premiere.

'Bess' Made Sergeant On Harrisburg Visit

"Gallant Bess" is now a Sergeant in the United States Army, recruiting service. She was given an honorary enlistment in the Army and was presented with Sergeant's chevrons and a recruiting armband at a special ceremony in Market Square, Harrisburg, when she visited that city in a tour of the country. Sam Gilman, manager of Loew's Regent, arranged for the visit of the horse, and with Ed Gallner, MGM exploiteer, set up several stunts.

In addition to joining the Army Bess also was presented with a blanket made entirely of 1946 Christmas Seals and lined in silk. She bought a sheet of the seals, and performed for a little guest of the local tuberculosis fresh air camp. Gilman, incidentally, is chairman of publicity for the current Christmas Seal campaign, and was not averse to the double-take in publicity in the stunt.

During the all-day visit to the Capitol City of Pennsylvania, Bess was viewed by an estimated 20,000 persons.



Bobby-Soxers Now an Aid To Managers, Reeth Finds

Bobby-soxers are getting to be a great help to showmen these days. Witness what happened in Madison, Wis. not long ago. Manager Fred Reeth of the Capitol Theatre there had booked "Till the End of Time," with—as you know—Guy Madison and Dorothy Maguire. Madison is getting a big build-up as a glamor boy, and this sounded like a good lead to Reeth.

He had placed a poster showing Madison and Maguire near the ladies lounge and it sems several bobby-soxers had implanted kisses on Madison's paper face, leaving lipstick imprints. For some reason unknown to us Reeth reported this to the Madison Capital Times—odd, wasn't it? The paper took up the story and emerged with a two-colunm cut, six inches dep, of the lipstick-smeared poster, and a half-column story telling about bobby-soxers in general, their new "dream boat" Madison, and that a Guy Madison Fan Club had been formed. How's that for getting free space?

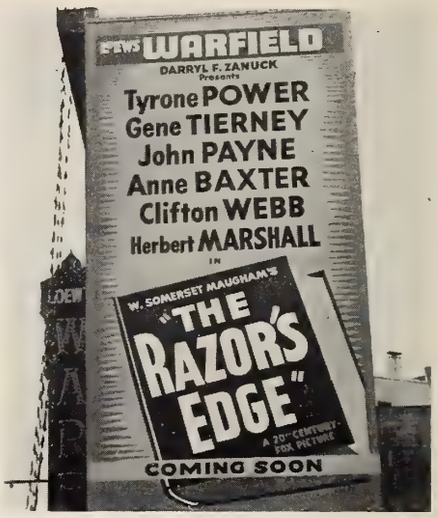
Exploitation Campaign of the Month

November 1946

THE RAZOR'S EDGE

(20th Century-Fox)

Every Avenue of Promotion Exploited for Maximum Effect On Zanuck's 'Razor's Edge'



Exhibitors throughout the country who play "The Razor's Edge" during Christmas week will reap the benefit of an advertising and publicity campaign that has sent this Darryl F. Zanuck production to a world box-office record in its first week at the Roxy Theatre and to a second week that surpassed the first. The pre-selling of the picture reaffirms every showman's belief in the fundamental values of a complete and well organized advertising, publicity, exploitation and radio campaign. Twentieth Century-Fox gave "The Razor's Edge" the biggest build-up ever accorded one of its pictures and the record at the Roxy since its world premiere is evidence enough of the power of the campaign. A panel of showmen has selected the effort as the Exploitation Campaign of the Month for November, 1946.

In designing the advertising and publicity for "The Razor's Edge" the 20th Century-Fox advertising and publicity departments geared the campaign not only to the world premiere engagement at the Roxy but also to the picture's subsequent engagements around the country. The premiere served as a focal point for a national exploitation campaign that will be carried on through all subsequent runs.

All the elements of the campaign have been assembled in a 68-page, four color pressbook; the largest and most comprehensive campaign book ever produced by 20th-Fox. The practical manual will give exhibitors in every situation a maximum of selling aids.

Twentieth-Fox has been building towards this end ever since the day, three years ago, when the company brought the Maugham novel prior to publication and began laying its exploitation plans while the book was going through its career as a best-seller. Running through several editions, hitting the top of the best-seller list, "The Razor's Edge," through its circulation to 30 million readers, grew steadily in box-office value, continuing this course through the two years of preparation and production.

In magnitude and impressiveness, the campaign followed production plans, and made "The Razor's Edge" known to every moviegoer in the country. Publicity on the picture, which had been appearing steadily in newspapers and magazines took a tremendous upsurge during the three months prior to the premiere. The 'break' in the August 10th issue of Life, carrying a nine-page layout of behind the scenes action during the shooting of the film, was one of the first big guns in the concentrated barrage laid down for the opening in New York. Stories, art layouts, features, and photos of the stars continued to break in the top publications of the country. By the time the film goes into national release during Christmas, 13 fan magazines will have carried a cover picture.

PAINTED WALL. This painted wall at Loew's Warfield, San Francisco, is typical of the manner in which theatres are pre-selling "The Razor's Edge" to tie in with the national campaign. This sign covers the theatre's entire side-wall and is 40 feet high.

Along with the publicity campaign, the company started its greatest national advertising coverage, with teasers, special, and regular full-page ads going into the top magazines of the country. Special "cover-type" ads were used, character-introduction teasers made their appearance, and general class ads were seen by readers of such magazines as Life, Look, Liberty, American Magazine, Redbook, Ladies Home Journal, Woman's Home Companion, Collier's and the Saturday Evening Post. The eye-catching value of many of the ads was enhanced by the inclusion of the special full-length painting of Tyrone Power executed by Norman Rockwell. In addition, every fan magazine in the country carried large ads heralding the debut of the picture.

Coupled with the ads placed by the company was the unusual ad and display space garnered for the picture through tieups with national manufacturers. These tieups, all with nationally advertised products, were selected for their possibilities in connection with local engagements of the film. Each was designed for adaptation to local situations, involving dozens of uses. Included are:

The Raleigh cigarette promotion featuring Tyrone Power and Gene Tierney in 800-line newspaper ads.

Orange Blossom Wedding Rings, with counter displays in 3,000 of their outlet stores, giving prominent mention to the picture.

Foreman Fabrics, who, with Kalman-Levens have manufactured modern adaptations of the gowns worn by Gene Tierney in the picture for distribution to their national outlets.

Stratford Pens, with large ads in key newspapers and magazines featuring Gene Tierney

YOGI EMBLEM. The good luck Yogi emblem that plays an important part in "The Razor's Edge" has been adapted to a design of A. Sulka & Co., famous haberdashers, and is being displayed in a manner similar to this store window in Sulka's own New York store, as one of the important tieups affected by the 20th-Fox exploitation crew for the film's New York opening.

and "The Razor's Edge."

Simmons Beauty-Rest mattresses have been placing large ads in key magazines featuring Anne Baxter and mentioning her outstanding role in the picture. A. Sulka and Company have manufactured a series of ties using the Maugham Yogi symbol which will be promoted through all of their national outlets and in special newspaper advertising.

Various editions of the book published by Doubleday Doran, Sun Dial, Blakiston, Triangle, the Dollar Book Club and the Literary Guild have also been advertised widely, and the Pocket Book Edition, being released currently with the subsequent runs of the picture, will be given a strong national campaign.

An enormous amount of air time was given the picture during the months preceding the premiere. Guest appearances of stars, technicians, and numerous plugs for the film were heard over every network in the nation. An example of the type of radio promotion achieved for the film, and never before attained by any other motion picture, was the special "We, The People" broadcast on November 10. This half-hour show with outlets in 108 cities devoted its entire broadcast to "The Razor's Edge" and featured intervals and comments by stars of the picture, as well as Darryl F. Zanuck and Edmund Goulding.

Director Goulding, while in New York, appeared on several radio shows, which also carried plugs for the picture. In addition to these programs, over 200 other separate scheduled broadcasts devoted some time to the picture, the world premiere of which was seen by thousands of television set owners when it was transmitted over the four-city network of the National Broadcasting Company.

Special Events Garner Interest

Special events held in connection with the world premiere garnered tremendous interest, with nationally syndicated columnists discussing the color and excitement of the affair in their columns. In addition, 20th-Fox brought 70 newspaper reviewers from all over the country to the premiere, who told their readers about the picture. Reviewers from key West Coast newspapers traveled to the 20th-Fox studio in Hollywood on a similar mission, to see the film simultaneously with the New York opening.

A lavish brochure which was used as the world premiere program was also prepared and distributed nationally to editors and reviewers.

For months 20th-Fox field exploitation men have been receiving special publicity material for planting in their territories. They have been equipped with stories, art and features covering every angle of the promotion and these have been used in newspapers everywhere.

The company is also highlighting its advance national campaign with a nationwide 24-sheet posting campaign, which will hit 17,000 billboards in key cities during Dec. and Jan.

Every advertising and publicity resource is being directed toward the national release of the film, and the 20th-Fox staff is sustaining the pace of its premiere campaign, so that the picture will have the biggest send-off ever accorded any of the company's films.

Money Dates for January

Most people probably will have spent a lot of money for Christmas giving, with the pressure of bills facing them in January. Nevertheless, with the upward business trend, there is little doubt but that, despite this temporary bill-paying inconvenience, there will still be money to spend. Keep some of it coming into your theatre by plugging along every avenue that gives promise of inciting public interest in your theatre and its attractions. You will note that there are several opportunities for tieups on anniversaries and observance days where the business concerns affected can be persuaded to use the theatre to stimulate interest in the event and call attention to their commercial enterprise. You will also note that there are practical and workable ideas promising mutual benefits that should enable you to land a lot of advertising attendance and cooperation. By combining these activities with your regular exploitation efforts, you should certainly ring the box-office bell. Let the following ideas help you get the utmost in cooperation during January.

NEW YEAR'S EVE

This year, for the first time since the postwar years, people apparently will have plenty to spend for New Year's Eve fun and gaiety. Last year, of course, was the first postwar New Year's Eve, and while most people were inclined to celebrate joyously, there was not too much money to spend. This year, however, it appears that few will be lacking in pocket-jingling finances. For that reason, folks will be shopping around to find the most fun. It is up to you to make them want to come to your theatre. What you do, how you plan your New Year's Eve midnight show depends a lot upon your theatre and its clientele. In order to have a crowd, you may have to go in for expensive and elaborate effort; on the other hand, it may very well be that you will have best success through simple and inexpensive activities with low-cost favors. But whatever you do, the important thing is to make your patrons feel completely at home and an actual part of the proceedings. Invite them to participate in a few intimate stunts, but be sure to avoid any chance of personal indignity, affront or offense. Your master of ceremonies should be instructed along this line, and stage dialogue and comedy antics should be checked carefully. Be sure your entire program is amusing in content and that it does not last too long. This latter admonition is very important, for too much of something—no matter how good—can try one's patience. Announce your midnight show well in advance, and keep plugging it via newspaper ads, trailers, lobby displays and possibly some sort of street ballyhoo. To avoid overcrowding and discontented patrons, it would be best to sell seats in advance, limiting them to your theatre's seating capacity.

Jan. 7: First Bank in Amercia, 1782. Since your local banks will more than likely be interested in observance of this day, try to interest them in a party for employes. Perhaps you could trade them a three- or four-minute stage period, when one of their executives would outline to your audience what the banks mean to the community, in return for cooperative ads. You might even interest them in a block of cut-rate tickets to be given to persons starting a savings account with a stipulated sum of money.

Jan. 9: First Photos (Daguerreotypes), 1839. Here is an opportunity for photographers, who are always anxious to engage in effort that attracts attention to their business, to acquaint the populace with the immense strides that have been made in their art. Allow them space in the lobby in return for cooperative ads or try to interest one or more of the larger companies in a house-to-house canvas, using hand bills carrying a coupon good for one admission when signed by the studio at the time ar order for pictures is given. Limit the time for acceptance of the coupons and secure yourself as to payment for all coupons turned in at the box-office.

Jan. 13: Printers' Ink First Used in Philadelphia by Jacob Johnson, 1804. Newspapers should take advantage of this chance to ballyhoo their own business. The editor of your local daily might be persuaded to handle publicity building up to a big one-day party when a coupon from the newspaper would be accepted as part payment for a theatre ticket. A lobby display of issues of the paper coinciding with important national and world events of the past fifty years or so, would attract much attention.

Jan. 15: First Locomotive Built in the U. S. 1831. If yours is a railroad town or a locomotive building or assembly center, try to arrange for group attendance at a special performance to celebrate the occasion. Bear in mind that industry is vitally concerned these days in making manifest their interest in the welfare and recreation of employes, and should be mode than susceptible to suggestions of this kind.

Jan. 19: Robert E. Lee, born, 1807. In the south this is a legal holiday which offers an excellent chance for the entertainment of Confederate Veterans, etc.

Jan. 24: Morse First Exhibited the Telegraph, 1838. Western Union should be more than willing to tie-up with you on this particular anniversary. The company could display its transmission paraphernalia in your lobby in return for a printed message calling atttention to the display and your attraction being included in every telegram delivered. Arrange a special show for Western Union messenger boys. Get them to carry tie-up signs on their bicycles.

Jan. 27: Edison Patented the Incandescent Lamp, 1880. Ge the local electric light company to cooperate in celebrating this event. Some of things that can be done include displays of the old and new methods of lighting in your lobby; mention of the event together with a message about the attraction at your theatre in all monthly bills; cooperative newspaper advertising, and parties for the employes. For this special occasion, you might be able to bring back MGM's "Edison, the Man" for a return showing.

Special Observance Weeks.

Jan. 12-18*: NATIONAL THRIFT WEEK

Try to generate citywide observance by arranging for merchants to stage bargain events. Tie in the theatre by offering special early bird prices to accommodate the shoppers. You might allow the merchants to place in the lobby a sign calling attention to their outstanding bargains in return for mention of the theatre's cooperation in their ads and in their windows. Banks should also be willing to cooperate in this event by impressing upon the public the value of thrift.

Jan. 19-25*: NATIONAL PEANUT WEEK

Next to apple pie, peanuts are apparently America's favorite food, thanks to the campaigns by such business concerns as Planters in their behalf. Contact your local distributor for the possible distribution of sample bags of peanuts in connection with some message about a coming attraction. You might be able to use the Planter trademark—"Mr. Peanut"—in a tieup with a coming attraction. Get stores selling peanut butter, peanut oils, etc., to cooperate on a newspaper contest for the best cooking recipes making use of such products. And then there's always the old reliable stunt of filling a container with peanuts, placing the container in a prominent window and offering prizes to persons who guess nearest to the correct number of peanuts therein.

Late in January (exact date not yet known):
MARCH OF DIMES

Through the trade papers and other channels of information, including the press book that is likely to be gotten out for the purpose, you'll soon be learning all about this great humanitarian campaign and what you can do to make it exceed all expectations. Plan now to lend your assistance to this worthy drive to carry on the fight against infantile paralysis.

Music Tieup for 'Spectre'

Records of classical and ballet numbers from Republic's "Spectre of the Rose" were featured in displays by a music shop in Waterbury during the run of the picture at Loew's Poli-Strand. Manager Paul Klinger set the tieup.—HFD.

Sets Amateur Nights

Dean R. Barrett, manager of the Astor Theatre, East Hartford, Conn., has revealed plans for Amateur Night, to be run every Friday evening over a period of weeks. Don Chester and his band have been signed to furnish music.

Teaser Trailers Spark Hynes' 'Ivers' Campaign

Robert A. Hynes, manager of Oklahoma City's Criterion Theatre, used a novel stunt on "The Strange Love of Martha Ivers" that created considerable comment about the picture far in advance of its showing. Two weeks in advance of the regular trailer run, Hynes used teaser trailers placed throughout the program in sound only and run with the shutter closed, using the same whispers employed in the radio spot campaign such as "Martha Ivers, Whisper her name."

Other features of the inexpensive but effective campaign included having usherettes call telephone numbers at different times of the day with the message, "After you see 'Martha Ivers' you'll whisper her name." Hynes also localized the national Royal Crown Cola tieup by bannering six of the beverage company's trucks.

Two 24-sheet cut-outs of Stanwyck and Van Heflin were used on the front of the marquee, a 9x15 banner was hung on the flagpole of the marquee, 10,000 teaser heralds were distributed, the "Strange Love" angle was emphasized in newspaper advertising, 30 radio spots were used on two local radio stations day before opening and opening day, four special blow-ups in the lobby and lounge were used for two weeks before the opening and counter cards were placed in music stores. The engagement was opened with a Saturday midnight preview.--OKL.

Roxy Mailing Service Scores

An international direct mail advertising campaign on Darryl F. Zanuck's "The Razor's Edge" seems to be the result of the post card mailing service set up in the lobby of the New York Roxy Theatre, as more than 100,000 cards about the film have been mailed to friends and relatives throughout the world.

Roxy executives report that laudatory comments on the film have found their way to such far-off places as China, India, England, Ireland, Australia, Finland, South Africa and virtually every South and Latin American nation, written in practically every civilized language. Every state in the union also have received hundreds of the cards which feature the Norman Rockwell painting of Tyrone Power, reproduced in color. Other stars of the 20th-Fox production also are shown on the cards.

Turn-Up-Seat Gag Scores on 'Lucky'

Manager Abe Goldstein and his assistant, Pete Manzione, of Century's Patio Theatre in Brooklyn arranged a clever stunt for an advance plug on "If I'm Lucky."

During a Saturday evening performance, they announced: "Everyone seems to claim that they are never lucky and never win anything. Tonight, we have a little surprise in store for you. On Tuesday and Wednesday, we are playing 'If I'm Lucky' with Perry Como. Tonight, we would like to see how many of you are lucky. We have placed passes to see 'If I'm Lucky' underneath a number of seats. Will you please be good enough to get up and see if you're lucky to see 'If I'm Lucky' on Tuesday and Wednesday."

The response to the gag was excellent with the usually reserved patrons letting their hair down and getting a kick out of the whole thing.

Richmond, Norfolk Do OK In Campaign on 'Woman'

Wide use of radio, outdoor posters, cooperative newspaper advertising and large numbers of window displays were highlights of the exploitation campaigns on United Artists' "The Strange Woman" at Loews' in Richmond and Loew's State, Norfolk. Campaigns were set up by Manager George Peters, aided by UA representative E. M. Milburn in Richmond, and by Manager Milton Kaufman in Norfolk.

Ten different programs on four radio stations came through for the Richmond crew, with plugs for "The Strange Woman" broadcast on Battle of the Crooners, the Juke Box, Scott Jarrett, Harvey Hudson, Lives of the Stars, Lan Singer and Watcha Doing and others.

Co-op ads breaking in the Richmond Times-Dispatch included those of the Hall Optical Company, Philip Levey and Company, Westhampton Electric Center, Price's and the Tiller Corporation. Products advertised were Eureka vacuum cleaners, jewelry, books and optical instruments.

In Norfolk, Kaufman held a midnight screening for U. S. Navy officials, Internal Revenue officers, leading merchants and a selected list of critics. A week before opening, Joe Brown and his Radio Gang broadcast over WRVA from the stage of Loew's State with the program dedicated to "The Strange Woman." Amateur performers received prizes ranging from nylon hose to electric toasters, with Norfolk dealers contributing merchandise.

A 40x60 blow-up of Hedy Lamarr was spotted in the big front window of Woolworth's while leading hotels in town placed easels in their lobbies with theatre and play-date credits.

74 Million to See 'Wonderful Life' Ads

A heavy advertising campaign in which more than 74 million in circulation will be bought, has been announced by RKO Radio to launch Liberty Films' first production, "It's a Wonderful Life," starring Jimmy Stewart and Donna Reed.

Opening gun in this impressive schedule appeared in the October 28th issue of Life Magazine with similar ads to appear in two subsequent issues as well as in Look, Saturday Evening Post, Collier's and Time. Several monthly and fan magazines will carry a message about the Frank Capra production. The magazine campaign has been supplemented by the addition of the American Weekly Sunday supplement appearing in 20 Metropolitan newspapers, issue of January 12.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Get the Stage Ready for Those Local 'Hypo' Acts

One of Jack Jackson's recent articles in the Theatre Management section of SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW advocates "Whatever You Do, Do Something" (STR Nov. 23, 1946, p. 26) and then goes on to advise theatre managers to add several types of "hypos" in order to build up those slipping grosses. And several of the hypos suggested necessitate the use of the stage. All of which leads up to this reminder—keep your stage ready for use at a moment's notice!

The past few lush war years have seen most of the country's theatres roll up top grosses without much effort on the part of managers. The old gag about opening your doors and then getting out of the way of the rush to prevent being trampled to death, doesn't hold true any longer, however, and Jackson's advice about "hypos" and oldtime showmanship makes good sense.

During those war years there was a woeful neglect of stages in motion picture theatres to the extent that quite a bit of money must be expanded in some cases to bring them back to a usable condition. But their availability can be worth money in the bank to theatre managers who soon will decide that they are necessary.

An immediate inspection and series of tests of stage equipment will enable a manager to decide just how far he wants to go, or can afford to go, in readying his stage for safe and efficient use.

The grid should be examined to make sure it will hold any weights that might be suspended from it. Foot and floodlights should be tested to see that wiring and gelatine holders are in shape for use. Speakers and curtains should be suspended on lines so that they may be immediately flown to eliminate stage waits between the screen and "live" parts of the show. If this is not feasible, at least the horns should be in towers so that they may be rolled off stage.

Dressing rooms should be cleared of accumulated junk and prepared with a coat of paint, clean mirrors, light fixtures and plenty of hooks for clothing. Chairs, tables and other necessary fixtures should be installed.

The switchboard should be thoroughly tested by a competent person and marked clearly so that the wrong switches are not thrown during a stage performance. Any competent stage electrician should be able to do this and to set up a light plot for any stage performance coming under his jurisdiction, after the first rehearsal. Working of the dimmer is one of the things that should be given particular care.

Signal system between the booth and stage should be checked for the closing and opening of travelers, even if the traveler control is located in the booth.

Each set of lines should be given a thorough check with weights much heavier than they will be expected to carry in any stage show. Infrequent use of hemp ropes tends to dry and rot them, and a complete check may eliminate a tragic accident on stage.

Be ready for that stage performance and then start utilizing some of the suggestions put forth by Jack Jackson. They're a cinch to produce that extra "hypo" needed to maintain those top grosses.

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management*

DON'T LET THE 'PIXIES' THROW YOU

By Jack Jackson

How well do you know your theatre—or, I should say, how well do you THINK you know your theatre?

Well, I felt the same way and was pretty sure of myself until the lid of that "Pandora's Box" on which I happen to be sitting—and it's just like the one that you, and you and you occupy—flopped open and spilled a lot of mighty embarrassing surprises right in my kisser.

I don't like to confess things like this because I'd hate to have my boss get wise to what a "ninny" he has running these theatres, so let's get off somewhere in a quiet corner where I can let my hair down and wise you up confidentially because, believe me, you can never tell when a deluge of the same kind of happenings might catch you without an apology raincoat or alibi umbrella handy.

I know that I'm as careful as most, and more careful than many managers about keeping abreast of what's happening in the way of changes in and around my theatre. I've made it a religious practice to visit with the men responsible for the handling of key situations (and those under them as well) for the express purpose of finding out what steps it was necessary for them to take to keep things going during this period of shortages and substitutes. I've been careful to mark down in a note book the names and addresses of competent repair men, changes of employes of Carrier, Altec and other national service companies, etc. and I've been careful about being shown what major changes had to be made, and to get full information about the materials used as substitutes to make sure they complied with the various commandments of insurance and inspection.

'Pandora's Box' Opens Wide

I know that I've asked so many questions at times that I've made a veritable nuisance of myself. And yet I overlooked a whole headful of really simple things that sprang out of that Pandora's Box, one right after the other, and had my staffs —and myself—blushing like a new bride in a hotel lobby.

Before we go into details about my "embarrassing moments" let me tell you right now that the fellow who declared the old adage "Practice Makes Perfect" was a bust, and that "Practice Makes Careless" had a far higher batting average in the theatre league, really knew his percentages.

Just why it is that with each succeeding inspection tour the thoroughness and attentiveness of the inspector should continue to diminish is hard to explain without confessing a lack of resistance to the human fraility of "taking things for granted." At least that's all the excuse I can offer.

Here's what happened:

We hadn't used the Hammond Organ for many months, so went to considerable pains to make sure that the instrument was properly tuned and in order when we decided to use it in connection with a special stage show. We were going along swell with the introductory music when suddenly the organ went silent. Everybody on the house staff started going in circles and the audience were smitten with an epidemic of jitters—the kind that always strikes when people know something is wrong and that the remedy is unknown to those responsible. Well, we all started looking and finally decided it must be a blown fuse. We were able to locate the proper panel board on the electrical control boards but for the life of us could find no place marked "organ." After about fifteen minutes of hit and miss fuse changes we finally struck the right one and everything went off smoothly from that point forward.

I'd have sworn that I had personally examined that board and that every outlet was properly marked but what really happened was that since we were not using the organ I never bothered to have its position on the switch panel checked and marked. Just one of those "taken for granted" things that are always causing theatre managers a lot of headaches. The next morning we found out what had really happened. The line to the organ had been plugged in off an already overloaded electrical connection and just before the show was to start somebody substituted a double socket at the organ inlet in order to make use of the extra line for a mirror light in a dressing room back stage. The extra load was too much for the line and blew the fuse. Simple, wasn't it? Yet it caused a twenty minute delay in a stage presentation and unquestionably interfered with the audience enjoyment of an excellent show.

Who was responsible? Probably a lot of us, but principally I because I should have seen to it that the maintenance man made a proper report of how the line was hooked up and what additional load the wire could stand.

The one thing that I learned that should be of value to every reader of this column is that some markings—in addition to the definite connection of switches and fuses—should be made on a chart to indicate whether or not a line is capable of carrying an additional emergency load. This could be done by the simple process of placing and "0" on lines that are already carrying full capacity and an "X" on those capable of standing added strain. From that point it would be easy to check when some extra load to supply stage lights, dressing room connections, etc., was contemplated.

Another thing I learned is that you never know when any unit of the properties of a theatre will be called into action and it is best to be sure that all fuses and switches are properly marked so that even minor executives can locate trouble with a minimum loss of time.

Just about the time my face had lost its ruddy glow I ran smack into another "pixey" situation. This did not inconvenience the audience but was just another annoyance that could have been prevented had I gone a grade "A" job of checking.

The weather man had crossed us up and slipped in a cold spell where no cold spell belonged and when it became necessary to heat the office, nothing happened when the usual routine of switch-turning had been performed. It was the maintenance man's day off and we had to haul him from bed to straighten us out. Sometime during the summer they had changed the gas lines and the office heater had been put on a new control. If that had ended things everything would have been pretty but while I was checking to see what pipes served what place and what meters recorded what consumption I found that in some way or other a restaurant had been hooked onto one of my lines and I was paying part of the gas consumption for an establishment not connected with the theatre.

Check Meters for Leaks

From that situation I learned that it is advisable, at frequent intervals, to cut off every unit where gas is burned and watch the meters. If they continue to record passing fuel when the theatre units are not in use call up the utility company and have the lines checked for leaks, etc. Fuel is very expensive and it will pay to see that you are only paying for what you use. In addition there is the insurance problem and the possibility of serious accident and damage from leaking gas lines.

With the gas lines and meters having shown me up as a rather negligible supervisor I immediately went about the business of checking past gas and water bills. Sure enough, my water bills had been mounting month to month. So, I began checking for leaks and finally located a place in the basement where water was pouring over some electrical conduits. The house men advised me that the water was leaking from the electric vault that belonged to the Light Company and was not passing through my meter but the meter kept running at a pace not consistent with the consumption of water during the period of low theatre traffic. Investigation showed that we were operating an electric pump to care for the water leak and I am now after the Light Company to either repair the leak or assume the charge of operating the pump we use in order to dispose of the waste from their vault. In this connection there is also the possibility of the water finding its way through some fault in the electrical conduits and leaving us without power some fine day.

I was feeling pretty sure that I had run the "pixies" away from the place when one of the little devils sneaked into the controls of the Neon sign. We were only getting occasional effects and the buzz was louder than a bumble bee convention. Again I—nor anybody else I could locate readily—knew where the controls were located so we had to cut the sign at a time when it meant most to the theatre. Imagine my surprise when I found that the little box I had often noticed on the floor of the treasurer's office contained all of the gadgets that created the multiple color effects and flashers on the sign. Someone had accidentally kicked the lid loose and the metal top of a whisk broom had smeared the works. A simple little thing and any of us could have fixed it had we known where to look for the trouble. As it is I'm still waiting for the bill from the Neon service company.

However I did get some recompense in the way of valuable information for future reference from this embarrassing situation. I found out that the Neon light union will permit house employes to span across a broken section so long as they do not attempt to fix the tubing. That information is valuable to theatres where the unions are strong and where the fluorescent, neon and incandescent forms of lighting all come under different representatives. The service company advises me that No. 14 wire will prove most efficient and that its placement as quickly as possible after a break in the lighting will preserve the life of the transformer—and those gimmicks are almost impossible to get in today's market.

Repairs Check Essential

These incidents have shown me conclusively that the job of checking and inspection in and around the theatre is one that becomes more and more complicated every day and that complete examination of all repairs is essential if an executive is to be in position to run his theatres efficiently and economically. The possibility of repair men taking the shortest route to completing a job and to patch rather than repair—with no thought whatever to the seriousness of possible consequences—is a genuine hazard to every theatre. The job of supervision is one that will pay off in ease of mind as well as perfection in operation if it is done thoroughly and regularly. But don't let yourself get into the kind of a rut that I must have been in when I missed those changes and let those mounting gas and water bills get by me without questioning the managers or auditors.

I presume that my staffs are as good as those in most theatres so I'm assuming that what happens to me has its counterpart in establishments run by the readers of this column. It seems that I am unable to impress the importance of attention to the little things upon the management and service staffs and that stable performance from practically every one attached to the theatre payroll can only be had by constant reminders about the primary rudiments of operation.

Every theatre has an abundant supply of annoying little "pixies" that bob up at unexpected intervals to keep the management on it toes. The only way to keep them from becoming King Size and taking over the place entire is to do a thorough job of regular supervision.

Special Shows Bring Business

Special shows offering diverse types of entertainment are proving good business for his houses in Chicago, M. M. Rubens of the Great States circuit told SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW. The Great States houses are using spook and mystery programs at midnight and cartooon shows.

Check Room, Lost & Found, Call Services Are 'Musts'

Theatre operators of long experience agree unanimously that three of the most important services which any type of theatre can render to patrons are: checking facilities for packages and clothing; a lost and found department and a "call" service for professional men and women. And now that winter's blasts make really heavy clothing necessary and women are doing their heaviest shopping of the year, the check room service becomes the first "must" of the necessary three.

There are many systems of handling check room service, but the most widely used is that of having metal or cardboard tags with duplicate numbers, giving one number to the patron and affixing its duplicate to the package or clothing checked. The numbers should, of course, be given out consecutively so that the packages may be stored in that order, eliminating the possibility of confusion when the patron comes to claim his package. Tips will be frequently offered for this service but the consensus of opinion with experienced operators is that the tips very definitely should be declined, but politely, with some such phrase as, "This is part of our service, sir." Employes discovered accepting tips should be dismissed summarily.

The lost and found department is one that will naturally spring up in any theatre, whether or not the management wants it. So it might just as well be run with a system that will eliminate most of the grief with which such a department is burdened more often than not. Patrons are bound to lose things, and every patron who does so in the theatre and does not recover it, is inclined to feel resentful toward the theatre. So, the following procedures, found to have been most successful, might well be installed in theatres:

Firstly: If an article is reported lost while the patron is in the theatre, every effort should be made by the usher to whom the report is made (or by an assistant manager or chief of service if they are on duty) to find the lost article without disturbing other patrons.

Secondly: If the lost article is not immediately located, the patron should be asked to fill out a card form supplied by the theatre for the purpose, which should contain the patron's full name, address, telephone number, date the article was lost and a full description of it. Then, when and if the cleaners find the lost article, the patron may be notified by whatever method is found to be most convenient, asking him to come to the theatre to identify the article. If it is not found, a letter of regret should be sent to the patron informing him of the fact. This will indicate to the patron that a definite effort has been made to find his lost article.

If the owner of a found article may be identified by an attached name, etc., the article should be held by the manager and the patron notified and asked to appear at the theatre to claim his article.

For unidentifiable found articles the best sys-

Maintenance

PROJECTION — Maintenance II

(From an Outline of Talks Presented to the Classes in the Wilby-Kincey School of Maintenance)

LAMPHOUSES AND CARBONS

To assure proper lamp operation, and to prolong the life of the lamp, these procedures should be strictly followed:

1. Optical surfaces should be kept scrupulously clean. A regular program for cleaning them each morning before the day's operation begins is an important part of projection room routine.

Only lens tissue should be used for cleaning optical surfaces. A full supply of this material ought to be on hand. If the supply is unavoidably exhausted, silk or soft flannel materials may be used, never cotton. If the dry lens tissue does not effect complete cleaning of stubborn dirt, it may be moistened slightly with carbon tetrachloride.

The floor of the lamphouse should be kept clean, carbon dust and copper particles swept out regularly.

2. Feed relay contact points should be checked regularly, and cleaned with fine sandpaper if sparking appears. Continued arcing across the relay points indicates that the resistor bridging them has deteriorated, and should be replaced. If relay contact action is faulty, noise may be introduced into the sound. This calls for cleaning the relay points, readjusting their tension, and in extreme cases for installation of filter condensers, connected either across the points or from each point to ground.

Commutator action of the arc fed motor may also create noise in the sound if the commutator is dirty or in poor condition, or if the brush tension is incorrect. In such cases the commutator should be cleaned, sanded or repaired, or the brushes adjusted or replaced. It may also be necessary to connect filter condensers across the brushes, or from each brush to ground.

3. All moving parts should be kept carefully lubricated at all times, in accordance with the manufacturer's instructions.

4. Optical adjustments should be checked frequently. Any improper adjustment will show up immediately in reduced or incorrect screen illumination.

5. Only the correct size carbons should be used, and each carbon should be carefully inspected before it is inserted in the lamp. Carbons must be kept in a dry place.

6. Maintaining a steady arc at all times is one of the most important responsibilities of the projectionist.

FILM MAINTENANCE

The following poor practices cause film damage:

1. Improper packing.
2. Rough handling in shipment.
3. Excessive tension at the projector aperture.
4. Incorrect take-up action.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Send Troubles to Scrap Pile, Start Each Day Anew, Urges Wometco Head

Comparing yesterday's troubles with yesterday's unsold theatre seats, Sidney Meyer, executive of Wometco Theatres, Miami, Fla., urges his employes to "dump your troubles of yesterday—start each day anew."

"When you close your box-office each night and the last feature has started," Meyer writes in Contact, the circuit's house organ, "there is never an opportunity to fill the seats you may have had during the evening or the matinee for that day—it is lost forever. Never can time be turned back and those seats sold again. Our business is like that.

"Yet the merchant in his grocery store can offer his supply of canned goods at the regular prices today and in a few days decide they will not sell at the original price—so he puts them on sale at a special reduction.

"Unfortunately, we cannot do that with theatre seats.

"The shoe clerk can do the same with a pair of shoes; the suit salesman with a suit and so on with each merchant whose tangible merchandise can be offered to the public again tomorrow or next week. But not so with the fleeting moments in which a theatre seat must be occupied during a performance."

Reason for the analogy, Meyer explains, is "your own troubles, anxieties and the petty jealousies that will crop up daily in every man's life."

"As you are used to going to bed at night realizing that the seats that were empty in your theatre can never be sold again for last night's shows," the Wometco executive continues, "why don't you try to assume the same attitude in your mind for those bothersome little envies and hatreds most of us get from day to day?"

"It might even be a good idea for each of us to have a mental scrap pile where nightly we can place our ill thoughts to burn in our imaginary incinerator with all the grudges of the day and our revengeful feelings.

"If there is something that interferes with your getting ahead in the world, load it on your dreamed-up dump truck and shoo it off to the scrap heap before you go to bed. Let your truck be loaded with all your troubles, worries, losses, discouragements, misfortunes and any other incidents that may have caused you to be ill at ease or short-tempered with your fellow worker, and you'll find that you are relieved of a great burden and can start off tomorrow with an extra amount of vitality for greater achievements.

"Each day your theatre starts out with a new personality—nothing left over from yesterday's regrets of unsold seats—why don't you adopt the same attitude?

"Dump your troubles of yesterday—start each day anew."

Use Rubber Mats

To avoid the danger of shock to employes, place rubber mats at and about principal switchboards, especially on damp floors.

Checking, Lost & Found, Call Services are 'Musts'

tem has been found to be the establishment of a series of eight fairly large compartments, the first seven of each being marked with the days of the week and the found articles deposited in the compartment corresponding with the day on which it was found. A card with a description of the found article also headed by the day on which it was found should be filed in a "tickler" system so that on the eighth day, if the article has not been claimed, the card and its corresponding article can be removed into the eighth compartment and held for at least two months.

Then comes the "call" service. Professional men and women are subject to emergency call at all times and generally will not attend a theatre from which they may not be immediately paged. Several professions are subject to this type of call, such as doctors, police officials, judges, nurses, undertakers.

One of the best methods to give added service to these professional persons is to have whoever expects a call write his name and profession on a card (the profession is not always necessary) and then have the usher who takes him to his seat write the location of the seat on the card, which is then given to the person who answers the theatre's telephone. When the expected call is received the telephone operator need only pass the card to the assistant manager or other responsible person who can immediately locate the wanted patron.

5. Improperly adjusted sprocket idlers, loose splices and poorly made splices, which allow the film to run off the sprocket, thus embossing sprocket teeth impressions on it or actually tearing it.

6. Rewinding without a tail brake, thus scratching the film.

7. Neglecting projector cleanliness, which runs the film through dirt that scratches it.

8. Excessive rewinding speeds.

9. Rewind elements out of line.

10. Undercut or worn sprocket teeth.

11. Improperly made splices.

12. Punching, scratching or pasting on changeover marks.

13. The practice of some exchanges in punching on identification marks, which the projectionist must remove.

To care for film properly, the following procedures should be strictly observed:

1. Prints should be packed tightly in shipping cases, so they do not move about in transit.

2. Reels should not be overloaded with excessive footage.

3. The outer layer of film should be protected with a paper or other band.

4. Rewinding should be done at the rate of 1,000 feet in six minutes—no faster.

5. Aperture and take-up tensions should be properly set; all sprocket idlers adjusted to rotate easily and smoothly; any sprocket developing worn or undercut teeth replaced at once; proper tension maintained on the upper reel, and the projector and soundhead film path kept scrupulously clean. (When new film is run emulsion scraps deposits of cement must be cleared out of the projector after each reel).

6. Film should be stored only in a clean, humid atmosphere. It will become brittle if allowed to dry out.

7. Film received from the exchange in dirty condition should be cleaned with a soft rag and carbon tetrachloride, but the management should insist that the exchange send clean prints only.

8. Splices should be properly made.

SCREENS

Screens deteriorate with age and are damaged by accumulation of dust and dirt. Deterioration cannot be prevented, but the screen can be protected against excessive dirt accumulation.

Surrounding rigging and drapes should be kept clean of dust by periodic cleaning. Circulation of air through the pores of the screen should be reduced by any means that does not interfere with the free passage of sound.

Keep curtains closed during all non-operating hours, and particularly when the theatre is being cleaned.

Clean the back of the screen surface with a vacuum cleaner before brushing the front surface. Use only a perfectly clean brush, washed after each use with neutral soap and allowed to dry thoroughly before it is applied to the screen again.

Protect the screen against physical damage when it is flown, and whenever any work is done on the screen platform or when a stage show is programmed. When the screen is flown it should be raised or lowered slowly, and securely fastened in either position.

Do not let yourself be fooled by "jack leg" screen resurfacers. Resurfacing should be entrusted only to competent, experienced, and reliable companies.

(All of the foregoing comprises verbatim quotation or paraphrase of a chapter in the book issued to members of classes in the School of Maintenance of Wilby-Kincey Theatres circuit. The book was made available to Showmen's Trade Review for such quotation by the company, which is headed by R. B. Wilby, and H. F. Kincey, and is recognized as one of the most progressive and efficiently operated circuits in the United States. The book, according to Mr. Wilby, was prepared not as a manual, but merely to serve members of the classes (which are conducted for managers of the circuit) as a notebook to spare those attending the classes the effort of making their own notes during the talks and demonstrations.)

REGIONAL NEWSREEL

ST. LOUIS

An installation of the newly elected Variety Club officers will be held at a luncheon meeting at the Hotel Melbourne on Dec. 13, with Col. William McCraw slated as special guest. Those officers include Edward Arthur, Chief Barker; Sam Levin, 1st assistant Chief Barker; Tommy James, 2nd assistant Chief Barker; Michael J. Riordan, Property Master; and Joseph C. Ansell, Dough Guy. Fanchon & Marco general manager Harry C. Arthur was elected National Canvasman, with James H. Arthur as alternate. Albert Stetson and Irving Karches were named Clowns. Members of the Crew to serve during the coming year include Edward Arthur, Sam Levin, Tommy James, Michael Riordan, Joseph Ansell, Henry Riegel, Jr., Al Poos, Thomas J. Canaban, Ray Muehlemann, Fred Boemer, and Ray Parker.

Loew's theatre employes are scheduled to hold Christmas parties in their respective cities throughout the territory on Christmas Eve. Prior to that, on Dec. 16, managers of the Loew's theatres in Terre Haute, Indianapolis, Louisville, Kansas City, and St. Louis, and their wives will be guests at a special party to be hosted by Mike Cullen, Loew's division manager.

Missouri Theatre manager Harry Crawford, who died at the age of 59 in Boston, had a long record of show business activity behind him. Following turns in vaudeville and radio, he joined Fanchon & Marco in 1936 as manager of the Ambassador Theatre, and six years later was transferred to the Missouri in the post which he held at the time of his death. His body was cremated and the ashes returned to St. Louis. He is survived by his wife and son.

Owner E. W. Huson has installed an ultra-violet ray purifying system in his Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Ill.

The following personnel changes have been effected by the Tri-State Circuit: Horace Spencer, manager, from Garden, Davenport, to Illini, Moline; Davis Alexander, manager, from Illini to State, Cedar Rapids; and William Haven, assistant manager Fort in Rock Island, to manager, Garden, Davenport.

The Star Theatre, Warrensburg, Mo., has had a new screen and projection equipment installed by manager Roy Tucker. During the installation, the only sacrifice of playing time was the elimination of the Friday matinee.

George Wood of the Warner Bros.' staff was among the field men of that company to win a ball-point pen for his work in connection with the 1946 sales drive as well as the campaign for the twentieth anniversary of sound. Six other field men received pocket radios, with pens going to additional winners.

St. Louis Properties, Inc., which owns the Fox Theatre Building, has declared a dividend of $2.50 per share, payable Dec. 16. The rate for the past two years has been a flat $2.

Clyde O. Brown, former manager of the Fox Theatre, and for the past three years a resident of California, died of a heart disease at the age of 34. At 16 he started as an usher at the Fox, working his way up to manager. Funeral services were held last Tuesday in University City, and interment took place at Oak Grove Cemetery. His wife and daughter survive.

Granada Theatre manager Roy Muehlemann has been transferred to the Missouri in the same capacity as replacement for Harry Crawford, whose death is noted above.

George Karsch, head of the Karsch Circuit of Farmington, Mo., had one of his buildings in Flat River, Mo., destroyed by fire of undetermined origin. The building contained the Woolworth and Scott stores, and the blaze endangered the whole business district, with losses estimated at $100,000.

KANSAS CITY

Reopening of the 3,049 seat Mainstreet and change in ownership of the big RKO Orpheum are said to be in the making between RKO Theatres and the Fox Midwest circuit being the parties involved. Opening the new 3,049 seat Mainstreet will give downtown Kansas City ample seating capacity; present operators say too much. There's nothing definite on the deal yet however.

Don Davis is new district manager for RCA here; Davis has been working the middle west for RCA for a long, long time and is one of the most popular men in the industry hereabouts.

Tax Recess

Omaha, Neb., exhibitors were temporarily relieved this week when Mayor Charles Leeman reported that there would be no new taxes until next summer. The mayor said he was giving business men until that time to find a solution to the city's need of greater revenue. If their efforts fail, he added, "there will be no alternative" except to adopt an educational tax.

OKLAHOMA CITY

C. B. Akers and C. F. Motley of the Griffith Amusement Company were in Lubbock, Texas, on business last week. Henry Griffing and C. R. Guthrie visited Dallas.

Adam Hornbeck, Griffith partner at Shawnee, Oklahoma, was here last week visiting L. C. Griffith at St. Anthony's hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Leachman of Stillwater went to Dallas to spend Thanksgiving with their daughter who is attending Miss Hocaday's School for Girls there.

Virby Conley of the Elltis Theatre at Earby, Texas, was a visitor on film row. Ditto Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Funk of Guymon, Oklahoma, owners of the American and Royal Theatres there.

All attention this week is being focused on the annual convention of the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma to be held here in Oklahoma City Dec. 9 and 10 at the Skirvin Hotel. Governor Robert S. Kerr will deliver the welcome address to the delegates Monday morning and the Variety Buffet Dinner and election will be held Monday night. A banquet at which the Variety Achievement Award will be presented will be featured Tuesday evening in the Silver Glade Room of the Skirvin Tower Hotel.

LOS ANGELES

The boys at Warner Bros. are mighty happy over the results of the recently completed "Wild West Show" sales drive, in which the Los Angeles branch won the booking department contest for the entire USA. San Francisco came in second. Henry Herbel, district manager, brought back the glad tidings from New York, where he was in on a series of sale conferences. Lucky cash winners are Harvey Litgow, Bill Watmough, Jessie Pierce, Carl Burrows and Morris Shipp, office manager.

Charles P. Skouras

The Warners' Los Angeles branch also came in second in the West Coast part of the 1946 short subject sales drive. L.A. was nosed out by Portland. The local office also received special awards for being completely sold out before the end of the drive.

Charles P. Skouras is again Chief Barker of Tent No. 25, Variety Club, following the annual election. Other crew members elected are Dave Bershon, George Topper, W. H. "Bud" Lollier, Dr. Ben Feingold, Willard Keith, George Bowser, Oscar Oldknow, Jack Y. Berman, Howard Stubbins and Sherrill Corwin. Alternates are Al Galston, Ezra Stern, Al Goodman and Guy Gunderson. Unanimous approval was voted for the financing and managing of the Spastic Children's Hospital, through the Tent's medical committee. The local was also authorized to handle the Premature Birth Clinic at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital.

HARTFORD

A hearing is to be held in New Britain on Dec. 10 on the proposal to change the opening of New Britain theatres on Sundays from 2 p.m. to 1 p.m. The New Britain Common Council did not act on the proposal when it was offered last winter. Some opposition has already popped up in New Britain against the proposal of a 1 p.m. theatre opening on Sundays. At the annual meeting of the Council of Churches of New Britain, held last week, the proposal was opposed. Oscar A. Marsh, new president of the New Britain Council of Churches, was authorized to inform Alderman Robert H. Hausman of the Common Council's Ordinance and Salaries Committee, of the churches' attitude.

Now on a trip to New Orleans and Hot Springs, Ark., are Al Schuman, general manager of the Hartford Theatres Circuit and Mrs. Schuman. They are due back towards the end of December.

New stage manager at the Colonial Theatre, is Jack Yacavone, former GI. He succeeds the late Larry LaPenta.

Theatre Profits

Operating Loew's Yonge Street and the Uptown Theatres in Toronto, Marcus Loew's Theatres Limited has reported that net profit for the fiscal year ending Aug. 28 was $92,093, compared with $67,216 for the previous 12 months. The latest profit was equal to $6.17 on each share of common stock after preferred dividends had been paid. Operating profit for the latest period stood at $304,574, against the previous $270,790 while earned surplus at Aug. 28 was $296,637, which was $16,000 higher than one year ago. Working capital was reported at $808,249. The annual shareholders meeting is scheduled to be held Dec. 13 in Toronto. Dividends on both the preferred and common shares have been declared to Dec. 31. The company is negotiating for the outright purchase of the leasehold site on which the downtown theatre stands.

The Center Theatre, Hartford, has signed for a new screen and Voice of the Theatre, and the Central Theatre, West Hartford, has resumed a series of Saturday morning film showings, sponsored by the West Hartford Parent-Teacher Council's Audio-Visual Aids Committee in cooperation with the theatre's manager, Hugh Campbell. HARRISBURG

With schools closed for the Thanksgiving holiday, and shoppers flooding the downtown area in search of Christmas gifts, last weekend was reflected in a very healthy increase in theatre grosses. The seasonal business upswing is expected to reach its usual peak during the week between Christmas and New Years Day.

Local theatres were forced to join the nationwide dimout when the Federal Government refused an appeal by the Pennsylvania Power & Light Company to permit Harrisburg area subscribers who use city steam to continue to display as much illumination as was used before the coal strike took effect. As theatre managers darkened marquees and lobbies in compliance with the order, business suffered a decline of small order. Heat for the downtown theatres seemed assured for at least six months more, as the power company, which gets its coal by dredging the Susquehanna River, announced that it had a half-year's supply on hand.

WASHINGTON

A special all-comedy film benefit was held on Nov. 29 at 10:30 a.m. at the Kaywood Theatre under the sponsorship of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah. Proceeds went to establish pre-natal clinics and provide for child care in Palestine. Guests at the showing were youngsters from local orphanages and foster homes whose tickets were paid for by Hadassah members.

Theatres took advantage of the school holiday by setting Friday matinees in the neighborhood houses normally open evenings only. Warner's Avalon, Apollo, Takoma, Avenue Grand, Colony Savoy, Seco and York Theatres had afternoon cartoon shows and matinees.

Sid Zins, publicity representative for Columbia Pictures, returned to the office after a month's work in Cincinnati.

William C. Ewing, Assistant Director of Advertising and Publicity at Warner Bros., celebrated his 22nd wedding anniversary.

Turkey OK

Warner Theatres Publicity Director J. Knox Strachan, Cleveland, doesn't like turkeys—on the screen. But Mr. Strachan has no objection to the kind that grow in the barnyard and do not haunt publicity directors to build them up from flopperoos to big successes. So he's very happy over the turkey that Warner Publicity Head Harry Goldberg sent him. Mr. Goldberg, who also dislikes turkeys on the screen, just raises them for a hobby on his farm and delights sending them to his friends.

ALBANY

RKO field man Bucky Harris arranged for the appearance on the Grand Theatre stage of Barbara Hale and Bill Williams, in conjunction with the showing of "Sam Quentin." That same evening the two stars attended the annual Motion Picture Ball of the Variety Club, which was held Dec. 7 at the DeWitt Clinton Hotel.

When MGM assistant cashier Marian Lippoth was married to Michael Milark last week, the entire office staff of the local exchange was in attendance. Following the reception, the couple left for a Canadian honeymoon.

Joseph Rosen has replaced Weldon Waters as branch manager for 20th-Fox. Waters, who goes to the Pittsburgh exchange in the same capacity, was tendered a farewell party by the office staff at Jack's Restaurant, at which time he was presented with a pen and pencil set, while his wife received an orchid corsage. Paramount branch manager John Moore has been assigned to the Boston exchange, and Ed Ruff came from that city as his replacement.

Ed Irwin of the home office has been going over the books of the National Screen Service office, while NSS salesman Adolph Edman covered the New Haven territory this week.

Harry Rabinowitz, booker and office manager for PRC, has announced his resignation, with his former assistant, Robert Ferber, replacing him. Paramount contract clerk Camiella Sullivan, who has been with the company for 18 years, has resigned. Dave Fonda, manager of the Stark Theatre, Bennington, Vt., is the third resignation to be recorded.

Sets Greyhound Tieup on 'No Leave' in Harrisburg

Bob Sokol, assistant manager of Loew's Regent, Harrisburg set a tieup with the local branch of the Greyhound Bus Company by which a brand new bus was bannered with copy about "No Leave, No Love" and plugging the song, Love on a Greyhound Bus, from the Van Johnson film.

The bus was fitted with a record player and speaker system, and although local ordinances prohibit buses from idly touring the streets, arrangements were made for frequent trips to the garage, always, of course, taking the longest way. Announceemnts about the film's playdate at the Regent were made during the trips. Sokol also placed a display in the bus terminal, suggesting visits to the theatre while the picture was playing.—HAR.

Warner Hat Tieup Set For National Promotion

Warner Bros. Pictures has entered into a hat tieup with Caspar Davis, California hat stylist, whereby Warner stars modeling Davis creations will be featured in national magazine advertising and other promotion sponsored by the stylist.

Hits Front Page Daily!

A variation on an old newspaper promotional stunt was dreamed up by Manager Lowell Gates, Rawlins, Wyoming, in the idea of the local newspaper giving away theatre tickets to the person turning in the best news story each day. In return the theatre receives a listing of its current attraction daily in a front page box!

Young, But . . .

Embryonic bobbysox critics at Oskaloosa, Ia., this week decided that their favorite male stars included Dane Clark, Gene Kelly, Dana Andrews, Alan Ladd and Bing Crosby, while among the ladies were June Allyson, Jeanne Crain, Greer Garson, Jane Wyman and Ingrid Bergman.

The choice is that of some 45 girls and 12 boys, all in their teens, who form the Photoplay Club of Oskaloosa High School, an extra curricular activity which discusses films and dissects them once a week. The tendency of the youngsters, it was indicated, was to look at films from the viewpoint of acting, color, sound, photography and detail work.

THE BOX OFFICE SLANT

San Quentin

RKO Radio Drama 64 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Should entertain those who like prison dramas. Good performances and other production values make it a vehicle that provides the right kind of entertainment for average patrons.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do satisfactorily wherever this type of film is readily acceptable. The Tierney name-draw, plus the title, should draw attention.

Cast: Lawrence Tierney, Barton MacLane, Marian Carr, Harry Shannon, Carol Forman, Richard Powers, Joe Devlin, Tony Barrett, Lee Bonnell, Robert Clarke, Raymond Burr. Credits: Directed by Gordon M. Douglas. Original screenplay by Lawrence Kimble, Arthur A. Ross and Howard J. Green. Photography, Frank Redman. Produced by Martin Mooney.

Plot: The inmates of a federal prison organize a league for the rehabilitation of paroled prisoners. When an apparently faithful league member escapes and creates a crime wave, a parolee tracks down the criminal, returns him to justice and saves the worthwhile organization.

Comment: This prison drama should provide average entertainment for the general public, for it has the excitement and suspense so characteristic of this type of story. Production by Martin Mooney and direction by Gordon Douglas are good, and the two leading players, Lawrence Tierney and Barton MacLane are splendid in their roles, with top support given them by others in the cast. Unlike most prison yarns, which begin with violent action, this one opens slowly and runs along at an even pace for several hundred feet. But when the excitement starts, it carries a constant pitch of melodramatic action until the bang-up finish. The Lawrence Tierney name has become synonymous with underworld characters, so sell the picture through his name draw. This should help in reaching the patrons who like this type of fare.

Dangerous Millions

20th Century-Fox Drama 69 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Better-than-average action drama that will keep audiences who like this type of fare on the edges of their seats.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should provide worthwhile support for a strong top feature. Especially strong for action houses.

Cast: Kent Taylor, Dona Drake, Tala Birell, Leonard Strong, Konstantin Shayne, Robert Barrat, Rex Evans, Rudoph Anders, Otto Reichow, Franco Corzaro, Henry Rowland, Victor Sen Yung. Credits: Producer, Sol. M. Wurtzel. Associate producer, Paul Wurtzel. Director, James Tinling. Original screenplay by Irving Cummings, Jr. and Ropert G. North. Photography, Benjamin Kline.

Plot: With his days on earth apparently numbered, a wealthy shipping operator in the Orient converts all his wealth into cash and jewels, then sends special gold coins to his eight heirs to summon them to their share of the treasure. The eight people assemble to claim their wealth and, one by one, show their greed in murder and double-crossing. Only two are worthy of receiving the fortune, when the rich man reappears and explains the purpose of his trick in feigning death.

Comment: This is by far the best picture Sol. M. Wurtzel has produced in his independent action series for 20th Century-Fox. Its success can be credited to Scenarists Cummings and North, who concocted a clever original story and screenplay. The situations are extremely well linked together for such an action piece, and the lines are smartly written. The cast is better-than-average for a melodrama offering such as this, with every one tops in his part. If any one can be singled out, it is Leonard Strong, who lends great charm and suavity to his role as the bandit chieftain who turns out to be a good man. Kent Taylor is fine for the male lead and Dona Drake shows promise as a pretty senorita. Production values are up to par and Director Tinling has kept splendid pace with the script with which he was blessed.

Carmen

(French Dialogue, English Titles)

Superfilm Drama 101 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Good entertainment that strongly resembles the American western. Should please the majority of those who can be lured to the box-office. Definitely not for children.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will probably fare best in foreign film houses in metropolitan centers because of its foreign cast, a factor that would most likely hinder its chances in average communities.

Cast: Viviane Romance, Jean Marais, Lucien Coedel, Adriano Rimoldi, Elli Parvo, Marguerite Moerno, Lucien Bertheau, Polidor, Nicola Maldacea, Jean Brochard, Bernard Blier, Anna Lelli, Anna Arena. Credits: Made in Europe by Scalera Films. A Christian Jacque Production. Photographed by Ubaldo Arata. Musical background by Georges Bizet. From the story of Prosper Merimee.

Plot: This is the story of the amoral, seductive gypsy girl of Seville who brings ruin to her brigadier, Don Jose, and death to herself.

Comment: Said to be closer to the Prosper Merimee story than the opera, this foreign film version of "Carmen," made by a French cast in southern Italy, is good entertainment. The dialogue may be resented by the sophisticates, for it is "slanted down" in an apparent effort to please the average run of American moviegoers. The picture, for the most part, resembles a western, what with its stagecoach holdups and fast riding in the great outdoors. Viviane Romance is an attractive and robust Carmen, and Jean Marais and Lucien Coedel lend admirable support as Don Joe and Garcia, the bandit chieftain. Although "Carmen" would probably please the majority of American moviegoers, chances are that the picture will find its heaviest run of playdates in foreign film theatres in metropolitan centers because of its "foreign" cast. Exhibitors in average communities who perchance book it and prepare their audiences for it well in advance may experience pleased audiences and good box-office returns. The film is definitely not for children.

The Mysterious Mr. Valentine

Republic Mystery-Drama 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Fairly entertaining mystery that will please average, not-too-particular mystery fan.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Suitable as a program offering for lower half of double bills. Good for action houses.

Cast: William Henry, Linda Sterling, Virginia Christine, Thomas Jackson, Barbara Wooddell, Ken Duncan, Virginia Brissac, Lyle Latell. Credits: Associate producer, Donald H. Brown. Director, Philip Ford. Original screenplay, Milton Raison. Photography, Alfred Keller.

Plot: Her car stolen, a girl becomes involved in an automobile accident. Insurance agents come into the case and the girl becomes a target for them and the police. A private detective comes to the girl's rescue at the last minute, protects her from the clutches of a blackmail gang and wins her for himself.

Comment: Republic has turned out a fairly fast-moving murder mystery in this effort, but one that often leaves the audience confused as to plot structure. If the fans aren't too particular about "loose ends" in their mystery screen fare, they won't mind Milton Raison's screenplay. Most outstanding work is done by exceptionally attractive and talented Viriginia Christine, who plays second lead to Linda Sterling. William Henry—formerly known as Bill—does well as the private detective, and others in the cast are up to par. Phil Ford's direction does much to keep the oft-times beclouded plot moving along at a neat clip. Exhibitors should benefit from the title, which has good marquee appeal.

Love Laughs at Andy Hardy

MGM Comedy 93 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT (Family) Always amusing and sometimes wildly hilarious, this is a welcome return of Mickey Rooney to the postponed Hardy series.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: On the basis of the Hardy series' past successes, this should do very well indeed. It compares favorably with most of its predecessors.

Cast: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Sara Haden, Bonita Granville, Lina Romay, Fay Holden, Dorothy Ford, Hal Hackett, Dick Simmons, Clinton Sundberg, Geraldine Wall, Addison Richards. Credits: Directed by Willis Goldbeck. Produced by Robert Sisk. Screenplay by Harry Ruskin and William Ludwig, from an original story by Howard Dimsdale, based on the characters created by Aurania Rouverol. Photography, Robert Planck. Musical score, David Snell.

Plot: Mickey Rooney returns from the wars to his family, a little older but very much in love. His vagaries get him into slight difficulties occasionally, but he returns to college intending to ask Bonita Granville to marry him. She has other plans, however, and before Mickey can pop the question, she asks him to be best man at her coming marriage to her guardian. Mickey is broken-hearted, decides to leave college and go to South America as an engineer. It is Lina Romay who helps him change his mind, and at the film's close Mickey is pre-

is necessary to satisfactory results

To consistently maintain optical accuracy far beyond the requirements of actual theatre needs, each Strong Reflector receives precision arc lamp tests.

Here is a scene in the Strong laboratory wherein lighting engineers and optical specialists make supplementary spot checks of these accurately formed mirrors. A tiny ray of light is projected progressively to various zones of the reflector, as it is rotated so to detect even the slightest divergence of this ray of light as it is reflected to the cross hair at the target.

The ceaseless efforts of these technicians to develop the best possible projection lighting equipment accounts in a great measure for the unchallenged leadership of Strong products. It is their magnificent job of coördinating the functions of lamps, rectifiers and reflectors that has made it possible for you to offer your patrons the best in screen presentation at a cost that you can well afford. Popcorn Sales Add Important Revenue Amply Worth Added Operating Costs

Popcorn sales add so importantly to a theatre's revenue that the extra cleaning expense involved is amply justified. This is the unanimous opinion of the Council. A single reservation was registered by one member whose circuit does not at present vend popcorn and who therefore felt he was not in a position to comment. The others were emphatic that popcorn sales add "substantially"—"considerably"—to a theatre's total revenues.

Audience carelessness with popcorn and its wrappings does add to housekeeping difficulties, in the view of the great majority. Moreover, the greater part of those who held this view also find that the intensified cleaning problem is serious—but feel that the revenue from popcorn sales is worth it.

"We employ blowers," one member explained, "which not only take all residue popcorn that lies on the floor, but also boxes and paper wrappings, blowing them all down to the front section. There they can easily be picked up and the theatre cleaned in a third of the time required by sweeping—and with better results. It is also necessary to mop auditorium floors and rinse them to keep down odors from the oils that may work into the concrete."

"Naturally popcorn creates a cleaning problem," said another, "but the revenue offsets the disadvantages."

"We have had to add to our cleaning staff, but it pays." contributed a third.

"Constant cleaning is needed."

"More time must be allotted for cleaning."

'We clean carpets oftener, but it still pays over and above the additional expense."

And one member noted shrewdly that declining to sell popcorn will not eliminate the cleaning problem—the audience will bring it along anyhow—"if the theatre does not sell it, some store right next to the theatre will."

Opinion was very evenly divided on the question of popcorn machines vs. prepopped corn and re-heating stands (or cabinets).

Popcorn Machines

Some members not only favor popping machines, but also approve installing more than one, if the house and patronage are large enough.

"Using popcorn machines of the present build, a large theatre would require more than one."

"Yes, put more than one in a large theatre."

"If necessary for handling the traffic."

But there was very considerable sentiment on the other side.

"We do not have any popcorn machines —we have popcorn cabinets and the popcorn is supplied by a central popping plant. We have developed a special reheating cabinet. Only one is needed, except when there is reason to establish a concession counter on the second floor as well as the main floor. Our reason is the waste of ingredients, carelessness of employes in handling, and poor control of popping."

"We prefer off-theatre popping and selling from re-heating stands."

"Make arrangements to pop away from the theatre and bring it to the theatre, placing on a re-warming stand."

"I personally am very much opposed to the use of popcorn machines. They stink up the place."

"Keep the popcorn machine in a special room in a remote part of the theatre. Use a popcorn warmer at the candy stand."

"We use popcorn machines in our smaller houses; for larger ones we buy corn already popped."

As for the location of popping machine or re-heating table, the consensus appeared to be "the most prominent spot possible." Second choice was the lobby, "if the law allows."

"Popcorn machines cannot always be placed in locations that the operators prefer. If permitted, in positions where the patron passes it before entering the theatre."

"Near the box-office or near the ticket taker. If inside the theatre, vent it well."

"Most prominent location in lobby consistent with flow of traffic."

"Near box-office, where people have room to stand to make their purchase."

"Same location as candy counter. In lobby if possible."

"In direct view of the entrance door."

Storing Corn

"Storage of popping corn in the theatre is one of the great weak points. It is seldom given proper care or facilities. The corn can lose 50 per cent of its popping volume in a few days if improperly stored. This not only decreases the profit but spoils the product, since corn popped out of condition is very tough and full of hulls, or damp and soggy. It should be stored in an airtight container, in a cool place, to avoid loss of moisture content and to keep down rancidity."

"Should be stored dry at not more than 50 degrees temperature."

"By all means—kept cool and dry."

"Cool, dry, in a separate storage room."

"In a cool place in metal containers."

"Provide cool, dry and mouse-proof storage. In some locations the Fire Department requires a metal-lined storage room."

There was no dissent.

Maintenance

Unanimous agreement was registered on the necessity for cleaning popcorn machines daily.

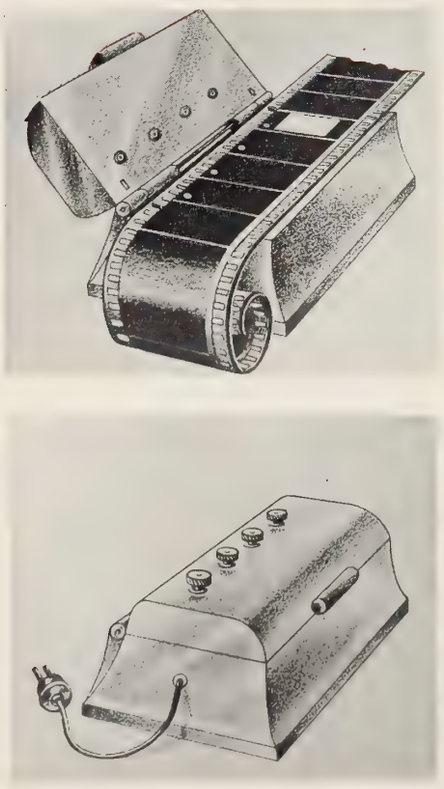
Many New Equipment Items Shown At TESMA Exhibit



The horn of plenty in motion picture equipment was poured out, November 8th-11th, before the hundreds of visitors to the Tesma-Tedpa convention and exhibition at Toledo. Included in the latter were many new items of apparatus and materials which will bring advantages and benefits not previously known to both the theatre and the industry as a whole.

Among the new devices which members of the Theatre Equipment and Supply Manufacturers Association displayed before members of the Theatre Equipment Dealers Protective Association were a new hand-operated ticket machine, developed by General Register Corporation, as fast in action as that company's electrical ticket issuer, but less expensive in first cost and maintenance. It may ultimately replace the electrical device, General Register thinks.

Also shown was a new and very inexpensive box office safe that is thoroughly proof against hold-ups unless the hold-up men have unlimited time in which to work; an ozone generator with new electrodes which does not create nitrous oxide gas as an unwanted by-product; a new method of blacklight ornamentation which utilizes as light source a simple fluorescent tube, as easy to operate as any fluorescent tube; a wholly new projector by Motiograph; a new material for interior and exterior theatre walls, and many others.

A minor equipment detail that is very likely to have major importance in saving this industry the huge sums now lost annually through mutilation of film is the cue marker. Two new models of this simple item, by two different manufacturers, were shown. Both are inexpensive (the smallest theatre can afford them and never notice the cost); both are effective. More widespread use of cue markers, now that several different types are available, can reasonably be expected to reduce substantially the lip-stick smears, paper-punch holes, and other mutilations that projectionists now apply to the film to warn themselves of the time for changeover.

Shown also were many items which, while not revealed to the public for the first time at the Tesma convention are still very recent—such as the Retiscope curved screen, the Forest electronic arc lamp and Compco Corporation's new sand urns.

TO USE the new Fontaine cue marker, shown above, the projectionist merely inserts the film, as seen in the upper illustration, framing it correctly over the framing aperture; then closes the device as shown in photo immediately above and twirls each of the four knurled knobs. Hollywood-type cue marks, in the correct Hollywood location, appear on four successive frames, as in a new print.

Ticket Dispensers

General Register's new manual ticket machine operates in exactly the same way as their electric dispenser except that the electric machine delivers tickets when the appropriate buttons are pressed, but with the manual model the cashier must both press the buttons and work a lever conveniently located under her wrist. The lever takes the place of the electric motor in actuating the mechanism.

The manual, like the electrical machine, consists of a number of units each of which can dispense a different type of ticket, but in the manual model these units are totally independent of each other. They are not interlocked through an electric motor or through anything. Each is completely removable as a unit, leaving the others totally unaffected. No trouble or flaw that may develop in one can influence the others in any way.

This type of construction makes possible a new policy with respect to servicing, which is intended both to reduce the theatre's cost in maintenance, and at the same time prove more profitable to General Register than the former policy—the new maintenance practice being far more efficient.

If any unit of the new machine ever gives any trouble that is beyond the maintenance abilities of the theatre staff, it is removed and returned to the dealer who sold the equipment. The dealer replaces it with a new unit from his shelves, and that is the last the theatre ever sees of the defective one. The exchange is free if the trouble occurs within the guaranty period, after that there is a price for the exchange which varies according to the age of the faulty unit.

That unit is never repaired. It is returned to the factory and torn down to its component parts. Each part is then examined, and discarded or retained according to its condition; the parts retained are built together into new units on an assembly line, with assembly line efficiency. The saving effected, as compared with painstaking hand repairs, results in an advantage to General Register at the same time that cost to the theatre is reduced.

Also on display at the Tesma show was a new non-mechanical ticket dispenser by GoldE. It has a chromium top plate and two, three or four separate magazines into which ticket rolls are inserted. The end of each roll protrudes toward the cashier through a dispenser tab slot; she draws it toward her until she has drawn out the correct number of tickets, and then tears them off against the dispenser tab. An internal spring device transmits the "feel" of proper ticket count to the cashier. The dispenser tab is marked for easy reading to show the cashier at a glance which ticket each magazine holds. Five- and six-magazine units are available on order.

New Projector

The Motiograph AA mechanism, also unveiled for the first time at the Toledo convention, embodies a number of features new to this industry. One striking detail relates to the provisions for maintenance. The mechanism is so built that it can be taken apart completely with only five Bristo wrenches for tools—not even a screw-driver is needed! Lubrication arrangements are such that only semi-annual oiling is necessary. Throughout most of the mechanism sealed ball-bearings, lubricated for life at the factory, need no oiling at all. The few places where oil must be added, once in six months, are all so sealed that no lubricant ever reaches the film compartment or soils the film.

HAND-OPERATED General Register Corporation ticket issuing machine. In this novel device the lever the cashier is shown pressing with three fingers and thumb provides the operating force and makes an electric motor unnecessary. The model pictured consists of three units in one case, each unit being totally independent of the others and removable for repair or replacement without reference to the others.

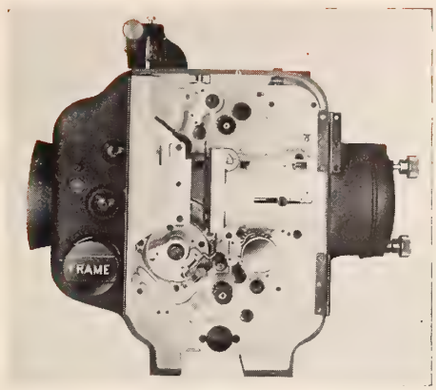
The Motiograph AA has double shutters, rotating within ⅛th inch of each other—practically speaking, in the same plane. Shutter timing can be set accurately by means of a knob at the front of the projector; and can be re-set by the same knob at any time, while the mechanism is in operation.

The intermittent sprocket, although of the double-bearing type, can be replaced without taking out the intermittent movement.

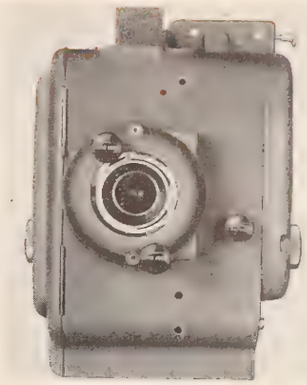
The mechanism fits any modern soundhead and upper magazine without need for adapters. The new Motiograph magazines, upper and lower, are of 2,000-foot capacity and unusual depth. This latter feature allows even bent exchange reels to be used without danger of the reel rubbing against the side or door of the magazine.

Cue Markers

Standard Hollywood changeover cues, lost because the film was patched and the frames carrying the cue marks were cut out, can be replaced on any print by means of the products of Reeves Instrument Corporation and Fontaine Manufacturing Corporation. Both are devices fitted with sprocket hole studs, into which the film is inserted and properly "framed," after which the cue marks are applied mechanically to four successive frames. In the Fontaine product, which retails for $7.75, the projectionist inscribes the four cue marks by manipulating four knurled knobs; in the Reeves device, the four scribers operate simultaneously when the projectionist slides a ratchet. No theatre is left with any excuse for presenting its second-showing patrons with lipstick smears or paper-punch holes.

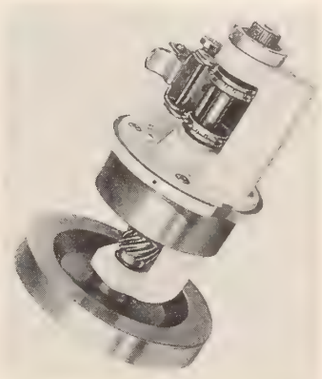


Box Office Safe

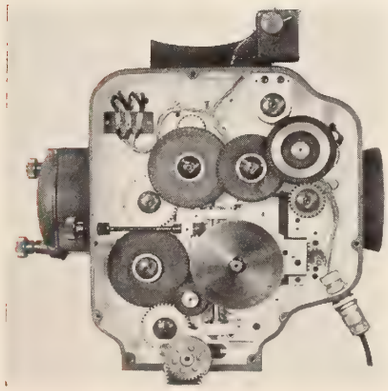


The Ballam box office safe, made of ¼" machine steel, with welded construction, bolts to any convenient wall by means of five heavy bolts. Its door has a lock with two keys (one of which may be retained by the manager) and cannot be opened until both keys have been inserted in their respective keyholes. Paper money is dropped in through a slot at the top, and there is a model with a coin chute that will take rolls of coins up to half-dollar size. Money once put inside through the currency slot or the coin chute will stay inside until the manager and cashier both use their keys.

No N_2O



Nitrous oxide is not generated with the Electroaire Corporation's new ozone machines. Ordinarily, when these machines oxidize the 0_2 of the air to 0_3 (ozone) they also oxidize some of the nitrogen of the air to N_2O. In Electroaire's new devices the conventional copper electrodes are replaced by aluminum ones which, the manufacturer asserts, produce ozone without its nitrogen by-product.



An additional improvement lies in a mechanical design change which eliminates accumulation of condensed moisture. The electrodes are arranged vertically, in such a way that any moisture that condenses runs down and does not remain on the electrodes.

INTERMITTENT SPROCKET of the new Motiograph AA, although of the double-bearing type, can be removed, reversed or replaced without taking out the movement. The movement itself can be removed from the mechanism from the operating side, without disturbing any other components except the movement balance wheel. The lens can be taken out for cleaning and restored and locked into place without any need for refocussing. The front of the mechanism mounts the lens focus and locking knobs, and shutter setting knob.

Wall Material

Thabet Manufacturing Company showed a new wall material—an aluminum base on the outer surface of which various colors and designs (such as wood patterns and marble patterns) have been reproduced by a photographic method. These panels can readily be cleaned with soap and water and the designs resist abrasion. They also resist flame; they proved completely impervious to the flame of a match, although they will char at more elevated temperatures than a match can generate, the manufacturer says. They are available also in tiles, which can be applied to any wall with mastic.

Fluorescent panels of unusual design, planned for use with a simple General Electric fluorescent tube, were displayed by Gull Industries, Inc. The tube is concealed in a recess below each panel, and floods the panel above it with invisible black light very much as any poster may be illuminated with visible light by means of an ordinary fluorescent tube concealed below it. The Gull Industry panels, however, are made of lucite, which transmits the ultra violet energy very readily; and are painted in fluorescent materials.

Other New Items

Two companies, Atlas Products and Compco Corporation, showed sand urns. Colors, decorative patterns and general appearance of different models provided for harmonious use in any theatre area. Tops were of stainless steel or chromium plated steel. Lawrence Metal Products, Inc., also showed sand urns in several colors and in bronze, brass and satin chrome finish.

The High Cost of Poor Projection

By Charles E. Lewis*
Publisher and Editor,
Showmen's Trade Review

SUMMARY—Only five per cent of the capital invested in the motion picture industry is in studios and distribution facilities. Ninety-five per cent, aggregating a total of $1,900,000,000, is invested in motion picture theatres and their equipment. This staggering investment is in the hands of the exhibitor. He needs technical advice.

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers has built up the necessary body of technical knowledge; but the exhibitor cannot follow the Society's work in detail because he is equally harassed with many theatre problems. The Society should arrange to segregate and collect those items of information appearing throughout its JOURNAL which would be of direct help to him. These could then be published in handy reference form for dealing with theatre projection problems. There is no other single aid to good projection that could be more helpful.

It has very often been said that the process of putting a motion picture before the public involves a long chain of operations. Each link is equally indispensable to the final result. A broken chain is a broken chain no matter where the break occurs. This Conference has heard some highly valuable and important papers that deal with chemical analysis of developing solutions. That is one link. The decision of a theater owner or manager about signing a check for improvements in projection equipment is another—and equally important.

Weakness anywhere in the chain is expensive to the industry. As for poor projection, the industry pays for that in at least three different ways.

On the question of what relationship exists between good projection and box-office receipts, SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW recently conducted a survey. Selected groups of representative theatre managers were queried. These are the men who are on the spot and ought to know. In the opinion of 80 per cent of those who answered, an unquestionable increase in box-office revenue follows improvements in projection or sound equipment.

The industry loses this increase in revenue wherever projection is neglected.

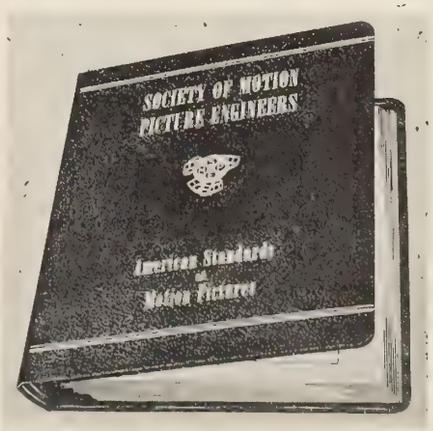
There is an additional loss, however, which is not confined merely to those theatres that are neglectful. The best equipment and the best care cannot get good projection out of mutilated prints. The industry suffers a further box-office loss through the carelessness of theatres which neglect their equipment to the point where it damages prints.

A third loss to the industry results from shortening the life of the prints.

*Presented May 9, 1946 at the Society of Motion Picture Engineers' Technical Conference in New York.

Good projection, therefore, is a matter of practical financial concern to everyone who draws his livelihood from this industry. The cost of poor projection is a direct or indirect tax on all of us, and a drain that helps to limit appropriations for research and development.

The practical questions would seem to be: (1) What is good projection? (2) How can we get it?



Good Projection

It is not the place of an exhibitor to tell the Society of Motion Picture Engineers what good projection is. So far as the exhibitor is concerned, good projection is that which conforms to the standards this Society has been so patiently elaborating for many years.

Good projection is that in which the brightness at the center of the screen is between 9 and 14 Foot-Lamberts when the projector is running with no film in the gate. I do not say this. Your Committee on Standards says so. And in this connection I hope it will not be out of place to add a word, from the exhibitor's point of view, with respect to the very valuable work done by your Film Projection Practice Committee. It would, in my opinion, be a great service to the industry if, no wthat the war is over, the activities of the Film Projection Practice Committee could be resumed.

TANGIBLE RESULT

PRESENTATION to the Society of Motion Picture Engineers of this paper, by the Editor and Publisher of Showmen's Trade Review, resulted in the issuance, within a few months, of a new SMPE publication, the loose-leaf manual here shown, in which the Society's essential projection standards are conveniently presented in compact and easily understandable form. Standards sheets are sold by the Society at 15 cents each; the binder at $2.50. Additional standard sheets to fit the same binder will be published by the Society from time to time.

It is you—the Society—who tell this industry what good projection is. But when the Society of Motion Picture Engineers establishes standards for the motion picture industry there still remains a vital practical problem. It is the problem of keeping that information effectively at the elbow of a critically important class of men who have urgent need of it—and I propose to confine this discussion to that one link only—the exhibitor—the man who has to make up his mind about signing the check.

That man needs help. It is easy to point out that the SMPE puts invaluable technical guidance at his disposal. But is that poor, harassed man also to become a member of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, the American Institute of Architects, the Illuminating Engineering Society, and the American Institute of Accountants? All these organizations no doubt could give him information that would be of great value to him. He is also expected to be an expert on advertising, exploitation, and employee relations, and on the supervision of plumbing.

The Exhibitor

The exhibitor is the forgotten man of this industry. Yet his stake in it is vastly greater than that of all other branches combined. Recent figures of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association show a total sum of 125 million dollars invested in American studios, an additional 25 millions of dollars invested in American distribution facilities, and the tremendous total of one billion, nine hundred million dollars invested in American motion picture theatres.

That is to say, approximately 95 per cent of all the capital in this industry is in theatres and their equipment. This stupendous aggregate of capital value is in the hands of the exhibitor—the forgotten man.

With respect to projection, the exhibitor has advice at his disposal. The projectionist is another very important link in the chain. The exhibitor can secure invaluable technical advice from his projectionists. Service inspectors and supply dealers also can and do advise him. But the trouble is, he is the man who must make the decision. The advice he gets from these sources is often conflicting. And he must keep in mind that while the advice is almost invariably honest, it is not always disinterested. He needs some little information of his own—some standards of reference—to help him decide.

It is true that in considering what to do about conflicting advice, the exhibitor can turn to Vol. 43 of the JOURNAL of the SMPE and find there what his screen brightness ought to be according to your Committee

HIGH INTENSITY PROJECTION!

MOVIE-GOERS come back more often to the theatre, large or small, that has High Intensity Projection! Because they appreciate the brighter screen... the sharper black-and-white images ... the richer color scenes.

This has been the experience of theatre managers throughout the country. In fact, so effective is this type of projection in boosting admissions that no theatre can afford to be without it.

For example, consider what One-Kilowatt High Intensity Projection means to even the smallest theatre! It means prestige ... admissions ... profits. Its cost? Even if it fills but a few extra seats a day, High Intensity Projection will pay for itself.

Quonset Hut Becomes a Movie Showhouse

"Construction cost was not a great deal less than with conventional construction, owing to the fact that we were unable to get desired materials, and had to take substitutes in many cases."

Thus modestly speaks Melvin C. Glatz, Supervisor of Construction for Fox Inter-Mountain Amusement Corp. and member of STR's Theatre Advisory Council, concerning his revolutionary achievement in turning a Quonset hut into a 668-seat theatre.

"I feel," he adds, "that this type of building is just as substantial, and that our future upkeep and maintenance costs will probably be less than with regular construction."

The striking new "theatre of tomorrow," the Fox, opened October 30th at Aurora, Colorado. It has all modern facilities, including excellent acoustics and air conditioning, and germicidal lamps—everything that could have been put into a conventional-type building. The cost was approximately $100,000.

Basis of the new theatre is a "Quonset 40"—a large-size Quonset furnished by Stran Steel division of Great Lakes Steel Corp. of Detroit. At one end of the Quonset, a small steel, concrete and brick building was erected to house the lobby, lounge, manager's office, rest rooms and so forth. Above this building, forming part of its roof and merging with the adjoining end of the auditorium, is a structure consisting of Quonset ribs laid on their sides and covered with corrugated sheet aluminum, which houses a portion of the auditorium stadium, and the projection room. It is roofed with steel high-ribbed lath and concrete, with a regular built-up roof on top of the concrete.

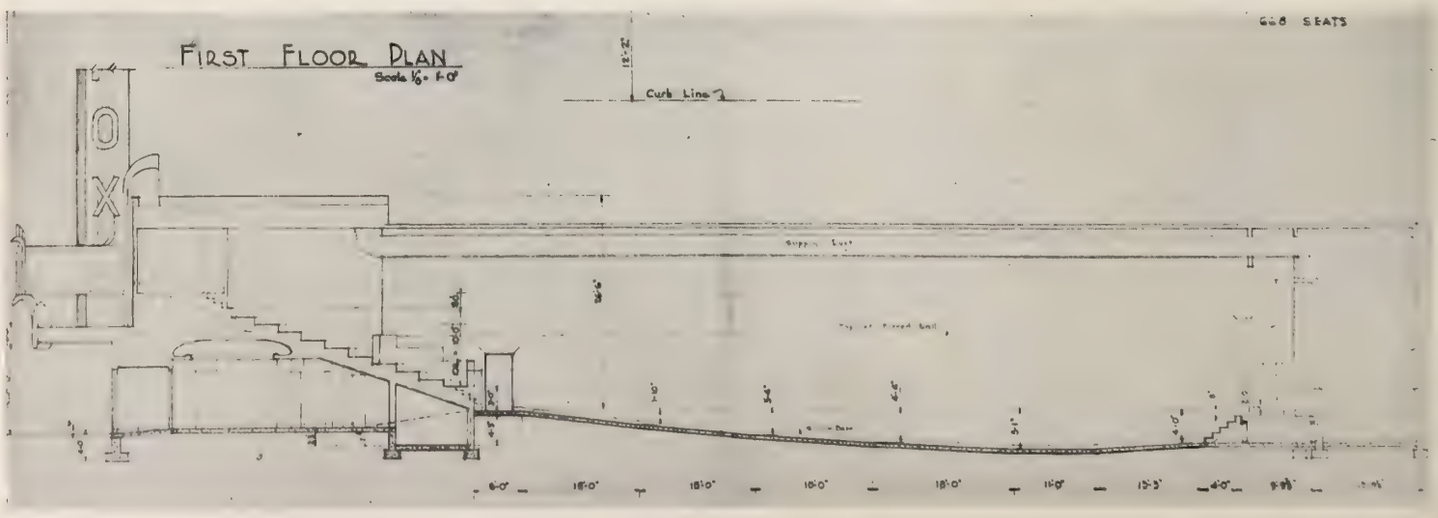
The remainder of the theatre consists of the Quonset 40, forty feet wide and forty feet high, one hundred twenty feet long. At the far end of the Quonset, behind the screen, is the boiler and fan room. There is no excavation.

Structural Details

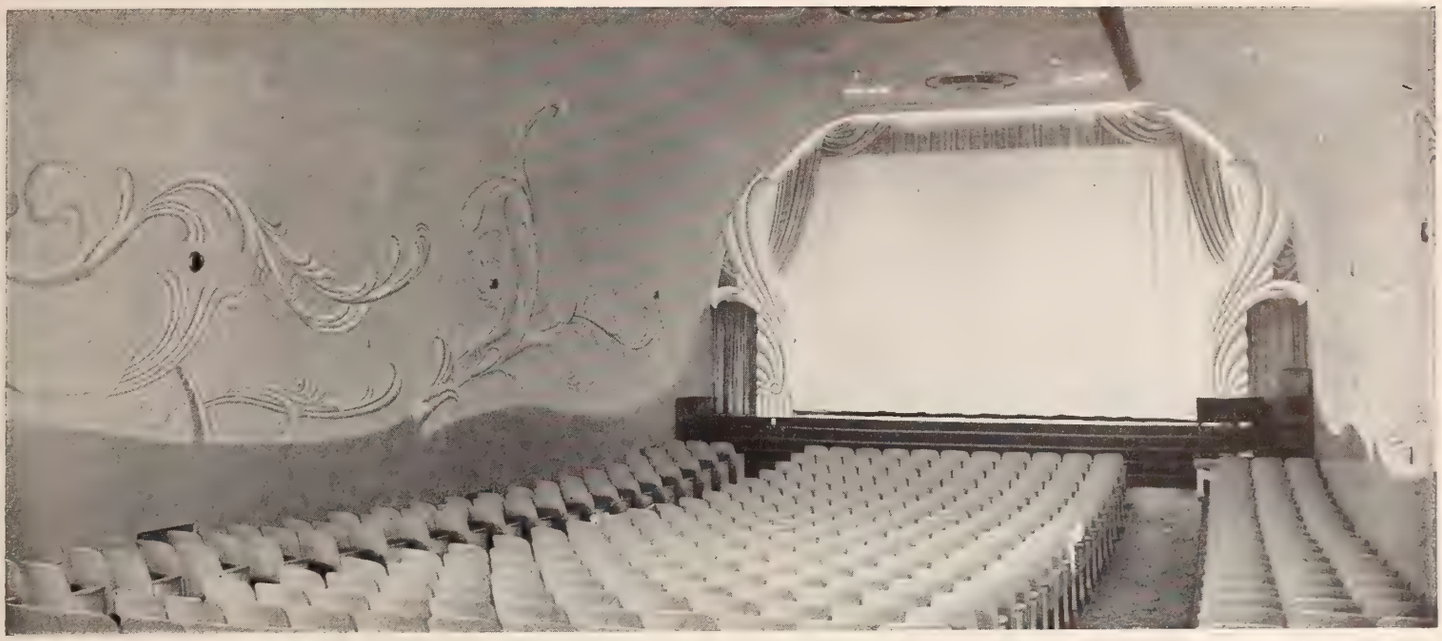
The Quonset 40 is insulated with Kimsul, a total of three inches of it between the exterior sheet metal and the interior finish. Interior and ceiling finish are provided by channel iron and metal lath, with limpit asbestos sprayed directly on the lath. The high wainscot and the ceiling panel, however, are not asbestos-treated. The result, says Melvin Glatz, is "as perfect an acoustical condition as we have in any of our theatres."

The interior finish does not follow the curve of the building all the way to the foundation line. An air space has been created at either side for the exhaust air return for the main portion of the theatre. Exhaust for the stadium portion is located at the rear, on either side of the projection room. Conditioned air is supplied through five ceiling outlets, at the rate of 33,000 cu. ft. per minute. Every seating space tested has been found to be well ventilated without draft.

The conventional proscenium is dispensed with in favor of a scroll treatment of the stage opening, ornamented with pastel lighting and filtered flood lights playing on a cream-and-gold curtain.



The floor slope of the main portion of the auditorium is considerably greater than usual, giving every seat in the theatre excellent vision. Toward the front of the theatre the slope is gently reversed. The floor is provided with drains and can be washed down for greater sanitation.



Design Features

Outstanding among the other unusual features of the Fox are the traffic provisions. Exit and entrance traffic do not conflict in the lobby; two exits are provided at either end of the cross aisle between the auditorium proper and the stadium. Patrons leaving by these exits have the full protection of the marquee, which extends around the sides and rear of the brick-trimmed front building.

The lobby, consequently, is small, and opens directly into a lounge area, richly carpeted, and with curving walls and passages reminiscent of the arched shape of the Quonset hut.

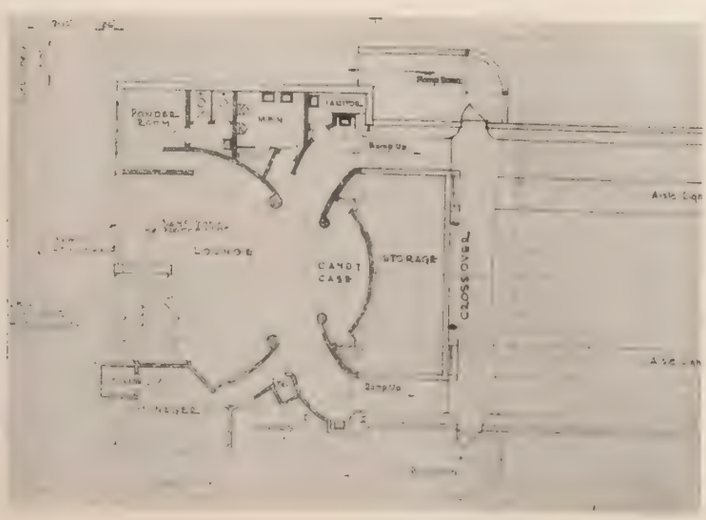
LEFT: The 40′ x 120′ Quonset Hut theatre, with brick-steel-and-concrete building for lobby and stadium area. ABOVE AND RIGHT: Interior appearance of Quonset Hut theatre, looking toward the screen, and toward the stadium area.

The manager's office (out of which the box-office opens) is at one side of the lounge, with glass windows facing both lounge and lobby, thus giving the manager complete control and vision over that entire area at all times.

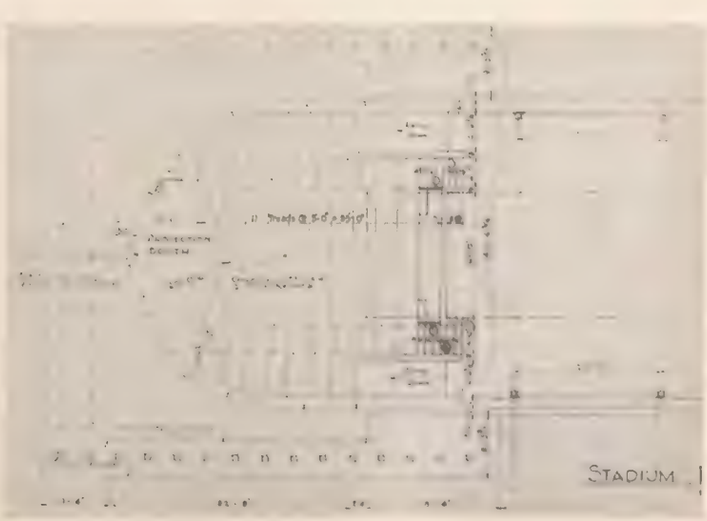
As entering patrons walk into theatre proper they must pass directly in front of a large and attractive candy case.

Decoration and Equipment

The curved motif of the Quonset hut is reproduced in the auditorium decoration in the ornamental scrolls that frame the screen opening, in the scroll-like murals of the side walls, in the flowing top line of the high wainscot, in the decorative treatment of the ceiling panel, and in the swirling pattern of the carpet.



Lounge decoration is tastefully modern, in off-white, wine and light blue.



Auditorium chairs are American Seating Company's Bodiform—528 located on the main floor and 145 in the stadium. Conditioning equipment is United States Air Conditioning Corporation's, with an automatic control system installed by Johnson Service Co., of Denver that makes both conditioning and heating substantially automatic, having push-button control in the manager's office. Germicidal lamps are concealed in the ventilating ducts.

Projection room apparatus is Simplex, installed by National Theatre Supply.

A parking lot with space for 75 cars directly adjoins the theatre. It is floodlighted at night, and will be landscaped.

Architect of the "theatre of tomorrow" was Charles D. Strong of Denver. (#1).

EQUIPMENT LITERATURE BUREAU

Listings for December 7, 1946

INFORMATION pertaining to theatre equipment and supplies of many kinds can be obtained by checking and mailing the single coupon printed below. SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW will gladly forward your requests for as many items of free literature as you may desire. There is absolutely no obligation. Information on items of equipment not listed here may be requested and we will endeavor to obtain for all theatremen the desired material. Readers who wish special information on any subject may address such requests to this Bureau, where they will receive prompt attention. We ask only that the name of the theatre as well as the street address be given on all blanks or letters.

AIR CONDITIONING. Varieties of conditioning equipment, ranging from simple blowers, coolers and air washers to complete "package" units that refrigerate, de-humidify and all but manufacture new air, cover an enormous range of mechanical devices and contrivances. Every theatre cannot use the same conditioning apparatus. Location, availability of cold well water, type of patronage and many other factors enter into the problem of intelligent selection and should be matched against the nature and capabilities of equipment available. A number of very different devices for securing desirable air conditioning are described briefly in a folder issued by United States Air Conditioning Corp. Compact and easily read, this folder will give any theatre manager an outline of methods and equipments, to help him choose those best suited to his own circumstances. (#1).

BLACKLIGHT ORNAMENTATION. Arresting designs for theatre decoration through the use of painted lucite panels and ultra-violet light are presented in a six-page folder by Gull Industries, Inc. Suggested designs range in style from medieval to ultra-modernistic, for application to ceilings as well as walls. Theatremen contemplating redecoration should find this little folder stimulating and suggestive, (#2).

CARPETS. A world of information about carpets, including the various weaves, and the differences between them, can be found in a thirty-four page, hard-cover brochure by Alexander Smith and Sons Carpet Company. Included are actual samples of Velvet, Wilton and Axminster weave—and with each, photographs enlarged 16 times to show the finer details of the surface, cross-section and back of these kinds of carpeting, side by side with a 3" x 5" sample of the carpet itself. The book is lavishly illustrated with attractive pictures of carpeting in many de luxe applications, including theatres; and with a series of photographs explaining some of the processes of carpet manufacture. (#3).

CHAIRS. Particularly of interest to the mechanically-minded, a twenty-four page brochure issued by American Seating Company presents illustrated descriptions of the dozens of detailed laboratory tests applied to steel, wood, upholstery fabrics and other materials that go into the making of a theatre chair, as well as tests applied to the finished chair itself. Methods of checking steel for hardness, ductility, strength and resiliency; methods of testing cast iron, of ascertaining the moisture content of plywood; method of checking the strength of glued plywood samples, the holding power of glue on solid wood samples, the resistance to rust of metal parts, the service expectancy of coil springs, rubber cushions and plastic coated fabrics, the perspiration fastness of dyes—these and many more are both pictured and explained. Technically inclined readers will find much of absorbing interest in these pages. (#4).

CHANGEOVER. Mechanical details of the newest Strong "Zipper" changeover are revealed in a folder by Essanay Manufacturing Company. Photographs showing the device assembled for use and partly disassembled disclose the nature and action of the component parts, which are further described in the accompanying text. This informative little brochure is accompanied by leaflets describing other Essanay products—the Reel End Signal and the Rewind Mule. Of interest to every projectionist, and to every manager who takes a serious interest in projection. (#5).

MARQUEE (CHANGEABLE) LETTERS. Most theatres derive a substantial portion of their revenue from mere transients—people who stroll past or near the theatre and decide to go in after they see what's playing. The changeable letters tell them. The letters must be eminently visible. They must be attractive. And immune to weather. You should read a full-color, staple-folder of Wagner Sign Service, Inc., which includes very complete and thoroughly illustrated descriptive material, mounting instructions, lighting instructions, and highly helpful suggestions for preparing attractive and informative "copy." Are you certain you are getting the utmost possible advertising value out of your own changeable letters? (#6).

MARQUEE (CHANGEABLE) LETTERS. Complete blue prints and instructions for installation and use of Adler silhouette letters and glass-in-frame attraction units are contained in a double envelope of literature published by Adler Silhouette Letter Company. Tributes from theatre users and architects are also included. Anyone concerned with marquee exploitation equipment will find interesting and valuable data in this attractively printed material. (#7).

SANITARY AGENT. The odorless deodorant, germ-killer and fungus killer, Fort-A-Cide, is discussed in detail in a four-page, two-color brochure by the Corporation of that name. This sanitary agent, having no odor at all of its own, does not reveal that the theatre has been disinfected, and therefore does not associate the theatre with the idea of disease in the minds of worried mothers. The brochure describes the disinfectant and two portable spray guns and tanks for applying it; and illustrates, with eleven photographs, its application to auditorium, rest room and plumbing surfaces. The exact dilution to be used in each case is prescribed, together with exact instructions for the mopping, spraying or "fog-misting" of different surfaces and areas. (#8).

SCREEN. A four-page, two-color brochure by Retiscope Screen Company pictures and describes the new Retiscope screen which (having a surface of woven glass fibre) is said to be as "washable as a window." This fibre glass sheet is laced into a specially designed steel frame having curved members which impart a vertical and lateral curvature to the surface that faces the audience. These curvatures, designed separately for each theatre, substantially eliminate distortion in the picture when viewed from a sharp angle, and thus make usable front corner areas of the auditorium. (#9).

VACUUM CLEANING. Effective cleaning of theatre screens, drapes, ornamental surfaces and stairways, and in-place vacuuming of theatre carpets, are illustrated and described in a four-page folder issued by National Super Service, Inc. The bulletin sets forth both methods of using the Super vacuum cleaner to maximum advantage, and technical details of the cleaner itself. Despite the fact that the unit develops a rated one-half horsepower, to move 113 cu. ft. of air per minute at a velocity of 2½ miles per minute, its combination of modern, light motor core materials and high-speed design keeps the weight of this half-horsepower mechanism down to 35½ pounds for motor, bag and cord. The tools also are light; the ten-foot extension tube, for example, weighs only 53 ounces. The Super cleaner is therefore readily portable (despite its power) which facilitates its use in the varied and versatile ways described. The bulletin should be of interest to anyone concerned with the practical problems of theatre housekeeping. (#10).

New 6-Phase Rectifier Gives Steadier Light

Steadier light for screen illumination will be available to theatres using a new 6-phase rectifier developed by McColpin-Christie Corporation of Los Angeles and marketed by National Theatre Supply.

The ripple content in the output of this arc supply device is said by the manufacturers to approach closely the low ripple level obtained from a motor-generator in perfect working order, and to be much lower than that of any other type of rectifier.

Essential feature of the new rectifier is a transformer wound to operate from standard 3-phase input and to deliver a 6-phase output to the rectifying stacks.

The stacks are magnesium-copper sulphide units with a rated maximum temperature of 265° F. They are protected against overheating by a slow-acting thermostat which will not produce nuisance interruptions because of any harmless momentary overload.

Associated with the rectifiers is a switching panel, mounted near the projectors, by means of which either rectifier can be temporarily used as an emergency substitute for the other, should that ever prove necessary.

Also associated with the rectifiers are two remote-control starting switches which are mounted near the projectors and make unnecessary the use of heavy-current switches at the lamphouses. (#2).

New 9-mm. Carbon Not Favored By National Carbon Company

Although they manufacture it, National Carbon Company do not favor the use of their new 9-mm. positive carbon for high intensity lamps normally using an 8-mm. x 7-mm. trim.

A 25 per cent increase in light can be obtained, National Carbon reports, by using a 9-mm. x 8 mm. trim, with 85 amperes at 50 volts, instead of the conventional trim at 65 amperes and 38 volts. Howerever, a special optical system is needed, and there is a 70 per cent increase in the heat energy released "for which present lamp equipment is unsuitable."

With existing optical systems, the light increase resulting from use of the new carbon is only 10 per cent, yet the current and voltage increase remain such that the existing rectifier or generator may be damaged.

National developed the new carbon in response to requests for a means of stepping up the light from existing lamps. The unfavorable results above referred to could not have been predicted, but were disclosed as a result of extensive experiments carried out by the company after the new carbon was produced. (#3).

For Cleaning Greasy Floors

Greasy floors can be more effectively cleaned with the help of a granular material announced by Blue Mountain Clay Company of Memphis, Tenn. Made of aluminum silicate, the substance is said to be able to absorb oil up to 120-140 per cent of its own weight. The product is dust-free, its makers say, and also is non-abrasive. (#4).

Modern Projection Room No Longer a "Booth" --Needs Color Scheme, Phone, Linoleum

The projection room has grown far beyond its ancient "booth" days, if the massed opinions of the Projection Advisory Council, as voiced at this month's meeting, are criterion.

A good show, according to today's standards, must be created in a well-lit, carefully painted room, with battleship linoleum on the floor, lockers and toilet facilities for personnel, glass in the viewing ports (but not in the projection ports) and telephone connection. The members appear thoroughly convinced that a carelessly arranged hole-in-the-wall is not a place from which good results can be expected.

As to the general layout of projection quarters, opinion was unanimous that this should follow the recommendations of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. Those recommendations may in fact need "minor adaptation to the individual theatre" one member noted, but another added "no changes that are basically different." From this there was no dissent. The Society has evidently produced projection room plans that have the full approval of the men who are the industry's leaders on the projection firing line.

Floors and Walls

Battleship linoleum was overwhelmingly favored as the floor covering for the projection room, with paint or asphalt tile as second choice. One member noted that in some locations the law does not permit use of linoleum, and considered this unfortunate.

"The floor should be covered by all means."

The meeting was in complete agreement on this.

"If a concrete floor is left uncovered, abrasive dust—fine particles of concrete—is worn off, and gets into the machinery, greatly increasing the wear on close-fitting parts. It is obviously cheaper to cover the floor."

With respect to painting the projection room walls, opinions varied as to the color scheme to use, but all felt it to be important, and most members had very specific color schemes which they preferred. In their choice, various shades of green predominated.

"Black base to a height of four feet, the remainder of the walls dark green, and lighter green for the ceiling. To eliminate light reflection."

"Olive green walls and white ceiling. This is restful to the eyes, and projectionists need to keep a close watch on the quality of their picture on the screen."

"We prefer combinations of light green, or green and gray."

"Apple green dado, cream-colored upper walls, white or off-white ceiling."

"Light green. It is easy to maintain."

"Any color scheme that will brighten up the room but not show dirt."

Lighting

Drop lights and indirect lighting ran a close tie, in Council preference, as means of lighting the projection room. All lighting arrangements favored by the members, however, had in common an absence of bright or dazzling light sources which might interfere with careful observation of the quality of the projected picture.

"We favor a drop light over each projector and one over the rewind bench, with a reel-type extension lamp between projectors for emergency servicing."

"Indirect lighting. But a light bulb and switch located handy to each projector with the light shining right into the projector to give better illumination for threading. Modern mechanisms have threading lamps, but we don't rely on them alone."

"Indirect ceiling fixtures for general lighting. Hanging fixture over the rewind bench for inspection. Reel lights or work lights for servicing."

"Indirect general lighting; drop light over each projector for threading and a reel lamp."

"Kitchen unit on center line of each lookout port 18 inches from front wall; wall bracket above rewind table; at least one reel light."

"Drop lights with funnel-shaped shades."

"Drop lights."

Glassing Ports

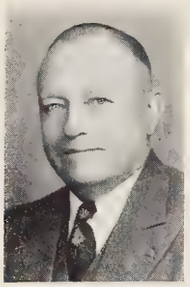
A majority of the members favor glassing in both projection and viewing ports in all their theatres. Others recommend glass in viewing but not in projection ports, except where some special local condition requires that projection ports be glassed also; one member prefers to use glass only if absolutely necessary because of some local condition.

"Some places must use glass to keep dust from a dirty house from getting on the projection lens, and some need it to keep noise from the audience. But if projectionists don't keep the glass clean, it is better to put up with the handicaps of having none," this member explained. "It is a case of choosing the lesser evil."

"We use optical glass in all projection ports, and glass all viewing ports."

"We glass all viewing ports, but projection ports only when some local condition requires it."

"Projection ports are glassed only when the noise troubles the audience."



Facilities

The Council voted almost three to one that toilet facilities in or near the projection room are an absolute necessity. A few members considered this feature

Harry J. Glenn

Few men have had as varied and thorough a background in practical theatre operation as Harry J. Glenn. For 21 years he was a projectionist. For fifteen years after that, a theatre manager. Now he is Supervisor of Maintenance for the William K. Jenkins theatres.

Glenn began his theatre experience as a projectionist in the days of hand-driven projectors, one to a "booth," when changeovers involved a blank screen and a lantern slide reading: "One Minute Please While the Operator Changes Reels." That was in 1907. Glenn remained a projectionist through all subsequent technical advances, until after the screen began to talk, in 1928. Then he became a theatre manager, and devoted himself exclusively to that phase of the industry until 1943. Since then, and to date, he has been Supervisor of Maintenance for William K. Jenkins' Georgia Theatre Company circuit, responsible for the physical well-being of some fifty-odd houses.

Glenn's hobbies are hunting, football and baseball. His tastes as a movie fan vary, but incline somewhat toward mysteries in preference to any other type of picture.

SMPE Meeting Hears A Nostalgic Resume Of Those "Good Old Days"

The trials and troubles of the early days of sound, and the "haywire" remedies sometimes used in dealing with them before reliable engineering practices came into use, were recalled at a meeting of the Atlantic Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers held November 19th in New York.

Declaring that future developments such as stereophonic sound, automatic volume control and television can be expected to bring similar operating difficulties with them when they come into the theatre, E. S. Seeley, chief engineer for Altec Service Corporation, regaled his hearers with a nostalgic review of early days and primitive procedures.

Talking of the first sound systems, back in 1927, Seeley said in part: "It immediately became evident that the new equipment had a perverse tendency to break down when the house was packed with expectant patrons. It was felt that the security of the future of sound pictures depended upon continued satisfactory operation, and consequently in the Spring of 1927 a service department was organized by Erpi."

Noiseless Recording

Recalling the first introduction of noiseless recording in 1930, Seeley noted:

"The improvement was dramatic. Reduction of recorded noise, however, revealed many noises produced by the reproducing system, noises which for the most part were not objectionable with the earlier recordings. The tremendous job fell upon the service forces to quiet reproducing systems so that the publicized marvels of the new recording might be brought to the ears of theatre patrons. A 'flying squadron' was formed from men brought in from all over the country and given a thorough training in a quickly improvised technique of eliminating clicks, microphonics, hisses, hums, etc. These men then scattered over the land and applied the new techniques. Erpi's expenditure for the training and the intensive field campaign was close to $100,000. Some of the stunts devised under pressure bordered on the fanciful, including hanging lead weights on vacuum tubes to reduce microphonics. But they served their immediate purpose.

"Soundly engineered improvements such as less microphonic tubes soon replaced the haywire and the systems were left with the improvements in permanent and substantial form.

Improved Volume

"A further shortcoming of the earlier systems lay in the somewhat deficient power capacity of the final amplifier. In cooperation with one of the largest tube manufacturers, a new tube was developed which increased the power capacity of a very large number of amplifiers from 1½ watts to about 8 watts. One of the features of the design was much longer life and greater reliability than were obtainable from commercial receiving tubes. These modifications were offered to those exhibitors who were not prepared to purchase new sound equipment, but care was exercised not to discourage exhibitors able to purchase new equipments from doing so.

Test Films

"It was inevitable that inspectors scattered throughout the country tended more and more to become individualists. Several hundred pairs of ears did not interpret sound quality in the same manner. The need was acutely felt for means of insuring that each equipment was maintained to the same standard. The solution was the calibrated multi-frequency test film and the transmission test. The test at once proved so effective in revealing sub-standard performance and leading to correction of long-standing troubles that it became clear that it must be placed in the hands of all inspectors.

"The transmission test became a standard part of sound service. The test was somewhat enlarged and today includes measurements of frequency response, system gain, amplifier gain, required net gain for full house operation, system overload point, amplifier impedance, speaker impedance and system noise. At regular intervals each inspector applies all of these tests to each system which he supervises.

"Historically, the introduction of the transmission test on a universal basis eliminated much of the individualism in service and provided organization-wide standard performance."

SMPE'S NOSTALGIC RESUME

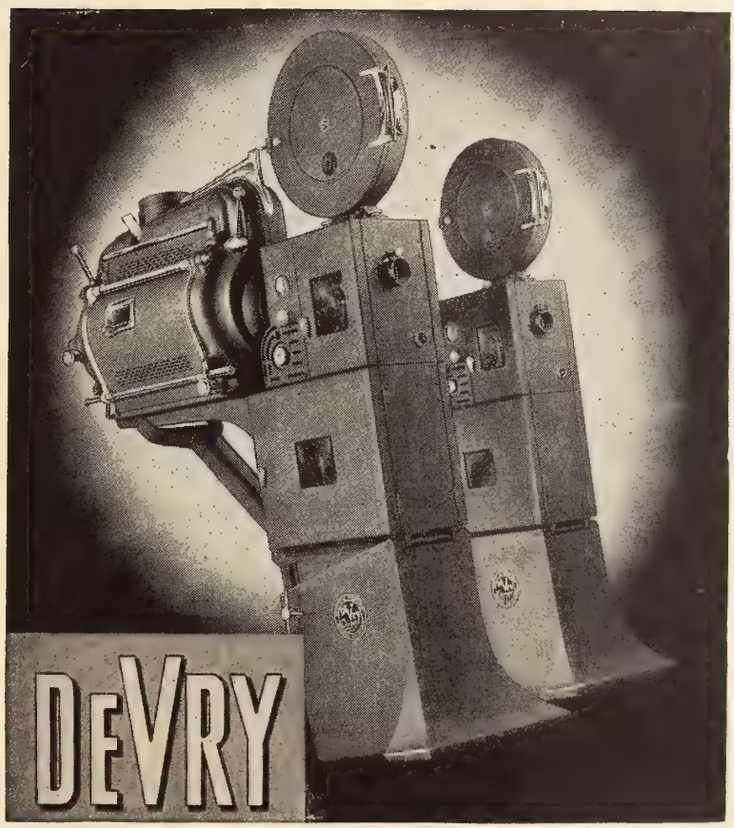
wide range sound, the development of test instruments which made possible a reduction of flutter, and the methods invented for making acoustic measurements in the theatre, Seeley continued:

"New theatre speaker systems, of which we have installed many in the past 12 months, ushered in the post war era in advancement of theatre sound quality. For service, this major improvement in speakers brought a new challenge to raise the standards of performance of the rest of the system. Hums previously inaudible were now disturbing due to the extended low frequency range of the new speakers. The improved sound presence necessitated closer attention to balance between machines, and the better overall characteristic of the speakers made worthwhile the most careful selection of the best system response for individual auditorium conditions.

The Future

"Let us try to see what the crystal ball shows. The most reliable crystal ball in this case is a mirror which shows the future as an extension of the past. The pattern will not change radically and step by step improvements will continue to reach the motion picture theatre. These improvements will result in greater complexity in the technical sense than those of the past. The training of service inspectors will be as important as it has been in the past to provide them with the necessary knowledge to adapt the improvements to the individual theatre, and new tools and test equipment will be required to insure that all theatres are always operating at their peak of performance.



"History tells us that voluminous technical information must be prepared and distributed to the field men, and that new standards of performance will be established for uniform maintenance to preserve the advancement." (#5).

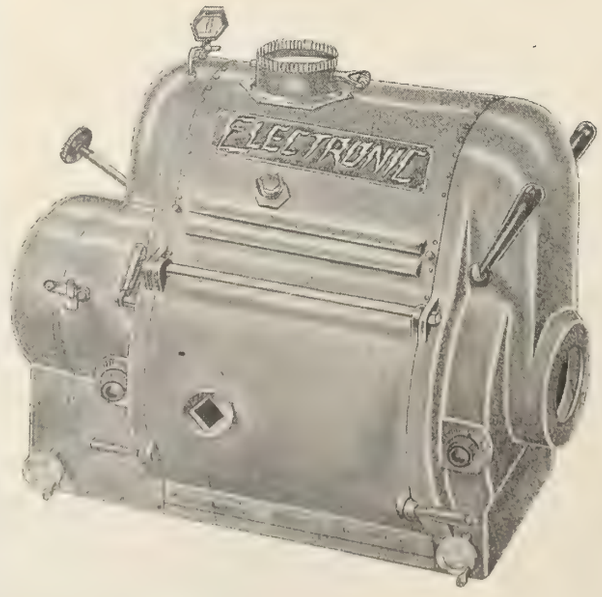
on Standards. If he reads carefully through Vol. 39 of the JOURNAL he will find out that he ought to install a voltage regulator if line variations exceed ± 3 per cent. Vol. 36 will tell him that his screen width should equal one-sixth the distance from the screen to the rear seats, and so on.

But probabilities are that he does not have a file of the JOURNAL, and that if he did he could not find what he wanted when he needed to find it.

Yet, he is the man whose decisions are final. He signs the checks. He and no one else, in the great majority of theatres, determines what shall be done and what left undone.



Getting Better Projection

This brings me to the practical suggestion I would like to place respectfully before you for your consideration. Can the Society arrange to segregate and collect those items of information appearing throughout the JOURNAL which would be of direct help to the exhibitor and to publish them in a form which the average exhibitor could use as a small reference encyclopedia to his projection problems?

You have compiled technical data about projection that is of the utmost practical value. The highest kind of skill and competence and an immense amount of labor have gone into building up this body of technical knowledge.

I can think of no one single aid to good projection that would be more helpful than to put this mass of expert information into the hands of the exhibitor in a form in which he can make effective use of it. (#7).

MODERN PROJECTION ROOM

"highly desirable"; no one voted it "somewhat desirable" or "unimportant."

"The theatre pays men to be in the projection room, but by failing to provide a toilet gives them an unanswerable excuse for not being there," was the way one Councilor put it.

Locker facilities were favored by very nearly as strong a majority.

The majority also thinks that the theatre should provide working tools, rather than expect projectionists to bring their own, but on this point there was considerable difference as to the kind of tools that should be supplied.

"Operating tools, yes — the theatre should furnish them. But not tools for making repairs. Repairs should be made by experts. The average projectionist is not an expert repairman, and is likely to do more harm than good."

"Only oil cans, pliers and screw drivers are furnished. Most maintenance is not done by projectionists."

"Certain tools are supplied."

A minority of the members believe it is better to let the projectionist crew bring their own tools.

"They won't lend them away, and so will always have them on hand when they are needed. And they will keep them in good condition."

"We expect projectionists to provide their own hand tools, but the theatre supplies motor-driven grindstones, small vacuum cleaners and blowers for cleaning, and some other items. Portable sound testing equipment is not supplied—such equipment is handled by sound service inspectors."

Telephone connection for communication between projection crew and manager is "absolutely necessary." This opinion is unanimous. A buzzer cannot take the place of the telephone.

"Too many kinds of instructions or information may have to be given, and every possible excuse for the projectionist to leave his post should be eliminated."

"The only way a buzzer could take the place of a telephone would be if the manager and projectionists all learned Morse code!" (#8).

Permanent Flameproofing Provided By New Agent

Permanent flameproofing which will last for years and resist repeated dry cleaning is provided by a new material, called Chex-Flame, according an announcement by National Theatre Supply, which will distribute the compound for theatre use. The manufacturer is Royal Chemical Company of New York.

Application is effected simply by spraying the fabric with a standard type sprayer or a vacuum cleaner attachment.

Among advantages claimed for Chex-Flame are that it is odorless, colorless, stainless and harmless to fabrics. (#15).

Concrete-Floor Asphalt Paint Available Now

OFFERS COMPLETE THEATRE SERVICE

Offering complete architectural, remodeling and engineering service a new theatre supply company has been opened in New York by Karl ("Pete") Streuber, with headquarters at 1140 Broadway.

Streuber is well known in theatre equipment and supply circles, in which he has been active for many years. He was formerly manager of the Theatre and Sound Equipment Department of RCA International Division, and before that Export Manager for National Theatre Supply.

Associated with Streuber is August F.

Karl ("Pete") Streuber

Schmiedigen, European theatre architect who built the Rumanian exhibit at the World's Fair and is currently industrial design consultant to Pepsi-Cola and other large American corporations.

The new supply house, known as K. Streuber, will handle Blue Seal Superior projectors; Streuber sound systems; Retiscope and Raven screens, Forest arc lamps and rectifiers, and Neumade projection accessories, among other items. The new company will serve both the domestic and export fields. (#18).

Abbott Theatre Supply Company has installed Strong lamps in the Verdi Theatre, Chicago.

Mr. Bill Gust, theatre owner of St. Thomas, N. D., recently purchased "GI" projection equipment.

Varsity Theatre at Davis, Calif., has reseated with International chairs supplied by Walter G. Preddy of San Francisco.

The Grand Theatre, Oxford, Nebraska, is now enjoying DeVry projection with equipment furnished by Carl White of the Quality Theatre Supply Co., Omaha, Nebraska.

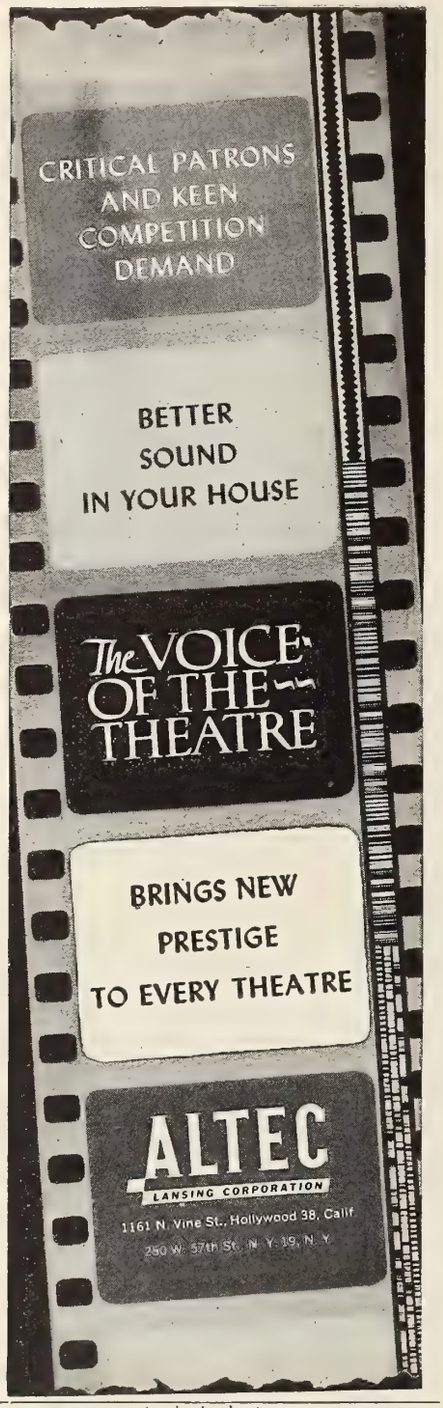
Maury Schwarz's Rex Theatre, Kearny Street, San Francisco, is installing a new marquee.

NEW COLOR FILM

Improved 16 mm. color quality will result from use of a new negative just put on the market, Eastman Kodak Company announces. It has been designated as Kodachrome Commercial Film.

Unlike previous types of Kodachrome, which were designed for projection of the original, the new film is strictly a negative from which release prints are made. Greater control of highlights and shadows is thus obtained (#19).

Ralph West is now managing the Sound Department at Sun Radio & Electronics Co., Inc., 122-124 Duane St., N. Y. Under West's direction, a sound studio has been constructed for display and demonstration of sound equipment, microphones, record changers, and inter-communication systems. (#20).



STRONG ISSUES BEAUTIFUL, IMPRESSIVE "FILM ALBUM"

Impressively bound in multi-colored Scotch plaid pattern, the latest contribution of Strong Electric Corporation to the literature of this industry is currently in the mails to all exhibitors, with the Strong Corporation's compliments, to be included in their library of books on the theatre. It is titled the "Film Family Album" and simulates in appearance old-time family albums of photographs.

The album presents pictorial likenesses and brief biographies of theatre notables, from Shakespeare to Al Jolson. Scientific pioneers whose work contributed importantly to projection and sound techniques are also included.

The page size is 10" x 13". The entire book is a triumph of the printing and binding arts; a beautiful product. Those who receive it will be proud to have it on their shelves. (#21).

POPCORN SALES IMPORTANT

"A clean machine is paramount in operating importance."

The majority of the members also feel that the working parts of a popcorn machine should be inspected daily; a very small minority only considering that weekly inspection is sufficient.

Many members believe that completely adequate servicing cannot be entrusted to theatre personnel, but that special servicing help is needed.

"The theatre's personnel can of course keep all moving parts cleaned, properly oiled and greased, and can watch for conditions that may lead to breakdowns. But actual repair and servicing should be done by an outsider."

"If the theatre is not close to the company supplying the machine, it is desirable to make contact with someone who can ably service it."

"The manufacturer's representative should make regular service calls at stated intervals, at least once a month."

Other maintenance suggestions were:

"Put the machine on a separate electric circuit. Provide proper ventilation and exhaust."

"Yes, all machines should be mechanically ventilated to reduce odors."

"Use a wire buffer to keep the inside of the kettle clean; Bon Ami for the outside, paper towels for wiping away grease and salt. Keep on hand an extra motor, and an extra kettle with its male and female electrical connections."

"Provide a room or space where kettles can be properly washed, and adjacent storage space for current popcorn supplies."

"The theatre should keep on hand spare heating elements, fuses, special light bulbs, steel wool, small tool kit, oil cans and proper cleaning powder."

"Keep a sufficient supply of spare parts to provide for emergency repairs." (#22).

Manley Popcorn Expands Its Western Activities

Manley-Burch Popcorn Company have transferred their Western headquarters from Denver to Los Angeles, with W. H. Turpie, Western Division Manager, setting up offices in the coast city. Turpie is in charge of all activities west of Kansas.

Users of Manley Products, Turpie announced, include Jerry Gallagher's El Cajon Theatre in El Cajon, rated one of Southern California's most modern houses; Phil Isley's Meralta in Culver City; Metzger and Srere's Cabrillo in San Diego; B. J. Leavitt's El Miro, Santa Monica; the Walker chain's Walker in Santa Ana; Dietrich & Feldstein's Azteca, San Bernardino; Kurstine's Boulevard, Los Angeles; and the remodeled Center in Los Angeles, which is setting up a confectionary adjoining the theatre with a Manley Popcorn machine among its principle features.

Reporting directly to Turpie as Southern California representative is A. L. Sellinghausen. San Francisco representative is H. L. Rice; Seattle district manager is H. W. Harris with Bob Woock as salesman. Jess Heard represents the company in Montana, Idaho and Utah. Arlie Beery remains Denver district manager with his brother Dwight as salesman. (#23).

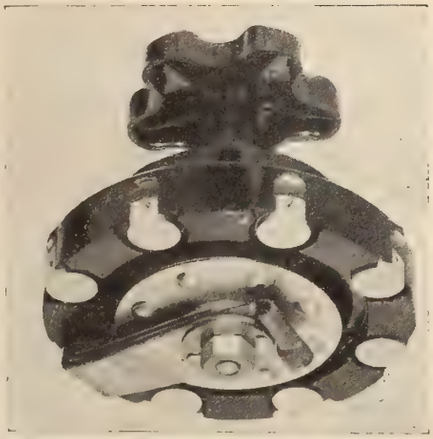
Is YOUR House Safe?



Tallulah, La., Nov. 12—The Roxy Theatre was completely destroyed by fire when sparks from trash the janitor was burning blew into the building. C. G. Griffin, manager, stated that with building materials as scarce as they are now he could not possibly say when the theatre would be rebuilt.

Fairhaven, Mass., Nov. 13—A $200,000 fire destroyed the Keith Theatre building. No one was injured. The blaze, which originated in the boiler room of the theatre, spread to three stores and a bowling alley, and for a time appeared to threaten the whole of the adjacent business center.

Virginia City, Nov. 14.—Fire swept the Virginia City Theatre, ruining motion picture equipment, curtain, seats and screen. Explosion of an oil furnace is thought to be the cause.

Gastonia, N. C., Nov. 15.—Flames totally destroyed the Lyric Theatre and resulted in considerable damage to two adjacent buildings. The fire, according to Fire Chief George F. McLaughen, started from a short circuit. (#24).

New Switch

RELIABLE voltage compensator switch, new feature of Strong Rectifiers, features heavy brass contacts moulded integrally into char-proof bakelite plastic. The switch enables the projectionist to select any one of eight different connections to the input side of the rectifier's power transformer, thus compensating for changes which occur from time to time in the voltage supplied by the power company. In three-phase units, three of these switches, ganged along one shaft and all operated simultaneously by the same knob, permit readjustment for voltage changes in the three-phase line. Unusually heavy construction and use of char-proof bakelite substantially banish any possibility of switch trouble. (#25).

RIGHT OR WRONG?

(See Page E-18)

The photo at the right is wrong for it violates the Underwriters' Code and defeats the basic purpose of the door's installation. When a projection room fire door is left open the hazard exists that a flash fire may spread into an audience full of people. The few seconds necessary for a projectionist to close the door may be just the amount of time the fire needs to flash out among the audience. (#26).

A Monthly Feature Dealing with the Booking and Exploiting of Short Subjects

Shorts Shopping

Some Comments on Exhibitor Opposition to Increases in Rentals of Short Subjects

According to a news story appearing in SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW recently (Nov. 9, p. 5) exhibitors have resisted "a steady push on the part of exchanges in many areas to raise short subject rentals from the price levels which have obtained for the past decade." The story goes on to say that the average raise appeared to be about 25 per cent, with film buyers in the Chicago area reporting they had been asked 50 per cent more for some shorts over past rentals.

That the increases are meeting with exhibitor resistance in most cases may be attributed to a number of causes. One of them is the fact that over the years short subjects have been considered mere fillers, the "step-children" of the industry, as it were. Some distributors and not a few exhibitors have been more or less equally guilty of relegating the short subject to the "filler" class. For a long time many a short has been booked as just something to fill so many minutes of running time. True, there has been effort on the part of some producers and distributors to improve the quality of shorts and to get exhibitors to publicize them. But whereas this has been tried and proved successful in some localities, little has been done in others, principally because of double-feature policies.

The whole problem boils down to a matter of one side (distributors and exhibitors) realizing the value of good short subjects and using ways and means of exploiting them, while another side (also distributors and exhibitors) continues to regard them as "fillers" and books and plays them to fill out program running time. In other words, there is a conflict, with little chance of settlement until the "step-children" idea of the past several years is completely erased. That will take time. And it will require more attention to the quality of shorts, as well as greater effort on the part of exhibitors to get the most out of them through exploitation. When shorts actually prove to be business builders to the majority of exhibitors, the resistance to rental increases is more likely to level off.

Congratulations are in order for Besa Short upon her appointment to handle junior feature promotion for the MGM studio in Culver City. More than anyone else we know, Besa worked diligently for many years to exploit short subjects as head of Interstate Circuit's short subject department. Those years of experience fit her admirably for her new assignment, and we wish her the best of luck.

Meanwhile, back at Interstate, Debbs Rey-

Musicolor Reels Seen Providing Good Music as Entertainment for the Masses

Something new and welcome has been added to the field of short subjects in the Musicolor series distributed by United Artists and produced by Werner Janssen, conductor of the Janssen 90-piece Symphony Orchestra of Los Angeles. The "new" is not necessarily in terms of time but in terms of subject matter. And Janssen's "new" accomplishment in the production of a series of short subjects that brings outstanding examples of the world's great music to the vast audience of moviegoers by combining with the music scenes that typify it, undoubtedly will develop among such audiences a deeper appreciation of classical music and at the same time provide exceptional entertainment.

First to be released in the series of eight which have already been completed, is Johann Sebastian Bach's Toccata and Fugue which Bach wrote for the organ and which was transcribed for orchestra by Lucien Caillett of the Philadelphia Orchestra. As presented in the 9-minute Cinecolor short the music is played with the visual accompaniment of scenes photographed by cameramen and Associate Producer Alan Stensvold during four seasons of the year in Bryce Canyon, Utah. This location was selected, according to Janssen, ". . . because of its majestic, wonderful formations . . . the figurines, the countless awesome, natural carvings . . . which form a fitting background for Bach's deeply religious music. . . ."

Toccata and Fugue is the only one of the eight to have been made available by United Artists as yet, due to difficulty in obtaining prints of the others from strike-bound laboratories. Toccata has been booked by the Wilby and Kincey Circuit, Great States Theatres, Interstate Theatres, the four Music Halls in Los Angeles, Intermountain Theatres and many other prominent chains of theatres throughout the country which have recognized not only the short subject's excellence as entertainment, but also its exploitation possibilities.

As an example of the exploitation values inherent in each of the shorts, Toccata and Fugue was given the same kind of world premiere treatment at Salt Lake City usually accorded top feature productions. Mr. Janssen made a personal appearance there, visited schools and record stores, was the guest of honor at a combined luncheon of the Salt Lake City Advertising Club and the Chamber of Commerce, was heard on several radio broadcasts and appeared on the stage of Intermountain's Center Theatre on the evening of the short's world premiere.

Stensvold preceded the maestro's appearance in Salt Lake City and beat the drums for the short by appearing as a guest photography expert at high schools, camera clubs, etc. Both Janssen's and Stensvold's appearances at various functions were widely reported by the city's press and radio.

According to Stensvold, it is the intention of Janssen to give the same type of world premiere ballyhoo to each of the shorts in the series, with plans already set for Boston, Washington and Cleveland at the premieres of Debussy's Engulfed Cathedral, Liadov's Enchanted Lake, and Debussy's Claire de Lune, respectively. No dates have yet been decided upon due to the shortage of Cinecolor prints.

Besides Bach's Toccata and Fugue, other completed shorts in the Musicolor series include: Liadov's Enchanted Lake, Sibelius' Swan of Tunanela, Debussy's Claire de Lune, Ravel's Bolero, Liszt's Liebestraum, Mendelssohn's Fingal's Cave (Hebrides Overture) and Rameau's The Hen. Several others are in the planning and writing stages, and filming and recording will continue as scripts are completed.

Bugs Football Mascot

Bugs Bunny, the Warner Bros. cartoon character, has been named official mascot of the University of Kentucky football team.

The honor was conferred on Bugs after a real live rabbit wandered on the gridiron during a game recently and proved a lucky omen for the Kentucky team.

Besa Short Handling MGM Shorts Promotion

Appointment of Besa Short to handle junior feature promotion on the MGM studio publicity staff has been announced by Howard Dietz.

During her 12-year tenure as head of Interstate Theatres' short subjects department, Mrs. Short serviced 5,000 houses representing 22 circuit affiliates. She also has participated in MGM Sales Forums in various parts of the country.

Last year Hollywood shorts producers presented Mrs. Short with a silver plaque in recognition of her outstanding exploitation campaigns.

Americana Series on Warner Shorts Schedule

As a result of the public reception of "America the Beautiful," two-reel Technicolor subject, the Warner Bros. studio has set a series of six shorts highlighting historic American landmarks.

The first of the new group, "Cradle of the Republic," covering the New England States, is now under way. The second two-reeler, taking in southeastern states, will start in January, with the others to follow. Carl Dudley is directing the series.

THE SHOW BUILDER

Edwards Exploits Safety Short

J. D. Edwards, Williamsport, Pa., whose fine campaign on Warners' "Men of Tomorrow" was reported in this department last month (STR, November 2, p. 39), has come through with another excellent bit of showmanship in connection with the showing of MGM's "Traffic With the Devil" at the Park Theatre.

City and county officials, police authorities and representatives of civic organizations attended a special preview of the subject, after which a newspaper photographer took a picture of a wrecked car displayed in front of the theatre, with the officials standing around it. The screening and the picture of the officials grabbed considerable newspaper space.

Then, as a macabre reminder to the public, Edwards had a boy who was dressed as a skeleton, walk slowly down the busy streets during the rush hours and around the square in the center of the city. The square serves as the city bus terminal, since all buses meet there every 15 minutes.

Bugs Bunny Subject of Window-Soaping Contest

Well, it's all over now, and Halloween won't be back again for nearly another year. But the interest it aroused won't be forgotten by the youngsters of Aberdeen and Hoquiam, Wash., for a long, long time. And the publicity. . . .

It appears that the Warner theatres in those cities arranged a stunt with local merchants whereby children were eligible to compete in a window-soaping contest on Halloween. Boys or girls under 16 years of age were eligible to compete and were assigned to certain windows of the participating stores. Each contestant was required to draw, with soap, a likeness of Bugs Bunny, Warner cartoon star. Newspapers in both communities carried ads announcing the contest, including a likeness of Bugs Bunny which the children were to copy. Several news stories also appeared, some on front pages.

Approval of the stunt was expressed by Aberdeen's Police Chief A. M. Gallagher, who said: "I believe that it is a definite step in the right direction to have some organized Halloween activity of this type to afford the children of Aberdeen an outlet for hilarious fun on a night when good, clean fun should be in order."

How about taking this "definite step in the right direction" in your own community next Halloween? Better make a note of it now.

Signed for Featurettes

Desi Arnaz, his vocalists Jane Harvey and Dulcina, and his band have been signed by Universal-International to make a two-reel featurette. Production will start in January, with Will Cowan as associate producer. The studio has also signed Charlie Barnet and his orchestra for a similar chore.

nolds and Loia Cheaney are keeping the "sell short subjects" lights burning brightly. A recent selling innovation, reported elsewhere in this section, is the use of cartoon character cutouts on theatre marquees. These cutouts, it should be borne in mind, are not suspended or placed atop the marquee, but are affixed to the illuminated panels on the sides, with the marquee letters placed next to them. As a result, Bugs Bunny, Donald Duck, Tom and Jerry, Popeye and other cartoon characters are effectively publicized.

Cartoon Show Fills 2 Small Town Theatres

A. E. Miller, president and general manager of Lincolnton Amusement Co., Lincolnton, N. C., reports one of his most successful promotions in years was a recent Bugs Bunny Cartoon Show, a Saturday morning matinee sponsored by Rose's 5 & 10 Cent Store, which brought out so many kids that two theatres, the Rivoli and Century, had to be used to accommodate them.

The store contributed the prizes, including a pedigreed cocker spaniel puppy, a football, a basketball and other gifts awarded to fortunate youngsters. It also paid for half the newspaper advertising, which included half-page ads, and distributed 4,000 circulars throughout the county. Though the population of Lincolnton is only 4,500, some 1,800 youngsters attended the special show, which started at 8:20 a.m., and most of them came back later to see the regular picture.

WB Shorts Releases Curtailed By Strike

Due to the coast strike which has made it impossible to obtain delivery of Technicolor prints for the past several weeks, the Warner Bros. short subject release schedule for December will be cut approximately in half, with only four black-and-white subjects being available to all exchanges. A fifth picture, "The Last Bomb," two-reeler in Technicolor, also will be distributed by a few exchanges which had received prints before the stoppage.

Other shorts being released in December are "So You Want to Save Your Hair" and "So You Think You're a Nervous Wreck," Joe McDoakes comedies; "Alice in Movieland," Classic of the Screen featurette, and "Melody of Youth," a band subject.

Meanwhile, at the studio, Carl Dudley has completed direction of "Broadway to the Battery," a one-reel subject showing New York's outstanding landmarks.

Jolley, Gloriod Promote Warner Scout Subject

Exploitation activities in connection with the two-reel Warner subject on Boy Scouts, "Men of Tomorrow," continue to be reported from the field, proving that a large number of exhibitors are fully cognizant of the selling values of the subject.

Up in Toronto, Canada, Mel Jolley, manager of the Marks Theatre, got a lot of press coverage which included ample space in the Scout column of the local daily newspaper. Also, Mel persuaded the Commissioner of Scouts for the Oshawa district to bulletin a letter to all Scouts in the area, urging them to call the film to the attention of Troops and Packs. A broadside and press sheet were spotted on the bulletin board at Scout Headquarters.

And out in Caruthersville, Mo., Manager F. P. Gloriod of the Gem Theatre went for window and lobby displays in his promotion on the subject. Furthermore, he received newspaper publicity.

The two window displays consisted of exhibits of Scout paraphernalia, augmented by center-of-display posters on "Men of Tomorrow." And they weren't just corner sections, either, but full windows.

A "practice string" display in the lobby attracted considerable attention. Several types of knots were affixed to the display, as well as strands of string which patrons utilized in attempting to duplicate the knots. In advance of the subject's showing, the display was in the lobby; when the playdate arrived, it was moved out front.

The Chamber of Commerce, in its newspaper column, took place to state the following: "Since the Chamber of Commerce is an agency for the development of the city in every respect, we would like to call the attention of the public to the efforts being put forth in the Boy Scout program, particularly in regards to window displays in the Globe Clothing Store and Ark-Mo Power Corporation office. These displays are in collaboration with Manager F. P. Gloriod of the Gem Theatre in the showing of a Warner Bros. production, 'Men of Tomorrow'."

Reports Gloriod: "The campaign helped build lots of goodwill, and even though we had a rainstorm the first day, we did a nice business. I really believe the short drew as many as the features on the program."

Finish Kennedy Comedy

"Do Or Diet," RKO two-reel comedy featuring Edgar (Slow Burn) Kennedy, has been completed, with George Bilson producing and Hal Yates directing. Supporting cast includes Florence Lake, Jack Rice Dot Farley, Jason Robards, Dick Wessel and Bryant Washburn.

Cartoon Star on Marquee

Something new in marquee signs, as far as short subjects are concerned, has been originated by Debbs Reynolds of Interstate Circuit's short subjects department, the better to utilize this space and to advertise the one- and two-reelers.

For example, when the Bugs Bunny cartoon, "The Big Snooze," played at the Majestic Theatre in Dallas, a character cutout of Bugs was affixed to the marquee alongside this copy: "Terrific Cartoon—'Big Snooze'." Incidentally, "The Big Snooze" played with a Warner feature, "The Big Sleep."

This may well be the beginning of other cartoon character cutouts being used on marquees, just as star head cutouts have so often been displayed in this manner.

THE SHOW BUILDER

Universal Holds Premiere At Home of Short's Star

Following the premise that world premieres should be held in places where there is a logical local tieup, Universal recently held the world premiere of its short subject, "Hobo Hound," in Glen Cove, Long Island, home of "Butch," the 250-pound St. Bernard dog who stars in the film.

The opening, held at the Cove Theatre, received as much promotion as the premiere of a feature film, with Manager Max Cooper turning out the town to pay tribute to "Hobo Hound." "Butch" was formally presented from the stage by Don Goddard, WMCA radio news commentator. Among those participating in the ceremonies were Mayor Arthur Aitkenhead of Glen Cove and Eric Krabel, editor of the Glen Cove Echo.

In addition to special advertising taken by local merchants in the Echo to welcome "Hobo Hound," the actual premiere received a front-page break in the New York World-Telegram and other newspapers.

Parade in San Antonio For 'The Last Bomb'

Jack Chalman and Lynn Kruger of Interstate Circuit put on a flash Southwest Premiere for "The Last Bomb," Technicolor featurette produced by Warner Bros. with the cooperation of the Army Air Forces, at the Majestic Theatre, San Antonio. The short was headlined by film reviewers above the feature—a Van Johnson picture.

Contingents from three air fields—Randolph, Kelly and Brooks—paraded through downtown San Antonio to the Majestic, with the entire street blocked off by city police and a detachment of M.P.s. A display of equipment, including searchlights which could be seen 25 miles away, was set up in front of the theatre, and there was a demonstration of radar and other devices.

A broadcast over KABC, 50,000-watter, preceded the performance. Speakers included Lieutenant-Colonel Bill Hensley, newly elected District Attorney.

Radio campaign on the picture was amplified to include 15 spots daily over all stations for four days in advance of the opening and during most of the week's run.

Four publications issued by the three air fields also plugged "The Last Bomb" extensively.

'Peeves' at Starting Line

Ready for production at MGM is "Pet Peeves," new Pete Smith Specialty which deals with persons, objects and situations which have become the pet peeves of many people. Dave O'Brien directs. Another Smith Specialty, "Playing by Ear," which tells of the accomplishments of the blind, is scheduled for release early this month.

Vennett Holds Screening

Frank A. Vennett, manager of the Paramount, Rutland, Vt., publicized "Highway Mania," RKO This Is America short, with the cooperation of the State Motor Vehicle Patrol, City Police and Boys' Bicycle Patrol, all of whom were invited to a special screening.

SHORT SUBJECT REVIEWS

The American Cop (Good)

20th-Fox March of Time 18 mins.

That crime has been on the upbeat since the end of the war is a well known fact. Public attention undoubtedly has been focused on law enforcement agencies throughout the land, and it seems only natural that the March of Time should offer a brief spotlighting of the American cop and his duties. Using members of the New York City police force for re-enactment purposes, the camera details the petty routines, including walking the beat, participating in childbirth, questioning suspects, of the average guardian of the law. An all-too-obviously staged manhunt sequence, taken from police files, climaxes the short.

Beauty For Sale (Interesting)

RKO (73,101) This Is America 18 mins.

Centering on the activities of a typical photographer's model, this film goes behind the scenes of the advertising industry to show just what ingredients go to make up an advertisement with selling power. Intriguing shots of model agencies, illustrators' studios, and dozens of beautiful girls prove that models have to work harder for a living than most people suspect. Included is the Cinderella story of how Korky Kelly, Toledo school-girl, became one of the most-photographed models in America. Loaded with girls and glamor, this short will interest any audience.

SELLS THE PROGRAM. When Cartoon characters are used to sell a feature, that's news! Reproduced here is an ad run by Fox West Coast Theatres in Los Angeles newspapers, in which MGM Cartoon stars Tom and Jerry are used as dominant art work in publicizing a program headed by MGM's "Courage of Lassie."

Operation Underground (Good)

Telenews Prods. 18 mins.

Produced by Telenews Productions with the assistance of the editors of Newsweek magazine, this subject is claimed to be the only authentic record of the French resistance movement's activities during the German occupation. It shows how one of several underground organizations smuggled three American airman out of France. An "underground" camera defies Gestapo authorities by filming the Americans on a "tour" of Paris, after which they are helped by cleverly forged passports and other necessary documents to make their escape. Two of the three men are later interviewed in America by Fred Vanderschmidt, Newsweek's managing editor, who poses questions regarding their remarkable exploits. The subject, although well done, is somewhat dated in view of the fact that the war has ben over for quite some time now, and it is for this very reason that "Operation Underground" is not likely to arouse too much enthusiasm.

Loco Lobo (Cute)

Col. (8501) Color Rhapsody 6 mins.

Add one wolf, one rabbit, and a continuous chase, mix with a few gags and lenty of mayhem, serve it up in Technicolor, and you have "Loco Lobo." It has been done many times before, but few audiences will object to this current variation on a favorite cartoon theme.

Slappily Married (Nonsense)

Col. (8433) All-Star Comedy 16½ mins.

Joe De Rita, afraid of Friday the 13th, remains at home to cook breakfast for his wife. In Joe's muddling hands everything goes wrong, so his wife sends him down to his store, where again Joe manages to wreck the place, ending up in the arms of another man's fiance just as his own wife discovers him. In a huff, she moves to a woman's hotel, but Joe follows her. Forced to impersonate a woman to gain entrance, Joe runs a merry chase before things end well.

Rhapsody Rabbit (Very Good)

WB (2725) Bugs Bunny Special 7 mins.

The irrepressible Bugs turns up this time as a concert pianist giving a recital of Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody. All goes well until a mouse appears to plague him. Then the fun begins, as the mouse adds his own interpretation which sounds like boogie-woogie. Bugs resorts to dynamite and finally thinks he has destroyed the intruder, but as he reaches the finale of the piece, the mouse reappears at his own piano to steal the spotlight and the applause. A clever and winning Technicolor cartoon.

STUDIO ROUNDUP

Normal Operation Gradually Returning to Studios As CSU Strike Simmers Down to Token Picket Lines; MGM, RKO and Warners in Lead as the Busiest Lots

With the Conference of Studio Unions strike down to a point where mere token lines are established at the studios and the difficulties engendered by the striking CSU ironed out for the most part, the studios are gradually resuming their old activity. They are beginning to look like themselves once more. Every lot is busy, but MGM, RKO and Warners are in the lead for numbers of pictures before the cameras.

Five Shooting at RKO

RKO Radio has five films rolling, including "Build My Gallows High," which has been retitled "Out of the Past." Robert Mitchum, Jane Greer and other members of the company worked on location last week for lake sequences. Also on location, until the film is completed, is the Hakim-Litvak production, "The Long Night," which is being released through RKO. Shooting at the Pathe lot in Culver City is Robert Riskin's "Magic Town," another independent setup, starring James Stewart, Jane Wyman, Wallace Ford and Ned Sparks. Going at the regular RKO lot are "Seven Keys to Baldpate" and "Flight."

New long-term contracts were awarded two young contract players, Martha Hyer and Kay Christopher.

DeHavilland Withdraws

Because of a disagreement between Olivia deHavilland and Interwood, Sam Wood production unit releasing through Universal-International, she withdrew from the cast of "Ivy." The picture was to have started this week, but was necessarily postponed. Joan Fontaine will play the role.

Helena Carter, New York cover girl, drew a prize role in "Time Out of Mind," which stars Phyllis Calvert, Robert Hutton, Ella Raines and Eddie Albert. Hutton plays a pianist-composer in the Rachel Field story.

Rogers at Las Vegas

Republic's Roy Rogers is doing location work at Las Vegas on "Bells of San Angelo," which William Witney is directing for Associate Producer Edward J. White. Andy Devine, who just came over from Universal-International after a long sojourn there, is a new face in the midst of regulars "Trigger," Dale Evans and Bob Nolan and the Sons of the Pioneers. Film is being made in Trucolor.

Other films rolling at the Yates' emporium are Frank Borzage's "Gallant Man," the untitled Nelson Eddy-Ilona Massey starrer and the outdoor extra-budgeteer, "Wyoming."

Paramount Starts 'Saigon'

Alan Ladd is a busy actor these days. His current opus is "Saigon," which started Nov. 29 at Paramount, with a locale of the Far East. Leslie Fenton is directing Ladd and Veronica Lake, who co-stars. Story concerns three fliers from the China war zone and their first mission upon discharge from service. Douglas Dick and Wally Cassell portray Ladd's buddies. Also cast is Luther Adler, Luis van Rooten and Morris Carnovsky. P. J. Wolfson is the producer. An interesting sidelight is that Vanya Oakes, noted authoress and newspaper correspondent, is serving as technical adviser. She covered Saigon when the Japs moved in back in 1940.

Scheduled to start any time now is another "Road" film, this one being tagged "Road to Rio." Director Norman Z. McLeod moved into Paramount on a one-picture loan-out deal with Rainbow Productions. Stars are to be the same as in the other "Road" releases: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour.

A crew returned from Catalina Island, where locations were scouted and background material obtained for the forthcoming "Catalina," to star Sterling Hayden, Billy De Wolfe, Olga San Juan and Cass Daley. Over 100 extras were used for location sequences in "Blaze of Noon," with Col. Clarence Shoop, technical adviser, flying in the scenes, which called for a train to be halted by the antics of a stunting airmail pilot. Director Byron Haskin found his location site for Hal Wallis' "Deadlock," which goes before the lenses very soon.

By mutual agreement, Harry Tugend checked out of the lot after six years as writer, producer and production executive.

Sig Neufeld Leaves PRC

PRC is minus one of its original members, following the severing of connections with the company last week of Sig Neufeld. Neufeld, who has been producing for PRC since it was formed in 1940, turned out 93 films! He joins Alexander-Stern.

Neufeld formerly handled all of the Buster Crabbe-Al St. John westerns. Crabbe is gone, too, but St. John remains as comic aide to a new Western star, Al LaRue. The combination finished its first effort this week, "Gun Fighters," with Ray Taylor directing for Jerry Thomas, new producer of the series. Mary Scott played the femme interest.

The other PRC picture going is "Red Stallion," which is being completed atfer a lengthy shooting schedule and unprecedented budget for the company.

Enterprise Readies 'Journey'

December 9 is the tentative starting date for Enterprise's next production, "Burning Journey," which for a brief time will give the company three films shooting. Barbara Stanwyck's "The Other Love" is in progress, and "Arch of Triumph" resumes filming on Dec. 10. John Garfield will star in "Burning Journey," making his first independent starrer. Construction

Wurtzel to Make 6 for 20th-Fox Distribution

President Sol M. Wurtzel, of the independent producing company that bears his name, has announced that conferences with Spyros P. Skouras of 20th Century-Fox have concluded with plans for Wurtzel to produced six features for distribution by 20th-Fox in 1947.

Completion of "Jewels of Brandenburg" will wind up 1946 schedules and Wurtzel is now formulating plans for his first 1947 production, an untitled action drama by Irving Elman, tentatively set for production in early January at Sutherland Studios. No cast or director have been set.

Additional story material is now being lined up with the aid of Executive Assistant Howard Sheehan and Story Editor Clifford Gans, with suggestions from exhibitors largely determining the type of stories to be filmed by Wurtzel during 1947.

17 Trucolors on Republic Schedule for 1946-47

Republic has scheduled 17 features to be filmed in Trucolor for release on its 1946-47 schedule, marking an increase of 13 color pictures over the four released on the studio's 1945-46 program.

Trucolor features scheduled for early filming include "Slippy McGee," "Down Tahiti Way" and "Singapore Sal"; six Roy Rogers' starrers, "Bells of San Angelo," "Springtime in the Sierras," "San Antonio Sunset," "Heart of Mexico," "Song of the Golden West" and "The Gay Ranchero," and six musical westerns starring Monte Hale and Adrian Booth. In addition, the studio will release six cartoon short subjects in Trucolor.

$5,000,000 Budget Set For 'Sarah Bernhardt'

Budgeted at $5,000,000, "Sarah Bernhardt" is planned by David O. Selznick for 1947 as one of his most important productions. The script has already been completed by Ben Hecht.

Selznick is attempting to get Garbo to portray the role of the divine Sarah. If Garbo is not available, then he will consider starring his newly signed Italian actress, Valli, in the role. He also plans to produce two other productions next year, "Little Women" and "Joan of Arc."

WB Story Purchase

"The Persian Cat," original melodrama by John Larkin and Jerry Horwin, has been bought by Warner Bros. as a starring vehicle for Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall. Larkin will write the screenplay, with Robert Buckner assigned to produce it.

Columbia Signs Gosch

Martin Gosch has been signed by Columbia as a producer, it has been announced by the studios.

HOLLYWOOD

Joan Crawford Signed To 7-Year Warner Pact

Before sailing for Europe last week, Jack L. Warner announced that Joan Crawford has signed a new seven-year contract with Warner Bros.

Following the release of "Humoresque," which is scheduled to open this month at the Hollywood Theatre in New York, Miss Crawford will be seen in "Possessed," with Van Heflin in the leading male role. Also on the star's schedule are "Need for Each Other" and "White Night," a United States Pictures production for Warner release.

Warner also elevated Martha Vickers to star status as a result of her work in the soon-to-be-released "The Time, the Place and the Girl." Her first picture as a star will be "Two Guys from Texas," with Dennis Morgan, Jack Carson and Janis Paige as the other toplines.

'Secret Service' for Kennedy Productions

Jay Richard Kennedy's "Secret Service," dealing with that department's work of protecting the late President Roosevelt during his trip to the Teheran conference, will be produced independently by newly organized Kennedy Productions.

The new company will get under way as soon as Kennedy, through Kennedy-Buchman Productions, completes his associate producer chore on "Assigned to Treasury," starring Dick Powell, for Columbia. Kennedy scripted both vehicles.

Selznick to Make 'Tess' Of D'Urbervilles' in 1947

David O. Selznick has announced that "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," the Thomas Hardy classic, will be on his production schedule for 1947 and that Allen Scott, who already has completed the screenplay, will produce.

The production is planned to be in Technicolor and, according to Selznick, will be produced on the same scale as "Duel in the Sun." "Tess" was filmed by MGM in 1924 with Blanche Sweet and Conrad Nagel starred.

Cover Girl Signed

Dorothy Hart, winner of the National Cover Girl contest and former Conover model, has been signed to a term deal by Universal-International. She has been penciled-in as the "other girl" in Douglas Fairbanks Jr.'s first U-I production, "The Exile."

Set for a Role

William Gould, screen comedian, has been set for a role in Warners' Technicolor musical, "My Wild Irish Rose," being directed by David Butler and produced by William Jacobs. Cast is headed by Dennis Morgan, Andrea King, Arlene Dahl and George O'Brien.

Stratton Story to Screen

The inspiring story of Monty Stratton, baseball star who refused to give up his career when he lost a leg, will be brought to the screen by MGM. The story is by Douglas Morrow. No cast or producer has been assigned.

STUDIO NEWS & PROGRAM NOTES

Sistrom to Produce Deanna Durbin's Next Vehicle; Raymond Massey Signs Five-Year Pact with Warners

Akim Tamiroff, popular character actor, was signed for an important role in "Three Were Thoroughbreds," Technicolor drama of the old West which Robert Young is producing and starring in at Columbia. Picture is now before the cameras under direction of George Sherman, with Willard Parker and Marguerite Chapman as Young's co-stars.

John Qualen, Warren Douglas and Carl Esmond have been signed for important roles in "High Conquest," Monogram mountain-climbing drama adapted from the book by James Ramsey Ullman. Producer-director Irving Allen has already shot 60,000 feet for the film in Switzerland. Anna Lee and Gilbert Roland are co-starred. Gale Sondergaard and Frank Faylen were signed for important roles in Paramount's "Road to Rio," fifth in the popular "Road" series starring Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour. Film will start shortly with Norman Z. McLeod directing.

Jerry Thomas, producer of the new PRC Eddie Dean musical action series, has been assigned to produce the series of Al La Rue-"Fuzzy" St. John westerns. Schedule calls for six films in the Dean series and eight La Rue-St. John pictures. Ray Taylor will direct both series.

Lillie Hayward will write and produce RKO's "Angel Face." Sharyn Moffett, 10-year-old who appeared in two earlier Hayward pictures, will head the cast.

Producer Seymour Nebenzal has borrowed Jean Pierre Aumont from MGM to co-star with Maria Montez in "Atlantis." This will mark the first co-starring role for the husband and wife team. Picture is based on the book by Pierre Benoit, titled "Atlantida."

Gene Autry wound up his fall rodeo tour in the east last week and returned to town to report to Republic for his next picture "Robinhood of Texas," which goes before the cameras on Jan. 3. This marks Autry's third picture since returning to the studio from the service.

Virginia Field has been loaned by Paramount to Benedict Bogeaus for a feminine lead in "Christmas Eve." She will appear opposite George Brent and Randolph Scott, share leading male roles. Joan Blondell has already been set for the feminine role opposite Brent. Edwin L. Marin is directing.

Joseph Sistrom has been named producer of the next Deanna Durbin starring vehicle. Sistrom and Universal-International executives are currently discussing several properties, since "Up in Central Park" (previously announced as the next Durbin production) will have to be postponed because of other Technicolor commitments.

Raymond Massey, noted stage and screen actor, signed a five-year contract with Warner Bros. As his first post-war assignment, Massey recently completed a co-starring role with Joan Crawford and Van Heflin in "Possessed," Jerry Wald production directed by Curtis Bernhardt.

Michael Duane, Columbia contract player, has been assigned a leading role in support of Larry Parks in the Technicolor film, "The Swordsman," which is now before the cameras under the direction of Joseph H. Lewis.

Harry Grey will handle the producer's reins on the Paramount Technicolor film with music, "Catalina." In the cast will be Sterling Hayden, Billy DeWolfe, Olga San Juan and Cass Daley. William Russell will direct.

Three well-known character players were signed for the cast of Paramount's aviation epic "Blaze of Noon," which John Farrow directs. They were Will Wright, Don Beddoe and George Carleton. The picture stars Anne Baxter, William Holden, Sterling Hayden, Sonny Tufts and William Bendix. Robert Fellows produces.

Pat O'Moore, noted Irish actor, gets the major comedy role in 20th-Fox's production of Joseph Shearing's best-seller, "Moss Rose," which Gregory Ratoff is directing for Producer Gene Markey. O'Moore joins a cast headed by Victor Mature, Peggy Cummins, Ethel Barrymore and Vincent Price.

Allan Scott, one of Hollywood's outstanding producer-writers, will make his production debut in the David O. Selznick picture "Intimate Notes," an original story now being written by Daniel Taradash.

Warner Bros. have borrowed Steven Geray, featured player under contract to Columbia, for a key role in "The Unfaithful," now before the cameras with Ann Sheridan, Zachary Scott and Lew Ayres in starring spots. Film is being directed by Vincent Sherman and produced by Jerry Wald.

Franklyn Farnum, old-time star of the silent era, has been added to the cast of "The Guilty," current Jack Wrather production at Monogram. Bonita Granville and Don Castle are co-starred, and John Reinhardt is directing.

Vladimir Sokoloff, noted Russian character actor, has been cast for the important role of Lum Chi, Chinese Commissioner of Narcotics, in Columbia's "Assigned to Treasury," starring Dick Powell. Sokoloff was chosen by Producer Sidney Buchman and his associate, Jay Richard Kennedy, for the role because his features so closely resemble north-country Chinese.

William Cagney has purchased the William Faulkner story "Two Soldiers" as a future vehicle for Audie Murphy, most decorated hero of World War II, who is under contract to the Cagney company. By a strange coincidence, "Two Soldiers" parallels an episode in the home life of the bemedaled young actor.

Curtiz Borrows Three

Dana Andrews, Virginia Mayo and Cathy O'Donnell have been borrowed from Samuel Goldwyn by Michael Curtiz Productions, which releases through Warners, for "The Unsuspected," suspense mystery based on the Charlotte Armstrong novel and magazine serial. They join Claude Rains and Eve Arden. Curtiz will direct, with Charles Hoffman producing.

Conrad in 'Journey'

William Conrad, radio actor-producer-director, has been signed by Enterprise for the key role of Quinn, John Garfield's manager, in "Burning Journey," Garfield's first independent starrer which Robert Rossen directs.

HOLLYWOOD

of the longest set in motion picture history, according to the studio, is under way for the film. A 700-foot-long tunnel, it is necessitating the knocking out of the walls of five stages to provide necessary length. The tunnel will be used for a passageway of a huge fight arena, figuring in key sequences.

Monogram's 2nd Allied Film

Monogram President Steve Broidy announced that "Tragic Symphony," to be made by Benjamin Glazer and Nat Finston, will be the second picture to be distributed by Allied Artists Corp., new organization formed to handle Monogram high-budget films. Sir Cedric Hardwicke has been signed for an important role.

"Drifting Through," Jimmy Wakely's recently completed singing western, is now called "Six Gun Serenade." "Black Gold," postponed because of the Cinecolor difficulties occasioned by the strike, finally rolled last week, with Anthony Quinn starring. Picture is being made on location by Producer Jeffrey Bernerd and Director Phil Karlson.

Another Monogram film started Dec. 2, when "High Conquest" went before the lenses. Helene Thimig, who has just returned from Vienna where she participated in the Salzburg Festival, which was staged for many years by her late husband, Max Reinhardt, was signed to a leading role in the film. Irving Allen is producing and directing.

New 'Thin Man' Readied

It looks like the "Thin Man" is still around, after all these years. Metro is set to roll "Song of the Thin Man" in mid-December, once more starring William Powell, who has checked in the studio for preparation. Myrna Loy again co-stars.

The completion of long-shooting "To Kiss and to Keep" appears to be at hand, following 126 days of camera work. Pandro Berman produced the film, which starred Gene Kelly, Marie "The Body" McDonald and Charlie Winninger. Gregory La Cava directed. But MGM still has seven other flickers going, including one Technicolor production, "The Birds and the Bees." This one is finishing its first month under the production guidance of Joe Pasternak.

Busiest man on the lot is Producer Carey Wilson, who is guiding both "Green Dolphin Street" and "Cynthia's Secret," the latter formerly being tagged "The Personal Touch."

New Columbia Independent

The newest independent company releasing through Columbia is Cavalier Pictures, which started "Three Thoroughbreds" this week. Forrest Tucker was set as the lead heavy for the big-scale Technicolor Western, joining a cast headed by Robert Young, who is also one of the partners in the unit; Marguerite Chapman and Willard Parker. George Sherman is directing the picture on location at Tucson, Arizona.

Another Columbia film rolls Dec. 9 when "Bulldog Drummond at Bay" kicks off under Sidney Salkow's direction. Ron Randell, Australian star, makes his American debut in this one. "King of the Wild Horses," which has been held up at various times by inclement weather, finally finished and went into editing.

The studio's serial, "Jack Armstrong, the All-American Boy," being produced by Sam Katzman, has been shortened to "Jack Armstrong." Bobby Stone is now casting director for Katzman's producing company. "The Lady from Shanghai" is still rolling at San Francisco, having used the city's Aquarium for special scenes.

John Sturges is directing "For the Love of Rusty," third in the studio's dog series, which started Dec. 5. John Haggott produces.

20th-Fox Starts 'Big Heart'

"The Big Heart," which William Perlberg is producing for 20th Century-Fox, in addition to his chore of "Forever Amber," went before the lensmen last week on location in New York City. With George Seaton directing, the cast so far stacks up as John Payne, Maureen O'Hara and Edmund Gwen. Seaton also wrote the screenplay from an original by Valentine Davies.

Twentieth has three Technicolor films going, including "Amber," "Mother Wore Tights" and "Captain from Castile." Kathleen Lockhart and Chick Chandler were added by Producer Lamar Trotti to the Betty Grable starrer, "Mother," which Walter Lang is directing. The Tyrone Power starrer, "Captain," went into action in Morelia, Mexico, with Henry King directing, and the busy Trotti also producing. Cast includes Cesar Romero, John Sutton, Jean Peters, Lee J. Cobb and Alan Mowbray.

Another starter for 20th was "Moss Rose," which began shooting last week with Gregory Ratoff directing star Peggy Cummins in a theatre sequence. A mystery with an English locale at the turn of the century, the drama co-stars Miss Cummins, Victor Mature and Ethel Barrymore and features Vincent Price and Patricia Medina.

Louanne Hogan and Carrie McCord were signed to new contracts.

UA Busy with Six

Six films are rolling for United Artists, including "Christmas Eve," which Benedict Bogeaus is producing. "Vendetta," now under Howard Hughes' watchful eye, finally got back on the track following the Sturges trouble. Stuart Heisler is the new director for the film, which resumed shooting Dec. 2.

Seymour Nebenzal, one of Hollywood's busiest independent producers, started another one for UA release. "Heaven Only Knows," a romantic fantasy starring Robert Cummings and Brian Donlevy, was given the gun Dec. 2, with Albert S. Rogell directing. Jorja Curtwright, who made her start in Nebenzal's "Whistle Stop," gets the leading feminine role.

WB Starts 'Unfaithful'

Warner Bros. started "The Unfaithful," starring Ann Sheridan, Zachary Scott and Lew Ayres. A story of post-war marital adjustment, the picture also includes Bruce Bennett, Eve Arden and Peggy Knudsen. Stephen Geray, veteran character actor, plays a key role.

Important part of a motorcycle officer in "Dark Passage" was assigned to Douglas Kennedy, Warner Bros. featured player. Kennedy is bicycling between the Bogart-Bacall starrer and "Night Unto Night," Ronald Regan-Vivica Lindfors vehicle.

Barry Bernard, noted character actor, was added as a doctor to "The Women in White." Edward Clark was handed the part of a justice of the peace for the studio's Technicolor musical, "My Wild Irish Rose," and Curt Bois began his 60th character role since 1933, for his part as a French servant in "Women in White."

SG Completes 'Bells'

Screen Guild's Hillcrest Productions, one of its numerous independent units, has completed "Bells of San Fernando," (not to be confused with Republic's "Bells of San Angelo"). James S. Burkett produced the film, which featured Donald Woods, Gloria Warren, Shirley O'Hara and Byron Foulger. Duncan Renaldo served as associate producer and Terry Morse directed.

Jack Schwarz set a two-picture deal with Richard Arlen, who recently starred in Schwarz' production for SG, "Buffalo Bill Rides Again."

Brisson Rearranges Russell Schedule

Having completed arrangements with Columbia to postpone Rosalind Russell's final picture for them under her five-year contract, and having persuaded RKO Radio to advance the starting date of Eugene O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra" to March 3, 1947, Frederick Brisson, who heads the newly formed Independent Artists, has made it possible for Miss Russell to start her first picture for the new company, of which she is a partner, immediately after she completes "Electra."

The screen treatment, based on an original idea by Miss Russell, has been written by True Boardman, and the picture will be made on the RKO lot, as will other Independent Artists films, for RKO reelase. Upon completion of the untitled comedy, Miss Russell will go to Columbia to fulfill her final commitment there.

'C.B.' in 'Variety Girl'

Cecil B. DeMille is the third of Paramount's directors to be added to the cast of the star-studded "Variety Girl." DeMille will play himself in an "inside-the-studio" sequence, directing scenes from his new production, "Unconquered." George Marshall, director of "Variety Girl," and Mitchell Leisen are the other two directors in the cast.

Write and Produce

Lillie Hayward has been assigned to write and produce "Angel Face," RKO Radio's screen version of Jean C. Becket's Saturday Evening Post story concerning a little girl who decided to tell nothing but the truth. Sharyn Moffett, will have the top role, and Sid Rogell will function as executive producer.

Radio Star Signed

Frank Lovejoy, New York star of radio and stage, has been signed to a long-term contract by Story Productions, Hal Horne, executive producer, has announced. Lovejoy probably will be cast in "This Side of Innocence," directed by Armand Deutsch, for his first screen role.

Judy's New MGM Pact

Judy Garland has signed a new long-term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Following her next starring role with Gene Kelly in "The Pirate" Miss Garland will be reunited with Kelley and Frank Sinatra in "The Good Old Summer Time," a baseball romance to be produced by Arthur Freed.

Love Laughs at Andy Hardy

paring to return to college to get his law degree.

Comment: The delightful qualities of homely humor and simple unpretentiousness that have made the Hardy series so successful are very much in evidence again in this first renewal of the series since Mickey Rooney's discharge from the Army. Rooney is more adult in the new film, as befits the role of a returned soldier who renews his studies at college and who is madly in love and determined to ask for his loved one's hand in marriage. He is properly chastened, too, when he is asked to act as best man at Bonita Granville's marriage to her guardian. And very funny, too. One of the really hilarious sequences in this always amusing picture is when Mickey is inveigled into escorting Dorothy Ford to a dance. He first meets her while she is immersed in a swimming pool, asks her to go to the dance with him, and doesn't see her again until the evening of the affair. Dorothy is at least six feet tall—and in contrast to Mickey's short stature the couple make an amusing picture. And when Dorothy and Mickey attempt their version of a jitterbug dance, audiences literally howl. The entire picture is excellent and capable of playing alone in some sections, and always good enough to lead double bills. Solid exploitation about Mickey Rooney's return to the Hardy series since his discharge from Army service should aid this at the box-office.

The Inner Circle

Republic Mystery 65 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) This enjoyable murder-mystery is intelligently directed and blessed with a clever script.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will do very nicely for houses catering to action fans, and will certainly benefit by excellent audience reaction.

Cast: Adele Mara, Warren Douglas, William Frawley, Ricardo Cortez, Virginia Christine, Ken Niles, Will Wright, Dorothy Adams, Martha Montgomery. Credits: Associate producer, William J. O'Sullivan. Director, Philip Ford. Screenplay by Dorrell and Stuart E. McGowan. Suggested by a radio script by Leonard St. Clair and Lawrence Taylor. Photography, Reggie Lanning.

Plot: When a blackmailing radio gossip artist is killed, a private detective is suspected until he arranges a radio program from the scene of the crime, during which the real murderer is apprehended.

Comment: This better-than-average mystery drama has been wisely produced by William O'Sullivan and skillfully directed by Phil Ford. They play the picture for laughs as much as suspense, wisely balancing the two ingredients. It has entertainment value-plus. Warren Douglas shows once more that, because of his good looks and excellent acting ability, he is deserving of a chance for much bigger vehicles. Adele Mara turns in her usual capable job, showing to good eye-appeal advantage. William Frawley is fine as the police lieutenant and Virginia Christine scores as the gangster's moll. Many fans will be glad to see Ricardo Cortez on the screen again, playing the sinister role that once made him very popular. Exhibitors might possibly benefit from use of well-known Ken Niles' name, too.

IT HAPPENED ON FIFTH AVENUE (Mono.) Comedy. Principals: Gale Storm, Ann Harding, Don De Fore. Director, Roy Del Ruth. Plot: A millionaire moves south for the winter and a gentleman-hobo secretly moves into his mansion, inviting an ex-GI to live with him. The rich man's daughter comes home and, mistaking her for a thief, they try to reform her. She falls in love with the ex-soldier and asks her mother, who has been separated from her father, to come home. The mansion is soon filled with ex-GI's and their families, and when the father comes home, he is talked into donating housing property for the veterans. He and his wife are reconciled, and everyone is happy.

AUDIENCE CLASSIFICATIONS OF NATIONAL REVIEWING COMMITTEES

This information should be filed for reference when a picture is played in order that the theatreman may quote classifications of recognized reviewing committees independent of the industry when parents, guardians or local groups inquire as to the suitability of the picture for children and young people.

Feature	National Board of Review	Schools M. P. Committee	National Legion of Decency	General Federation of Women's Clubs
Home in Oklahoma	.....	.....	Gen. Patronage	Family
The Razor's Edge	Mature*	.....	Adults†	.....
The Verdict	Mature	.....	Objectionable in Part§	Adult

NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW: Founded in 1909 "to represent the interests of the motion picture public," maintains a Review Committee consisting of some 300 men and women of all ages, "representing a cross-section of public taste." Designations: Family—14 years of age and up (recommendations for age groups under 14 by Schools M. P. Committee of the Board); Mature—18 years and up. *—Especially worth seeing.

SCHOOLS MOTION PICTURE COMMITTEE. A committee of the National Board of Review which "represents groups of parents and teachers from public and private schools," whose purpose is to select pictures "suitable for age groups 8-12 and 12-14."

NATIONAL LEGION OF DECENCY: Committee of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae reviews pictures and publishes its moral classifications for guidance of members of the Legion—composed of those members of the Catholic Church who join the Legion. Designations: Unobjectionable for General Patronage; Unobjectionable for Adults; Objectionable in Part; Condemned.

†The Razor's Edge—Observation: The film contains vague expressions of religious teachings by the Indian holy man which can be understood as contrary to the Christian teaching.

§The Verdict—Objection: Light treatment of marriage; suggestive lines; suggestive dance.

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS. The motion picture committee is headed by Mrs. Arretus F. Burt, Chairman, of St. Louis. Two reviewing committees are maintained—Mrs. Harry Lilly, New York, Chairman Eastern Committee; Mrs. John Stearns Thayer, Los Angeles, Chairman Western Committee. Designations: Family—8 years and up; Mature Family—14 years and up; Junior and Senior High School Students and Adults; Senior High School Students and Adults. —Exceptional.

Mr. Arthur de Stefano

Kansas City (8) Missouri

Dear "Count":

After completing an analysis of our maintenance costs on various mechanisms used in Fox Midwest theatres throughout the five states in which we operate, in and near Missouri I find the E-7 to have an exceedingly low repair cost. And, we not only find the repair costs to be low, but various tests prove to me that we have an increased light on the projection screen, our picture is steadier than is any other make we are using, and that it is indeed a pleasure to use these machines, knowing that we can more or less forget about break-downs.

No doubt, your engineers who designed this piece of equipment deserve a lot of credit because the design is important in order to perfect a piece of equipment that gives such good service. I have found that the hardened parts used in this mechanism along with the oilite bronze bearings and the forced feed oil system eliminate most of the trouble we had in the past on mechanisms due to the fact that a lot of our mechanisms deteriorated because of neglect since it was a complicated matter to properly lubricate the other makes of projectors. And, the E-7 Mechanism is so simple to service that the matter of maintenance neglect has more or less been eliminated.

International Projector Corporation should be congratulated on the E-7 Mechanism, and I know you should be and are proud to offer a piece of equipment of this kind to your customers.

Sincerely yours,

L. E. POPE

The Equipment Situation

The mail to this desk has been unusually heavy recently regarding the equipment situation and this is as good a time as any to express some thoughts on that very important subject.

Following the end of the war a great many exhibitors were of the impression that in no time at all equipment of all kinds would be available generally.

Anyone who actually believed such fairy tales was simply doing a bit of wishful thinking.

Right after the war's end this page sounded warnings on the equipment situation and stressed the point that it was over-optimistic to anticipate that normal equipment deliveries could be established within a matter of months.

The manufacturers and distributors of equipment are as anxious as is the theatreman to move equipment from production lines into the theatres in order to keep the showhouses of the land operating efficiently. But in the interim it is the duty of every theatreman to make sure his plant is being properly maintained and that only first-class parts and complete units are bought and installed. Smart maintenance men will tell you that continued use of old parts is far better practice than the substitution of inferior parts and equipment that will not stand up to the heavy demands of continuous operation.

So, until such time as equipment and parts are again available when you order them, patience and foresight will prove a lot more helpful than complaining about something no one can do much about.

Certainly, after the many war years when you had to keep a sharp eye on your theatre's equipment, you possess the know-how of careful servicing.

The Studio Strike

No one who was in Hollywood during the mass-picketing that took place at several of the studios could come away without the very definite feeling that here was a condition that was a disgrace to the industry and to the whole labor movement.

If there was any indication that the controversy could or would be settled, it certainly escaped our notice. On the contrary, from every angle viewed, one got the impression that the strike leaders didn't seem to want the matter settled at all. Just what this adds up to is anybody's guess.

Current rumors are that there may be a complete shut-down of the studios shortly after the first of the year. There is strong feeling in Hollywood that such a move may bring about the solution.

The big backlog of completed product insures a continuous flow of pictures for a long time to come. Some maintain that this backlog could easily take care of exhibition requirements for well over a year and it certainly shouldn't take that long for the several issues to be settled and everything returned to normal.

You don't have to take our word for the fact that the general public is completely fed up with these strikes, especially the jurisdictional disputes that put the companies in the middle. Just ask your own friends and neighbors.

Although the outlook is far from cheerful we still hope the sober, sensible-thinking elements of the unions involved will take matters in hand and work out a solution fair to all parties concerned.

Choking the Independent

Studio labor unions and guilds, in our opinion, are making one serious mistake.

They have "conditioned" independent production of low-budget pictures right out of business.

Due to the many rules and restrictions pyramided over the past few years, no producer of modest-cost productions can continue to make such pictures.

Gone are the days when a producer could turn out an ordinary action or western picture for fifty or sixty thousand dollars which, based upon its low cost, could be sold to many situations at a reasonable, flat rental. The cost for such a picture under existing conditions runs well above the hundred thousand dollar mark and in most instances ends up with a total production cost of between a hundred and a hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars.

The inevitable result is such pictures are gradually fading from the market altogether. Obviously, this must mean a higher film rental average for all classes of exhibitors but especially for the smaller independent theatre owner.

It isn't healthy for either production or exhibition but it is a fact and unless the unions do something about making concessions to encourage this kind of production, they, too, will suffer because the smaller producer provided a lot of employment for a lot of people. What good is a higher rate of pay if the workers lose many days of employment?

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

DISTRIBUTION—Film-wise David O. Selznick who made "Gone With the Wind" and picture history apparently was dissatisfied and had plans. United Artists, who distributes Selznick's films, apparently was dissatisfied over its deal for "Duel in the Sun" which provides for a decreasing return to UA as the box-office grosses mount. Further, United Artists' principal stockholders, veteran film folk Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin, were said not to like Selznick leasing his stars and selling story properties to other companies.

Tuesday, United Artists acted to engage lawyers, (possibly John W. Davis' firm) presumably with the purpose of acting on the Selznick contract. Wednesday, Selznick replied with the announcement of a new outfit to be known as Selznick Releasing Organization, which a spokesman for Selznick said would distribute. The new organization, presided over by Neil Agnew, will distribute Selznick International and Vanguard (latter of which had advised UA it considers its distribution deal at an end) and possibly the product of other independents. Initial program includes eight pictures as a minimum, with a possible 10, all of which, but "Duel," are still to be produced. "Duel" is scheduled to open in Los Angeles Dec. 31.

EXHIBITION—Box-offices responded to boosted business with the end of the brownout, and the termination of the coal strike indicated that what had promised to be a payless Christmas for many would find them collecting once more at the cashier's window. But exhibitors everywhere reported that while business was good—in all instances much better than it had been before the war—there was a noticeable trend toward decreasing grosses which seemed to herald that the motion picture's share of the consumer spending dollar was being contested by other purchasable items. Many sources expected this trend to grow stronger but did not anticipate heavy business losses. Several other sources thought greater showmanship to keep audiences coming in droves would be necessary.

From New York the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis announced that Jan. 24-30 had been selected for its "theatre week" in 1947 and indicated that it would be left to local managers working with local chairmen, as to how funds would be raised.

In Chicago Allied Buying and Booking Head Jack Kirsch, who is also head of national Allied and Illinois Allied, told a dinner celebrating the fourth anniversary of his buying outfit that buying organizations were "here to stay" and cited their benefits. Also in Chicago the Palace Theatre resigned from Illinois Allied in protest over Kirsch's heading both that organization and a buying organization.

Movies came to Lewis, Del., for the first time Sunday in that community's long history. The town seemed to want to stick to its blue laws but returning service men wanted a referendum on the question.

Allied of Iowa-Nebraska, in a regional meeting resolved to fight local checking. In Oklahoma City, the Oklahoma Theatre Owners decided not to affiliate with ATA but to permit individual members to support it, and to fight a forthcoming tax program, while in St. Louis exhibitors are circulating a petition to compel a referendum on daylight saving time, which they don't want.

JOHNSTON—Motion Picture Association President Eric A. Johnston, a bit wan from his bout with pneumonia acquired while visiting England, attended the Washington meeting of the MPA directors Wednesday. Johnston issued no press statement but told a reporter that the 1947 budget had been approved by the Directors, the British quota discussed and that he would return to England to survey that situation. Meanwhile his Motion Picture Export Association, which has been edging its way into the foreign markets, reported that American films were so popular in Czechoslovakia that ticket scalping and black marketing was rife.

GENERAL—Four of five men indicted in connection with the taking of film from the U. S. Army Signal Corps Photographic Center at Long Island City, N. Y., pleaded guilty to taking "Cinderella Jones."

The Chicago federal grand jury for the Northern District of Illinois wrote Motion Picture Association President Eric A. Johnston asking that drinking scenes be reduced in movies "to improve the youth delinquency problem."

In New York City, Councilman Eugene P. Connelly introduced an amendment to the city charter to prevent revocation of theatre licenses before convictions of immoral or indecent presentations are procured. Connolly's action arose from License Commissioner Ben Fielding's barring of "The Outlaw," though it was approved by the state censors.

The Department of Justice in Washington was said to be ready with its appeal on the Griffith case and Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge warned that monopoly trends were serious and would result in higher prices, limitations on production and lowered employment.

In Kansas City, film delivery haulers were on strike and in Detroit an unfounded strike rumor, due to late deliveries, had exhibitors worried.

The News Spotlight

HAL WALLIS, independent producer releasing through Paramount, who, speaking for the motion picture industry at the Nobel Anniversary Dinner Wednesday in New York, saw in films a way toward world unity and universality of thought.

RALPH TALBOT who accepted on behalf of the Oklahoma City Variety Tent the Variety Clubs of America achievement award for the charitable work accomplished by the local organization. Talbot was elected Chief Barker of Oklahoma City Tent along with Assistant Chief Barkers C. H. Weaver and Ed. Kidwell and Prop Master Mike Connor.

H. M. RICHEY, MGM Exhibitor Relations Chief, who pleaded for exhibitor-distributor unity in common problems and predicted an era of competition which would see four theatres where before there had been three.

Building Control End Foreseen in Washington

While no immediate commercial building boom is in prospect, Government experts in Washington expect a relaxation of construction controls following resignation of Housing Expeditor Wilson Wyatt.

Civilian Production Administration officials said there was "little doubt" but that controls will be modified soon and removed entirely within a short period of time. On paper, officials said, this would mean a splurge in theater building. Actually, they added, any nation-wide spurt in theatre building will not come for many weeks.

"Veterans," these officials said, "probably still will be given an edge in building, but that edge will narrow rapidly. At this point it is anybody's guess what will happen. It is certainly safe to say, however, that there is a strong possibility that all building barriers will soon be lifted. Your theatre people then can jump in and take their chances with everyone else."

In accepting Wyatt's resignation, President Truman made it plain that he favors lifting construction controls as "rapidly as possible."

Wyatt, of course, was the strongest advocate of continuing strict controls. With Wyatt out, these controls will soon be lifted. Controls now ordered by CPA soon will be passed onto a new agency, probably called the Office of Rents and Priorities.

Admission Tax Outlook Cloudy on Capitol Hill

Outlook for speedy paring of the admissions tax to the 1942 level clouded further this week in Washington, when Rep. Earl Lewis, R., Ohio, reported to Minority Leader Joe Martin that he cannot recommend early legislation proclaiming a formal "end of the war." The admissions levy would automatically revert to 10 per cent six months after such legislation passed.

Lewis is chairman of a special GOP committee named by Martin to study this problem.

E-L Rank Agree

Eagle-Lion announced this week from Hollywood that it had reached a reciprocal releasing deal with the J. Arthur Rank interests. Under this deal the first Eagle-Lion film to be distributed abroad by Rank's General Film Distributors will be "Lost Honeymoon" (originally titled "Amy Comes Across"), and the first Rank picture to be handled by Eagle-Lion will be "Bedelia."

Sign of the Times

Intensified buyer resistance to rising prices was noted in the Eighth Federal Reserve District this week as the report on economics of the Federal Reserve Bank in St. Louis was circulated.

The bank finds that this resistance is a factor in reducing the rate of increase in retail sales volume during October, although the total sales were higher than in September. This selective buying curtailed the demand for higher-priced goods and some price reductions were noted in what the report terms "luxury soft lines."

Selznick Breaks with UA, Sets Up Own Distributing Outfit

'Duel' Planned for Dec. 31 Coast Showing as 1st of 8 Releases by New Company

In a rapid but not unexpected move which promised development of another important distributing company, David O. Selznick Wednesday broke away from United Artists as his distribution outlet and announced that he had set up his own unit to be known as the Selznick Releasing Organization.

Selznick's announcement followed within 24 hours of the resolution by United Artists' directors to engage lawyers for the "purpose of taking such action as counsel may advise in connection with the company's affairs with Vanguard Films, Inc., and David O. Selznick," —a phrase which the trade generally regarded as indicating steps to break the present Selznick-UA deal.

Considers Contract Ended

In making the Selznick announcement, Vanguard President Daniel O'Shea said it would have offices all over the world and would distribute for Selznick International as well as Vanguard Films and possibly the product of other independent producers.

O'Shea added that Vanguard considered its distribution contract with United Artists to be terminated because of alleged violations on the part of UA and added that Vanguard's action in no way affected its one-third ownership of United Artists.

United Artists, the other two-thirds of which is owned by Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin, made no comment on the Selznick move but it was reliably understood that a "stop work" order had been issued by it on its promotional campaigns for "Duel in the Sun," the latest Selznick production which was to have been a United Artists release and over which the present disagreement between Selznick and Pickford-Chaplin reportedly arose.

'Duel' Deal Cause?

According to reports both Miss Pickford and Chaplin believe that the United Artists distribution deal with Selznick for "Duel" based on a sliding scale which decreases the United Artists share as the returns of the picture increase would be unprofitable. Reportedly the Pickford-Chaplin interests want to write a new deal for the distribution of "Duel." This apparently, with such sore spots as the sale of stars and stories by Selznick to RKO and 20th Century-Fox, are said to be behind the present situation.

Selznick reportedly bought his third of United Artists for cash with the stipulation that the stock should be delivered to him in parts as he in turn delivered a certain "unit" of pictures. "Duel," it is said, left him within one more picture of his deal to get full possession of his shares of stock.

O'Shea, in announcing formation of the Selznick Releasing Organization, said it was part of Selznick's long range plan but that announcement had been precipitated by the action of the United Artists board Tuesday.

He added that the new distributing outfit plans to start with eight Selznick productions, seven of which are to be made.

The first will be "Duel in the Sun," scheduled for a Los Angeles opening on Dec. 31, to be followed by several key city runs, presumably

Brownout Out, Business Up As Lights Go On With Strike's End

Box-offices responded to boosted business this week as the coal-conserving areas of the nation emerged from the brownout into a glittering blaze of light.

Managers in the 21-state area affected were agreed that, in the main, business had shown an upward trend the moment the lights went on again over the marquees. But in many areas where authorities did not immediately lift restrictions, reports showed a surprising increase in business which had been decidedly off.

This was attributed to the lifting of the psychological gloom which had descended with the coal strike and the fact that many who had been facing a payless Christmas as industrial paralysis spread, found that payday would mean something again and that they could spend money on amusements.

Broadway, which went dark on orders to conserve coal, was the first to blaze with light from one end of the theatre area to another. A few minutes after the coal strike's termination was announced over the radio and by newspaper extras, lights went on over marquees and in show windows, anticipating by two hours the official end of the brownout for New York City.

At that, Broadway's lights led those of other sections in the brownout area by anything from hours to days as local authorities lifted coal-conservation orders more slowly.

In Washington the word went out that only a much-modified coal conservation order remained of what had been the drastic Government restrictions, which were threatening last Saturday to become even more drastic.

Liberty Blackout

Lights were legal on Broadway in a big way Sunday night, but they weren't for the Statue of Liberty which hid in the gloom of a misty harbor.

However, by Monday night that was rectified, and Liberty came ablaze just two days after Broadway. The Broadway showmen didn't jump the gun. The reason for the blackout on the Statue of Liberty, the Department of Interior explained, was that its power came from New Jersey and not from New York. While New York authorities had declared the brownout at an end, the New Jersey authorities had not, so the Department of Interior, in order to comply with local rulings, did not insist upon power.

Selznick to Distribute Own Film In UA Break

as fast as prints can be delivered.

(Interstate General Manager R. J. O'Donnell announced a possible opening in the Dallas, Texas, Melba on Jan. 23. Obstacle to "Duel" showings to date lies in the Hollywood strike which has slowed the Technicolor studios, but Selznick was reported to have two prints ready.)

Other Selznick releases will be:

Alfred Hitchcock's "The Paradine Case" with Charles Laughton, Charles Coburn, Gregory Peck, Ethel Barrymore, Ann Todd; a reissue of "Intermezzo" with Ingrid Bergman and Leslie Howard; "Little Women" with Lionel Barrymore, Charles Coburn, Diana Lynn and Bambi Lynn; "Portrait of Jenny" with Jennifer Jones and Joseph Cotten; "Sands of Time" with Cary Grant and Dorothy McGuire; Jennifer Jones in "Joan of Arc," and Shirley Temple, Guy Madison and Rory Calhoun in "What Every Bride Should Know."

Officers of the Selznick Releasing Organization are: O'Shea, board chairman; Neil Agnew, president; E. L. Scanlon, executive vice president and treasurer; Milton Kramer, vice president and general counsel.

Neil Agnew

General Sales Managers are: Milton Kusell, general domestic distribution; William Erbb, Great Britain; Manuel Reiner, Latin America; Paul White, continental Europe and north Africa.

Sales Managers: Samuel Horowitz, midwest; Thomas Duane, New England; John Howard, Pacific Coast; Paul MacNamara will head advertising, exploitation and publicity supervision with Hyatt Daab in charge of foreign and Al Katz as special field director for foreign.

United Artists Signs Goldman Release Deal

Meeting in New York Tuesday, the United Artists Board of Directors decided to engage lawyers to handle the present situation between it and David O. Selznick and approved a three picture distribution deal with Golden Productions.

The deal, to begin in 1947 and to run at the rate of one picture a year, will start with "Eddie and the Archangel Mike." The second will be "Barnstorming" and the third is at present untitled.

The directors also accepted "with regret" the resignation of Isaac A. Pennypacker, Philadelphia lawyer who found that business made it difficult to attend New York Board meetings. He was succeeded by Herman Weismann of Weismann and Grant, New York attorneys.

WE Pays $1.50

Directors of Western Electric this week declared a dividend of $1.50 a share of common after having paid 50 cents in the third quarter. This will work out on an annual basis as the same $2 dividend paid for the past three years.

Short on Sweets

Shortage of candy this week started the Confection Cabinet Company to pulling out of the Denver territory. Vincent S. Heinly, district manager, will stay in that city to carry out the candy counter contracts his company has with the RKO Orpheum, which is part of a nationwide contract. The company here is installing a $4,000 candy and popcorn counter and has already established two candy bar vending machines in the theatre, changed over to operate on six-cent instead of five-cent sales.

Cleveland Business Off; Seen As Normal Trend

Managers of Cleveland first-run houses think that the peak of business has passed, despite the fact that attendance over the recent holiday weekend was exceptionally good. Showmen in that city, however, believe that the general trend in business, insofar as first run houses are concerned, is downward, with a general decrease of 25 per cent already noticed. While much of this is due to the Christmas season buying which lessens the amount of money which might otherwise go to theatres, some of it is also attributed to the smaller "take home" pay envelopes coupled with the higher cost of living, exhibitors said.

Cleveland theatre owners do not feel that a slump is in the offing. They simply regard the drop as indicative that wartime spending is over and that the entertainment field is leveling off to a more normal plane.

Dubinsky Bros. Settle 13-Theatre Suit Amicably

Settlement of the Dubinsky intra-family suit over ownership of the Dubinsky theatre chain was reached amicably in Jefferson City, Mo., this week as Ed Durwood (nee Dubinsky) and his three younger brothers, Barney, H. W. and Irwin Dubinsky, reached an out-of-court agreement whereby Durwood and his two children—Stanley and Marjorie—obtained full title to the circuit's 13 houses in Missouri and Kansas.

The suit, trial of which lasted three weeks, was filed by the Dubinskys against Brother Durwood to get equal shares in the theatres under terms of a partnership since dissolved. The three brothers had charged that Durwood had deprived them of $665,000 claimed under this partnership.

SMPE to Raise Dues Jan. 1. to $10 Yearly

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers will raise its dues effective Jan. 1 to $10 annually, with student membership at $5 This is a jump from the present membership rate of $7.50 yearly, students $3, and is necessary, the Society says, to provide financing for essential projects covering technical problems of "production, distribution and exhibition."

James Frank, Jr., New York manager for National Theatre Supply, has been elected chairman of the Atlantic Coast Section for 1947, with H. E. White of Eastman Kodak, secretary-treasurer, and F. J. Grignon, 20th Century-Fox, Theodore Lawrence, MGM International and W. H. Rivers of Eastman Kodak, managers. They assume office Jan. 1.

Four Plead Guilty in Army 16-mm. Film Case

Four of five former United States Army civilian employes, part of 13 arrested in April when the FBI cracked down on the theft of 16-mm. prints from the Signal Corps Photographic Center at Long Island City, N. Y., this week pleaded guilty in federal court for the eastern district of New York to carrying off a print of "Cinderella Jones" for their own use.

A fifth, Nicholas Peter Peruso, refused to enter a plea at the time. The four, who are now awaiting sentence, are Frank Raymond Tiriola, George John Sinisgalli, Abe Robert Goldstein and Melvin Maurice Baker. They were charged on other counts in the indictment with identical offenses in connection with 16-mm. versions of "Reveille with Beverly," "Our Neighbor, South America," "Tahiti Nights," "National Barn Dance," "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," "Rhapsody in Blue," "Lady, Let's Dance," "Seven Days Ashore," and "The Falcon in Mexico."

In October Joseph Bitto was sentenced to pay a fine of $250 with a suspended six month jail sentence for criminal copyright infringement in connection with "The Song of Bernadette," another 16-mm. Signal Corps film.

The FBI was said to be widening the scope of its inquiry into misuses of these films, which are technically government property, into areas outside of the continental United States.

MGM Picks 15 Field Men for Meeting Tour

Fifteen MGM field men this week were selected to tour the United States shortly after the New Year for a series of conferences on marketing problems in five American cities. The conferences will start in New York and end in California where the group will be guests of Louis B. Mayer.

The men were picked, Vice-President and General Sales Manager William F. Rodgers explained, because of their records with the company during the year ending Aug. 29.

"The purpose of these visits," Rodgers said, "is to acquaint these men more fully with the operations of our company on the whole and familiarize them with activities as they embrace sales and production."

Iowa U. Visual Study Films Reach 3,500,000

The University of Iowa visual instruction bureau reported that total attendance for its films during last year amounted to over 3,500,000 with 19,000 separate showings in the school's $150,000 library. The audience consisted of pupils from 475 of Iowa's 928 school systems.

Start Study Films

Two of the Motion Picture Association's scheduled programs of shorts in the series it plans to make for educational purposes and showings in schools, were this week reported to be on their way to production. One, based on the seasons, is to make use of an animated cartoon technique; the second is on osmosis. Neither is expected to be ready for release before March.

Buying Units 'Here To Stay' Kirsch Tells Meet

Declaring that there was a misunderstanding on the part of distributors as to the purposes for which film buying organizations were created, Jack Kirsch told those attending a dinner last Sunday celebrating the fourth anniversary of his Allied Buying and Booking organization, that buying outfits are 'here to stay."

Kirsch declared that such buying units were part of American business economy.

"There is a deep-seated misconception on the part of the film companies," Kirsch said, "that buying organizations of theatres were organized primarily to chisel on film rentals.

"That is farthest from the truth. Our buying department took on its beginning during the height of the war. The owners had to have a central agency to which they could delegate the difficult tasks of buying and booking pictures so that the major part of their time could be devoted to the physical operation of their theatres, which were then feeling the effects of the great shortage of manpower. . . .

"Cooperative buying groups are not foreign to our form of economy. They are nothing new. Almost every other major industry has some kind of co-op whether it be in food, drugs or clothing . . . and the trend in that direction is growing daily. Industry should have no fear of these groups; they are created of necessity and all serve a definite need. They afford a small business man a service that is indispensable to the needs and demands of his business. They are not organized for any sinister purpose but only for the definite objective of providing the small operator with the benefit of great facilities of information, knowledge and activity which these organizations possess."

Palace Quits Allied Over Booking Outfit

The Palace Theatre of Cicero, Ill., made public a letter this week which it had written Jack Kirsch as president of Allied Theatres of Illinois, stating that it had resigned from the exhibitor unit as a "protest against your acting in the dual capacity of President of Allied Theatres of Illinois and head of the so-called Allied buying and booking organization. . . ."

The letter pointed out that not all Allied Theatres members belonged to the booking outfit.

"Because of your dual capacity," the letter continued, "we feel that your allegiance would be necessarily divided, when their interests conflict, between on one hand, members of Allied who are not members of your buying organization, and on the other hand, those members of Allied who are members of your buying organization."

The Palace is apparently having some difficulty in holding its prior run over the Annetta, said to be a member of the booking outfit.

Columbia Profits Up

Columbia's comparative estimated consolidated earning statement shows a net profit of $965,000 for the 13-week period ending Sept. 28, 1946, or earnings of $1.24 a share of common, in comparison with the same period's 1945 profits of $544,000 or 79 cents a share of common.

Opens Books in Suit

Federal Judge John P. Hartigan in the Rhode Island Federal Court Saturday ordered that all theatre documents and records of Harry Hogan and the Hogan Opera House in the six separate suits filed against him alleging percentage frauds be opened to inspection by the plaintiff distributors.

The order permits the distributors—United Artists, 20th Century-Fox, Universal, RKO, Columbia and Warner Bros.—to go back for six years to conduct their inspection.

The defendants had contended that the right of inspection, if such existed, was limited to one year and four months by the time limitations of the right to audit in some of the distributors' contracts, but the court ruled that this right to pre-trial inspections which the distributors sought was under the fraud laws and not subject therefore to limitations under contract.

The ruling is considered important in the industry, since most of the fraud suits are based in part on the ability of the distributor plaintiffs to get supporting evidence from the records of the defendants. Charges had even been made on convention floors that the suit method of book inspection was being used by distributors to conduct a hunt through a theatres' records.

Judge Hartigan further ordered the defendants to request from government agencies, banks and the like, copies of income tax return, bank deposit slips, statements and such documents for any part of the six-year period, which might not now be in their possession.

Dimes March Set for January; Collections Left to Managers

The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis Monday selected Jan. 24-30 as Theatre Week in the 1947 March of Dimes drive but apparently left it up to local managers to determine whether or not they would have audience collections.

The move comes as a result of decentralizing the conduct of the campaign. Formerly, plans for fund raising were formulated nationally and handed to each campaign chairman as a fully outlined method which was usually followed to the letter on a country-wide basis.

Under the new system, the Foundation said that local theatre managers would cooperate with their local March of Dimes chairmen to "work out the best program for the solicitation of funds in the theatres."

In the past, audience collections were considered mandatory and were made by the majority of theatres. Under the present system, the theatre manager will have a great deal to say on the way funds might be raised and could oppose audience collections.

Fund Need Great

Showmen have seldom had the need for efforts to control and treat infantile paralysis brought home to them more emphatically. The past season saw a widespread closing of theatres in affected areas as a wave of the disease swept the country.

Commenting upon the need for funds to fight infantile paralysis, Foundation President Basil O'Connor said:

"We must remember that the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis fought the greatest epidemic in its history in 1946. Cases up to Dec. 1 already have exceeded the 24,000 mark.

"The theatres of the nation have always enthusiastically supported the fight of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. . . . Theatre managers have been leaders in the March of Dimes. Much of the success of our fund-raising efforts has been due to the loyal support of the great motion picture industry.

"This year it has been decided to bring the local theatre manager in close contact with the local March of Dimes chairman. Together they will work out the best possible program for raising funds through theatre participation."

O'Connor appointed Emil C. Jensen of New York, president and general manager of Artcinema Associates, Inc., as Director of the Theatre Division with Charles Reed Jones, former advertising and publicity director for Republic, as advertising and publicity manager and Dave Bader as trade press contact.

Suggests Flat Rental For $100-Gross Houses

Reasonable flat rental deals should be substituted for percentage in situations where grosses are $100 or less, Hank D. Hearn of Exhibitors' Service, a booking and buying outfit in Charlotte, N. C., declared last week. Hearn claimed it was impossible for an exhibitor to operate at a profit in some localities with the deals that were being offered.

In some instances, he claimed, the terms were $15 guarantee plus 50 per cent of the gross above $32.50, an arrangement which did not permit the exhibitor a profit. The buying unit head further stated that flat rentals in such areas would eliminate the expense of checkers and the complaint of local checkers.

St. Louis Exhibitors Seek 'Daylight' Vote

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis this week moved to initiate petitions which would force the city administration to call for an election on daylight saving.

The MPTO acted after it became apparent that the Board of Aldermen, faced with terrific special interest pressure, would not vote to abandon the summer daylight saving. To get a referendum on the question will require about 18,000 signatures, since the law provides that the petitions must contain the signatures of at least five per cent of the registered voters in the last mayoralty elections. Some 369,406 votes were noted in that last election.

MPA Aid Urges Teamwork Between Labor, Owners

Teamwork between workers and management is necessary to achieve full productivity, Edward T. Cheyfitz, assistant to the Motion Picture Association President, told the Society for the Advancement of Management in New York Saturday.

Cheyfitz, who criticized union restrictions on production—feather-bedding, make work resistance to technological change, restrictive rules, etc.,—pointed out that sometimes examples of these practices were not only agreed to by employers, but encouraged.

Cheyfitz further attacked union resistance to managerial productivity and demands which undermine proper management functions.

Stating that these practices arose from fear of unemployment, fear of exploitation and fear of managerial power, Cheyfitz suggested that the causes could be eliminated by: (1) continuous employment, (2) opening of company's books to labor in order that the latter may be informed on operations and profits, and (3) a partnership status for labor.

Sues to Retain Lease On Chicago Haymarket

Attempts to prevent the Haymarket Building Corporation in Chicago from canceling the lease he has on the Haymarket Theatre were filed in superior court last week by George Topper. Topper claims that the lease was for five years, with an added five years' option which caused him to improve the property, and that the attempt to cancel the lease on the grounds that the property has been sold is based on an allegedly "unreal, fanciful and fraudulent" sale.

He further charges that the Haymarket Building Corporation has also "wrongfully informed distributors . . .that the plaintiff's lease . . . is about to be terminated making it difficult, and in some cases impossible, to procure films."

Blue Law Busted

Sunday movies came to Lewes, Del. this week, for the first time as the result of action by returning servicemen.

The city, which has been a strict observer of the Sabbath as a day when no activities should be indulged in beyond churchgoing, had adhered to this policy since its founding in 1631. Despite the fact that a neighboring community was exhibiting Sunday shows, the town fathers showed no disposition to make any changes until returning service men asked for a referendum on the question.

Bradley Thanks Goldwyn For 'The Best Years'

General Omar Bradley this week went on record as praising "The Best Years of Our Lives" for its portrayal of the problems confronting some returning veterans and thanked Producer Samuel Goldwyn for "bringing this story to the American people."

In a letter to Goldwyn, General Bradley wrote:

"Last week I took my chief assistants to the advance showing you were good enough to give us on 'The Best Years of Our Lives.' We were so impressed with the honesty of its story that I immediately asked if we might show it again to all of our chief people in Washington. I wanted them to see it not only because it will help them to understand what we are trying to do for these young men, but because it will also help them to realize what these veterans mean to the people of this country.

"Sometimes we forget that when men are veterans they are also men—carrying with them the imprints that war leaves on the lives of men. Here is a movie that takes those men with their wounds, their pride, their hopes, their setbacks and tells what happened to the lives of their girls, their wives, their families."

Coast Showmen Use Reissues To Meet Product 'Shortage'

By JAY GOLDBERG
Hollywood Bureau

Exhibitors in Los Angeles are firmly convinced there's a product shortage. They're convinced that it's acute. But they're not extending playing time or making fewer changes in the subsequent runs to coincide with what they say is less product. They're turning to reissues which so far are doing okay.

This was noticed in a survey conducted by SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW.

First run films are getting a much slower playoff these days than formerly, Southern California theatre men believe, according to the survey. There is a definite delay in getting the pictures to subsequent runs because of the extended first runs.

"There is a backlog of first run product that is purposely being held up," said one veteran of both exhibitor combine booking and exchange dating. "In the many houses I've booked or sold to, there is a noticeable increase in revivals."

But there is no tendency in the area to extend runs in the neighborhoods to make up for this. Changes remain about the same. Here's the way another exhibitor put it:

"Rather than have my house go dark, I can always show repeats and reissues—and that's just what a lot of the boys are doing!"

Cecil Vinnicof, who with his father, Harry, operates 11 theatres in the Los Angeles and nearby districts, said he noticed a decided increase of reissues on the market in recent years. Vinnicof, who with his father, also has a large interest in the 40-house Southern California Amusement Company, termed the product shortage "acute."

"We found ourselves forced to recognize the situation for what it was worth," he recalled. "That's why we opened our four Academy theatres in July, playing an exclusive revival policy. We show films that go back as much as 10 years and make changes every week or 10 days."

Robert Poole, secretary of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, embracing seven far West States, pointed out the clearance delay and said it was "detrimental" to subsequent runs.

"Another point to consider is theatre attendance," Poole pointed out. "Buying power affects this important factor and with strikes, the buying power of the masses deteriorates. We on the Pacific Coast are fortunate in having a steady growth both during and after the War and so we are less affected than other regions."

Films Seen Leading to World Unity, Peace—Wallis

(See The News Spotlight)

Motion Pictures may play an important part in leading the world toward a unity of mind necessary for the preservation of peace, producer Hal Wallis told the American Nobel Anniversary Committee Wednesday night at its dinner celebrating the 50th anniversary of the death of Scientist and Humanitarian Alfred Nobel, founder of the Nobel Prizes.

Wallis, as speaker for the motion picture industry, discussed the need for world unity in which "international frontiers, sovereignty and all the little labels under which we human beings cluster wistfully will have lost much, if not all their meaning."

"Science," Wallis said, "has already achieved one kind of world unity. We are encased by instant communication and rapid transportation, with the promise—and the threat—of more spectacular developments to follow.

"But . . . this oneness wrought by technology is not enough. What the world needs, and needs in a hurry, is the far more important unity of the mind, and the values and ideals of humanity.

"To this unity we so desperately need, it is my hope . . . that the motion picture can make an important contribution. We may have succeeded in bringing to many millions, some conception of the selfless struggle of our great men and great women of science.

"But in the larger area of pictures there is even a more exciting prospect. One can list with pride and dignity such pictures as 'Zola,' 'Gone with the Wind,' 'Wilson,' 'Going My Way' and 'Watch on the Rhine.' These are typical of pictures that jump national boundaries and attitudes with the universality of true art."

Earlier in his speech Wallis touched on the assistance of films to science in the same manner as the microscope or the cathode tube and cited the record of the recent atomic bomb experiments as one which "no other agency could possibly have recorded so clearly and accurately, or will preserve so well, the story of just what happened."

Okla. Showmen Meet, Prepare Tax Fight

The Oklahoma Theatre Owners, Inc., closed their convention in Oklahoma City Tuesday by reelecting Morris Lowenstein president and retaining all its officers for another year.

The organization, after listening to American Theatres Association Director Robert Coyne and Public Relations Officer Ned Shugrue cite reasons for joining that organization, decided not to affiliate but endorsed the ATA program and to assist individual members who might wish to join the ATA or contribute to its support.

The convention earlier had voted to muster its forces to fight a predicted tax movement, to enlarge its legislation program, and to increase its directors from 16 to 20 members.

The convention, numbering some 200 and the largest in the history of the Oklahoma showmen, reelected the following with Lowenstein: Max Brock of Lawton, vice-president; Ralph Talbot, Tulsa, secretary-treasurer and Harry Lowenstein of Ardmore, director to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management*

'DIRECTIONAL' ADVERTISING PAYS

By Jack Jackson

Whatever "kick" you get out of your business depends entirely on the amount of "kick" you put into it! That remark applies equally to members of the production, distribution and exhibition branches of the industry. And unquestionably the best way to put "kick" into the business is for each and every one of us to meticulously analyze our advertising campaigns.

The importance of proper advertising as an essential to the progress and success of any business has long been recognized. To the motion picture indutry—producer, distributor and exhibitor alike—it is the very life blood of existence.

Advertising is specialized selling and the job of selling a motion picture is fraught with far more complexities than the mere marketing of wares of animal, mineral or vegetable origin. While every movie (designed for public entertainment) is, in substance, a manufactured product, the components of its ultimate composition are creative. The finished photoplay—a combination of the world's most cherished creative arts from nil to now—represents the very ultimate in artistic achievement. Art of this kind—spun from the filaments of dreams and fashioned to stir and stimulate the vagaries of human emotions—is conspicuously unsuited to the mechanics and limitations applicable to the advertising of mundane wares.

Why we of the motion pitcure industry allow our delicately shimmering tapestries to be associated by design, innuendo or accident with the advertising terminology and practices used to sell the shoddy of the world's remnant counters has always been something of a puzzle to this writer. Yes, I know that the media of advertising is limited and that pictures are pointed to mass appeal. But I also know—just as you know—that every picture possesses numerous "slants" and "angles" carefully calculated to attain what we call "balanced entertainment" values. Actually this balance is striven for—and carefully injected—in pictures for the same purpose that duckshot is used in shooting ducks. Because human emotions—like ducks in flight—are multiple and —like the duckshot—the scattering of our efforts at evoking interest and generating enthusiasm is pretty certain to hit many of the mass at which we aim.

'Directional' Channels Advocated

It has long been this writer's contention that we should separate our effort of advertising to fit each "slant" and "angle" of the photoplay to be sold, point our major sales effort in "directional" channels rather than the "indexical" avenues we have so long used.

To accomplish this means that the exploitation, publicity and local and national newspaper and magazine copy be prepared AFTER the film to be sold has been carefully analyzed and its audience potential broken down into as many segments or factors as bear promise of adding to the general "overall" or "mass" appeal of the attraction.

Acknowledging the very definite boundaries of the media at hand there is still plenty of "brain room" for the exercise of selective mechanics and factional approach. To be broadly explicit: The masculine appeal of a picture would be best presented for maximum returns if virile copy were backgrounded in bold lusty layout and inserted in Esquire, while feminine appeal possesses higher potential if couched in terms of delicate, romantic innuendo and inserted in the pages of Vogue, Woman's Home Companion, etc. The example may be carried on to the child, adolescent or teen agers, dance and music lovers and so on ad infinitum.

So much for the national newspaper and magazine advertising and publicity effort.

Radio, while not offering prospects exactly kindred to the literary field, has its facets of best potential from listeners, in the exercise of care in spotting announcements. For instance, follow or precede a well rated symphony program with a message conveying the facts about classical compositions, or other pertinent facts of interest to that element of listeners, if the film being presented possesses such qualities; Get ahead or behind a Bob Hope or similar program to expound comedy angles; Sell the drama slants to the Soap Opera dialers; the mystery to the "shudder" ear-benders with general messages at the Fidler and Winchell hours.

Fan magazines are most assuredly the best possible medium of reaching the "mass" reading public of theatre-going inclinations and the special full period broadcast can best reach the possible ticket-buyers of the radio audience. Selecting the media, (radio or newspaper or magazine) studying the type of reader or listener and styling art and copy so that it best fits the ideals of the person or persons reached, is the surest way of getting the utmost for the money expended in respective fields. The usual method of preparing two or three haphazard layouts carrying bromidic descriptive copy for use in all reader mediums and buying radio time on a catch-as-catch-can basis is an inexcusable and deplorable waste of time, effort, material and money.

To a certain extent producers and distributors have made some progress along the lines mentioned above but the effort has been altogether too sporadic and in no instance—within my recollection—has it been as thorough and comprehensive as existing facilities permit.

Press books should be prepared with a keener eye to the "directional" than to the "indexical" form of selling and material supplied to enable the exhibitor to take advantage of the various "slants" and "angles" contained of the film and bear promise of attracting other than regular customers. Fashion, travel, sport, foreign,

Theatre Air Marker

When Ken Wright, manager of FWC's San Carlos Theatre, San Carlos, Calif., heard that the city wanted to be identified from the air and that civic organizations and interested friends wanted to create a fund to build and maintain an appropriate sign for that purpose, he decided to do something about it. In less time than it takes to say Diiodooxymercuriresorcinsulfonphthalein - sodium, Wright had tied in with the city fathers, the Chamber of Commerce and the Johnson Paint Company, with the result than an air marker with letters ten feet high and 80 feet in length has been placed atop his theatre. Funds for the sign were provided by civic groups, and the paint was donated by the Johnson Company. A surplus in the fund will be retained for maintenance.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Indicates ABCs of 'Directional' Ads

Fan Club, hobbies, labor background, are but a few of the elements that offer possibilities to intrigue extra patronage.

Let me set down a few ABC's about the advantages of "directional" over "indexical" selling before going on to the ways and means by which the local exhibitor can profit by the conversion.

In our present practice theatre fronts, outdoor billing, newspaper copy, newspaper readers, radio announcements and herald or handbill distribution can all be categoried as "indexical" selling. In other words we are simply scattering messages promiscuously about what we have to sell and where it can be brought and hoping to reach enough folks who "happen" to want what we have to sell. That's not selling. That's peddling.

'Peddling' Necessary

Now let's admit right here that a certain amount of "peddling" practices are necessary to put theatre attractions before the general public. Front displays and marquee attraction boards come under this heading since the sole function—aside from identification duty—is to catch the attention of passersby and show shoppers. As currently practiced—in the great majority of instances—the highly expensive newspaper advertisment performs only "indexical" or "peddling" duty. Its deliberate placement on a page devoted to amusements practically guarantees that it will be seen only by those who are shopping for entertainment.

The use of larger space, more elaborate art layout, etc. can only be viewed as an expensive attempt to influence patronage from the same restricted potential—the show shopper. And it can conservatively be said that in these days of convenient neighborhood, theatres, brief clearances, and "wised up" customers, the photoplay enjoying a so-called "banner" newspaper ad campaign returns but a modicum of its attendance potential. The amusement page ad is an "indexical" ad directed exclusively to people already interested in amusement and in this category a few inches of well phrased and well presented copy can be depended on to do as good a job as a few columns.

This article is not intended to discourage such "indexical" advertising as is necessary and proven profitable to the theatre.

It is intended to influence careful study of present advertising budgets with a view of reallocating expenditures and eliminating as much as is practical of the "indexical" effort and conversion of the money and effort so acquired into "directional" advertising channels.

It is intended to discourage the all too prevalent practice of using "upped" advertising budgets—and funds placed at the disposal of theatres by distributors for cooperative ad campaigns—for the sole purpose of amplifying, augmenting or extending normal advertising practices.

It is definitely intended to persuade exhibitors to examine advertising expenditures closely; to provide adequately but not extravagantly for "mass appeal" or "indexical" effort; to avoid routine effort of long standing and effect frequent changes in methods, materials and cooperators and to eliminate all effort and expense that fails to offer flattering potential of profitable returns in tickets sold.

Encourages Study

It is intended to encourage more careful study of the "slants" and "angles" of coming film attractions with a view of determining such incidents, backgrounds or factional content as will lend themselves to the more profitable "directional" advertising approach.

Now for a few ABC's about "directional" advertising and what it offers in the way of added business to the theatre instituting such effort. The illustrations will, of necessity, be broad for the purpose

SOUNDHEADS

Cleanliness.—Soundheads must be kept scrupulously clean.

Should Be Cleaned Daily

Optical surfaces should be cleaned daily, using lens cleaning tissue. Exciter lamp and socket contacts must be kept not only clean but burnished, using crocus cloth for the latter purpose.

Keep 'Face' Optically Clean

The "face" of the photocell should be kept optically clean. Any oil that leaks from parts requiring lubrication, or that seeps into the soundhead from the projector, should be thoroughly cleaned off, and further leakage or seepage prevented. Oil, by attacking the rubber insulation of the photocell wiring, will eventually produce noisy sound. The wiring will then have to be replaced.

Oil Moving Parts Regularly

Lubrication.—Proper lubrication should not be neglected. The moving parts should be oiled regularly in scrupulous accordance with the manufacturer's instructions.

Moving Parts.—All moving parts must be kept in proper adjustment; idler rollers adjusted to rotate freely. Sprockets with worn or undercut teeth should be replaced promptly, as in projectors.

Will Make Sound Noisy

Photocells.—Photocell electrical connections should be kept tight to their respective posts. The slightest imperfection of contact will make sound noisy. Spare, pre-tested photocells should be kept on hand, in an accessible location.

Leave It to the Inspector

Optical Lens.—If the theatre is receiving regular sound service, the projectionists should not as a rule make any attempt to re-focus the optical lens, but leave that to the sound service inspector.

Replace Sagging Filaments

Exciter Lamps.—Exciter lamps with sagging filaments should be replaced at once; sound of the highest quality cannot be obtained when such lamps are used. Unless the of provoking instant understanding. But the principals will be the more apparent and consequently (I Hope) the more easily applied:

Suppose your picture contains bowling, tennis, skating, baseball, football or other sports sequences. In such instances a postal card to followers of such activities—whose names can be secured from sporting goods merchants, coaches, and other sources—will prove an inexpensive way of possibly enticing attendance and surely acquainting the recipient of your desire to make your theatre of service.

Again, suppose your picture is backgrounded in the coal mines; building construction; ship building, etc., etc. A list of followers of such activities and a card sent to their homes is certain to increase the box-office "take" and the prestige of your theatre.

Beautiful garden scenery is of interest to the members of the local Garden Club. Scenes of foreign lands possess the magnetism of nostalgia for emigres from such countries and—in most instances—for their children.

Historic content is certain to be of interest to history students and contact with instructors and educators is sure fire good will and holds high potential of increased business.

The list goes on and on indefinitely through dance, music, fan clubs, all manners of occupational effort, hobbies, etc. All the exhibitor has to do is acquaint himself with his coming films—and synopses in press books will help materially—and select the most profitable type of "directional" advertising for his theatre. By arranging for some type of "directional" advertising on every picture it will be but a short time until most of the difficult-to-interest customers have been personally solicited one or more times. That kind of interest in their hobbies, occupations and likes is certain to be appreciated and just as certain to reflect itself in added revenue.

This discourse could continue way into the wee small hours but space limitations prohibit. I know I've failed to cover billboards and a couple of other advertising forms and will attempt to go into these at a future date.

One thing is certain. The type and tenor of pictures is due for a change—we've already had samples—and it will be necessary for exhibitors who want to keep the customers coming to put out some new and plainly written markers to lead new feet toward his box-office.

Better start getting ready now to put some new "kick" into your effort if you expect to continue getting a "kick" out of your business.

Hometown Movies Ace Promotional Activity

Hometown Movies are not new in the field of theatre promotion, but if the stunt has never been used in an area it is an institutionalizing promotion which, if conducted properly, can add a lot of money to the box-office for a period of several days when the completed film is shown, and at various times when scenes are being shot in the theatre itself.

Just recently, Carl Mahne, acting Washington district manager for National Theatres, selected L. R. Kastner's American Theatre in Bellingham, Washington, as the scene of sort of an experiment along the Hometown Movies line with extraordinary success.

The stunt works like this: A full length color picture is made from a more or less standard script and it's called "Life in Bellingham" or the name of any other town. The theatre manager works with the camera crew to get an honest cross-section of the city's life, including the workings of the city council, churches, street scenes, the police department, the schools, chamber of commerce meetings, how the daily newspaper is put together, baby shows, fashion line-ups and any other subject, limited only by the time set for the finished production. If a regular Saturday matinee kid show is part of the theatre's activities, the photographing of that show on a given Saturday usually produces an overflowing house, including a large proportion of adults. At Kastner's baby show, which he made an important part of the picture, more than 300 mothers brought their offspring to be immortalized in colored celluloid.

Circus Theatre Follows 'Big Top' Tradition

Thwarted Barnum's Dream Comes True as Colorful Kansas City House Opens

Residents of northeast Kansas City, an outlying neighborhood, well remember the St. John Theatre which once played late subsequent runs but had been dark for years. And those same residents today have reason to be proud of the transformation that has taken place, for modern showmanship combined with the time-tried features of the "big top," plus a liberal mixture of paint and ideas, have resulted in a showplace unique in exhibition history—the newly reopened Fox Midwest Circus Theatre.

Credit for the transformation into a house reminiscent of the traditions of the "big top" goes to City District Manager Leon Robertson, obviously a thwarted Barnum, who released himself from his inhibitions through the planning and remodeling of the old St. John into a colorful, atmospheric Fox Midwest neighborhood theatre. In fulfilling his ambition, Robertson let out all his yearnings for pink lemonade, popcorn, peanuts and wild animals, all a product of his youth as a country boy in Springfield, Mo.

Robertson's basic idea has been combined with the artistry of Frank Oschwald, decorator, and the technical skill of James Craig, stage carpenter and electrician, and the new theatre, situated near the city's circus grounds, has become the focal point of the neighborhood and is well on its way to establishing a profitable trade for its long-idle facilities.

True Circus Garishness

The front of the Circus Theatre, whose manager is LeRoy Nichols, has the true garishness of the circus in a combination of red, yellow and blue, lined with decorative panels of clowns and jungle animals, imitative of the best flash-front of a midway. Inside this front the patron finds himself in a lobby flanked by wagon wheels—the familiar rear of the circus ticket wagon.

Back of the concession stand at one side of the lobby are cages of simulated wild animals. Except for the cashier, who wears a red coat with the customary gold braid, members of the house staff are attired in clown costumes. By a special arrangement, the doorman, in his clown makeup, appears as a midget with Paul Bunyan feet, a spectacle for many a good hearty laugh from patrons.

Bawling, Barking Ringmaster

The circus theme is carried out even to the point of a ringmaster—a bawling, barking ringmaster decked out in top hat, frock coat, white breeches and patent leather boots. In stentorian tones he announces via a loudspeaker system the "acts"—each short subject and the feature—timing himself with a stop-watch to "come out even" with the beginning action of the film, from which title and credits are cut. Thus the background music of the film is heard behind the barker's ballyhoo, but only the stereoptican lights are played on the screen until the film

Misbehavior of Juveniles in Theatres Blamed on Parents

National Board of Review Survey Reveals Problems, Some Methods of Solution

Lack of parent education is blamed by two groups for the misbehavior of children in theatres, according to a survey conducted by the National Board of Review among Motion Picture Councils, Women's Clubs and P.T.A.s to determine the most prevalent problems of juvenile behavior and methods of improving the situation.

"Parent education seems to be at the bottom of it," one source reported," "as parents send children to shows for nurseries—leaving them there for two or three bills. They get bored and of course misbehave." Another group, while mindful of the fact that managers realize the need for vigilance and that ushers try to watch the culprits, pointed out that despite this vigilance, "what can you expect of a restless mischievous child who has sat through the same show two or three times because his mother left him at the one o'clock show and will not return for him until after five?"

Some of the specific misbehaviors mentioned were: "Legs over backs of seats, feet on seats, leaving and returning during show, popping sacks, paper, etc., from the balcony, catcalls, whistles, guffaws. Older youths over 12, 14 and even 16 years exhibit the worst behavior. Some vandalism, especially destruction of upholstery with pocket knives and damages in rest rooms and lounges. Council members have at times tried to quiet offenders, appealing for cooperation so that all persons in the audience might enjoy the program, or have complained to managers and ushers."

While not necessarily a misbehavior, eating seems to be one of the annoyances. Comments on this subject were: "Ban the selling of candy at junior matinees. It causes too much confusion. The children line up and become more interested in whether a certain candy bar is on hand. Then the machine runs out and has to be refilled, and the children have to be sent back to their seats. They all spend too much time on candy." "Rustling of candy and other refreshment articles." "Shortage of ushers during the war and the addition of popcorn stands in theatre lobbies have increased our bad behavior problems."

Solutions for better behavior were offered by those queried in the survey. "We believe children's misbehavior in theatres," one group replied, "is mainly due to thoughtlessness rather than a desire to destroy property. We have asked them to make posters of what is annoying in a theatre. The project has the wholehearted support of schools and of the local theatre managers; many managers have donated passes to their theatres to winners in schools in their vicinities."

Good discipline at children's shows is reported from another source: "Some time ago a neighborhood theatre raised the balcony prices in order to keep the young people downstairs under control."

Other solutions: "One manager stops the film until the noise dies down and has succeeded in training his audiences." "The managers have agreed to student rates in return for good behavior. Bad behavior results in loss of the individual student card which is presented at the door."

Discouragement is evidenced from some of the replies. For examples: "The manager runs a 'thank you for your cooperation in keeping the theatre quiet' trailer while the children hoot and stamp. It is disgraceful." And again: "Yes, we have a theatre behavior problem, but there seems to be nothing our Council can do about it. We would welcome and cooperate with any reasonable attempt for improvement on the part of managers."

Plan to Combat Slump

At a managers' meeting held last week in the office of Louis Goldberg, general manager of Fabian Staten Island Theatres, methods of combating the expected pre-Christmas slump were discussed and plans formulated for special exploitation, advertising and operational methods, which will be put into effect immediately.

NOW WAITING FOR SEATS CAN BE FUN. So reasoned the management of the Wisconsin Theatre, Milwaukee, when they instructed the Wisconsin Coin Machine Company to install a Seeburg Music System which provides music for patrons not only in the lobby, where the Seeburg Symphonola itself is placed (as shown above, right), but also in the smoking and rest rooms. Scene in rest room (left) shows feminine patron making her musical selection (nickels, dimes or quarters will do) by means of the wireless Wallomatic which, because of the absence of wires running to the major instrument, naturally simplifies installation.

Keeps Them Quiet

Bill Hamborsky, manager of Fabian's Capitol, Staten Island, has had considerable success in keeping his theatre quiet and orderly during Saturday matinees by giving the youngsters a little talk from the stage just before the show starts, explaining why they should be considerate of others who want to enjoy the show, and that for the benefit of all concerned they should refrain from unnecessary noises and running up and down the aisles. He usually injects a few words of caution about crossing streets after the show. His ability to tell a funny story well usually leaves the youngsters in a cheerful and cooperative frame of mind.

Circus Theatre Follows Tradition of 'Big Top'

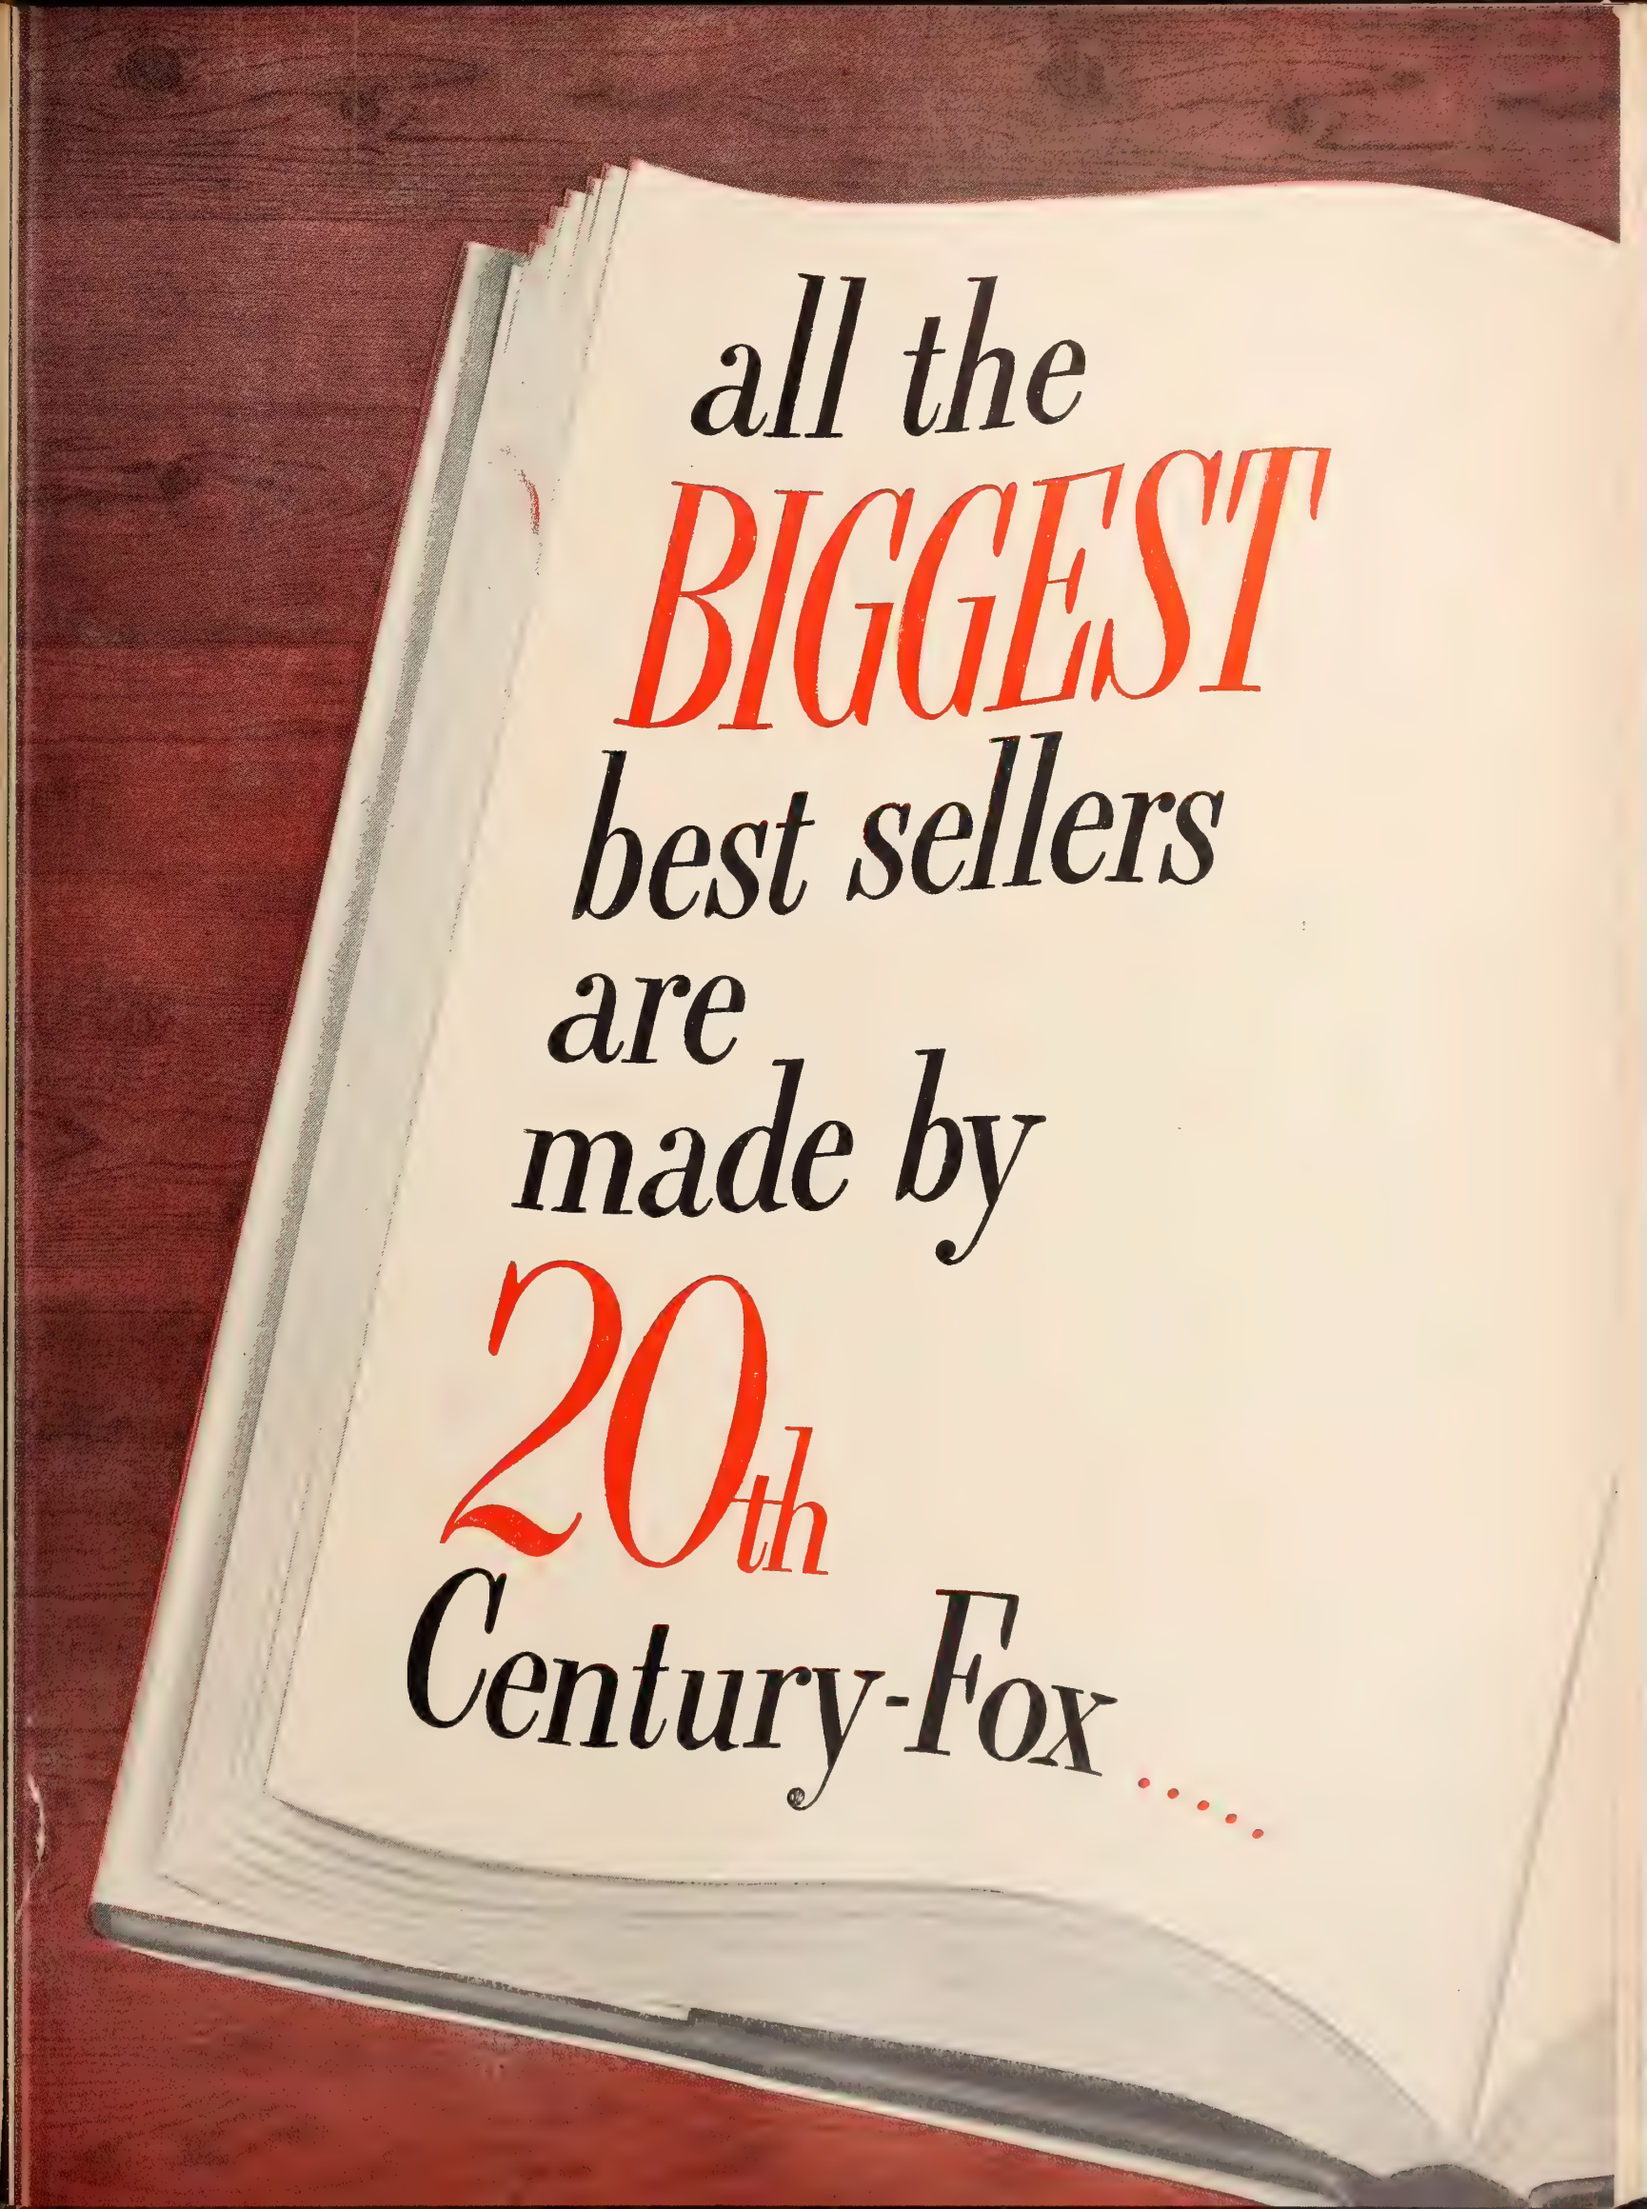
has run through to the initial scene, the first thing the patrons see on the screen.

The ringmaster as done by Buddy Black, KCKN staff announcer, has proved to be a novel introduction technique, especially good for one-performance shows. In continuous operation policies the ringmaster has not worked out too well with the continually changing audience. The ringmaster did his work well for the opening week and will be used henceforth on special occasions. The stereoptican lights are retained on titles, however, without use of the runner, still giving the circus atmosphere to the introduction of each part of the program.

The Circus opened recently with a policy of a feature and ten shorts at 35c admission. It plays only oldies, such as "Naughty Marietta" and "And the Angels Sing" on Thanksgiving day, and the current policy is double features. Robertson reports business to be improving and indications are that trade will soon hit a peak and maintain itself at a substantial level.

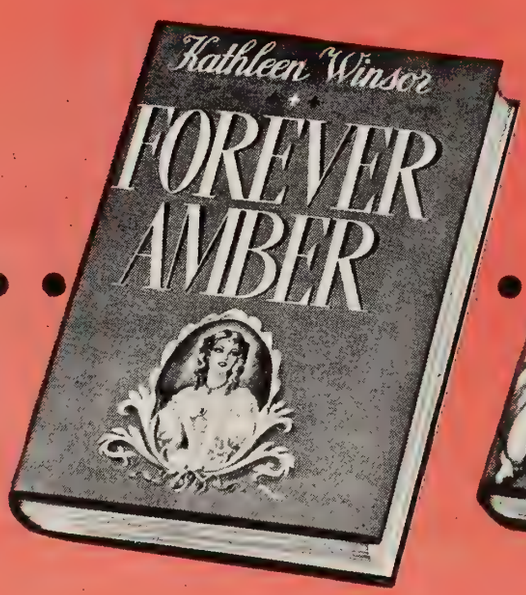
As one patron commented on viewing the novel Circus: "The only thing missing is the smell." Robertson's counter: "Just give us time."

Watch Overheating



Overheating of meters, switchboards, starters, rheostats, transformers and other movable equipment can cause bad fires. Not only should the machines be checked to avoid overheating, but asbestos mats should be installed around them so that any hot, melted parts dropping to the floor can do no harm.

Weight Scales Okay?



Nothing makes a person madder than to put a penny into a weighing scale and find that the thing doesn't work. Or that it makes a lady just a couple of pounds heavier than she just KNOWS she is. A periodic check will eliminate most of the grief.

Junior League in Tieup With Prestige Pictures

The 159 chapters of the Junior League of America will sponsor key city openings of Prestige Pictures' films in a tieup with this division of Universal under which at least four of the seven Prestige releases will be handled by the Junior League in the same manner as the League's concert series has been conducted, Lawrence J. McGinley, general sales manager for Prestige, told representatives of the J. Arthur Rank division of Universal during their sales meeting in Chicago last week.

Profits from the key city openings under this arrangement will be devoted to the League's community causes and will be used directly in the local communities where the money is raised.

The seven Prestige Pictures to be released here are "Brief Encounter," "Johnny Frenchman," "This Happy Breed," "A Lady Surrenders," "The Years Between," "The Captive Heart" and "I Know Where I'm Going."

McGinley also announced that Prestige has secured the services of Mrs. Elaine Wayne to act as special promotional representative on the Junior League project.

William J. Heineman, general sales manager of the Rank division and B. G. Kranze, assistant general sales manager, presided at the sales meeting.

U-I to Air Properties 8 Consecutive Weeks

The recent radio presentation of a dramatization of Universal-International's "Notorious Gentleman" was the first of the company's properties to be broadcast following completed plans to present its film properties for at least eight consecutive weeks on the Hedda Hopper "This is Hollywood" radio program.

Arrangements were completed by John Beck, vice-president and general manager of the studio, Al Levy, representing Procter & Gamble and Dema Harshbarger of the Hopper staff. The broadcasts constitute a departure from customary practice in that one of the eight programs will be currently in release and one will still be in production.

Beck has also stated that the studio expects to announce shortly that additional network shows, now being negotiated, probably will bring to fifteen consecutive weeks, coast-to-coast broadcasts of U-I's ". . . scripts, original properties and releases. . ."

'Two Years' Displays Boost Movie Edition

Two displays of copies of a movie edition of Richard Henry Dana's sea classic, "Two Years Before the Mast," in the windows of Brentano's, New York book shop, were used by Paramount to promote interest in its film version of the novel.

One display was on the Fifth Avenue side of the store; the other on the 47th Street side. The value of the display was enhanced by the fact that the edition was a popular-priced one.

Capra Film Benefit Dec. 20

The Boys' Club of New York, century-old organization helping East Side boys, will be the beneficiary of the proceeds of a special presentation of Liberty Films' "It's a Wonderful Life" on December 20 at the Globe Theatre. This presentation will be followed on December 21 by the world premiere engagement of the Frank Capra production which RKO Radio is releasing. Donna Reed and James Stewart co-star.

The benefit committee is headed by Mrs. Casimir de Rham. Prominent socialites will attend the special showing.

'Deception' in Tieup With Omaha Schools

In advance of the opening of Warner's "Deception" at the Brandeis Theatre, Omaha, the picture received some unusual publicity through tieups with the music and English department instructors in the public and parochial schools of that city.

The instructors discussed the music, story material and the acting performances of the three stars, Bette Davis, Paul Henreid and Claude Rains in classes of upper grade students numbering more than 20,000.

The theatre also advised every women's civic group by letter of the picture's musical background and the portrayals of the various roles. Another promotion was the spotting of placards in all Omaha beauty shops tieing in the part that "Deception" plays in beauty and charm.

Talent Search Unearths, Beauties for 'Copacabana'

An extensive talent search for 12 girls to appear in Sam Coslow's "Copacabana," musical for United Artists release, has resulted in the selection of a dozen beauties from more than 700 applicants.

All will be given picture contracts and present plans call for a personal appearance tour throughout this country, Europe and Latin America in connection with promotion for the film.

News-Type Trailer

RKO Radio, distributors of Walt Disney's "Song of the South," has compiled a special news-type trailer on the world premiere celebration recently held in Atlanta.

All on Xmas Day

One of the biggest newspaper advertising campaigns ever undertaken in Chicago to boost films will get underway on Christmas Day in the Chicago Tribune and the Sun when Balaban & Katz use double-page spreads to tell the Chicago territory about the holiday openings of "Blue Skies" at the ace Chicago, "The Razor's Edge" at the State-Lake, "Undercurrent" at the United Artists, "The Jolson Story" at the Apollo, and new films, whose titles will be announced later, at the Roosevelt and Garrick.

This will mark the first time in many years that new pictures will open day and date at all B & K Loop houses.

Buchanan to Handle Allied Artists Advertising

Steve Broidy, president of Allied Artists, announced last week that Buchanan & Company, Inc., national advertising organization, has been signed to handle the advertising account of the newly formed motion picture distributing company.

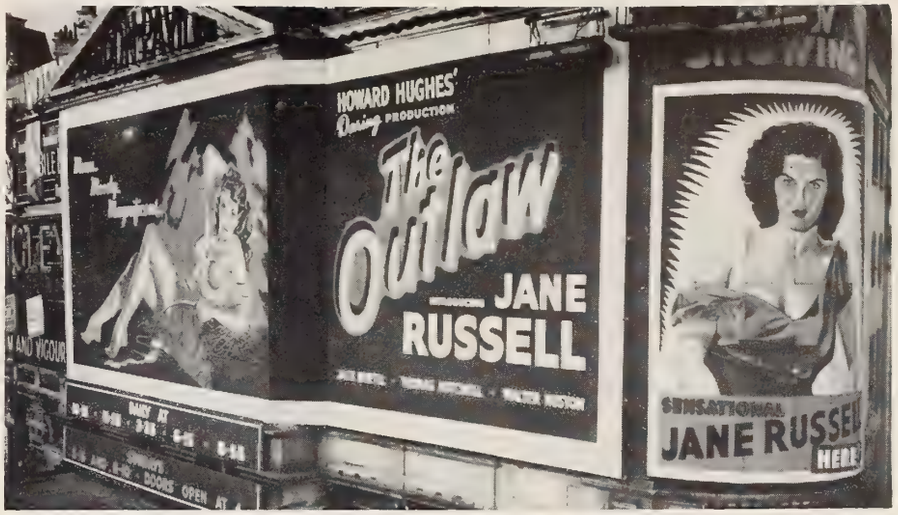
First film covered by the agreement will be "It Happened on Fifth Avenue," recently completed at a cost of $1,300,000, with Roy Del Ruth producing and directing.

Louis S. Lifton, advertising and publicity head, revealed that an appropriation of $250,000 has been set for the initial publicity and exploitation campaign, covering national and fan magazines, trade journals, newspapers and radio. This marks the first advertising budget for the newly formed Allied Artists, which will release exclusively pictures costing a minimum of $1,000,000.

It is understood that a similar allocation for advertising will be set on all future Allied Artists films, which to date include "Smart Woman," "Tragic Symphony," "Low Company," "Gun Crazy" and "Last of the Bad Men."

Get Watch, Free Trip For Campaign on 'Kid'

The 14-week run of Samuel Goldwyn's "The Kid from Brooklyn" at the Essaness Woods Theatre in Chicago broke house records for 1946, according to Norman Kassel, advertising and publicity director for the circuit. So pleased was Producer Goldwyn that he gave Kassel a gold watch and invited Jack Belasco, the theatre manager, to visit him in Hollywood for a week as his guest.



A cartoon campaign worked out by Kassel and Bill Prager, of the RKO publicity staff, kept public interest at high pitch during the film's run. Newspaper advertising, radio tieups, State Street store displays and a special 15-minute broadcast over WGN the day the picture opened, also helped to attract interest. —CHI.

'Kenny' Premiere in 53 Texas Theatres

The Texas premiere of RKO's "Sister Kenny" took place last week in 53 theatres operated by Interstate Circuit, Robb & Rowley, Jefferson Amusement Co. and the Griffith Theatres.

Nearly all radio stations in the state carried spot announcements and the Federation of Women's Clubs helped create interest by mailing out 15,000 letters in connection with the picture.

SELLING THE PICTURE

LONDON DISPLAYS JANE RUSSELL POSTERS. Unless complaints are received, B. W. Dudman's mammoth display for the showing of Howard Hughes' United Artists release, "The Outlaw," at the London Pavilion, will be permitted according to the London County Council. Only change required in the Jane Russell poster was a whip in her hand to replace the pistol, since British law forbids a lethal weapon being shown on a display board.

'Blue Skies,' Britain in Small Savings Tieup

Bing Crosby and Paramount's "Blue Skies" are benefiting from a huge nationwide tieup with Britain's National Savings Committee in the present drive to raise $2,080,000,000 in small savings this year.

Besides the use of Crosby's photograph and endorsement on 60,000 posters throughout Great Britain, the National Savings Committee is also distributing large standees for theatre lobbies, which are being routed to 5,000 theatres throughout the country. Furthermore, the campaign has tied up with the Paramount organization in key cities throughout Great Britain, and a "Blue Skies" Savings Campaign has been planned to hinge on Crosby's message to the savers.

CAPITALIZING on the popularity of Keenan Wynn, H. S. Mortin, manager of Loew's State, Syracuse, N. Y., erected this lobby display on MGM's "The Cock-eyed Miracle."

Film Opening Tied-In With Radio Station Debut

The opening of a new radio station, KYFM, in San Antonio, was utilized by Jack Chalman, publicity director for Interstate Theatres, as a good tieup possibility for the opening of "The Big Sleep" at the Majestic Theatre. The new station is owned by Frank Huntress, who also owns the San Antonio News and Express, so "The Big Sleep" received special newspaper publicity as well as radio breaks as a result of the tieup. Congratulatory telegrams from Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall, Martha Vickers and other Warner stars were read on the opening broadcast.

Other promotional activities included window displays of Raymond Chandler ("Big Sleep" author) books in six downtown bookstores, a Westmore Cosmetics window featuring Lauren Bacall in Woolworth's, a Royal Crown Cola-Lauren Bacall tieup including seven spot announcements daily for a full week over Station WOAI and the placing of 500 colored window cards in downtown and suburban locations, and a Resistol Hat tieup featuring Bogart including large ads in all three local newspapers as well as several window displays.

Civic Pride Theme in Stunt on 'Stranger'

Utilizing civic pride as the theme, Clyde Strout, manager of the Music Hall Theatre, Seattle, put over a successful stunt on RKO Radio's "The Stranger."

In cooperation with the Seattle Star, the theatre offered $50 in cash prizes supplemented by 25 pairs of tickets for politeness on the part of citizens accosted on the street. Accompanied by a reporter and photographer, Strout rewarded passers-by for courtesy to strangers in town. Amount of the prize depended upon the nature of the questions and the completeness of the answers.

Details on the newspaper tieup were worked out by Bob Haley, RKO field man.

Novel Ideas Promote UA's 'The Strange Woman'

Two novel promotional ideas were uncorked by Manager H. W. Reisinger of Loew's Dayton Theatre for the showing of UA's "The Strange Woman" which resulted in considerable extra newspaper space and radio time.

First, Reisinger arranged a telephone hookup interview with Hedy Lamarr in Hollywood, with questions flying to Hollywood from reporters of the Dayton News and Herald. Both papers carried feature stories and art on the stunt.

Radio Utilized

Then radio was utilized for a "Find the Strange Woman" contest which was sponsored by several of Dayton's merchants who not only paid for the radio time on station WING but also distributed circus heralds promoting the event. Five-dollar awards were given each day for six days to the person identifying "the strange woman" in the theatre audience from clues given over the radio and from a cut-out placed prominently on the stage.

Several stores in Dayton also gave window space to plug the picture.

Caricatures of Stars For 'Blue Skies' Selling

Lifelike sculptured caritures of players designed by Lenore Boe, New York artist who has made a specialty of this facet, will be used by Paramount for the first time in the exploitation of Irving Berlin's "Blue Skies." The artist has created a series of life-size figures of top members of the cast of the Technicolor musical, including Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire, for use in window tieups in a number of key cities.

Following a display of the art form in a window of the Fifth Avenue shop of W. & J. Sloane, New York, Paramount will try the medium with a number of leading department stores and smart shops, among them Macy's in New York; Carson, Pirie Scott & Co., the Fair Store and Goldblatt's in Chicago, and Bonwit Teller, Strawbridge's and Gimbel's in Philadelphia.

LOBBY TIEUP. The setpiece shown here was part of a two-day tieup between the Rialto Theatre, Joliet, Ill., and a local department store on Warners' "Night and Day." Fashions and models were supplied by the store. Flanking the setpiece are Manager Marvin J. Stockwell (left) and Great States Circuit City Manager George F. Mahoney.

Plant 'Margie' Contests Despite Newsprint Dearth

Neither newspaper policy restrictions or newsprint shortages seem to stand in the way of 20th-Fox exploitation men and theatre managers in their successful efforts to obtain newspaper space in one way or another for 20th-Fox's "Margie" through contests designed to attract the bobby-sox set throughout the country.

The Seattle Star, in cooperation with the Hamrick-Evergreen Paramount Theatre, for instance, used a two-column picture and daily story for seven days. Groups of bobby-soxers were photographed by a Star lensman, with the picture being reproduced in all editions the next day. Those girls whose heads were "ringed" were given a pair of tickets to see "Margie" and if a "ringed" girl answered to the name of Margie, she was given a $25 bond.

The St. Louis University News also conducted a "ringed" girl contest for their co-eds. This contest was given a daily photograph and story in the collegiate sheet for ten days.

The Cleveland News and the RKO Allen Theatre jointly sponsored a "Cake and Coke" party at the theatre. Members of debating teams representing Cleveland High Schools debated the question, "Are High School Debaters Squares in The Social Circle."

The New Hampshire Sunday News, cooperating with the State Theatre, Manchester, promoted a "Margie" essay contest. The title for the essay was, "Is There Any Difference Between Today's Bobby-Soxers and the Collegiate Crowd Mom and Dad Knew?" The writer of the winning essay received a $25 cash prize.

The Fox Theatre, Detroit, conducted a Jitterbug versus Charleston contest on its stage, with the cooperation of the Detroit Times. Contestants were restricted to mother-daughter teams who competed with each other for the title, "Queen of the Dance."

Chicago, Cincinnati, Omaha, Minneapolis, Akron and Des Moines all report "Margie" contests sponsored by daily newspapers or high school papers.

Girls Wear Pigtails As O'Brien Picture Stunt

Usherettes of the United Artists Theatre, Portland, Ore., at the behest of Jack Matlack, publicity director of J. J. Parker Theatres, wore their hair in pigtails preceding and during the engagement of a certain MGM picture there recently. They also wore cloth badges. The picture? Well, what cute little star wears pigtails? That's right—Margaret O'Brien. And what is her latest picture? That's right again —"Three Wise Fools."

The boys had a job too, and they did it. A crew paraded through the streets carrying signs made up like lollipop all-day suckers with copy stating: "Don't be a sucker and miss seeing Margaret O'Brien in 'Three Wise Fool'."

Sets 'Ladies' Matinees'

Ernie Grecula, director of advertising and publicity for the Hartford Theatre Circuit, set up a series of special Ladies Matinees for the showing of "Breakfast in Hollywood" at the Colonial and printed a series of coupons in the local newspaper offering reduced rates to ladies who presented the coupon at the box-office—HFD.

Forecast! 'Blue Skies' in Boston

Highlight of the exploitation campaign that preceded the opening of Paramount's "Blue Skies" at the Metropolitan Theatre, Boston was connected with public interest in the state of the weather. Paramount's Boston representative Arnold Van Lear tied up with the staff meteorologist of radio station WEEI and set up display posters in subway stations and other locations having to do with a consecutive series of weather predictions. Final prediction, of course, was for "Blue Skies" at the Metropolitan on its opening day.

The forecasts also were broadcast by E. B. Rideout, the radio station's meteorologist.

Window Display Angles Used on 'Big Sleep'

Jimmy O'Brien, manager of the Chief Theatre, Colorado Springs, Colo., made good use of window displays in his campaign on Warners' "The Big Sleep."

With the help of the Westland Circuit's artist, he arranged window layouts in the leading local book stores tieing in the published version of "The Big Sleep," with large placards reading: "For Good Mystery Books — Read Raymond Chandler. For a Good Movie — See 'The Big Sleep'."

In another tieup, with one of the largest local furniture stores, the placards in the window displays read: "For a Good Sleep — Use Simmons Beds and Purrey Blankets. For Good Entertainment — See Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall in 'The Big Sleep'."

The furniture company also plugged this copy on its radio program over Station KVOR and worked it into its newspaper advertising.

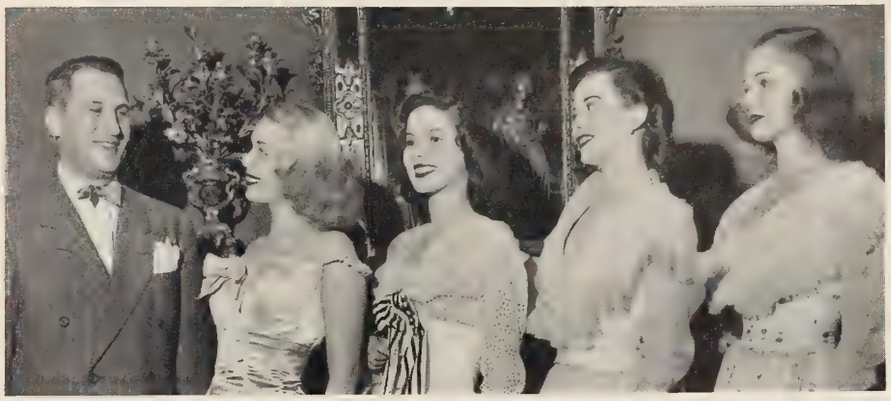
Brother at Screening

For a gag on "The Mysterious Intruder," at the Princess Theatre, Hartford, Assistant Manager Tommy Alquist invited Oscar MacLane, brother of screen player Barton MacLane, who appears in the film, to attend a screening at the theatre.—HFD.

Gets Herald on Desk of Every Child in 3 Schools

A little thought with "copy," careful attention to distribution, and "a good exchange herald can be box office dynamite," contends Manager Ed May of the Rosetta Theatre, Miami, and he presents his treatment of Columbia's herald on "Son of the Guardsman" serial to prove his point.

May coupled "Black Beauty" with the Columbia serial for Saturday matinee and then convinced Principals of the Little River Elementary, Morning Side and St. Mary's schools that "Robinhood" and "Black Beauty" were required reading and that they should extend cooperation to his theatre for showing pictures based on the two stories. They were convinced, so May was able to see that a copy of his special herald was placed on the desk of every child in the three schools during school hours. The teachers even checked the number of children present to be sure that "no child would be overlooked!"



'If the Key Fits . . .'

Guest tickets for RKO's "Notorious" were offered by Manager Jim McCarthy of the Strand Theatre, Hartford, Conn., to persons who could fit keys he distributed into a special lock on display in the theatre lobby.—HFD.

OH, TO BE A THEATRE MANAGER! Just look at the admiration Manager Lou Mayer of the RKO Palace Theatre, Chicago, is getting from four lovely models wearing the Ginger Rogers-Dolly Madison dresses from the Skirball-Manning production, "Magnificent Doll," in connection with the world premiere of the Universal release there recently.

'Cloak & Dagger' Stunt Scores in Chicago

Capable of duplication at little expense in most situations is the advance stunt worked out for the recent opening of Warners' "Cloak and Dagger" at the Roosevelt Theatre in Chicago.

A Cloak and Dagger Club was formed and the members were invited to a screening of the picture. One of the members was "Jumpin' Joe" Savoldi, the old Notre Damer, who served with the O. S. S. during World War II. Notices to city editors, suggesting that they send reporters and photographers to cover the preview, read in part: "You are invited to send your photographer to learn first-hand 'Cloak and Dagger' tactics from Wrestler 'Jumpin' Joe' Savoldi. We promise to return him to you in fairly good condition."

Stunt resulted in a good turnout for the screening, numerous column breaks and space in the news section.

Nut Tieup Exploits 'Brazil' for O'Rear

A display in the Planters Peanut store window in Harrisburg in which Columbia's "The Thrill of Brazil" was promoted simultaneously with "the return of the Brazil nut" was one of the highlights of the campaign essayed by Jack O'Rear, Colonial manager.

Other windows in the downtown area were commandeered for the occasion, and interesting displays set up. Twelve special exhibits made up by folders from Columbia, and mounted on easels, were spotted in downtown windows, and two music stores gave space in their show windows.

At Murphy's Store the manager gave the prominent Market street display space for an exhibit devoted entirely to records and music, posters, stills, 40x60s, and title card. Music counters in the downtown five and ten cent stores, plugged the songs from the picture.

A new jewelry firm cooperated by paying entirely for 3000 heralds which announced simultaneously the opening of the company and the opening of the picture. These were distributed house to house as well as at the Colonial and the jewelry store.

WHGB, local ABC outlet, broadcast a 15-minute program of Brazilian music the evening before opening, while that station and WKBO had spot announcements for several days.—HAR.

Rooting for Van

Before the opening of "Easy to Wed" at the Arrow Theatre, Cherokee, Iowa, Manager Dick Phillips sent a bevy of attractive usherettes through the streets bearing signs which read: "Hail the New Champ—You'll Forget Sinatra and Crosby when you hear Van Johnson sing in 'Easy to Wed'." There is no report on the reactions of the Sinatra-Crosby fans.

Word-Building Contest

A word-building contest through a local radio station was one of the stunts used by the M & P Allyn Theatre, Hartford, for United Artists' "Angel on My Shoulder." The person who made the longest list of words from the title received a $25 U. S. Savings Bond. Russ Ordway of the Allyn and Doug Tassig of UA promoted the stunt.—HFD.

Kistner Gets Results On Modest Ad Budget

It isn't what you spend that counts, it's what you do. For that matter, practically anyone can spend a lot of money—if they have it—with little difficulty. But to keep advertising expenses down and box-office grosses up through showmanly ingenuity—well, brother, that's the test of a real theatreman.

Out in East Chicago, Ind., Manager E. F. Kistner of the Forsythe Theatre is proving himself one of those "real theatremen." Kistner must necessarily adhere to a modest advertising budget, as must practically all small town showmen. As a matter of fact, Kistner is his own artist and creates some mighty attractive set-pieces for the lobby and front of the theatre.

Just to prove ballyhoo needn't be expensive, Kistner recently had a boy carry a "sandwich sign" to plug "Secrets of a Sorority Girl" during its three-day run at the Forsythe. Copy on the sign: "Girls! Don't Keep a Diary! 'Secrets of a Sorority Girl' Tells Why. Today —Forsythe."

This is Kistner's first attempt at managing a theatre, having been assigned to his present post last October by executives of the Voge Amusement Co., operators of the Voge and Forsythe in East Chicago. In his first weeks he is demonstrating the abilities of a virtual veteran showman.

Linz, Galanter in New MGM Field Assignments

William R. Ferguson, MGM director of exploitation, has announced the assignment of Norman Linz, now in charge of the MGM Show Builder Unit No. 1, as exploitation representative for the Seattle and Portland areas, succeeding Ted Galanter who has been transferred to the San Francisco territory.

Linz has started his new duties with headquarters at the Seattle office. Richard L. Schuette, formerly connected with various circuits, replaces Linz as manager of the Show Builder Unit No. 1.

BALLYHOO. Highlight of Mike Stranger's extensive campaign on MGM's "Easy to Wed" at Loew's State, White Plains, N. Y., was this street ballyhoo of two usherettes attired in Van Johnson jackets. Somehow they spent most of their time gazing into windows containing "Easy to Wed" displays.

Number Contest Sparks 'Sister' in Evansville

A novel lucky-number stunt, stenciled sidewalks and a tieup with the owner of a large, strategically located neon sign were highlights of manager James Carey's campaign for PRC's "Her Sister's Secret" at the Majestic Theatre, Evansville, Ind.

Carey distributed several thousand envleopes throughout the city. Copy stated: "This envelope does not contain 'Her Sister's Secret'—It does contain a Lucky Number" and went on to inform readers that if the lucky number inside the envelope corresponded with one of the several numbers posted in the lobby of the theatre that the holder would be presented with a guest ticket to see the film. Success of the stunt was indicated by the fact that the lobby was consistently crowded with persons busily comparing the lobby numbers with those received in the envelopes.

Manager Carey also was able to tie-up with the New Yorker cocktail bar and its centrally located neon sign. Carey arranged to bill "Her Sister's Secret" during the picture's run (see photo). He also covered down-town sidewalks with a stenciled legend about the picture and theatre.

EXTRA billing for PRC's "Her Sister's Secret" was arranged in this manner by Manager James Carey of the Majestic, Evansville. The Cocktail Bar's owner and Carey just got together (over a glass?) and this was the excellent result.

Hearst Newspapers Push 'Little Iodine'

A nation-wide promotion by the Hearst Newspapers is being accorded United Artists' "Little Iodine," first of the Comet productions which are co-produced by Buddy Rogers and Ralph Cohn. Adapted to the screen from Jimmy Hatlo's famous comic strip appearing in Puck, the Comic Weekly, "Little Iodine" is being pre-sold weekly to 20,000,000 readers of the Hatlo cartoon in 15 newspapers from coast to coast. These include the Albany Times-Union, Baltimore Sunday American, Chicago Herald American, Milwaukee Sentinel, New York Journal American, Pittsburgh Sun Telegraph, San Antonio Light, San Francisco Examiner, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Detroit Times, Boston Advertiser, Syracuse Herald-American, Washington Times-Herald and Atlanta Constitution.

In addition to a credit line for the picture in the comic strip, all promotion managers of the newspapers named have been instructed to cooperate with United Artists field representatives and local theatre managers to send "Little Iodine" over the top.

Under the direction of Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., UA advertising and publicity director, a special tag trailer to the picture has been made up which points up the fact that "Little Iodine" is a regular feature of Puck, the Comic Weekly.

Ackery, Brown Get Set For 'Meet the Navy' Film

Ivan Ackery of the Orpheum, Vancouver, and Al Brown of the Famous Players Toronto home office, have set up an extensive publicity and exploitation campaign on British National Films' "Meet the Navy," filmed at Elstree with more than 150 Canadian Naval officers, Wrens and ratings in the cast.

Orpheum usherettes have been wearing appropriate Naval uniforms and full cooperation has been obtained from the Navy, Navy League and local newspapers.—VAN.

2 Guys from Milwaukee Aid Columbus Campaign

Two students, natives of Milwaukee, who were registered at Ohio State University in Columbus were selected for a very successful exploitation stunt as part of the campaign for Warners' "Two Guys from Milwaukee" at the RKO Palace and Grand theatres in Columbus.

Tieup was made with local newspapers to cover, from a human interest angle, a tour of the city made by the students and their attractive feminine companions, two of the leading local models.

After doing the town in a big way, being interviewed, posing for pictures, etc., the foursome wound up at the Palace for the opening of "Two Guys from Milwaukee."

'Blue Skies' Windows Stir Feminine Interest

The promotional campaign on Paramount's Technicolor musical, "Blue Skies," is giving important consideration to the value of the window tieup as a means of stirring feminine interest in the Irving Berin production in advance of its engagements.

The window tieups aimed primarily at the fairer sex have taken cognizance of the woman's style consciousness and the important role that clothes play in her life. Hence they have been built around women's fashions—most of them displayed with an effectiveness that would do justice to a theatrical artisan. The sense of the dramatic is stressed in every possible instance so as to make as vivid an impression as possible on the spectator. Staging has played an important part in the majority of cases in order to achieve the maximum of artistry.

Blue is featured in the style tie-ups to capitalize on the title of the film. In many instances life-size, sculptured caricatures of Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire, who are starred in the picture along with Joan Caulfield, have been incorporated in the displays, often in action poses, some of them inspired by scenes from the production. These figures were expressly created for Paramount by Lenore Boe, New York artist. They often lend a touch of humor to a display.

'Rage in New Haven'

In a stunt for his showing of MGM's "Rage in Heaven," Manager Morris Rosenthal of Loew's Poli, New Haven, used a play on the words of the title in his tieup with a hosiery shop. The shop distributed bags on which imprinted copy said, "Would you kill in jealousy?" and then carried copy about "Rage in Heaven." Then: "The Rage in New Haven—our lovely hosiery."—HAR.

ALBANY

About 350 people attended the first annual Motion Picture ball, sponsored by the Variety Club of Albany, Tent No. 9 and held at the DeWitt Clinton Hotel Saturday evening, Dec. 7. Induction of Neil Hellman as Chief Barker and others of the 1947 Crew was a feature of this informal affair. The crew was inducted by Elmer Lux of Buffalo, salutation was given by C. J. Latta, and Neil Hellman gave the crew's response.

Motion picture stars who attended the event were Barbara Hale, Bill Williams, Dewey Robinson and Eddie Gargan. John Seagle, baritone star of NBC on City Service Hour, was one of the entertainers as was Gwenn Overton, lyric soprano, who flew in from Hollywood and came directly to the affair. Miss Overton is opening in one of the big nightclubs in New York very shortly.

Movie executives from out-of-town who attended included: New York, Fabian's John Eagan and Lou Golding; Gloversville, Schine's Mr. and Mrs. George Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kraemer, Mr. Sidney Deneau; Buffalo, RKO's Elmer Lux and wife; Pittsburgh, Fox's Welden Waters and wife; Boston, Fox district manager Ray Moon and from New York Moe Grassgreen and his wife.

The committee on arrangements for the ball was headed by Leo Rosen, manager of the Strand Theatre, Albany and included Milton Schosberg of the Grand Theatre, Dr. Irving Kaskell, Joseph Weinstein of Warner Bros. Theatres; Edward Sussee of MGM; Harry Lamont of Lamont Theatres and Eugene Teper.

Jack Bullwinkel, Columbia branch manager, has just returned from the Drake Hotel, Chicago where he attended the Columbia convention. PRC special field representatives Tom Guinan and Geo. Molden, as well as exploitation man Joe Mansfield visited the Albany exchange. Irene May Smith, secretary to Warner's Charlie Smakwitz, weekended in New York as did Martha Hoffman, MGM contract clerk, who attended the wedding of her cousin there.

Columbia Exchange will hold its Christmas party on Monday night, Dec. 16th, at Keeler's Restaurant. Mrs. Anne Joyce and Mrs. Camille McCaffrey are in charge of arrangements.

Visitors along Film Row included Sam Davis of Phoenicia; Clarence Dopp of Johnstown; John Cooney of Union Square, Pittsfield, Mass.; Frank Wieting of Cobleskill; Frank Wertheim of Chestertown; Jerry LaRocque of Warrensburg, Charles Deitcher, H. Bernstein and J. Perlmutter of Schenectady; Carl Nilman of Valatie and Shelburne Falls.

House Shortage? No

No house hunting for Morris Blacker who runs the Rio at Cloverport, Ky. Blacker, who bought the entire Rio building with a view toward expanding, decided that there was no use walking his feet flat looking for a house or breaking his piggie bank to buy it—if he actually found one. So he has added another story to his theatre building and will convert it into a modern five-room apartment where he expects to live.

PHILADELPHIA

Dave Korson, salesmanager for Columbia Pictures, and his wife announced this week the engagement of their daughter June Harriet to Marshall Seidman of Pittsburgh. June is a student at Pennsylvania State College, and her fiance is a senior in the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania, who served as an ensign in the Navy during the War.

Republic exploiteer Max Miller, who resigned last week, immediately joined PRC as an exploiteer in the local area.

Columbia Division manager Harry Weiner returned from the Chicago Sales meeting all pepped up about the new product. and Don Pasin, Columbia salesman resigned to open a haberdashery business in New York City with his father.

Janis Paige, lovely Warner starlet, took the town over last Friday when she came in to tell newspaper people about her new picture "The Time, the Place and the Girl." She visited the local historical spots, including the Liberty Bell, was a guest at luncheon at the Community Chest affair, and was interviewed in the afternoon at a cocktail party given in her honor. Exhibitor-visitors to the United Artists exchange from upstate included Harry Savett, Adirondack Theatre, Faust, N. Y.; Tom DiLorenzo, New Paltz Theatre in New Paltz; Tom Wisner, Oakland Theatre in Warwick, and Mr. and Mrs. R. Stravitz, Colonial Theatre at Monroe.

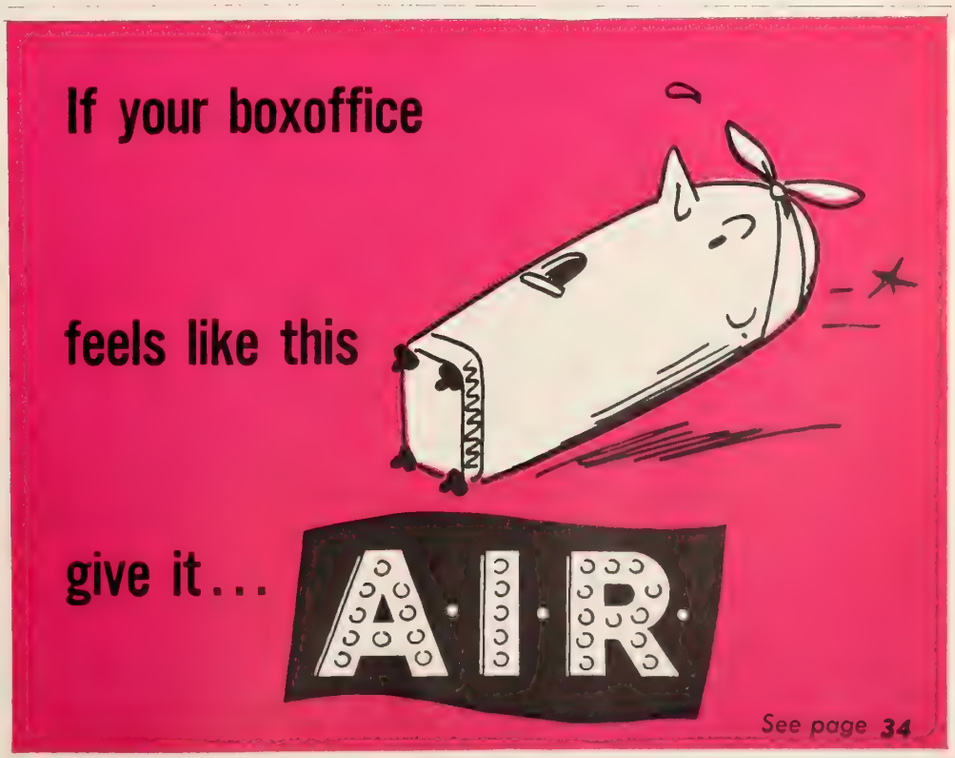
Bess Goldstein, secretary to 20th-Fox sales supervisor Moe Kurtz, is being reasonably coy about the number of years involved, but it can be stated that she will celebrate a birthday on Dec. 14. Two days later Estelle Sichelman, also a secretary at the same exchange, will celebrate her first wedding anniversary, so congratulations are in order all around.

Bernice Salzman is a new typist at RKO; Adrienne Lawner has been added to the Foreign File Department at United Artists; Marion Kessler is new to the Monogram booking corps, and 20th-Fox has signed Claudia Freeman to act as contract clerk.

United Artists biller Janet Moser is confined to Wickersham Hospital, where she underwent an operation, and Monogram biller Pauline Gibbs also has been hospitalized. On the other side of the picture, RKO branch manager Phil Hodes has returned to work following a two weeks' illness.

Late lights in the Monogram exchange can only indicate that bookers Etta Segall and Tom Pozin are really giving their all for the company's March of Progress Drive. At the same branch Pearl Prince, secretary to Si Boris, has set the date of her marriage for Dec. 29.

Vaughn Monroe and his orchestra will be on hand for the 20th-Fox Christmas party, at which Clifton Webb also has been set to appear.



CHICAGO

The Rialto Theatre, former burlesque-movie house, will go it on films alone, starting Christmas Day, in a first-run capacity. The lead-off feature will be the MGM re-release, "Rage in Heaven." The house, now run by former Oriental manager Jack Hunt, will close on December 19 in order to effect minor changes in time for the opening.

Figures indicate that "Henry V," playing here and elsewhere under the aegis of the Theatre Guild, will have amassed a run of 22 weeks by the end of the year. With Ralph Kettering as manager and James Keefe in charge of publicity, it is not too surprising that the film has turned into a record-breaker for its type hereabouts.

More than seventy representatives of audio-visual producers, manufacturers, and exhibitors were on hand for the formation of the Chicago Film Council, which will be affiliated with the Film Council of America. She was formerly associated with the local Columbia office. Grace Honeycutt has resigned from Warners to take over the duties of booking clerk at PRC.

TORONTO

There was a pronounced sigh of relief on the part of Ontario exhibitors with the announcement Dec. 7 of the calling off of the coal strike in the United States because the situation had begun to look serious for the theatre business in the Dominion. Officialdom talked of a dim-out in a large number of Ontario cities and a revival of daylight-saving time for the conservation of Hydro-electric power, although the coal shortage had not started to pinch normal activities. Curtailment of railway shipments to and from the United States caused Toronto film executives to take stock of available pictures but it was found there was sufficient product on hand, including a fairly large number of British pictures, to keep the projection machines rolling for six months.

New and old pictures of James Mason, British film star now in America, are having their day. A survey in Toronto showed that the Eglinton and Victoria, two first-run theatres of Famous Players Canadian Corp., were holding "They Were Sisters" for a second week. At the same time, four neighborhood theatres were playing James Mason pictures of earlier vintage. These comprised "I Met a Murderer" at the Bluebell; "Secret Mission" at the Manor and "Hotel Reserve" at both the West End and Grant Theatres.

After a six-months' delay from its original booking, "The Outlaw" has reached the screen of Loew's Theatre to give Torontonians their first glimpse of the controversial picture, following busy engagements throughout the rest of Ontario. The feature had been pulled from Loew's schedule when the Motion Picture Association of America at New York withdrew its seal on the display advertising. Although this move had nothing to do with the Ontario censor board which had approved the picture with film deletions and after the display advertising had been revamped, this theatre substituted "The Young Widow" for "The Outlaw" at the 11th hour. Loew's topped local grosses in the first week of "The Outlaw" so apparently no damage was done by waiting.

The Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors has issued its second list of features which have been approved for "Adult Entertainment" under the classification ruling which went into effect June 1. The latest group includes: "So Dark the Night," "Angel on My Shoulder," "Rage in Heaven," "The Dark Mirror," "Undercurrent," "Secret of the Whistler," "Bedelia," "Nocturne" and "Decoy." The first list was four times longer. That there is no shortage of product in Ontario is indicated by the fact that comparatively few "Adult" features have been played although the classification policy has been operating more than six months.

Arch H. Jolley, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario, Toronto, is continuing his missionary speeches for the film industry despite Christmas season distractions. He spoke before the Lions Club at Tilbury, Ont., and then traveled to Brockville Dec. 9 to address the Rotarians and is booked for a talk at a Kiwanis luncheon in Kingston, Dec. 16.

N. A. Taylor of Toronto, spokesman for Canadian circuits and independents in their dispute with the Motion Picture Distributors Association of Canada over the 1947 license agreement for rental contracts, said he did not understand the action of the film exchanges in ignoring the exhibitors' protests. The issue is against a revised clause giving the distributors the right to collect a share of proceeds on candy sales and sub-leases during the run of a participating picture. Taylor asserted that the clause means something entirely different to what the distributors say it means and their interpretation would not hold in a court of law. He suggested that the dispute did not preclude government interference in the film business.

The Hollywood Theatre, Toronto, ace house of the Allen circuit, is having a start made on its next-door theatre annex, the construction of which will provide a second auditorium for dual presentation at staggered hours of the one film program. In other words, the unique plan provides for the double showing of double bills with patrons having the choice of either theatre.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

Quota Question Again Rears Head; 'Outlaw' Playing To Capacity; Scotch Propose New Safety Precaution

Once again the sword of quotas hangs over foreign (particularly American) films as government officials take what many trade-wise people regard to be an unwelcome interest in pictures. But the quota, of course, can be a two-edged sword, for while the critics pan them, the score shows that Hollywood films do make big money at the box-office and produce, therefore, a nice income for the Treasury in the form of tax returns.

Should imports be restricted, many cinemas would have to close, as there is insufficient home product even to keep independent showmen from being sued for non-compliance with the Quota Act. Furthermore, the flow of new product is being bolstered by a record number of revivals.

Parliament also debated the children's cinema clubs and despite much common sense being advanced by members in their favor, a public inquiry will investigate alleged detrimental influences.

Busiest man in London is Manager S. Still of the London Pavilion where "The Outlaw" has opened to terrific business despite a trade and lay press panning. Line taken was that picture was mediocre and laughable rather than shocking. After the tremendous publicity build up, cinemagoers are seeing it to form their own opinion.

Monsieur Fourre-Cormeray, Director General of the Cinematographie Francais, visited London for the re-opening of Korda's Rialto and told me that as a result of the new Franco-American film agreement, Hollywood pictures, long excluded from the Continent, are enjoying a boom. French quota law stipulates that home product must be played for four weeks in every quarter.

Lou Jackson encourages visitors to his studios and none are more welcome than showmen who drop in to see how his future offerings are shaping. Recently I motored down to Elstree with Herbert Dawson and some of his Yorkshire friends who were taking advantage of this open house.

Friendliness and serenity strike one most about this studio where nobody seems to raise their voice. When Lou arrived on the set for the first time that day Robert Morley greeted him with "Hello, Sunshine."

Current production is a fantasy, "No Nightingales," in which Robert Morley and Felix Aylmer appear as earth bound spirits and are obviously revelling in their parts.

Following the CEA deputation to Major R. Baker of Ealing regarding the rentals for "The Overlanders," it has been decided that those independents who normally show the same program as the Odeon may play this picture for 25 per cent. This means that it can be shown as a double feature bill with "Bride Wore Boots" for a total rental of 50 per cent. So the CEA storm subsides.

PITTSBURGH

Quick action on the part of Joseph Cevario, owner and operator of the Valley Theatre, Brackenridge, Pa., prevented a mass tragedy when forty children, attending a kiddies' matinee in his theatre on Saturday last were overcome by carbon monoxide. Due to good ventilation the children became ill and left the theatre before reaching unconsciousness, and immediately upon discovering something was wrong, Cevario closed the theatre and dismissed all patrons. The children staggered onto the pavement and fell to the sidewalk over a stretch of two blocks. They were picked up by pedestrians and taken to the Pioneer Fire Department, where oxygen was administered by the firemen and physicians who were immediately summoned, and later taken to the Allegheny Valley Hospital for further treatment. Two of the exhibitor's own children were attending the show. There were no casualties and the children overcome were making speedy recovery according to latest reports. The exhibitor blames a gas burner, which may have a faulty flue, which he was using for heating purposes, when he ran out of coal. Inasmuch as the coal strike has ended the exhibitor is reverting to furnace heat and expects to reopen the theatre within the next few days.

ST. LOUIS

Eugene Jackson, usher at a downtown theatre, had his suspicions aroused when he saw the electric sign of the Central Furniture Company flashing on and off. The 17-year-old investigated, and found the store's credit manager locked in the basement. The man explained that a thief had made off with all the money in the cash register, and then barricaded him in the cellar, where he had been flashing the sign from a time switch in order to attract attention. Is curiosity part of the Usher's Code?

Nat Steinberg, Prairie District manager, and John Houlihan, branch manager for Republic, are personally backing the Republic Ramblers, an apparently terrific basketball team which has started off in fine style in the Sherman Park division of the Municipal League. The Orpheum Theatre, Marion, Illinois, a link in the Fox Midwest chain, did not find it necessary to close down during the recently-completed alteration project. The same can be said for the Windsor Theatre, Windsor, Mo., a unit of the Dickinson, Inc., circuit, which is being remodeled and re-equipped, a job that is expected to take at least one month to finish. In Springfield, Kerasotes Brothers have perfected plans for extensive alterations in their Senate Theatre. Modernization plans include new stage settings, drapes, curtains, carpeting, and rest rooms. Seemingly small by comparison, but in no way unimportant to the residents of Clinton, Mo., is the fact that the Lee Theatre recently installed an oil-heating system. Not such a bad move, in these days of continuous coal tie-ups.

Bud Moran, United Artists salesman for southeastern Missouri, was in the Marquette Hotel, Cape Girardeau, Mo., when a fourth floor wash room caught fire. ITS FAME GROWS GREATER!

Every day in magazines, in newspapers and on the air the build-up grows greater for M-G-M's Prize Technicolor Picture "THE YEARLING."

MILLIONS HEARD THIS RAVE ON JIMMY FIDLER'S NATIONWIDE BROADCAST!

The quotation below is typical of the praise this picture gets. On Jimmy Fidler's program, Sunday night, November 24, 1946, he said:

"The pick of the pictures. THE YEARLING, a 5 bell picture. THE YEARLING is one of the three best motion pictures I have ever seen. It throbs with love and faith. It's packed with suspense, sobs and laughter. It is clean and wholesome and I think every man, woman and child should see THE YEARLING."

"This is the Year of The YEARLING!"

THE BOX OFFICE SLANT

Silver Range

Monogram Western 53 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Good Western with plenty of action and the usual smooth performances of Johnny Mack Brown and Raymond Hatton.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should be a winner for any exhibitor who shows this type of product, with Brown a constant draw at the ticket window.

Cast: Johnny Mack Brown, Raymond Hatton, Jan Bryant, Stanford Jolley, Terry Frost, Eddie Parker, Ted Adams, Frank LaRue, Cactus Mack, Lane Bradford. Credits: Supervisor, Charles J. Bigelow. Director, Lambert Hillyer. Original screenplay, J. Benton Cheney. Photography, Harry Neumann.

Plot: Johnny Mack Brown and sidekick Raymond Hatton play range detectives to find the key to the mysterious disappearance of a rancher. Before they surprise a gang, which has been shipping silver illegally across the border under the guise of wheat, they have several wrong suspects. Everything turns out all right, however, with the culprits brought to justice.

Comment: It is difficult to find a Western star on the screen today who can better Johnny Mack Brown in smoothness of performance in his particular sphere. Brown uses no singing or other assists in his delivery; he merely employs a steady smile and quick actions that delight the fans. Raymond Hatton makes a perfect foil for Johnny, and the rest of the cast are very good. Director Lambert Hillyer maintains a rapid pace filled with enough action to satisfy Western addicts. Exhibitors will find that the kids and action fans who have gone for the Brown series so heavily in the past will be pleased with this latest release.

The Time, the Place and the Girl

(Technicolor)

Warner Bros. Comedy with Music 108 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Elaborate production numbers and several catchy tunes may compensate in some measure for the all-too-familiar plot. Should please the average moviegoer.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: That it's in Technicolor and teams Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson are ample reasons why this film should do well at most box-offices.

Cast: Dennis Morgan Jack Carson, Janis Paige, Martha Vickers, S. Z. Sakall, Alan Hale, Angela Greene, Donald Woods, Florence Bates, Carmen Cavallero and his Orchestra, Condos Brothers, Chandra Kaly and His Dancers. Credits: Produced by Alex Gottlieb. Directed by David Butler. Screenplay by Francis Swann, Agnes Christine Johnson and Lynn Starling. Original story by Leonard Lee. Photography, William V. Skall and Arthur Edeson.

Plot: Four young people financed by an oil man in their night club venture encounter trouble when the maestro next door, and his opera-minded wife, have an injunction served on them, threatening to close the show. Then it's up to the foursome to talk the maestro into helping them, and his daughter into starring in their show. When the final curtain goes down, even the wife is swaying to the rhythm of their music, and all is well.

Comment: Except for the elaborate production numbers and the several catchy tunes, among them Solid Citizen From the South and Thousand Dreams, played by Carmen Cavallero, this latest Dennis Morgan-Jack Carson picture has little to offer in the way of story value. Right after the opening scenes, the reason for this becomes apparent, for the picture goes into another one of those themes that seem to be the standby when nothing original can be developed. As outlined above, the story follows a familiar pattern, so that the audience will know just what to expect right from the start. To compensate in some measure for this defect are such specialties as the excellent Condos Brothers, Chandra Kaly and His Dancers and Carmen Cavallero and his Orchestra. LeRoy Prinz created and staged the musical sequences, and to him goes a good deal of credit for most of the film's entertainment. The cast is satisfactory, with Carson garnering most of the laughs in his role as orchestra leader. S. Z. Sakall helps entertain in his inimitable way, and Janis Paige and Martha Vickers present a few vocal numbers during the proceedings. Alex Gottlieb produced this attractive Technicolor picture which David Butler directed.

Unexpected Guest

UA Western 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Weakest of the current "Hopalong Cassidy" series from an entertainment standpoint.

BOX-OFICE SLANT: Should do well at ticket window, with Bill Boyd and the "Hoppie" releases firmly established with the fans.

Cast: William Boyd, Andy Clyde, Rand Brooks, Una O'Connor, John Parrish, Patricia Tate, Ned Young, Earle Hodgins, Joel Freidkin, Robert H. Williams, William Ruhl. Credits: Producer, Lewis J. Rachmil. Director, George Archainbaud. Original story and screenplay by Ande Lamb. Based on characters created by Clarence E. Mulford. Photography, Mack Stengler.

Plot: Hopalong Cassidy's comic sidekick, Andy Clyde, inherits a share of a ranch, along with other members of the family. When two of the heirs are mysteriously killed, Hoppie sets out to find the reason. He discovers oil on the supposedly worthless land and exposes the family attorney and his henchman as the crooks. The henchman turns out to be the supposedly deceased relative, who is very much alive. Before he is captured and turned over to the law, the bad man kills the lawyer and almost slays Hoppie.

Comment: This release suffers from a scenario that would have been much better for Abbott and Costello than Hopalong Cassidy. There is too much hocus-pocus and not enough he-man action, along the traditional western lines. The production isn't up to the par of previous high standards set by the Boyd series. Andy Clyde works extra-hard, but doesn't have the material. Boyd, as usual, is smooth and letter-perfect in his delineation. Una O'Connor's considerable talents are wasted on this effort; her name might help with some moviegoers, however. With all of its drawbacks, the picture will undoubtedly make as much money as previously better produced releases.

Blondie's Big Moment

Columbia Comedy 69 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Nice, amusing little comedy, very much along the lines of its predecessors. Dagwood gets in Dutch and triumphantly gets out. Good entertainment for the family.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should continue the box-office success of the Blondie series.

Cast: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms, Marjorie Kent, Anita Louise, Jerome Cowan, Danny Mummert, Jack Rice, Jack Davis, Johnny Granath, Hal K. Dawson, Eddie Acuff, Alyn Lockwood, Robert DeHaven, Robert Stevens, Douglas Wood and Daisy. Credits: Original screenplay by Connie Lee, based on the comic strip, "Blondie" created by Chic Young. Owned and copyrighted by King Features Syndicate, Inc. Produced by Burt Kelly. Directed by Abby Berlin. Photography, Allen Siegler.

Plot: Dagwood, Blondie and family return from a vacation to find that Mr. Dithers has sold the business in their absence. Dagwood gets in Dutch with his new boss and is demoted, but through his family's friendliness to an orphaned youngster he is able to swing an important business deal which gets him back his job—and a bonus.

Comment: Although Mr. Dithers has disappeared from the series, at least for this picture, and Dagwood has a new boss in the person of Jerome Cowan, (who is just as irritable as Mr. Dithers) this newest in the Blondie series has no reason for apology. Dagwood is just as fumbling, Blondie is just as sweetly managing, the kids are just average American youngsters and the long suffering mailman gets his daily knock-down as per usual. Even Daisy and the pups go their familiar way. Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake are becoming more familiar as Blondie and Dagwood than the comic strip itself, which is praise, indeed. "Blondie's Big Moment" is funny; it's clean, wholesome and nice entertainment for the whole family.

Green for Danger

(Reviewed in London)

GFD Mystery 91 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Enthralling mystery thriller liberally punctuated with "red herrings" builds to a suspenseful and ingenious climax.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Flawless scripting and characterization plus the mystery angle, should help to overcome lack of marquee names.

Cast: Sally Gray, Rosamund John, Trevor Howard, Alastair Sim, Leo Genn, Judy Campbell, Megs Jenkins, Moore Marriott, Henry Edwards, Ronald Adam, George Woodbridge, Frank Ling. Credits: Adapted from Christianna Brand's novel by Sidney Gilliat and Claud Guerney. Produced by Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliat. Director Sidney Gilliat. An Individual Picture presented by J. Arthur Rank.

Plot: A patient is murdered on the operating table. Detective Alastair Sim discovers that Trevor Howard, anaesthetist; Leo Genn, surgeon; Judy Campbell, sister; and Sally Gray, Rosamund John and Megs Jenkins, nurses, all present at the death, have strong motives. Judy finds vital evidence, but before she can tell the police she is stabbed. When Sally is injured in a murderous attack, Sim tricks the five suspects into performing their normal duties at an operation to "save her life." The ruse works and the killer is unmasked.

Comment: Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliat, the producer team responsible for "Notorious Gentleman," this time deliver a thoroughly competent "whodunit" and with red herrings unrationed build up a suspenseful and ingenious climax. Suspicion is equally borne by the six principals, and the denouement will satisfy the most rabid mystery addict. A satisfying romantic triangle between the two suspected doctors and Sally Gray is logically introduced. The scripting and charatcerizations are flawless. As the dour sleuth Alastair Sim is in his element. An actor to watch is Leo Genn as the suave society doctor who has an eye for the ladies. At present he is appearing on Broadway in Lillian Hellman's "Another Part of the Forest," but he is a first class screen discovery. Trevor Howard, who will be remembered for his fine work in "Brief Encounter," gives another polished performance, and if "Green for Danger" is released after RKO Radio's "So Well Remembered" his name will be worth plugging. Of the girls, Judy Campbell, Sally Gray and Rosamund John give uniformly excellent portrayals. The title, which is a vital clue to the mystery, lends itself to teaser campaigns. All in all this is an enthralling British offering, which is unfortunately handicapped from the American viewpoint through lack of marquee names. But perhaps the script and characterizations, plus the mystery angle, will help to overcome that lack.

Out California Way

(Trucolor)

Republic Western with Songs 67 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Enjoyable screen fare for the average western fan. The added novelty of guest stars in behind-the-scenes sequences of western picture-making should arouse added interest.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Smart showmen will utilize the names of the guest stars in their advertising and on their marquees, thus insuring above-average grosses.

Cast: Monte Hale, Adrian Booth, Bobby Blake, Hohn Dehner, Nolan Leary, Fred Graham, St. Luke's Choristers, Foy Willing and the Riders of the Purple Sage; Guest stars: Roy Rogers, Trigger, Allan Lane, Dale Evans, Donald Barry. Credits: Associate producer, Louis Gray. Directed by Lesley Selander. Screenplay by Betty Burbridge from an original story by Barry Shipman. Music score by Nathan G. Scott. Photographed in Trucolor by Bud Thackery.

Plot: A cowboy crashes the movies with the aid of a youngster and his horse. Given a featured role in a western, he proves good enough to steal the picture and thereby incur the enmity of the star. Seeking revenge, the star surreptitiously damages the youngster's horse, and the cowboy is blamed for the deed. Eventually the culprit is forced to confess his guilt, the horse recovers, and the cowboy is given a starring role in his next picture.

Comment: In its amiable way, this film should be exceedingly easy for the average western patron to take. Monte Hale, when not engaged in fighting with the heavy, manages to combine with the Riders of the Purple Sage to render several engaging songs. Western addicts will appreciate this glimpse into the mechanics of making a film, and their credibility in the action sequences will not be strained, due mainly to a well-scripted story. Adrian Booth is very attractive in her role as Monte's girl friend, and Bobby Blake performs capably as the young owner of Pardner, an intelligent horse. When Monte takes Adrian Booth on a tour of the lot, they manage to meet several favorite western stars, and in this sequence, the duet of Roy Rogers and Dale Evans is a standout. Among the catchy tunes used are Out California Way, Rose of Old Santa Fe, and Boogie Woogie Cowboy. Direction and photography are in keeping with the plot outlines as defined by Scenarist Betty Burbridge. All in all, "Out California Way" should have little trouble wherever this series is popular, and additional patronage can be assured by playing up the names of the guest stars in all advertising.

Lone Star Moonlight

Columbia Western with Music 67 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Just fairly entertaining musical with a background of the modern west. No shootin' or hard ridin', but the locale is at least on a ranch.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Obviously intended as a supporting feature.

Cast: Ken Curtis, Joan Barton, Guy Kibbee, Robert Stevens, Claudia Drake, Arthur Loft, Vernon Dent, Sam Flint, The Hoosier Hot Shots, the Smart Set, Merle Travis Trio, Judy Clark and her Rhythm Cow Girls. Credits: Screenplay by Louise Rosseau. Original story by Louise Rosseau and Ande Lamb. Directed by Ray Nazarro. Produced by Colbert Clark. Photography, George F. Kelley.

Plot: Ken Curtis returns to his father's ranch after a term in the army to find that his dad has mortgaged the old homestead to buy army surplus goods. Ken wants to start a television station but needs money to assure the government of his financial stability. He holds a show and auction to dispose of the surplus goods and wins Joan Barton.

Comment: This is just a fair musical which, in this case, really is not a western except for its setting and the fact that the players wear western clothes and sing western songs. It has more to do with the radio acts included in the footage of the tenuous story, each of which delivers one or more musical numbers. As a whole, the film is just fair but it will fill the niche for which it was obviously intended—as a supporting feature on double-bill programs.

Prairie Badmen

PRC Western with Songs 56 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) One of the weakest contributions to the Crabbe-St. John series, saved only by St. John's excellent antics.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will do satisfactorily in houses catering to action trade and Western fans.

Cast: Buster Crabbe, Al "Fuzzy" St. John, Patricia Knox, Charles King, Ed Cassidy Kermit Maynard, John L. Cason, Steve Clark, Frank Ellis, John L. Buster. Credits: Producer, Sig Neufeld. Director, Sam Newfield. Original story and screenplay, Fred Myton. Photography, Robert Cline.

Plot: Buster and Al save an old doctor, turned medicine man, and his daughter, from being set upon by bandits. It seems the old man once received a map to some buried gold from a dying man, but had been kept from taking advantage of this situation by his conscience. When the doctor's erring boy steals away with the map and the bandits follow him, Buster and Al contrive to save the boy's life at the last minute. The boy is sorry for his mistake and the old man is happy over his reward for turning in the bullion.

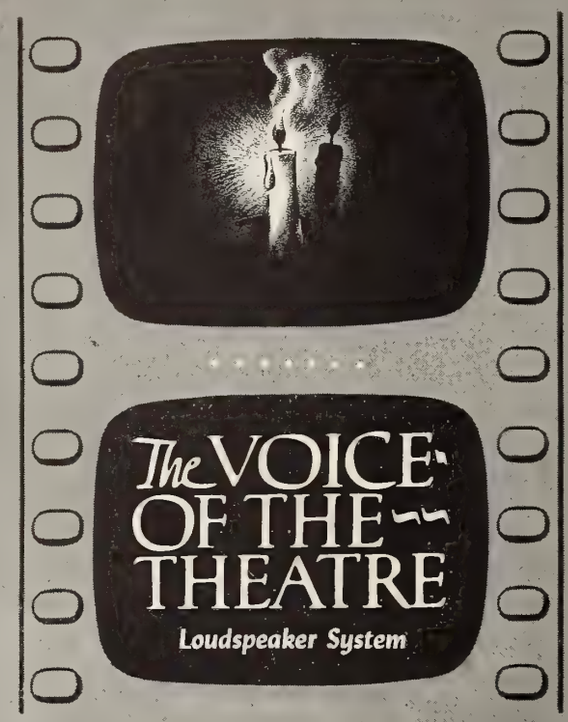
Comment: Perhaps it's because his series for PRC is ending and he felt he could afford to take it easy, or there might have been some other reason. In any event, Buster Crabbe is not up to par in this Western. Equally inadequate are members of the supporting cast, including John L. Buster, as the weakling brother, whose attempts to sing some songs might better have been omitted. Patricia Knox fails to measure up to the meager standards required for Western heroines, and Charles King looks much too obese to impress as a dastardly cad. Redeeming feature of this outdoor film is Al "Fuzzy" St. John, whose routines, for the most part, will provoke downright belly laughs. Production values are mediocre, including indifferent lighting and photography. However, since Western fans are seldom discriminating, this picture should get by satisfactorily in theatres catering to their patronage.

Mr. Hex

Monogram Comedy-Drama 63 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Another Bowery Boys picture for those who are entertained by this series. There may be parts unsuitable to the very young, so it might be wiser to keep them away. For others, it will be fun.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should be well received by the regular followers.



Cast: Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall, Bobby Jordan, Gabriel Dell, Billy Benedict, David Gorcey, Gale Robbins, Ben Weldon, Ian Keith, Sammy Cohen, Bernard Gorcey, William Ruhl, Danny Beck, Rita Lynn, Joe Gray, Eddie Gribbon, Meyer Grace, Gene Stutenroth, John Indrisano, Dewey Robinson, Jimmy Aubrey. Credits: Directed by William Beaudine. Screenplay by Cyril Endfield. Original story by Jan Grippo. Photography, James Brown. Associate producer, Cyril Endfield. Produced by Jan Grippo.

Plot: In order to help a young singer make a success of her career, the boys try to raise money entering challenger fights. Gorcey learns how to hypnotize Hall with a coin obtained from a hypnotist, and everything works out well until some crooks get mixed up in the game. But the Boys straighten things out and all ends happily.

Comment: The regular Bowery Boys fans will enjoy this latest offering from Monogram, for it follows the established practice of having them do something good to help the needy. In this case it happens to be a young singer seeking a career, and so Huntz Hall is the one called upon to go through a lot of hocus-pocus in order to bring about the desired results. Hypnotism and evil eyes play a prominent part in the proceedings and there is quite a bit of fun and entertainment in the boys' actions. The picture should be very well received wherever this series has a following. Besides the usual gang, which includes Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall, Bobby Jordan, Gabriel Dell and Billy Benedict, there is Gale Robbins in the feminine lead. She presents two numbers in a very pleasing voice and does quite well

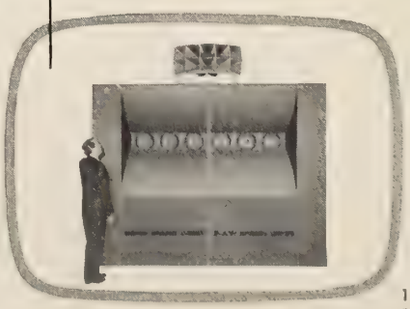
A One Year Old With A Long History

It's MORE than a coincidence that we celebrate the first anniversary of the VOICE OF THE THEATRE at the same time that we celebrate the twentieth anniversary of sound films. They're part of the same story. You might give it an impressive title like: "History of Progress in Motion Picture Entertainment."



Remember, twenty years back, the handful of theatres that sported announcements of "talkies?" You recognized them as the up-and-coming houses; before long, you counted yourself among them.

Today, if you were to look at the list of over 2000 VOICE OF THE THEATRE houses, you'd again see the names of the nation's finest theatres.

Call it foresightedness or showmanship. These theatres celebrate and sell their VOICE OF THE THEATRE installations as a mark of prestige . . . and you should be among them now. There is a VOICE OF THE THEATRE system to meet the requirements of your house.

with her acting assignment. As the hypnotist, Ian Keith makes a satisfactory impression and Bernard Gorcey again handles the part of the shop proprietor where the boys meet. Direction credit goes to William Beaudine; production was by Jan Grippo. Some parts of the picture are unsuitable for the very young, so it would be wise to keep them away.

Swell Guy

Universal-International Drama 87 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Stern drama built around a character unusual for a film story—he's a combination of extremes of good and bad—a sort of "tortured soul" captive in a body equipped with the most ingratiating appearance and personality. It is an interesting picture and as a change of pace from the conventional should do well for audience reaction where spotted with a light musical or comedy. Well acted and it will hold spectators.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Has the kind of punch that may win it good word-of-mouth publicity to buttress the not-too strong cast lineup. Worth while to exploit.

Cast Sonny Tufts, Ann Blyth, Ruth Warrick, William Gargan, John Litel, Thomas Gomez, Millard Mitchell, Mary Nash, Howard Freeman, Donald Devlin, John Craven, Pat McVey, Vince Barnett and others. Credits: Produced by Mark Hellinger. Directed by Frank Tuttle. Screenplay by Richard Brooks. Based on a play by Gilbert Emery. Tony Gaudio, director of photography. John B. Goodman, art direction.

Plot: The Duncan family and the small town of Carmelita welcome returning war-correspondent star Sonny Tufts. He makes money winning at craps, a game he runs in an office where, presumably, he is writing a book. The daughter of a wealthy insurance company head falls in love with him. His brother's wife is attracted to him. The one genuine love he seems to experience is for his brother's boy. The girl who loves him begs him to marry her, but just as he thinks he might turn decent he meets a former newspaper colleague and he gets drunk when he learns that the one woman he does love—a girl in Paris he married and abandoned—perhaps will marry the other man. A final heroic gesture brings his death—and he passes from the scene a hero in the eyes of many, a cad and a thief and a cheat in the eyes of others.

Comment: This is in the "different" vein which has won so much applause for Producer Mark Hellinger's previous offering, "The Killers." It is a story written, told and treated in a graphic, punchy short-story style. It is, perhaps, "caviar' and may have a limited appeal, but that cannot be said in advance of tryouts in a wide variety of situations. It is at times as bitter as wormwood, at others as tender as a tale of puppy-love in an apple-blossom atmosphere. The factor that will make it succeed with general adult audiences, if it does succeed on a large scale, is the way it will win back the affections of the women who may find it—fundamentally—too strong a dose of drama and realism for them. The script-writing, the direction and production are good, indeed. Sonny Tufts, in the role of the fellow who is both a swell-guy and an unmitigated heel does a part different than any he previously has played. He does it mighty well, too. Other fine acting jobs are turned in by William Gargan, as the typically small-town, average family man brother of the "Swell Guy"; by Ruth Warrick, the wife and young mother who is fascinated by Tufts; by Ann Blyth as the young girl who thinks she's smart until she really falls in love and tangles with life and near-tragedy; by Mary Nash as the mother who loves Tufts but despises him also. This kind of picture can add zest to the fare of motion picture theatres all over the land. It is a picture which should be widely exploited by every exhibitor who plays it. It is strong stuff, about an odd character the spectator will hate and love by fits and starts. Offhand, one would say it was slanted for sophisticated audiences, but there's so much genuine atmosphere in the characters and events in the small-town locale wherein the action takes place that in the community and neighborhood situations "Swell Guy" may also click smartly.

Christmas Gift

Sale of books of theatre tickets as Christmas gifts is turning out to be an idea which is taking Toronto and other Canadian cities by storm. The gift plan, started 10 years ago by the late N. L. Nathanson when he was president of Famous Players Canadian Corporation and speedily adopted by other companies, has developed an increasing turnover during the years and holds high favor in place of other gifts which are in the shortage category, such as cigars.

The Falcon's Adventure

RKO Radio Drama 61 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Plenty of action and a smooth screenplay make this an addition to the series that should entertain most audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Exploitation possibilities in connection with the radio show plus the picture's sure entertainment values should help at the box-office. Good for any double-feature program, and may stand alone in action situations on a weekend bill.

Cast: Tom Conway, Madge Meredith, Edward S. Brophy, Robert Warwick, Myrna Dell, Steve Brodie, Ian Wolfe, Carol Forman, Joseph Crehan, Phil Warren, Tony Barrett, Harry Harvey, Jason Robards. Credits: Produced by Herman Schlom. Directed by William Berke. Original screenplay by Aubrey Wisberg, based on the character created by Michael Arlen. Additional dialogue, Robert E. Kent. Photography, Harry Wild.

Plot: Suspicion of murder is slanted at Tom Conway and Edward Brophy when they attempt to aid Madge Meredith in delivering the formula for artificial industrial diamonds to an agent who has arranged for the financing of their manufacture. Miss Meredith's uncle had owned the formula and had been murdered by diamond syndicate representatives who know that its manufacture will ruin them. Conway and Brophy go through several hair-raising adventures before they are able to complete their aid to Miss Meredith.

Comment: "The Falcon's Adventure" seems to have more zip in its script than some of its predecessors in the Falcon series;

STUDIO ROUNDUP

United Artists Leads Studios in Number of Films In Production as Activity on the Lots Increases; Columbia Next with 7; WB, 20th-Fox in a 6-6 Tie

Although Hollywood studios last week were apparently lining up their forces for a showdown in the Conference of Studio Unions strike, there was little other evidence of the strike situation except for picketing. The number of pictures in production began to increase, with United Artists taking top honors with eight pictures actually in work. Other companies: Columbia, seven; MGM, five; Paramount, four; 20th Century-Fox, six; Warners, six; Universal-International, four; PRC, three.

UA Going to Town

With eight pictures rolling, United Artists is considerably active. Enterprise, newest addition to the UA family, is making its weight felt. The company pushed back the start of "Burning Journey" to December 23, from an original date of December 9. Artie Dorrell, leading welterweight fighter, will make his first screen appearance in the John Garfield starrer. Julie Gibson, the "Esquire Girl," gets a featured role for Garfield's initial independent starrer, which Robert Rossen will direct. Adolph Deutsch completed his scoring of Harry Sherman's "Ramrod" and dubbing has started for the outdoor feature.

Enterprise's "Arch of Triumph" which closed down three weeks, has been reopened for an undetermined number of days. Charles Boyer and Charles Laughton returned from New York to resume work on the film with Ruth Warrick, who returned previously. The last 3000 feet of film exposed in France by the second unit of the David Lewis production arrived at the studio.

'Paradine Case' Begins

David O. Selznick's long-postponed "The Paradine Case" finally started on December 11, with Gregory Peck, Ann Todd, Charles Laughton and Charles Coburn. Alfred Hitchcock is directing the picture, which will also serve to introduce Louis Jourdan, French film importation, "Vendetta" is again shooting, with the star's name changed from de George to George Dolenz. Stuart Heisler was set by Howard Hughes as both producer and director.

Dolores Moran was given a leading role in Benedict Bogeaus' "Christmas Eve," giving the film three leading ladies: Joan Blondell and Virginia Field. They play opposite male stars George Brent, George Raft and Randolph Scott. Edwin L. Marin is directing.

U-I Starts 'Ivy'

Patric Knowles was borrowed from Paramount by Director Sam Wood and Producer William Cameron Menzies for Interwood's "Ivy," which got under way December 11 at Universal-International. Joan Fontaine is taking the role rejected by her sister, Olivia De Havilland. Richard Ney, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Rosalind Ivan and Sara Allgood are in featured roles. Esther Dale was added to "The Egg and I," now shooting with Fred Finklehoffe producing and Chester Erskine directing a Finklehoff-Erskine screenplay. A production crew has been scouting seacoast backgrounds for "Time Out of Mind," the Rachel Field story before the cameras, starring Phyllis Calvert, Robert Hutton and Ella Raines. Picture has a Maine locale.

'Fugitive' Begins at RKO

Merian Cooper and John Ford started their Argosy Pictures' "The Fugitive" for RKO release, down in Mexico. Henry Fonda rushed to the location by plane as soon as he completed Hakim-Litvak's "The Long Night." Ford, who is directing, started the picture several days ahead of Fonda's arrival. Also appearing in the picture is Dolores Del Rio. The film is being made simultaneously in Spanish and English versions, with leading Mexican actors paralleling the English shooting with a setup of their own.

Tim Holt was given a new contract by RKO. Also awarded a new deal were Will Price, associate producer, and Bess Taffel, scenarist.

Final recording of the musical score for Frank Capra's "It's a Wonderful Life" was made for Liberty Films, with Composer-director Dimitri Tiomkin using an 80-piece symphony orchestra and mixed choral group of 40 voices.

Columbia Shooting Seven

Columbia has seven films rolling, a fine record. Samuel Bischoff started his mystery thriller, "The Corpse Came C.O.D.," for Columbia release, on December 9. Henry Levin is direct-

'Heller' Screen Rights Bought by 20th-Fox

"The Heller," a novel by William E. Henning of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, has been purchased by 20th Century-Fox at a minimum of $40,000 for the movie rights with a maximum of $100,000, depending upon the success of the book sales, according to the Harold Ober agency of New York, which handled the sale.

"The Heller" is the first novel ever attempted by Henning, who is a shorthand and secretarial science instructor at the Cedar Rapids Business College. The manuscript was rejected 11 times before being accepted by Scribner's for publication next summer. The story will also be run in condensed form by the Ladies' Home Journal.

The book covers eight months in the life of a teen-age girl. Research consisted of observations by Henning.

Seek Public's Help for Garfield Film Title

Enterprise will inaugurate a studio-to-public poll January 2 to find a new title for "Burning Journey," John Garfield's first independent starrer. Title suggestions have been sought from studio employes and certain outside sources without success.

The poll will be conducted by mail, with a synopsis and cast list accompanying each ballot slip. The search for a title will embrace five types of communities classified as to size and location. Largest city used will be New York, with the list ranging downward to towns with a minimum population of 5,000.

Fine-Thomas Form Clarion Productions

Formation of Clarion Productions to provide a minimum of one high-budget film annually for Paramount release was announced this week in Hollywood by William H. Pine and William C. Thomas. The Pine-Thomas organization will continue to produce six program pictures annually for Paramount, as it has for the past six years.

First picture on Clarion's schedule is "Albuquerque," the Luke Short novel which will star Randolph Scott and will be filmed in Cinecolor. Production is expected to start around January 15 with Ray Enright directing.

Goetz Sets Two Films For Durbin at U-I

"For the Love of Mary" an original by Fritz Rotter and Charles O'Neill is the first of two productions set by William Goetz to star Deanna Durbin for Universal-International. It will start rolling in mid-January with Irving Pichel directing and Joseph Sistrom producing from a screenplay by Harry Kurnitz.

Second will be "Up in Central Park," the Sigmund Romberg musical which, according to Goetz' schedule, will start in July. It will be filmed in Technicolor.

HOLLYWOOD

Cagney Buys Saroyan's 'Time of Your Life'

Screen rights to William Saroyan's double prize-winning stage play, "The Time of Your Life," have been acquired by William Cagney. Although Saroyan himself will not write the screenplay, he has authorized his agents to include his services as story adviser, and Cagney will have the right to call upon him for suggestions and additional contributions.

Producer Cagney plans to make the screen version with an all-star cast to be headed by James Cagney. Present posibilities are that it may be put into production immediately if the other stars with whom he is now negotiating are found to be available.

Film Personalities at 'Great Life' Screening

Some 100 film personalities who have appeared in films produced and directed by Frank Capra, William Wyler and George Stevens attended the first Hollywood presentation this week of Liberty Films' "It's a Great Life," which Capra produced and directed for RKO release.

The film's screening at the Ambassador Hotel was preceded by a dinner honoring the three producer-directors who, with Executive Producer Samuel J. Briskin, comprise Liberty Films.

WB Radio Series Trains New Talent

To provide all-around acting training for its younger players, the Warner Bros. Studio has launched a radio series, "Star Makers Radio Theatre," broadcast every Tuesday night over Station KFWB.

First program this week was a radio version of "Casablanca," with Michael Curtiz, who directed the picture, serving as guest commentator. Other plays, novels and originals from the Warner catalogue will be used for subsequent shows.

Shorts Series by Reagan

Ronald Reagan, Warner Bros. star now before the cameras in "Night Unto Night," will write and direct a series of short subjects to be produced by Gordon Hollingshead for Warner release. First in the series will be a subject dealing with training and riding horses. Cast will include Reagan, Jane Wyman and other Warner stars.

Rubin Signed to Direct

Benny Rubin has been signed by PRC to direct "Hollywood Hi," first in the company's new series of high-budget films. Ben Stoloff will produce from a script by Eugene Conrad.

Levy U-I Studios Ad Head

David Lipton, Universal-International coordinator of advertising, has appointed Herman F. Levy advertising manager for the U-I studios. Levy, for the past two years assistant advertising manager at the studios, replaces Clark Ramsay, who resigned to head the west coast office of the Monroe Greenthal Advertising Agency.

STUDIO NEWS & PROGRAM NOTES

Peggy Cummins Gets Title Role in 20th's 'Paddy'; Lee Garmes to Direct 'Paradine Case' Photography

Judy Garland has been signed to a new long-term contract at MGM. She has been assigned the co-starring spot with Gene Kelly in "The Good Old Summertime," to be produced by Arthur Freed. This will follow "The Pirate," co-starring the same team.

The feminine lead in Columbia's "Bulldog Drummond at Bay," goes to Anita Louise. This is the picture in which Ron Randell, Australian star, will make his Hollywood debut and is the first film to be made by Venture Pictures for Columbia release. Sidney Salkow will direct.

Barry Sullivan has been assigned to co-star with Constance Bennett and Brian Aherne in "Smart Woman," to be made for the newly formed Allied Artists, with Hal E. Chester as producer.

Peggy Knudsen was cast in a major role in the new Ann Sheridan starrer, "The Unfaithful," now before the cameras with Vincent Sherman directing and Jerry Wald producing for Warners. Zachary Scott, Lew Ayres and Bruce Bennett have top male spots.

George Rigaud, screen favorite of Latin American fans, has been placed under a term contract by Hal Wallis and assigned to one of the top roles in "Deadlock," currently in production with Byron Haskin directing. He joins a cast, which so far, includes Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas and Kristine Miller.

Director Louis King, who just completed the direction of "Bob, Son of Battle," has had his option exercised by 20th-Fox. King is currently preparing, with Producer Sam Engel, for the production of "On to Oregon," originally titled "The Valiant Seven."

Creighton Hale, former silent screen star, was added to the cast of Warners' "The Woman in White," starring Alexis Smith, Eleanor Parker, Sydney Greenstreet and Gig Young. Film is being directed by Peter Godfrey and produced by Henry Blanke.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Rosalind Ivan and Sara Allgood were signed by Director Sam Wood and Producer William Cameron Menzies for top feature roles in "Ivy," the Joan Fontaine starrer to be released through Universal-International.

Brian Donlevy will co-star with Robert Cummings in the Seymour Nebenzal production for UA release, "Heaven Only Knows." Jorja Curtwright has the feminine lead. In featured roles will be Bill Goodwin, the radio announcer, Stewart Erwin and Gerald Mohr. Albert S. Rogell directs.

Sheila Ryan has signed a seven-year contract at Eagle-Lion, the agreement to take effect in January. Her first role will be in "Love from a Stranger," the Agatha Christie story which Philip MacDonald is turning into a screenplay.

Peggy Cummins was assigned the title role in producer Fred Kohlmar's forthcoming 20th-Fox picturization of the classic, "Paddy, the Next Best Thing." Shooting is scheduled for early next year. Felix Jackson is writing the screenplay.

Ivan Moffat, production assistant to George Stevens, has had his contract with Liberty Films renewed. He is currently assisting Stevens in preparing the producer-director's first production, "One Big Happy Family," which RKO will release.

Lee Garmes, cinematographer, will direct photography for David O. Selznick's "The Paradine Case," starring Gregory Peck, Ann Todd, Charles Laughton, Charles Coburn and introducing Louis Jourdan. Alfred Hitchcock will direct.

Eight stars and headliners of yesteryear were added to the cast of "The Other Love" at Enterprise, for roles with Barbara Stanwyck in a special sequence. Group includes Gertrude Astor, Stuart Holmes, Wyndham Standing, Franklyn Farnum, Jean Acker and Wilbur Mack.

Ann Harding has been signed by Benedict Bogeaus for leading feminine character role in "Christmas Eve." She will portray the mother of George Raft, George Brent and Randolph Scott. Edwin Marin is directing.

"Tragic Symphony" has been selected as the second Monogram picture to be distributed by Allied Artists Corporation, new organization formed to handle high-budget films. Picture is the first to be produced by Symphony Films, headed by Benjamin Glazer and Nat W. Finston.

ing, with George Brent, Joan Blondell and Adele Jergens in top roles. Another recent starter was "Riders of the Lone Star," latest in the perennial "Durango Kid" series starring Charles Starrett and Smiley Burnette. Virginia Hunter has the femme lead. Derwin Abrahams is directing. Mark Dennis, 13-year-old studio discovery, also gets a leading role in the outdoor film. Colbert Clark produces.

Anita Louise was handed the femnine lead in "Bulldog Drummond at Bay." Signe Hasso was assigned by Producer Sidney Buchman to the top feminine lead in "Assigned to Treasury," story of the international fight against the narcotics traffic. Miss Hasso joins Dick Powell, who plays the male lead. Nearly all the stages on the Columbia main lot and some on the studio's ranch are being utilized, with over 40 sets constructed already and 30 more being made. The story encompasses the world.

Ted Donaldson again has the main part in "For the Love of Rusty," latest in dog series, which started last week.

Two Finish at MGM

Metro brought home "Cynthia's Secret" and "Undercover Maisie." Previously, the studio had completed its long-shooting "To Kiss and to Keep."

"Song of the Thin Man," which was supposed to start about December 16, now seems likely to be postponed until January. After three weeks of rehearsing and two weeks of actual shooting, the filming of an ambitious dance sequence for "The Romance of Rosy Ridge" was concluded. Scene involved 100 actors at a big community party following the Civil War. Final name for Van Johnson's leading lady in the film is Janet Leigh; she was formerly known as Jean Morrison.

Director Victor Saville has been shooting extensive Maori native scenes for "Green Dolphin Street," with 200 extras in native roles with Lana Turner, Van Heflin and Richard Hart. Richard Thorpe returned to the lot to direct added scenes for "This Time for Keeps." Gene Lockhart checked in for his role in "The Rich, Full Life," which Robert Z. Leonard is directing. George Murphy celebrated his 10th anniversary at MGM by working on this effort.

Producer Irving Starr obtained his release from an MGM contract.

Monogram Shoots Two

Monogram is shooting two, "Black Gold" and "High Conquest." The former, in Cinecolor, is on location, while the latter started at the studio and will go on location next week. Cast in "High Conquest" includes Anna Lee, Gilbert Roland and Warren Douglas. Beulah Bondi was also signed for an important role in this drama of mountain climbing in the Swiss Alps. Other recent cast additions were Fritz Leiber, Minerva Urecal and Wilton Graff.

Thurston Hall, Alan Bridge and Moroni Olsen were added to "Black Gold," which Jeffrey Bernerd is producing. Sets reproducing many features of Churchill Downs, home of the Kentucky Derby, have been created at Monogram's Ranch as backgrounds for the film. Nipo Strongheart, Indian lecturer, is serving as technical advisor.

New Independent Film

Louis K. Ansell, who came to Hollywood from St. Louis to form Southern California Productions, has started a feature in Ensenada, Mexico. "Women in the Night" is the feature being made by the new outfit, with Bill Henry, Virginia Christine and Tala Birell featured.

'Road' Set to Start

Paramount will finally get its long-delayed "Road to Rio" under way December 18, with Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour as the now-familiar combination. Daniel Dare will produce. The Andrews Sisters will work with Bing in the film, marking their first picture appearance together. Norman Z. McLeod will direct.

"Deadlock," Hal Wallis' eighth production for Paramount, started December 9 on location under Byron Haskin's direction. Cast of the New York-after-dark drama includes Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas, Wendell Corey, Kristine Miller and George Rigaud. Opening days' work was spent shooting prohibition era sequence showing hijacking fight between rival rum-running gangs. "Catalina" was pushed back from a December start to an indefinite jumpoff date.

Dr. Miklos Rozsa started work on the score of Hal Wallis' recently completed "Desert Fury."

PRC at Production High

Producers Releasing Corp., which usually has one or two films going, is currently making three. Jerry Thomas started a new Eddie Dean musical western, with Roscoe Ates, called "West to Glory." Begun on location last week, the film is being directed by Ray Taylor. Producer Ben Stoloff just completed "Return of Philo Vance," with Alan Curtis, Frank Jenks, Terry Austin, Tala Birell, Gavin Gordon and Dan Seymour. Basil Wrangell directed. It was shot at the Eagle-Lion studios.

"The Payoff," a novel effort revolving around basketball and gambling, started December 10, with Noreen Nash and Sheila Ryan cast so far. Aubrey Schenck is producing and James Flood is directing. "Red Stallion" shooting schedule has been extended.

Republic Filming Four

Lyle Talbot was added as a "heavy" for the Roy Rogers starrer, "Bells of San Angelo." Longest-shooting picture for Republic is "Gallant Man," now in its seventh week. Frank Borzage is producing and directing. The untitled Nelson Eddy-Ilona Massey starrer went into its second month, as did "Wyoming," Joe Kane production, which he is also directing. Cast includes William Elliott, Vera Ralston, John Carroll, Virginia Grey, George "Gabby" Hayes and Albert Dekker.

Six in Work at 20th

"The Ghost and Mrs. Muir" started last week at 20th Century-Fox, giving that lot six films in work. Fred Kohlmar is directing the thriller, which stars Gene Tierney and Rex Harrison and features Edna Best, Robert Coote and Natalie Wood. Joseph Mankiewicz is directing.

Vincent Price finished his RKO commitment and dashed over to 20th to start work on "Moss Rose," which Gregory Ratoff is directing. George Zucco, veteran character actor, was assigned the part of a sinister butler; and Billy Bevan, one of the original Mack Sennett comedians, was also added.

Two more members of the "Captain from Castile" cast joined the company in Morelia, Mexico; they were Lee J. Cobb and Chris-Pin Martin.

Producer Samuel Engel had his option lifted.

John Payne, Maureen O'Hara, Edmund Gwenn and others are currently in New York at Macy's where they are filming sequences for "The Big Heart," which George Seaton is directing.

Warners Add to 'Rose'

Warner Bros., after interviewing 600 applicants, picked eight beauties to be known as "The Wild Irish Roses." They will have assignments in the picture now going, appearing in musical sequences being directed by LeRoy Prinz. The studio called 400 extras for a theatre sequence last week.

Lauren Bacall started her role in "Dark Passage" on December 5, after a month on location watching husband Humphrey Bogart. In addition to Bacall and Bogart, the cast includes Bruce Bennett, Agnes Moorehead, Tom D'Andrea, Clifton Young, Doug Kennedy and Rory Mallinson. Fifty extras worked on scenes for "Deep Valley," Ida Lupino-Dane Clark-Wayne Morris starrer.

Marta Mitrovich was assigned a top character role in "The Unfaithful," modern romantic drama being directed by Vincent Sherman and produced by Jerry Wald. Wald is also handling production reins on "Dark Passage."

Art Baker, radio announcer and character actor in pictures, was signed for a role in "Night Unto Night." His last job was in United Artists' "Abie's Irish Rose." Henry Crouch, authority on old silver and china, is acting as technical advisor on sequences in "The Woman in White," period piece based on a Wilkie Collins novel. Max Steiner, Warners' composer-conductor, began recording his original score for "Pursued," the U. S. Pictures production recently completed.

Nellie, the Courageous Cashier

Lovely, wise-cracking Nell Scott, cashier of the Fox West Coast Lyric Theatre at Long Beach, Calif., is a cross between the fair-haired girl and a heroine to her bosses these days.

For Nellie saved the contents of the till. When a bandit walked up to her box-office and pointing a gun demanded the weekend receipts, Nell looked at him and said:

"You must be kidding."

The bandit assured Miss Scott that he was not and repeated: "Hand it over!"

But he didn't know our Nell. Replied she:

"You just run along and mind your own business." Then she added: "That looks like a toy pistol to me, anyway."

The disgusted bandit walked down the street. Ever since, Miss Scott has been on the receiving end of congratulations, rather than automatics and House Manager William Lauman is reportedly writing up her technique in a bulletin for all cashiers on "How to Behave When the Holdup Man Arrives."

The Falcon's Adventure

it is well produced and capably directed, and if audiences can overlook some minor loopholes in the continuity, they can sit back and thoroughly enjoy 61 minutes of fast-moving adventure. The Falcon comes through handsomely (as he always does) and takes a few minutes of kicking around from time to time, but always comes up smiling. He is about to kiss the girl at the film's conclusion, but (again as always) something comes along to delay if not stop entirely his amatory adventure. And this saves him for another future adventure.

Temptation

Universal Drama 98 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A slow moving, tedious presentation of a well known drama. The less discriminating audiences may find entertainment in its theme.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Box-office names are well supplied for initial draw. Needs support of either a musical or comedy or other film with light theme.

Cast: Merle Oberon, George Brent, Charles Korvin, Paul Lukas, Lenore Ulric, Arnold Moss, Ludwig Stossel, Gavin Muir, Ilka Gruning, Robert Capa, John Eldredge, Andre Charlot, Suzanne Cloutier, Gloria Lloyd, Mary Young, Aubrey Mather, Samir Rizkallah, Egon Brecher. Credits: Produced by Edward Small. Directed by Irving Pichel. Screenplay by Robert Thoeren from the novel "Bella Donna" by Robert Hichens and the play by James Bernard Fagan. Photography, Lucien Ballard. An International Picture.

Plot: An avaricious divorcee plots to marry a famous Egyptologist, succeeds, goes to Egypt with her husband and falls in love there with an adventurer who is as cold and heartless as herself. They plot to poison the husband but the wife has a change of heart, poisons her lover instead and falls in love with her husband. When she is about to be exposed for the murder of her lover, she is killed by an avalanche, and the husband never knows of her duplicity.

Comment: There is considerable evidence of lavishness in production values, the cast is well chosen and the plot is basically sound, but either the script is poor, the direction unimaginative or the actors in this case had severe cases of ineptness. For one of these reasons or a combination of all, "Temptation" is slow-moving, tedious and only occasionally entertaining, except for some few highlight sequences, as, for instance, when Miss Oberon actually poisons her lover, played by Charles Korvin. Korvin, incidentally, gives a good portrayal as an utterly unscrupulous scoundrel who recognizes the avaricious, heartless qualities of Miss Oberon as the wife and is fascinated by them, but not enough to forget that it is her husband's money both are after. The husband, played by George Brent, is an innocuous character, too wrapped up in his work and in his love for his wife, to see what every one in the film and in the audience knows. Lenore Ulric as Miss Oberon's maid is fine as an understanding friend, rather than as a servant. Others in the cast are seldom convincing. There is no comedy relief throughout the film's running time; the mood maintained is sombre. Not-too-discriminating audiences may find mild entertainment in "Temptation," others will find it slow. It has good marquee names.

NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW: Founded in 1909 "to represent the interests of the motion picture public," maintains a Review Committee consisting of some 300 men and women of all ages, "representing a cross-section of public taste." Designations: Family—14 years of age and up (recommendations for age groups under 14 by Schools M. P. Committee of the Board); Mature—18 years and up. *—Especially worth seeing.

SCHOOLS MOTION PICTURE COMMITTEE. A committee of the National Board of Review which "represents groups of parents and teachers from public and private schools," whose purpose is to select pictures "suitable for age groups 8-12 and 12-14."

NATIONAL LEGION OF DECENCY: Committee of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae reviews pictures and publishes its moral classifications for guidance of members of the Legion—composed of those members of the Catholic Church who join the Legion. Designations: Unobjectionable for General Patronage; Unobjectionable for Adults; Objectionable in Part; Condemned.

†The Wicked Lady—Objection: Reflects the acceptability of divorce.

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS. The motion picture committee is headed by Mrs. Arretus F. Burt, Chairman, of St. Louis. Two reviewing committees are maintained—Mrs. Harry Lilly, New York, Chairman Eastern Committee; Mrs. John Stearns Thayer, Los Angeles, Chairman Western Committee. Designations: Family—6 years and up; Mature Family—14 years and up; Junior and Senior High School Students and Adults; Senior High School Students and Adults. —Exceptional.

Santa Claus' Xmas Packages

NEW DISTRIBUTORS. This page consistently has maintained that the film industry needs some new blood and new competition in the form of additional national distributor organizations.

The announcement from Selznick last week indicates that this may well be the first of the type of new distributing concerns we have long hoped to see in the business. And if Selznick Releasing Organization achieves only a fair measure of the success forecast for it, then it should go a long way toward filling the want that we believe has existed for many years in the industry.

With the tradition for quality established on the record by David Selznick, it can be taken pretty well for granted that the new SRO outfit will emphasize quality in all of the product that issues to the market from this source.

This may prove to be one of the best presents that Santa has delivered to the exhibitors during the 1946 yuletide.

PERCENTAGE PICTURES. The little exhibitor—and by that "little" we mean the fellow who owns and operates theatres grossing not more than six or seven hundred dollars a week—has long been at a disadvantage when compelled to buy pictures on percentage. This little fellow has neither the opportunities for big profits nor expansion such as accrue to the larger scale operators in the more populous areas.

The best gift that Santa could bring these exhibitors—and never forget, they are the backbone of this industry—is an announcement from every distributor in the business that they will sell to them on a straight, flat-rental basis.

Forcing percentage and preferred playing time on these situations is almost confiscation, because when you take a large slice of their receipts in any one engagement you prevent them from showing an overall profit for such a long period that by the time they get in the clear, they must take on another percentage date. And, besides, the net returns from a percentage deal in such theatres hardly warrants the cost of the checker.

Yes, Santa, this is one gift you should deliver wrapped up in the prettiest ribbons you can find.

LOCAL TAXES. If Santa is in a giving mood he might deliver a nice present in the form of a well-organized plan whereby the exhibitor can fight off the ever-increasing threat of local taxation and increased license fees.

Smart theatremen are watching this angle very closely because they know from what is happening elsewhere that it can also happen right in their own towns and states.

Your best weapon is "organization." By this we mean, a group of theatremen working together and acquainting themselves with all the facts and methods successfully used to combat this threat in those areas where it has been beaten.

Most towns and cities have about reached the limit of taxation on real estate and are turning to other sources for fees and taxation. Reading, as they do, about the fantastic grosses in the picture business they find this field good hunting when they set out to raise more local revenue.

Theatremen will find it a lot easier to fight off threatened local taxes than trying to wipe them off the law books once they have been enacted.

SANTA ZUKOR. In one of the most forceful and outspoken talks we have ever been privileged to hear, Adolph Zukor expressed himself on some vitally important trade matters at a "welcome home" luncheon tendered him in New York this week following his trip to England and the Continent.

Here is a man who is symbolic of the growth of this whole industry. He was in it before many of our present top executives ever heard of a piece of celluloid film and in knowledge and understanding of the business he is second to none.

It was high time someone of genuine importance and standing in this industry called a spade a spade, and Paramount would indeed be giving the business a real Christmas present if they could get him to issue what he said in the form of an official statement.

If Santa Claus has the power to do so, his best gift to the motion picture industry would be to give Adolph Zukor many, many more years of service to the business for he has done so much and in which he is held in high esteem.

FROM US TO YOU. In the spirit of the season and with a deep sense of appreciation to all who are part of this great industry, SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW extends its sincere good wishes to you and yours for a very Merry Christmas.

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

TALKING BACK—Adolph Zukor, pioneer and one of the prime builders of the film industry in this country, at a luncheon in New York this week talked back to critics of American pictures and answered complaints that foreign product was not getting enough time on American screens.

Said Zukor: American films are made for the world market; producers in other countries design their pictures for home consumption and when the budget runs up, want to sell the production abroad to recover. If the film doesn't make the grade, they complain.

American exhibitors, he said, are eager to play any picture that their public will patronize. The American screen has been open to all comers, whereas "sinister" interests in other countries seek to keep our product out by erecting political barriers against it.

Earlier in the week, Motion Picture Association President Eric Johnston, writing in the New York Times, answered complaints about the American market by Sir Alexander Korda, and pointed out that some foreign films were trying to sell propaganda.

TAXES—Arab, Ala., needs a fire truck so it decided to put a 10 per cent municipal tax on amusements. Arab's one theatre, the Ritz, didn't think this was fair and offered to put up as much toward buying the fire apparatus as any member of the city council, his honor the Mayor included. When the Council didn't agree, the house closed in protest, apparently leaving Arab without either the fire engine or the movies.

Minneapolis also was having its troubles. It needs more police, so it is considering a raise in license on establishments such as theatres. But the state of Minnesota's business must have been good for the amusement taxes for last November were $531,000 compared to $517,000 for November 1945.

The Little Rock, Ark., City Council compromised its tax to a sliding scale based on admissions and seating capacity.

EXHIBITION—Chicago was again considering admission raises with the holiday season. The contemplated step would bring evening prices to 75 cents in "A" houses and at matinees to 50 cents, with "B" houses 60 cents in the evening and 44 cents in the day.

William Jenkins was reelected president and general manager of the Georgia Theatres Company at the annual stockholders' meeting in Atlanta. Canadian exhibitors in Ontario favored daylight saving by referendum. The result of the Atlanta hotel fire has caused reaction throughout the country: Chicago may tighten its building code, St. Louis officials have recommended making its recently changed code retroactive, and Harrisburg is inspecting the placing and installation of popcorn machines.

Brooklyn's Paramount Strand will use the holiday week in an experiment to drop double features, substituting a program of shorts for the second feature.

And David O. Selznick announced that the actual world premiere of "Duel in the Sun" would be on Dec. 29 at the Birmingham Hospital for Veterans in Van Nuys, Calif. Selznick also proposes to show "Duel" in veterans' hospital of each city where it will play before the actual engagement starts. Veterans Administrator Omar Bradley thanked him. The Vatican documentary, "The Story of the Pope," had its American premiere in New York at the Republic Thursday.

Other items included the indictment of three more men in connection with copyright infringement on 16-mm. film, and the Schine appeal on a federal court order on divestiture which was rejected by the Supreme Court. Schine may still have a right to appeal.

DISTRIBUTION—United Artists will drop sales conventions as they were understood by the industry in the past and will concentrate on showing the sales staff the pictures they are going to sell, United Atirsts Distribution President Grad Sears said in New York. Sears believes time and the courts have made the old convention system obsolete and that since the exhibitor is going to see what he's buying, the salesman should see what he's going to sell.

The Motion Picture Export Association announced it had closed a deal with the Polish film monopoly by which an unspecified amount of motion pictures, which it handles for its member owners, would be distributed in Poland.

The MPEA also will take over distribution of American product in the American occupied zone of Austria on Jan. 1, it was announced.

AUDIENCE COLLECTIONS—Over 1,000 theatres pledged to make audience collections for the March of Dimes in the first week of that campaign's solicitation of individual theatres for support. The March of Dimes appeal direct to exhibitors was forecast months ago by Showmen's Trade Review.

GENERAL—Nine film industry representatives were appointed to the 42-man committee which Attorney General Tom Clark is asking for advice and support in his "better Americanism" campaign, which will include shipping a trainload of historic documents around the country for exhibition in specially prepared coaches.

Gerald L. Mayer has been appointed head of the Motion Picture Association's international department, replacing Carl E. Milliken who held the post temporarily. Milliken retains his post as MPA secretary.

U-W Set to Make 77 Educational Films

A seven-year production program, integrated to provide complete courses on the subjects treated, has been set up for the schedule of educational films which will be made by United World Films, Universal's 16-mm. subsidiary, it was announced in New York this week by Edmund L. Dorfman, vice-president. The U-W program, he said, will bring to the screen the "first full course of study pictures" and may involve a total of 700 subjects.

Dorfman, who will leave for England in January to discuss plans with the J. Arthur Rank organization, which he said is now producing at the rate of one a week, expects the American schedule to equal that when he returns and gets it started. While in the past, he said, there had been educational films, they were not part of a complete course on the subject as the United World venture planned.

This "school of the screen," as he termed it, he said would be supplementary to regular school work but would not "supplement a teacher or . . . text books."

"We are not," he continued, "going to restrict our films to one-reel length. While the classroom length may be 10 to 20 minutes, if the subject requires a series we will make them as a series."

The American program will start off with a backlog of British-made shorts on biology produced under the direction of Julian Huxley. The production program here, which is to start upon Dorfman's return to England, will presumably stick to scientific subjects for a while since the policy will be one not to avoid controversial matters within the educational field but to avoid ideological controversies.

Production in the main will be in the New York Pathe and 20th Century-Fox studios, with the company going on location when necessary.

United World plans to sell the completed films directly to school and colleges, which Dorfman believes can afford them at the estimated rental of $35 to $50, since he believes the average life of the film would be five years and could play before thousands of students.

'Henry V' Tops Review Boards, 10 'Best' List

The National Board of Review Wednesday announced that "Henry V" had taken top position in its annual selection of the season's 10 best films and that Actor Laurence Olivier's interpretation of the title role had won commendation for the best performance by an actor.

Other selections were, in the order named: "The Open City," in which the performance of Actress Anna Magnani was acclaimed the best performance of the year by an actress; "The Best Years of Our Lives," William Wyler's direction of which won him the Board's plaudits for the best directional job of the year; "Brief Encounter," "A Walk in the Sun," "It Happened at the Inn," "My Darling Clementine," "The Diary of a Chambermaid," "The Killers," "Anna and the King of Siam."

Of the 10, four—"Henry V," "Brief Encounter," "Open City," "It Happened at the Inn,"—are foreign importations.

Zukor Says U. S. Seeks Only Fair Play and Free Screens

Declaring that the American film industry welcomes good pictures from whatever country, Adolph Zukor, founder and chairman of the Board of Paramount, at a luncheon in New York Wednesday threw down the gauge to film producers everywhere in a challenging call for fair play and free screens in theatres throughout the world.

Adolph Zukor

Zukor, recently returned from a trip to England and the Continent, said that in England and other countries abroad there are two types of men interested in motion picture enterprises—the "sincere" and the "sinister," with the latter seeking selfish gains by restriction of screen time for pictures produced in the United States through exaggeration as to the amount of money taken from the countries by foreign (American) film interests and destructive criticism of Hollywood.

A Seeker of Foreign Tastes

Zukor said that for 35 years he has travelled to foreign countries always seeking to discover if possible the means whereby his company's studio might satisfy the entertainment tastes and wants of people in those countries, and he challenged his hearers to mention one man from any other country who has made such effort in order to produce pictures that might get distribution in this country.

The veteran film man declared that the difference between pictures made in this country and those filmed abroad was that, for all anybody—American or foreign critic—said to the contrary, Hollywood produces pictures with a view to pleasing the rank and file of the people in whatever land, whereas in other countries the producers aim directly at the home market. "When their pictures go over the set budgets that can show a profit on domestic distribution, they seek distribution abroad," he said, and when the results are disappointing because the pictures lack appeal to audiences here, there is the complaint that the American industry is discriminating against them.

Our Films Built Their Theatres

Hollywood pictures, Zukor said, have built the very theatres which now make it possible for the native product of these foreign countries to get wide bookings for their pictures in their homeland. Even so, the veteran film man declared, there is constant reference to the money which is taken out of the country by American film interests in the effort to have governments erect barriers against the U. S. picture product. One seldom hears mention, Zukor said, of the comparatively far greater amount of money that is sent to England every year for broadcloth and other commodities.

The luncheon was attended by trade press representatives, and was given in honor of the Paramount board chairman and George Weltner, head of Paramount International, who accompanied Zukor on the trip abroad.

Weltner said that he prevailed upon Zukor to accompany him on the trip because its purpose was to re-establish the "family ties" between Paramount's home organization and members of its forces in England and on the Continent after the years of limited personal contact imposed by the war.

March of Dimes Claims Over 1,000 Theatres Pledged to Collections

Over 1000 theatres were reported to have pledged themselves this week to support the March of Dimes with audience collections during the week of Jan. 24-30, the motion picture division of the National Infantile Paralysis Foundation said in an announcement from New York.

The announcement declared that the pledges had been obtained in only one week's solicitations and indicated that many more theatres were expected to join. Hawaii, with 186 theatres was reported in 100 per cent cooperation.

Dimes campaign headquarters made it plain that "cooperation" on the part of theatres meant that they would hold audience collections. A spokesman said that the collection was the principal part of the drive and that anything less than that would not be the "cooperation" needed, declaring that "All the advertising, all the lobby displays merely lead up to one thing—the collection."

To support his assertion he pointed to the pledge cards which the theatre owners are sending back to the Drive. Upon them the exhibitor signs the name of his theatre, its location, seating capacity, and says:

"You may depend upon my cooperation in the March of Dimes Drive. At every performance, during week of Jan. 24-30 inclusive, I promise to show the appeal trailer and make audience collections in my theatre.

The trailer referred to is the Greer Garson trailer, "A Step Forward."

The present campaign of the March of Dimes with its emphasis on audience collections to which almost every national exhibitor organization had objected, bears out the exclusive story in SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW, June 29,

United Artists Drops Sales Conventions as Obsolete

Men Must See What They Are to Sell, Sears Holds, Citing Changed Conditions

Sales conventions as understood by the film industry in the past are obsolete and have been dropped by United Artists in view of changed sales techniques needed to sell under changed conditions, United Artists Distribution Vice-President Grad Sears declared in an interview held in New York Wednesday.

Grad Sears

Sears, who emphasized the point that he spoke only for United Artists management and not for its directors or stockholders, refused to comment on the United Artist-David O. Selznick rift for this reason. He declared the distributing company now had a backlog worth $25,000,000 and expected a world-wide gross of $10,000,000 each on its two forthcoming releases, "Carnegie Hall" and "Arch of Triumph."

"The last trip to California has convinced me without a doubt," he said, "that we will never hold another sales convention such as we had in the past."

These types of conventions, he said, were made to sell one year's product at a time in a period when the exhibitor bought blind and the salesman sold blind, depending only on what he had been told about the product at a convention. Time, Sears continued, had changed that, and the court had changed other aspects of selling. So he decided that there would have to be a change in selling whereby the salesman knew what he was selling, since the exhibitor by viewing a picture before he bought it would know what he was buying.

"We waited till they had an inventory of unreleased pictures," he explained, discussing the backlog of 12 available for the last convention. "We took them (the sales staff) around and showed them the pictures. Then we got opinions on marketing. Then we decided on our plans.

"If an exhibitor is not going to buy a picture until he sees it, why should a salesman try to sell it before he sees it?"

12 to 15 Films in Spring

Under a new plan Sears says United Artists will not hold a sales meeting until the product is ready. In the 1947 program he said he expected to have from 12 to 15 ready in the spring, or by March 1. The sales staff will be shown what they will sell in special screenings and when field men come in for district meetings, they will be shown what the future offerings will be and given a chance to help formulate marketing methods in that territory.

"We figure we'll release approximately two top pictures every five week throughout the year." This includes the six which Enterprise is supposed to deliver during 1947.

Asked about the Selznick United Artists differences, he said:

"Insofar as management is concerned, the only question is, did Selznick break his contract or did he not? That has been referred to counsel."

Loew Predicts More Playing Time Here for Suitable European Product

(See The News Spotlight)

Predicting that European product suitable for American screens would get more playing time here in the future and that American distributors would make "a determined effort to get public acceptance of this product, even if it takes a bit of work," Arthur M. Loew, president of Loew's International, Monday seemed optimistic over the prospect of future international film relations after his return to New York from abroad.

In a frank interview during which he only sought "off-record" refuge twice, Loew stated that 40 per cent of MGM's revenue came from the foreign field (not including Canada) and said that while he agreed with Motion Picture Association President Eric Johnston that 50 per cent of the industry's revenue might come from abroad, getting the other 10 per cent might be a slow and laborious task.

Asked if he did not think a great deal of sentiment was being stirred up against American pictures in foreign countries and that the countries were using quotas in an effort to "blackjack" more time for their product off American screens, the Loew's International President replied:

"If they are they'll just blackjack their way out of the American market," adding that such action might cause the United States to set up "political barriers" which are non-existent at present.

"You hear a lot of talk," Loew continued anent the British charge of American opposition to their product in the United States, "but I think that's just talk. If they (the British) give us pictures the public wants, we will play them.

"Any good film will get playing time in this country and further than that I think there will be a determined effort to get public acceptance of this product even if it takes a lot of work."

Loew said he preferred to see good foreign product on screens here and abroad than inferior American product because good pictures brought the public to the theatre and bad pictures kept them away.

Queried about the efforts J. Arthur Rank is making to batter his way into foreign fields, Loew laughed:

"I don't think Rank is making it any easier for us, but at the same time I think it is very healthy competition. We, as distributors, might have been tempted to take it easy."

The Loew executive declared that he had found no antagonism toward American pictures

Odeon Plans Chain With Fingold and Dale

Canada's Odeon Theatres, Ltd., this week joined Sam Fingold and Ralph Dale, partners of the former Theatre Amusement Company of Toronto, to form National Theatre Services, Ltd., which will operate a group of 23 houses in Ontario province.

In making the announcement Odeon said that it had been considering the establishment of a "B" circuit for some time and decided that now was the time to get it started.

Fingold is president of the new organization and Dale vice-president. Among the 23 theatres listed for the new company are four in Hamilton, three in Ottawa and four suburban houses —the Colony, Doric, Grand and Paradise—in Toronto.

The new enterprise will also seek to book and buy for other independent theatres in Ontario and has acquired such contracts for 19 Ontario Theatres formerly served by Associated Theatres, Ltd., a link in the Canadian Organization of J. Arthur Rank.

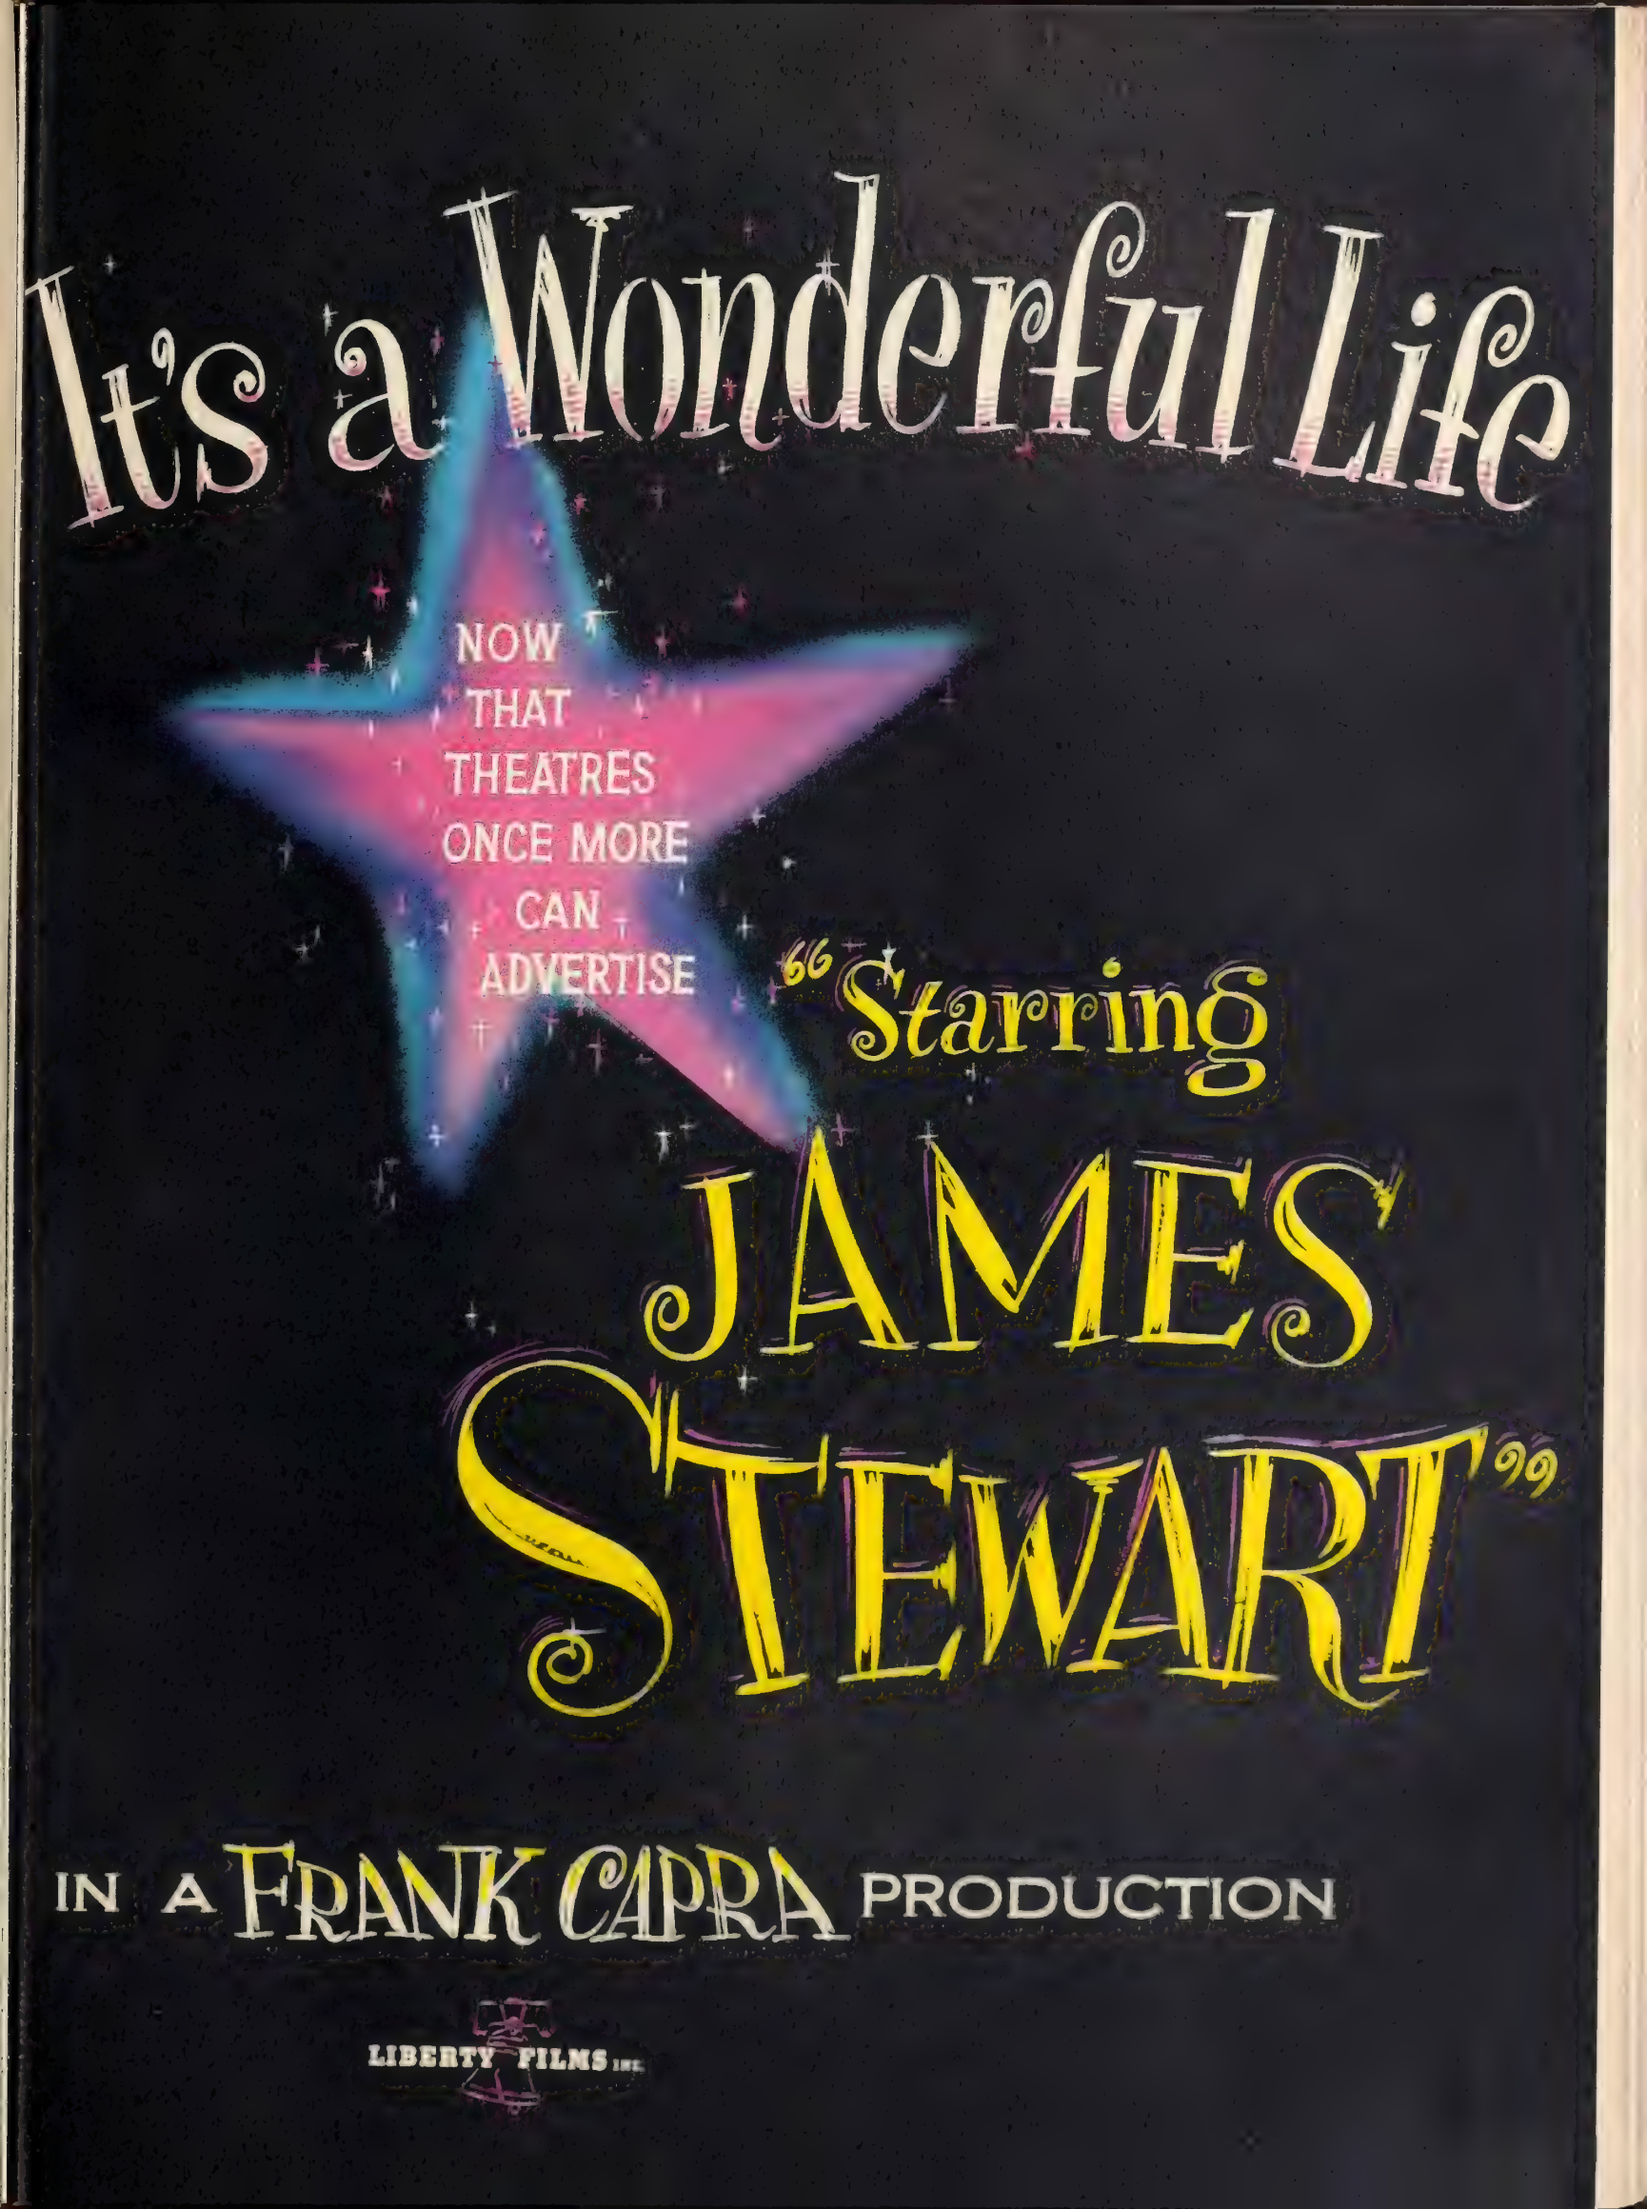
Set 'Duel' Premiere In Veterans Hospital

World premiere of David O. Selznick's "Duel in the Sun" has been set for Dec. 29 to an expected audience of 2,000 veterans in the Birmingham Hospital at Van Nuys, Cal. The event, which marks the first time a picture has been formally opened in a veteran hospital, will be in Hollywood style, with the stars of the picture attending. Plans are being made to let hospitalized veterans see the picture at their hospitals first in each locality where the picture is to play, under a "veterans first" policy.

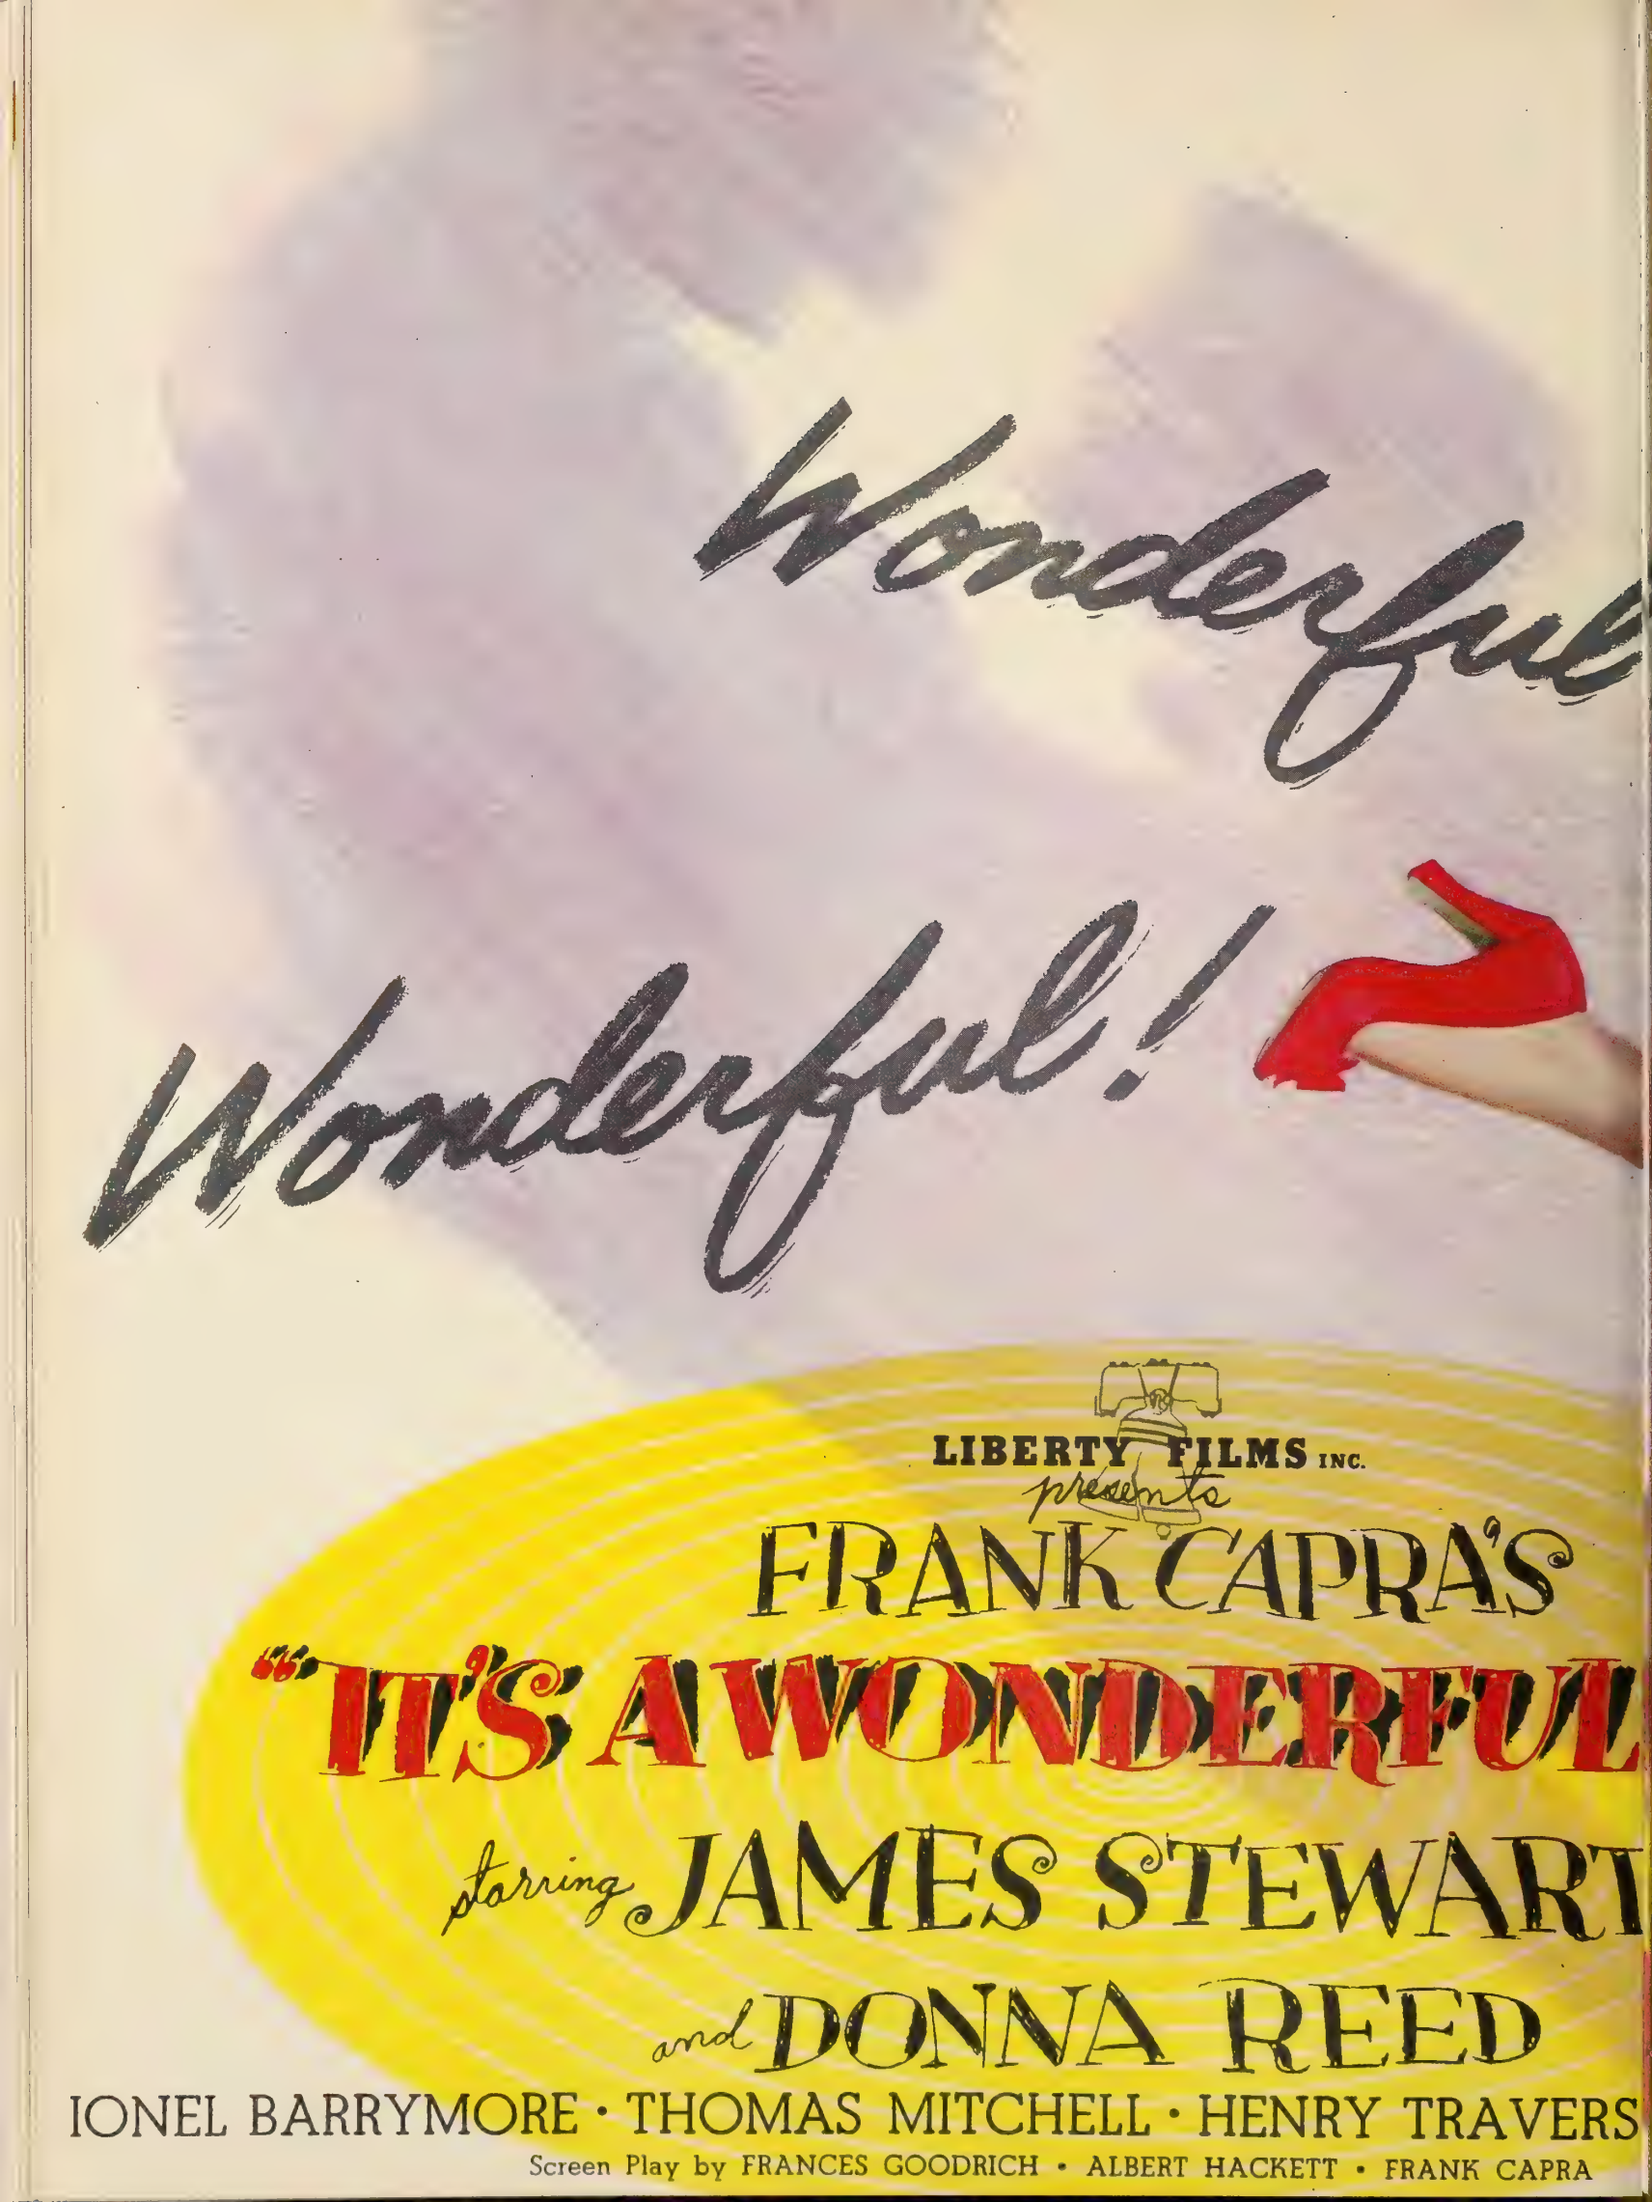
Informed of Selznick's action, Gen. Omar Bradley, head of the Veterans Administration, declared:

"I am grateful to learn of your world premiere showing of 'Duel in the Sun' at the Birmingham Hospital. . . . I know how much thousands of sick and disabled veterans in hospitals will welcome your thoughtfulness."

Bk'lyn Paramount to Try Out 7-Shorts Program



Brooklyn's Paramount will experiment with a program of seven short subjects to replace the second feature of its double-feature policy this week as an experiment which has been urged upon the house for some time by Paramount Short Subject Sales Manager Oscar Morgan. The Christmas week period was picked because it was thought to offer the best cross section of audience reaction.



Rivers Delay Film

Film shipments this week faced delay as in the Portland area as high waters over coast highway cut off a dozen key cities and the Willamette and Columbia rivers went on rampage. Delays in service were predicted for the next 10 days.

MPEA Directors Approve Export Deal with Poland

The Motion Picture Export Association announced in New York Tuesday that its directors had approved a deal whereby a limited number of American-made pictures of its stockholder members would be permitted entry into Poland.

The deal, arrived by MPEA Vice-President and General Manager Irving Maas, with Film Poliski, the Polish film monoply in Warsaw last week, provides for distribution of the MPEA product throughout all the population centers of Poland where there are theatre outlets. It marks another agreement whereby MPEA got entry into a market by working with national monopolies. One of the first such deals reportedly was with the Dutch Bioscoop Bond, where there seemed to have been feuding and rancor before the agreement was reached.

The MPEA's New York office would not state the number of pictures which would be permitted in Poland or what they would be. The Polish deal was reported to be a further step toward cracking strong walls against American product which had been erected in some countries. It was reliably reported that the export group is trying primarily to keep American product on foreign screens regardless of the profit angle.

An informed source said Tuesday that Russian influence, reportedly opposed to American films, either was greatly overestimated or that the Russians actually had not been fighting the American product since the Motion Picture Export Association has been able to enter several zones of Russian influence, though denied Russia herself.

Variety Club Officers To Charter Mexican Tent

What Variety Clubs regard as one of the most important events in their history is scheduled to take place the week of Jan. 13, when hands across the border will be extended in a big way and delegations from the American tents headed by National Chief Barker R. J. O'Donnell travel to Mexico City to attend the formal chartering of the Mexican Club.

A program of various activities has been arranged and on Jan. 16, the delegates will meet in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Reforma for the opening business session of the Mexican and American groups. This is to be followed at 2 P. M. with a dinner for the members, their wives and leaders in Mexican and American government and business circles to be held in Ciro's, where O'Donnell will present the Variety Club charter to the Mexican Tent. The entire ceremony will be conducted in Spanish.

In the evening a cocktail party and buffet supper is scheduled in the new club's headquarters at 110 Calle del Sena, with the newly elected barker and officers of the Mexican Tent as hosts. On Jan. 17 a luncheon will be given at the RKO Churubusco Studios by RKO President N. Peter Rathvon and a charity ball that night at El Patio for benefit of the Mexico Variety Club. Saturday and Sunday of the week will be devoted to sightseeing.

New Tax, No Show

The town of Arab, Ala., needs a new fire truck. So the town of Arab, Ala., wants to put a 10 per cent municipal tax on amusement admissions, which would be borne largely by the customers of its one theatre, the Ritz. But the owner of the Ritz seems to be a citizen in the American tradition. Complaining that over 50 per cent of his theatre's revenues comes from people who do not live in Arab, but who come there to see a show and spend their money with the Arab merchants instead of those in Guntersville, Albertsville, or Cullman, he says it's not fair to tax them for Arab's needed fire truck.

Woods is the first to acknowledge that the town needs a new truck. In fact he's offered to contribute as much for a nice shiny new red wagon as any member of the town council or the Mayor will put up. But until that time he's agin any tax on his customers. And to prove it he's closed up the house "until such time as the fair minded people of the city can convince the Council that the tax is unfair."

abroad and they were by far the most popular films in foreign lands, but that war conditions had changed the view point of Hollywood and Europe. He indicated that a more serious trend in American production might be desirable, adding:

"It's pretty hard for a man in Italy to enjoy a Technicolor feast. . . ."

"There are," he continued, "certain films that are not worth having sent abroad from the point of view of not correctly representing the American people but also because they're not good films."

Loew believes that American film makers have not scratched the foreign market yet, citing China with her 126 theatres for 4,000,000 people as an example.

"We've been showing pictures in English over there. That is no way to sell. We're now trying narration. That may be a step in the right direction."

At present the narrative technique is being tried in Chinese, Portuguese, Siamese, Arabic and Hindustani.

Sears Sees Sales Meets As Obsolete Today

Asked about reports that a peace settlement between the two was in the making he replied:

"As far as any peace offer is concerned, I assure you that the director or the owners have not authorized management to consider peace terms in any manner, shape or form."

United Artists he said would continue to distribute the Selznick product that it was holding, which includes conclusion of the residual contracts on "Spellbound," the reissued "Rebecca," "I'll Be Seing You" and "Since You Went Away."

The majority of United Artists producers have agreed to sell abroad through the Motion Picture Export Association, he said, but the distributing organization did not consider the question of reentering the Motion Picture Association at the last director's meeting.

March of Dimes Asserts Collection Support Good

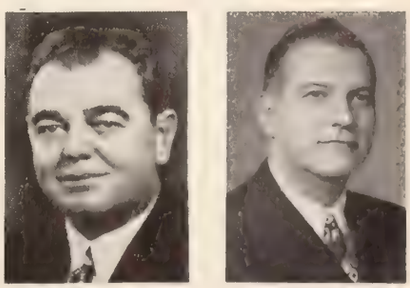
1946, indicating that if there was any drive at all in 1947 it would be for the March of Dimes, furthermore the drive would not be shared by any other movement.

That story also indicated that the American Red Cross might forego its request for audience collections during 1947 in favor of screen time. A later story indicated that the March of Dimes would by-pass exhibitor organizations known to oppose audience collections, a move which was apparently followed in its policy of appealing directly to each theatre.

No Collections for Minn. Or Texas Interstate

Minneapolis theatres will not take up audience collections for the 1947 March of Dimes. The Minnesota Amusement Company has never indulged in audience collections and gave no indications that it would change what it regards as a fixed policy. North Central Allied and other independent houses said they would not ask their patrons for money in the theatres.



Interstate Theatres in Texas also will not take up audience collections.

Ebenstein Sees No Price Rise Trend for Candy Bars

While retail candy bar prices which were formerly standardized at five cents are now being sold at six, seven and even 10 cents, this trend toward a price rise is not nationwide, Herbert R. Ebenstein, executive director of the Group Service Agency, which includes the Sanitary Automatic Candy Corporation, declared this week upon returning to New York after a cross-country inspection tour.

Ebenstein found the candy industry suffering from confusion due to prices and uncertain production. He said, however, that there was "every indication" that sugar allocations to the candy industry would be increased in April.

Maybe it's housing and not pictures plus money which is making business go good these days. Anyway a resident of Columbus, Ohio, writing to the Citizen thinks so. Says he:

"Last night I stood on the sidewalk in front of what is said to be the worst show in town. . . . At 10 o'clock I heard the manager say, 'All seats are sold, but tickets will be on sale again at 11:30 for the midnight show.' I estimated over 70 were turned away and I heard many say, 'Where will we go?' The only permanent cure for that condition is better conditions at home. Nobody wants to go home to one room in the slums."

9 Film Men On Drive For 'Better Americanism'

Nine representatives of the motion picture industry this week had been appointed to a 42-man committee consisting of press, films and radio which will undertake the preliminary work on United States Attorney General Tom Clark's proposed educational program for "better Americanism."

The nine who met with the committee in Washington, are: Paramount President Barney Balaban, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America Representative A. Julian Brylawski, RKO Executive Vice-President Ned Depinet, Fabian Theatre President S. H. Fabian, Motion Picture Association President Eric Johnston, Allied General Counsel Abram F. Myers, Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers President Donald M. Nelson, Warner Bros. General Counsel Robert Perkins, 20th Century-Fox President Spyros Skouras, Loew's President, Nicholas M. Schenck.

The Attorney General plans a nation-wide tour of historic documents which are the foundation of the American system, such as the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights.

To date the Attorney General has not asked the film industry for any screen time to publicize the move, an informed source said.

Jenkins Is Reelected Georgia Theatres Head

William Jenkins was reelected president and general manager of the Georgia Theatres Company at the annual stockholders meeting recently held in Atlanta. Elected with Jenkins were Vice-President and Assistant General Manager Frederick C. Story, Treasurer M. F. Gowthorpe and Secretary M. A. Barre.

William Jenkins

The directors, who were reelected are Jenkins, Gowthorpe, Mrs. Arthur Lucas and Paramount Theatre Operations Vice-President Leonard H. Goldenson.

At the conclusion of the meeting Jenkins announced the promotion of T. H. Read, formerly Atlanta City Manager, to be in charge of the Fox, Paramount, Roxy and Capitol theatres and of the Fox Parking Service. E. F. Whitaker was appointed out-of-town manager for circuit operations and H. P. Rhodes, booking and buying manager.

Sliding Tax Scale Gets Little Rock Approval

The Little Rock, Ark., City Council this week approved a compromise tax on theatres, adopting a sliding scale based on the highest net admission charge. Theatres with a net admission up to 35 cents will pay one and a fourth per cent of the net admission multiplied by the house's seating capacity. Theatres with a net admission of from 35 cents to $1 will be taxed the net admission price multiplied by the number of seats.

Tightens Fire Guards

Atlanta's disastrous hotel fire had its repercussions in Chicago this week, as that city, sensitive about building fires, gave orders to tighten up on enforcement and to inspect buildings more often. However, Architect John O. Merrill, head of the committee rewriting Chicago's building code, says that Chicago has one of the best enforced theatre and fire control laws in the country. The stringent Chicago code was adopted years ago after the Iroquois Theatre holocaust.

Rising Costs Call for More Showmanship—Briskin

In view of rising costs exhibitors are going to have to put more showmanship behind each picture of the future, Samuel J. Briskin, executive producer and vice-president of Liberty Films, declared in New York Tuesday.

Briskin, who is in the city for the world premiere of Liberty's first production, "It's a Wonderful Life," directed by Frank Capra, pointed to the increased costs of production as grounds for added exhibitor responsibility in the handling of pictures. He said these increased costs placed greater emphasis on quality pictures and that this in turn emphasized playing time and the ability to get the greatest possible return on a pitcure.

Pointing to large sums put out by distributors such as RKO to get interest in product, he urged that this be backed up by exhibitor showmanship.

Gerald Mayer Heads MPA International Division

Gerald M. Mayer, linguist, Harvard law school graduate and ex-member of the State Department's Office of International Information and Cultural Affairs, will become managing director of the Motion Picture Association's International Division effective Jan. 1, President Eric Johnston announced Tuesday.

Mayer, who started his business career in the overseas department of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company and has held several newspaper posts as well as that of public relations representative for the shortwave division of the National Broadcasting Company, succeeds Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the MPA, who took over the overseas post during the war years. Milliken will continue his duties as MPA secretary.

Charge 3 Criminally in 16-mm Exhibitions

Three separate charges of copyright infringement were lodged in criminal bills of information filed in the federal district court for the southern district of New York last week accusing Mortimer Van Brink, Arthur Schwarts, and Joseph Mirasola of wilfully infringing several film copyrights for their individual profit.

All charges are based on alleged infringement with 16-mm. versions of nationally released 35-mm. features. Van Brink is accused on charges in connection with "Double Indemnity," "Gaslight," and "Double Trouble." Schwarts on the same pictures and "Greenwich Village." Mirasola is charged with infringement in connection with "Rio Rita," "Dr. Gillepsie's New Assistant," "Going My Way," "Janie," "Allegheny Uprising," "Step Lively" and "Show Business."

Van Brink and Schwarts were among the 13 arrested last April by the FBI in connection with the exhibition of films said to have been taken from the United States Army Signal Corps Photographic Center on Long Island, N. Y.

Connellee Move to Dismiss Percentage Suit Denied

The Federal District Court at Baltimore last Friday denied a petition by W. J. Connellee, operating the New Theatres in Elkton and Aberdeen, Md., to dismiss the six suits alleging fraudulent percentage returns brought against him by Universal, Columbia, Loew's, Paramount, 20th Century-Fox and Warner Bros.

The defendants had argued that the amounts involved were less than $3,000 and for that reason the Federal court lacked jurisdiction. The court ruled that the damages asked and the percentages claimed alone brought the amount within its jurisdiction.

Set 'Razor' for 86 Spots

Eighty-six Christmas and New Year's holiday openings have been set for "The Razor's Edge," Twentieth Century-Fox Distribution Vice-President Tom Connors announced this week. Of these, 27 are for Christmas day. The Darryl F. Zanuck production recently held its European premiere in Stockholm, Sweden, before a list of notables, including Sweden's Crown Prince.

More Cops, More Tax

Minneapolis needs more police, about 70 of them. And Minneapolis needs the the money to pay for these extra arms of the law. So the City Council now has a proposal before it to raise the money by increasing licenses on theatres, restaurants, hotels, beer and liquor establishments, juke boxes and parking lots. At present 58 theatres in that city pay a graduated scale of from $38 to $500 a year. Under the new plan, which is now before a Council sub-committee for study, the minimum would be raised to $100 yearly.

WB Pittsburgh Zone Theatre Drive Ends as Managers Receive Awards

A "Victor's Dinner" and stag get-together in Pittsburgh recently climaxed the eight-week Showmanship Drive of Warners' Pittsburgh zone theatres. Host to the winning theatremen was M. A. Silver, Pittsburgh zone manager.

The zone's theatres were grouped into eight classifications for the drive, according to size, run and grossing power. The four districts competed against one another for a grand prize. Three prizes of U. S. Savings Bonds went to each of the eight groups. First prize, to the manager, was $150; second, $100; and third, $50. The district manager of the winning district received a $250 bond.

In addition to the group prizes, four Grand Awards were made for the outstanding showmanship campaigns conducted during the drive. They were won by Phil Katz, Kenyon Theatre, Pittsburgh, whose exploitation efforts brought him first prize of $250; Ken Grimes, Warner, Erie, second prize of $150; Ted Thomas, Smoot, Parkersburg, W. Va., third prize of $100, and Morty Haas, Regal, Wilkinsburg, fourth prize of $50.

The Pittsburgh district, comprising theatres in the Pittsburgh neighborhood area, exclusive of the downtown first run theatres, won the district prize. Joseph Feldman, district manager and also assistant zone manager to M. A. Silver, received the $250 district manager's prize. A large bronze plaque, mounted on a walnut base and engraved with the name of every manager in the district, was presented to Feldman by Silver. Each manager of the winning district also was presented with a bronze plaque, a miniature of the large district plaque.

All activities of the drive were under the guidance of the Pittsburgh zone advertising and publicity department headed by James M. Totman. Special material was prepared and numerous direct-mail pieces were sent to the theatres in the field. The ad department originated and prepared a special press book of activities to be conducted by the theatres; special stunts were prepared and material executed in the zone ad office; daily suggestions were sent to all theatres, and all special screen trailers and heralds were made up by the department. The special bronze plaques which were awarded to the winners were designed and executed under the supervision of the ad staff which also handled all arrangements for the Victor's Dinner.

At the conclusion of the prize-awarding ceremonies and subsequent get-together party, Silver announced that the Showmanship Drive would be an annual event of the Pittsburgh zone.

True Confessions?

Novelty heralds sometimes miss their mark but the shock technique used by Manager E. F. Kistner of the Forsythe Theatre, East Chicago, Ind., proved most effective. The intriguing title, "What I Know About Men, by a Sorority Girl" on the outside of the small, folded herald caused enough curiosity to compel a look inside, where Kistner's imagination brought forth the copy, "If you don't want to get in trouble with men—Don't keep a diary! 'Secrets of a Sorority Girl' will show you why." And then Mr. Kistner became very forthright and went on to tell readers that "Secrets" and his second feature would be playing at his theatre with the dates prominently displayed. The heralds were sponsored by a taxicab company.

Combination Campaign

Allied Artists has set a combination radio spot announcement and newspaper advertising campaign on Gale Storm and other stars of Roy Del Ruth's "It Happened on Fifth Avenue" in connection with Texsun grapefruit juice. Spot announcements will be on 150 of the largest radio stations from Pittsburgh west, and newspaper ads will hit more than 100 newspapers.

Home Office Men Visit Cities On 'Razor's Edge'

Charles Schlaifer, 20th Century-Fox director of advertising, publicity, exploitation and radio, last week sent a flying squadron of home office representatives into the field to carry "The Razor's Edge" campaign directly to those key situations scheduled to play the picture during Christmas week, its national release date.

Christy Wilbert, advertising manager, went to Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, where he went over the local over-all campaigns with Wally Allen and Jim Keefe, 20th-Fox representatives in those cities. Sid Blumenstock, assistant exploitation manager, went to St. Louis and Kansas City to huddle with Sy Freedman, local exploitation man, and continued on to Wichita.

Sterling Silliphant, assistant to Schlaifer, was in Cleveland for a meeting with Harry Weiss, then moved on to Detroit for a get-together with Bob Kaufmann, working out of the Chicago office. Eddie Solomon of the home office exploitation staff was in Chicago conferring with Virginia Seguin and Al Winston, after which he was scheduled to visit Milwaukee and Omaha.

Schlaifer planned to go to Philadelphia and Baltimore this week to personally handle the over-all plans for the picture in those cities.

Rodney Bush, exploitation manager, returned recently from a trip to Dallas, Oklahoma City and Memphis after finalizing exploitation plans in the three cities.

'Humoresque' Release Set for January 25

National release of "Humoresque," Warner Bros. production starring Joan Crawford and John Garfield, has been set for January 25. This will give Warners two new pictures next month, "The Man I Love," being scheduled for general distribution January 11.

"Humoresque" will have its world premiere December 25 at the Hollywood Theatre, New York, while "The Man I Love" is booked for the New York Strand after the holidays.

Extensive Campaign Begun by U-I to Pre-Sell 'Egg and I'

STARTED THE 'EGG' ROLLING. Publicity efforts on Universal-International's "The Egg And I" began several weeks ago when Betty MacDonald (center), author of the best-selling non-fiction book, visited the U-I studios where her book was being filmed. Filmland's celebrities honored her at a reception, with Leo Spitz and William Goetz (left and right, above), U-I production executives, as hosts.

"The Egg And I" starring Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray, which will reach key city first-run theatres approximately Easter Week as one of the first of the high-budgeted productions from the new Universal-International lot in Universal City, is currently receiving a comprehensive pre-selling campaign by the U-I advertising, publicity and exploitation staff. In many respects, it represents a maiden effort in extensive advance selling and the full resources of the U-I staff have been mobilized for the undertaking.

With Audiance Research Institute barometers already indicating exceedingly good penetration, John Joseph, national director of advertising and publicity, and Maurice A. Bergman, eastern advertising and publicity director, have set out to make "The Egg And I" as popular a household phrase as the first part of the title.

Book Is Campaign Keynote

The phenomenal success of the book by Betty MacDonald upon which the picture is based, as a national best-seller, is the keynote of the advance selling campaign. First published by J. B. Lippincott on October 3, 1945, the book still leads the nation's best-sellers, both fiction and non-fiction, more than a year after publication. Over 1,200,000 copies have already been sold. Miss MacDonald and her family have already been featured in two separate spreads in Life. When sales of the book reached the one-millionth copy, the event was marked by a special luncheon given by the Governor of the State of Washington in Seattle. Universal Newsreel covered the event and put together a special reel entitled "Egg Brings Home Bacon."

Several weeks ago, when Betty MacDonald visited the U-I studios where her book is being filmed, she was honored by filmland's celebrities at a reception given in her honor, with Leo Spitz and William Goetz, U-I production executives, as hosts.

Without any pre-arrangement by U-I the Reader's Digest printed a special condensation of "The Egg And I" in its November, 1946, issue, featuring the story in its newspaper advertising. Universal-International is preparing 5,000 copies of a special reprint of the condensation which will be sent to its exhibitors, district and branch managers as well as salesmen.

Meanwhile, the campaign is now being directed at new purchasers of the book with special bookmarks prepared by U-I going into all copies of the book being sold by Lippincott. Window tieups are being arranged where booksellers will now promote the film as well as the book. Lippincott advertising of the book after the first of the year will carry mention of the picture.

"The Egg And I" is already receiving an advance teaser advertising campaign in the trade papers. It will receive advance radio promotion when the story is presented on the "This Is Hollywood" Columbia Broadcasting System network show featuring Hedda Hopper on January 4.

A barrage of promotions for the picture featuring the lowly egg, is being planned for the next few months. Few ideas surrounding the egg have been overlooked. There's even a hand-painted tie which has been created to help make the American public "The Egg And I"-conscious.

An item which made the U-I staff deservedly proud is the following:

For 12 years, Hollywood praisers have been trying to crack Fred Beck's Farmer's Market column, having the largest reader following of any local pillar in the Los Angeles Times. The staff of John Joseph at Universal-International finally turned the trick and all this week Beck is writing pieces about "The Egg And I," the first time he has used his column for a direct picture tieup. The change of policy occurred when the studio turned over the hen-fruit crop from several thousand laying hens used as atmosphere for "The Egg And I" to be sold at the market for the benefit of the Braille Institute, suppliers of books for the blind. The eggs were donated by U-I and sold at a special stall built around the famous "Aurora," the ceramic pig which has long been the receiver of spare-change contributions for Braille books. Some of the eggs autographed by Miss Colbert and MacMurray brought $20 at auction. Studio players including Joan Fulton, Pat Alphin, Natalie Wood, June Vincent, Paula Drew and Beverly Sue Simmons acted as salesgirls at the special stall.

And so the story goes, week after week, in U-I's promotional efforts to make the public "The Egg And I"-conscious and thus pre-sell the film for the nation's exhibitors, a job started by the publishers and now taken over by the film company.

Stars Sign Big Register At 'Yearling' Preview

Stars attending the premiere-preview of MGM's "The Yearling" at the Carthay Circle Theatre in Los Angeles this week signed a giant register similar to that used for the opening of "Marie Antoinette" several years ago. The king-sized book has additional exploitation value in that it gives photographers time to snap arriving celebrities.

Following the premiere, officials planned to have the register displayed in theatre lobbies across the country to tie in with "Yearling" first-run engagements.

'Black Gold' Premiere Set for Eve of Derby

Plans have been completed for the world premiere of "Black Gold," Monogram's Kentucky Derby story now in production, at Louisville, Kentucky, on the eve of the 1947 running of the race classic, early in May. Film is based on the career of the horse Black Gold, which won the Derby at Churchill Downs in 1924.

Anthony Quinn is starred, and Phil Karlson is directing for Producer Jeffrey Bernerd.

Bus Tieup Wins Goodwill

When conditions over which a manager has no control arrive and stall an exploitation stunt he can always salvage some element of the idea. At least that's what Robert A. Hynes, manager of the Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, did during promotion for MGM's "No Leave, No Love."

A great part of his promotional work was done in cooperation with Greyhound bus lines, since the song, Love on a Greyhound Bus, is featured in the film. He had secured the use of a bus and driver from the company for opening day to tie in which a huge statewide parade being promoted at the time.

But rain came and canceled the parade, so Hynes used the bus to circle the business area which still held a large number of local and out-of-town people who had come to witness the parade. As the rain forced people to wait under the marquee after coming out of the theatre, he had the bus pick up as many as it could handle and take them home free of charge. The bus thus built goodwill and at the same time covered the entire city.

Good Showmanship Avoids Drop in Holiday Revenue

In the operation of your theatre just before and during the Christmas holiday season, there are a number of factors that require serious consideration. It is a period when laxity in good, showmanly management may result in a decline in revenue. Expenditures should be watched carefully, and it is the duty of a good manager and a good staff to distinguish between good and bad economies.

Complete cooperation of the staff should be enlisted in devising stunts and gags to keep the theatre in the public limelight. Employe submitting the best money-getting idea would receive a prize set aside for that purpose.

Lead Community

The theatre should definitely take the lead in establishing a community spirit during the holiday season. It should be the hub of interest. Special services, benefit shows and othe activities should take place within its four walls. There should be a spirit of friendliness and goodwill, with Christmas greetings extended through trailers, lobby and foyer displays and decorations. Merchants might be persuaded to include the theatre's goodwill greetings in their advertising in return for reciprocal credits.

Let there be variety in holiday stunts. Things done last year need not necessarily be repeated. If the tree was green last year, perhaps it would look better white this season, and in a different location. If Santa Claus is in the lobby every year, perhaps new and novel methods of presentation can be achieved. Variety is the spice of life.

Analyze Stunts

Perhaps the exhibitor's best guide in planning for the holiday season is to look back over the good and bad stunts of the past. If there is any doubt about a stunt, if it appears questionable, if there is a possibility that additional revenue might be "forced," the stunt should be canceled.

Let the Christmas season be the time of year when happiness, smiles, hearty handclasps, gifts and good wishes are exchanged and you, the exhibitor, are both the donor and the recipient.

SALAAMED WITH SALAMI. Century Circuit's pattern of tapping the top circuit exploiteer of the week for the "salaam department" was changed to "salami" by the managers. Therefore, Manageress Helen Beckerman of Century's College Theatre, Brooklyn, is awarded the Order of the Salami, proof of her showmanship, by Publicity and Advertising Director Edward Schreiber.

Last Minute Christmas Ideas

DANCING SCHOOLS. Tie in with your local dancing schools for students to appear on your stage in presentation of Christmas playlet or holiday pageantry. Before you confirm the tieup, be sure the schools guarantee ticket sales to parents, friends, etc. Even though show itself will attract, best success is attained on away-from-theatre advance sales.

FREE SHOWS. Get local merchants or social or fraternal clubs to play hosts to children at morning shows. If merchant sponsors, he can distribute tickets to youngsters at his place of business. Candy and small toys should be promoted as gifts to the kiddies. Merchant plugs show in all his advertising. If social or fraternal club sponsors, members can act as hosts; they furnish candy and gifts for the kiddies, while you furnish entertainment for the occasion. Don't forget canned goods and broken toy matinees, with items collected to be distributed to poor kiddies through some benevolent organization, such as the Salvation Army.

NOVEL FOYER PRESENTATION. With store windows attractively decorated in keeping with the Christmas season, there should also be novel and seasonal appeal in your lobby. Something off the beaten path has been used at the Hippodrome Theatre in Taft, Calif., for many years. There, the management annually installs a telephone booth in the lobby where children can call Santa Claus. "Santa," of course, is parent at other phone, on end of wire, hidden from the child's view.

STUDENT NIGHT. Many local boys and girls will be home from college for the holiday season. Two or three nights before they're scheduled to return, hold a special Student Night when a cheering section, rally an other college activities are held. Attendance prize could be a piece of luggage and ticket back to college.

GARMENT COLLECTION. One way to gain goodwill for your theatre during the holidays is to collect old garments for distribution to the poor and needy. As carried out a few years ago at the Carolina Theatre, Kinston, N. C., Sam Hammond, who was then manager of the house, set aside one week in December during which he offered two passes to each person who brought in old garments "that still had a little bit of life left in them." Then he promoted the services of a laundry and dry cleaner, who cleaned up the garments for distribution by students of the local grammar school. Over 500 articles were collected, newspapers were generous with publicity, and many fine things were said about the theatre. Really a good-will builder.

Prizes Awarded in 'Heartbeat' Contest

The National Window Display Contest which RKO Radio sponsored in behalf of the Robert and Raymond Hakim production "Heartbeat" during the past eight months came to a close last week when 24 winners were awarded United States Savings Bonds as prizes, ranging in maturity value from a $500 bond as first prize to a $25 bond as 24th prize.

Sponsored in cooperation with the Pat Hartly Company of New York, manufacturers of a "Heartbeat" dress, the tieup was arranged for RKO by Arthur M. Brilant, head of the special features division under S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity.

More than 350 of the nation's top department and specialty stores throughout the United States participated in the contest which opened May 10, 1946 and closed for entries on November 1, 1946. Full window displays were made in each case by the contestants, many of them exhibiting unusual ingenuity in the arrangement and display ideas. The total maturity value of the Savings Bonds awarded as prizes by the Pat Hartly Company amounted to $1,775. Originally 23 prizes were set up, but the judges decided to award a 24th prize as an award of Special Merit to one of the contestants.

Special Recordings for Radio

Special recordings were submitted by Manager Jim Darby of the M&P Paramount, New Haven, Conn., to Station WELI, New Haven, to plug "Angel on My Shoulder." Downtown stores carried window displays.—HFD.

'Best Years' Honors Add To Prestige ot Picture

The great array of honors and tributes accruing to Samuel Goldwyn's production of "The Best Years of Our Lives" is adding daily to its prestige as a box-office attraction on which the exhibitor can capitalize for unusually large "takes" by exercising his showmanship knowledge in extensive advance campaigns.

Among the distinctions already won by the picture are a leading editorial in the New York Times; a new department starting in the January issue of The Readers' Digest, featuring an article by Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick on the picture, while the February issue will contain a tribute by Quentin Reynolds. It was selected as the picture of the month by both Scholastic and Parents' Magazines; praised by Dr. Ralph W. Stockman in his NBC radio talk, "The National Radio Pulpit."

Life featured the star of "The Best Years of Our Life," Teresa Wright, on the cover, carried a leading article on it, and another on Harold Russell. Articles have been devoted to the film by Look, Screen Guide, Harper's Bazaar, McCall's, Redbook, Cosmopolitan, Women's Home Companion (with special reader-reporter poll), Vogue, Photoplay (in two issues) and The Nation, also in two issues.

Radio commentators who praised it on the airwaves include Kate Smith, Tex McCrary, Richard Barthelmess, Dan McCullough, Bill Leonard, Bessie Beatty, Nancy Craig, Maggi McNellis, Adrienne Ames, Cliff Edwards, Shirley Wolff and Jim Young—all within three days of the picture's New York opening. The New York Newspaper Guild gave the picture its Page One Award. It also received a nine-week daily build-up on the John Robert Powers program, and an eight-week contest on WNEW

Test 'Blue Skies' Campaign As Future Promotion Pattern

Paramount's exploitation campaign on the Irving Berlin Technicolor musical, "Blue Skies," is being closely watched by the industry because its results are expected to set the pattern on all other future product of the company. The film's promotion stems from new advertising, publicity and exploitation plans set last summer in New York at the conference of the company promotional forces in New York.

Aware of the bearing of the film's campaign on Paramount's whole promotional procedure, the company, under the guidance of Curtis Mitchell, its advertising, publicity and exploitation head, is making special effort to find the best possible means of selling the film to the exhibitor and public alike under the new sales method. The exhibitor, Paramount, believes, stands to benefit from the company's recognition of the greater weight wielded by showmanship under the new system of selling.

No hard and fast policy has been adopted in exploiting the picture, company officials say. They point out that, on the contrary, Paramount is pursuing a flexible policy intended to meet the needs of the individual situation. This is especially true in cooperative advertising campaigns, with greater leeway being permitted in the arrangement of cooperative deals with theatremen.

'Saturation' Campaign

Every facet of the art of exploitation has been seized upon by Mitchell and his home office staff and field men in an effort to give the film topmost box-office value. In mapping the promotional drive, plans were made for an unprecendented saturation campaign taking in all key cities of the nation.

One of the first steps was the selection of a choice list of representtive American communities for concentrated exploitation, a procedure expected to result in longer engagements of the picture. In those communities there was set loose a strong promotional barrage. The results of pre-release engagements have already shown evidence of the wisdom of this strategy.

Paramount used radio on a more extensive scale than ever before. The picture has had the benefit of the longest advance radio campaign ever attempted by the company. Spot announcements are being used on the widest possible basis and stars and other personalities on the Paramount lot have been making appearances on radio musical programs more extensively than ever in an attempt to boost the musical numbers in the Berlin production. Studio personalities have also been influential in boosting the picture on programs other than musical ones. They have been making air appearances at the rate of one or more virtually every night and day on several outstanding programs.

Department Store Cooperation

The value of the window tieup has been exploited on a scale never tried before. Department stores, especially shops and music and book stores from coast to coast have co-operated in the arrangement of displays promoting "Blue Skies." Among those participating in tieups have been stores like Macy's and W. J. Sloane in New York, Wanamaker's and Bonwit Teller's in Philadelphia, White's in Boston and Goldblatt's in Chicago. Women's apparel was featured in many of the displays to enhance feminine interest in the film. Albums of Berlin tunes from the picture comprised the chief merchandise featured in music shop window displays. Life-size, sculptured caricatures of Crosby and Astaire dominated many of the displays and contributed a touch of amusement.

With the end of the war having restored the flow of motor traffic to the nation's highways, the company turned its attention to billposting as a means of making the public "Blue Skies"-conscious. The policy is to use billboards where they are calculated to do an engagement the most good.

"Blue Skies" has had the benefit of the largest magazine advertising budget of any picture in the history of Paramount, not excluding "For Whom the Bell Tolls," the previous record-holder. The ad campaign on the film was the longest advance magazine campaign ever attempted by the company, having been launched on Aug. 16, four and a half months prior to the picture's release.

Largest Advertising Campaign

The advertising program provided for 25 insertions in 13 national magazines, plus 14 fan publications. The publications used had a total circulation of 77,284,594, with an estimated total readership of 150,000,000.

No less extensive was the campaign in the trade publications, which gave exhibitors an awareness of "Blue Skies" never exceeded in the history of the company.

An extensive publicity campaign was conducted in the national, fan and women's magazines and the weekly periodicals over a period starting in September, 1945. Included were national magazines with a total circulation of

Nine Century Men Win Timberdoodle Junkets

J. R. Springer, Century general theatre manager has named nine Century men as winners in the recent Lake Placid Timberdoodle Drive. These men will go on a four-day junket to the Lake Placid Timberdoodle home of F. J. Schwartz, Century vice-president, on January 22 as a result of their outstanding work during the drive.

Winners are, Jack Weinstein, Flatbush district manager; Bernard Seiden, manager of the Town Theatre; Bob Levy, manager of the Linden; Murray Greene, manager of the Albemarle; Al Wasserman, manager of the Farragut; Dan Martin, manager of the Station; M. Spector, assistant manager of the Community; E. MacAdams, assistant manager of the Town, and Ben Gladstone, of the home office.

MGM Extends Tour Of 'Bess', Equine Star

The pronounced success of the current personal appearance tour of "Bess," equine star of MGM's "Gallant Bess," has prompted company officials to extend the tour beyond its originally planned closing date of mid-December.

New dates set for the immediate future include Mobile, Ala., Christmas Day; New Orleans, December 26; Baton Rouge, 27; Alexandria, La., 28; Shreveport, 30; Houston, 31; San Antonio, New Year's Day; Austin, Texas, January 2; Waco, 3; Dallas, 4; Fort Worth, 5.

WB Kiddie Xmas Show

Fifteenth annual Christmas Party of the Warner Club, Chicago, was held last Saturday at Warners' Grove Theatre. Besides the personal appearance of Santa Claus to delight the youngsters, the program also included a full hour of cartoons, a Three Stooges comedy, and an hour of novelty acts featuring dogs, clowns and magicians. Toys, cartoon books, ice cream and animal crackers were distributed to the children.

SELLING THE PICTURE

THEY MAKE A COLORFUL LINEUP. Forty members of the "Circle B" and "Hickory Ranch" riders line up in front of the Palace Theatre, Akron, O., before entering to see the performance of Columbia's "Renegades." The members, attired in cowboy garb, attracted large crowds as they paraded to the theatre, and made a colorful lineup in front of the house. Stunt was arranged by Sid Holland, manager and publicity director.

Race Track Tiein, 'Cowboy' Parade Sell 'Renegades' at Palace, Akron

A top-drawer stunt, arranged with the local Ascot Race Track, highlighted the bang-up campaign by Sid Holland, manager and publicity director of the Palace Theatre, Akron, Ohio, for his playdate of Columbia's "Renegades." Sid, with the full cooperation of the track management, arranged for the fifth race, on the day before opening, to be called "The Renegades Purse." Throughout the earlier part of the afternoon's card, "Renegades" received plugs over the loudspeaker, mentioning theatre and playdate. At the finish of the handicap, a telegram was directed to the winning jockey from Evelyn Keyes, star of the film, congratulating him upon his victorious efforts. The owner of the winning steed was awarded a beautiful blanket, monogramed with full credits for Miss Keyes and the picture. This presentation was incorporated into the daily program, and, at the time of the award, loudspeakers boomed picture plugs to the assembled crowd of over 8,000. The ceremonies were also broadcast over Station WADC. Breaks on the sports and theatre pages of the local dailies were accorded this stunt.

Use School P.A. System

In another top idea, a plan was set up for proper credits to be broadcast over the public address system at the Tallmade High School Football Field at the time when over 3,000 youngsters were assembled to view a rodeo. The event was handled by radio station WADC. Featured at the show was Tex Brady and his Singing Troup, a western group with a large following.

A tieup was secured with Edfred's Music Shop, largest store of its type in the downtown section of Akron, which devoted their entire window to a display of western and hillbilly records, tying in the picture and playdate with a large and really attractive sign card spotted dead center. This store is located next door to the Colonial Theatre and is viewed by thousands of patrons daily. Another point, which helped make this a top tieup, is the fact that this establishment is recognized as the home of the bobby-soxers in Akron. A tieup was also made with Sears and Roebuck Co. for a window display of western equipment . . . saddles, stirrups, blankets, etc . . . with stills and credit cards prominently displayed. The Croft Wallpaper Company also lent their window for display.

Look, in a poll, credited "Renegades" with having the best movie "still of the year." Employing this break, Sid obtained a window for camera supply display which featured the "still of the year."

Heralds Important

Three thousand heralds were printed, announcing the playdate of the picture. The day of the stunt at Ascot Park, 2,000 of these were distributed by theatre employes among the large throng of spectators. The other 1,000 were distributed at various, well-frequented food markets inside shopping bags, obtaining exceptional coverage. A commercial plug idea was sold to Yeager's Store. which reproduced a film ad on the outside cover of their own four-page herald.

For the gala opening, arrangements were set for 40 members of the "Hickory" and "Circle B" Ranches to be on hand to view the picture. A parade was set up wherein 29 members, ranging from 6 to 60, attired in full cowboy regalia, rode right smack into the heart of the busy downtown section of Akron. The parade was escorted by a squad of police motorcycles. The national colors preceded the gayly-garbed cowboys and cowgirls. A special roped-off section was set up in front of the theatre while the gang dismounted and entered the theatre to view the picture as guests of the management.

'Blue Skies' Campaign Test for Future Selling

24,549,017; fan magazines, 9,007,657; women's magazines, 23,888,825, and weeklies, 18,711,810. Circulation in all four groups totaled 76,157,309.

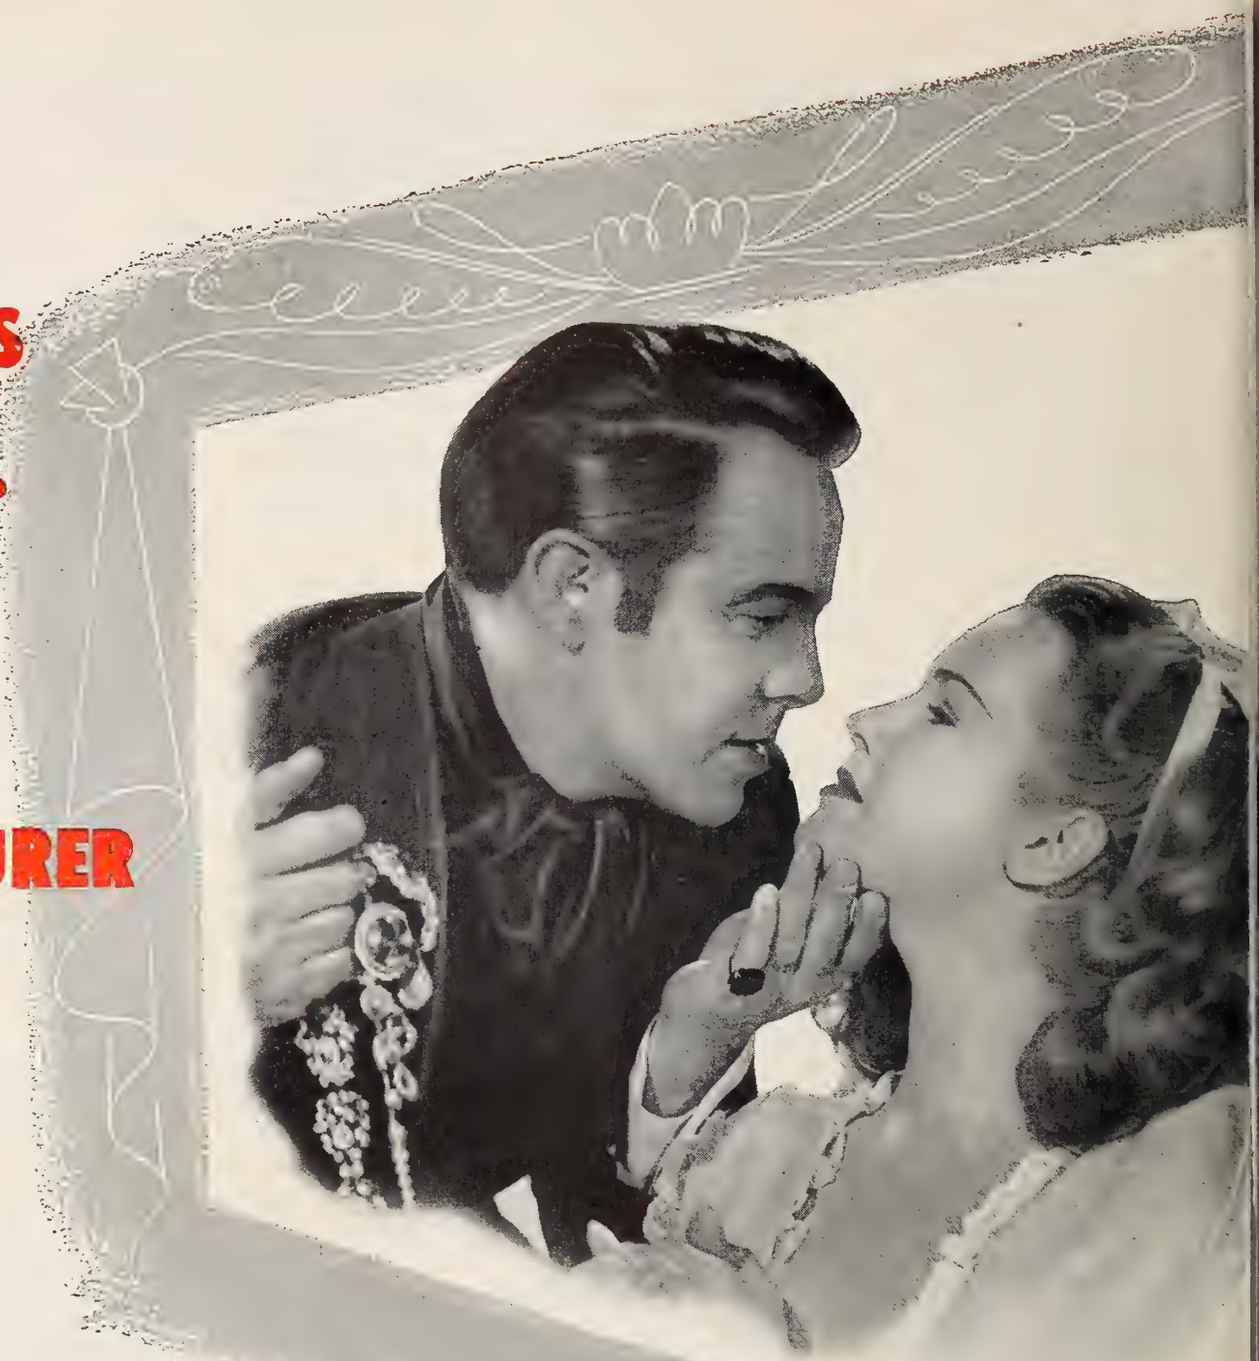
A special drive was made in the musical magazines and all smaller publications, both metropolitan and nationwide. Since the campaign covered so long a period of time, "Blue Skies" has had often as many as two, three and even four breaks in a periodical.

Irving Berlin contributed to the film's exploitation by visiting a number of cities where the film had pre-release engagements. The composer co-operated further in the promotion of the production by making a series of radio appearances.

Fred Astaire Petitions

Attention also has been directed to "the film" as result of a drive to stir up public interest in a movement to petition Astaire to reconsider his decision to bow out of pictures with "Blue Skies." The movement was initiated in Omaha, Astaire's home town, when Mayor Leeman was prevailed upon to have the city council pass a resolution asking the dancer to change his mind about retiring from pictures. The movement has spread to many other cities throughout the nation, including New York, where a petition was set up in the lobby of the Paramount for the duration of the film's run.

That the "Blue Skies" campaign is meeting the test is indicated by a poll taken by the Audience Research Institute recently which disclosed that, as of the last week of November, more persons wanted to see the Berlin film than any picture then in release. Eighty-three per cent of those questioned expressed a preference for "Blue Skies." The film was given the highest pre-release rating of any ever tested by the ARI.



Extensive Campaign for 'Mirror' in 3 Theatres

The three-theatre opening of International's "The Dark Mirror" at the Lincoln, Town and Capitol theatres in Miami, was supported by an extensive promotion and advertising campaign under the direction of Flynn Stubblefield, manager of the Capitol and Perry Spencer, Universal Southern field exploitation representative.

Ten days in advance of the opening, trailers and lobby copy and a newspaper teaser advertising campaign, was coordinated with several stunts. A special front was built on the Capitol Theatre consisting of broken mirrors which produced a startling effect when colored spots were thrown upon it. Reversible trick cards were distributed around town which had to be placed before a mirror to be read. A stencil was made reading "The Dark Mirror." Capitol, Town, Lincoln, and mirrors in soda fountains, weighing machines and elsewhere about town were stencilled.

A special screening was arranged for newspaper critics and Eve Tellegan, movie-radio critic, was featured in a special trailer which was used in the three theatres. Radio and newspaper publicity was tied in with the promotion.

TORONTO

Municipal elections throughout Ontario resulted, at Ottawa, in the re-election of Finley McRae to the Board of Control there and the election of Jack McLennan, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Brockville, to an aldermanic seat. McRae is the administrator of the estate of a once-prominent Canadian showman, the late Harry Brouse, pioneer theatre owner.

Work has started or plans have developed for new theatres in quite a number of cities and towns, other than those already revealed by Canadian Odeon or Famous Players. Theatres are projected for Ottawa and Sudbury, Ont., by Ben S. Okun, president of Biltmore Theatres, Ltd., Toronto, which already operates modern cinemas at Oshawa and Kingston. Oscar Legault has started a new theatre at Hawkesbury, Ont., the second for that town, while T. G. Lewis is putting the finishing touches on the first theatre at Eastview, Ont. Louis Bisson is completing a theatre block at Wrightville, Que., near Ottawa where a new house on Rideau Street is about to be opened by H. Berlin, owner of the Somerset in that city. Zumar Bros. are also making headway with a theatre in Ottawa's West End. Durham and Palmerston in western Ontario are preparing to have independent houses.

After a lull of some weeks, theatre robberies in Ontario were revived at Kitchener where the Lyric was entered after midnight and $700 taken from the smashed safe. There have been no arrests.

Glenn Ireton, Canadian director of public relations for Warner Bros., Toronto, has organized a showmanship contest on "The Verdict" for all Canadian theatre managers with a total of $500 in cash prizes being offered for the five best campaigns. The judges comprise James R. Nairn of Famous Players, Larry M. Graburn of Canadian Odeon, Ray Lewis, Jay Smith and Hye Bossin representing the press, N. R. Perry, president of the Advertising and Sales Club of Toronto, and Ireton. The contest closes April 15.

Christmas parties have come thick and fast in the film fraternity, starting with the reception in the headoffice of the Allen chain, Toronto. The Famous Players Toronto Managers Association had a midnight frolic Dec. 16 at the Runnymede Theatre, the manager of which, Maurice J. Doyle, is president of the association. Famous Players headoffice staff had a social night Dec. 19 at the King Edward Hotel while the outing of Monogram Pictures of Canada to Charlie Mavety's Ranch at Kleinburg was staged Dec. 20. Canadian Odeon's headoffice staff also provided a dinner and dance and the film exchanges are holding open house for trade officials and employes generally.

Arch H. Jolley, executive-secretary of the Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario, Toronto, continued his speaking tour for the film industry by traveling to Brockville, Ont., as a guest of Manager Les Mitchell of the Regent Theatre to address the Rotary Club.

A wedding of wide interest in Canadian film circles was the marriage of David Romberg, Metro Theatre, Toronto, to Miss Helen Sussman in Malloney's Art Gallery, the couple proceeding to Miami, Fla., for their honeymoon.

The staffs of Loew's Yonge Street and Loew's Uptown Theatres, Toronto, gathered Dec. 15 for a celebration which was marked by the presentation of long-service emblems by Charles E. Kurtman to eight men who had been with the Loew organization from 10 to 30 years. Earl Winslow and William Taylor, both projectionists, received 30-year medals while 20-year awards went to A. M. Allaway and Pacquale Jones. Among those who received 10-year honors were Manager Stan Gosnell of the Uptown and Manager Jack H. Clarke of the downtown Loew house.

A Pennsylvania Deer

The deer made famous in MGM's current production of "The Yearling" is a native of Pennsylvania's Canyon Country, famous hunting location in the heart of Pennsylvania's scenic region bordering Wellsboro, it was learned last week by Larry Woodin, manager of theatres in Wellsboro.

From Mrs. Mary Reinwald, one of his patrons, Woodin received a letter telling how the deer came to her house, how she took care of it through the summer, and how, just before the deer season, a man came and got it for the Game Commission. Later, she heard that the man had shipped some deer to Florida. Further investigation showed that her temporary pet had been selected to appear in the picture.

VANCOUVER

George Seabrook has returned to his old position of assistant manager of the Royal Theatre, Fort William, after five years of service with the RCAF. His flying duties took him around the world, and he was stationed in India as well as the European fronts.

Mark Jenkins for the past eight years, operator of the Rex Theatre, Claresholm, Alta., has sold out his interests to William Hrycuik, who formerly operated a theatre at Daysland, Alta.

David Magill, Saskatoon business man, will build a theatre at nearby Sutherland, Saskatchewan, as soon as materials are availble.

British Columbia's early history is to be filmed in Hollywood "horse opera" fashion by North American Productions of Vancouver, and displayed to film audiences throughout the continent—and beyond. The pictures will be entitled "Renegade Gold," a story of the early gold rush days in B. C. Although it is a western picture, brimful of action and gunplay, there isn't a horse in the whole picture.

Max Chechik, owner of the Bay Theatre here, has obtained the Dominion rights for the Korn-King popcorn machine. At present he is in eastern Canada organizing distribution for machines not having been given clearance by the fire department.

Izzy Shaker, who operates theatres at Hanna, Alta. and Kindersley, Sask., will open his new theatre, the Broadway, in Saskatoon this week on a six-day policy. House seats 650.

Bob Murphy, local Paramount manager, hit the headlines when he gave a special showing of a Paramount newsreel for a couple of visitors from the interior. They were anxious to see their son, who took top honors at the Williams Lake cattle show.

Two telephone calls to movie stars were the order of the day in interest-getting stunts for two films showing here. First Bob Sidman, Senate, sponsored a contest in the Telegraph's movie column, offering a free call to Rex Harrison, star of "Notorious Gentleman." Irvin Shaw, this city, won the call when he suggested he would like to see Harrison play Romeo and Lili Palmer play Juliet.

The other call was arranged by Sam Gilman, Loew's, for "Wicked Lady." Trudy LaWatsch, Telegraph movie writer, spoke on the Trans-Atlantic phone to the star of the picture at her home in London. The conversation dealt principally with the cutting and retaking of several scenes offensive to American censors because of "cleavage."

Gerry Wollaston, State, has planned two events for Christmas. The first is the annual Christmas party for orphan children, to be held Saturday with a movie, luncheon, entertainment and gifts. A custom of more than 20 years, the party was started originally by the late C. Floyd Hopkins, Wilmer and Vincent area manager. The other event is Wollaston's chairmanship of the Chamber of Commerce holiday program which opens Sunday with a broadcast by massed school glee clubs over the three city radio networks.

More than 1000 high school pupils, members of bands of the section, were guests at the State for the awarding of prizes in the annual high school band competition. Wollaston screened "Two Years Before the Mast" for the group.

Bob Sidman, Senate, removed the candy counter from the theatre lobby when he decided he would not increase the price of former nickel candy to six cents. He has returned to use of the old vending machine.

He creates reality...

● Only a model wreck . . . but intensely real on the screen . . . thanks to the director of special effects.

Because of his ingenuity and inventive art, pictures are made that without him would be impossible. And when audiences exclaim, laugh, or sit in silence before stark drama, it's often an unknowing tribute to his imagination and technical skill . . . to his power to create reality.

But if he is to exercise this creative power to the full, he naturally requires superior film, perfectly adapted to the particular problem at hand. That's the reason why so many directors of special effects prefer to use Eastman Background-X, Eastman Fine Grain Duplicating Negative, Eastman Fine Grain Duplicating Positive, and other members of the large and well-known family of Eastman motion picture films.

Safety First

A move to enforce laws with respect to the placing and installation of popcorn and candy machines in theatres was held last week by the State Department of Labor and Industry. Regular inspections are planned under the state building and fire laws. Interest in the enforcement stems from the recent Atlanta hotel fire.

Loew's Lyric dispensed with its usual stage and screen show last Sunday night when the annual Policemen's Benefit was staged at the house with many notables in the field of politics and public safety from the state, city and county in the audience.

The Klein Memorial will present a special New Year's eve show with eight acts of vaudeville, a stage orchestra and a feature film to be announced. Ticket prices range from $1.20 to $1.80.

"Russia on Parade," billed as Russia's first all-color feature, produced by Artkino, was a special feature last Sunday afternoon at the Klein Memorial. Also shown was "Moscow Music Hall," a Russian musical film. The event was under the sponsorship of the American Slav Committee of Bridgeport.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

Trade Is Worried Over Proposal to Nationalize 500 Circuit Houses; 'Great Expectations' Lunch Praised

By JOCK MacGREGOR

While trying outwardly to discredit the suggestion of a group of MPs for 500 circuit houses to be nationalized, the trade is nevertheless worried. It is fully appreciated that the Goverment has its eye on the large net grosses and the number of dollars that are slipping through their hands.

MacGregor

Since the proposers are not strictly cinemamen, it can be accepted that finer details are apt to be overlooked in a rush to attempt to cut the number of Hollywood films shown. The feeling that British pictures are not widely enough shown on American screens for reasons other than quality is growing here.

It appears that Eric Johnston's efforts to get the new Quota Act postponed for a year have not been too successful. Sir Henry French said at the December press conference of the British Film Producers Association that their original proposals had gone through to the Board of Trade.

Quota, however, is as great a headache for the independent showman, as not more than 30-odd top British films have been released this year and the majority of these are from the Rank Organization. Certain renters have handled no British films during this period.

Meanwhile the revivals racket grows. Of the 18 subjects making up the current programs for the three groups of Greater London cinemas, six are re-issues and four British.

RCA's Cliff Atkinson demonstrated their new equifment to me recently. With import licenses hard to come by, all parts have been made in Britain to American specifications and assembled by RCA engineers. Already some two dozen cinemas have grabbed the available sets to replace war-worn outfits.

The press lunch following J. Arthur Rank's "Great Expectations" was one of the pleasantest in a long while. The critic could eat it with a clear conscience knowing that the picture was above reproach. From all viewpoints the film is outstanding and I shall certainly not know my critics if it is not their "film of the year." Artistic and entertaining.

Spurred on by this reception for Dickens and wanting more, David Lean has started script conferences on another of his novels. Naturally—"Oliver Twist."

Incidentally, if Walt Disney has any doubts as to who should play "Alice in Wonderland," he should see this picture. Jean Simmons would be perfect.

Visiting the Gainsborough Studios, I came upon a lovely sight: Theo Cowan of the pres department, disguised as the traditional Father Christmas, posing for seasonal publicity stills with Margaret Lockwood and Patricia Roc.

Joy Taylor, formerly secretary to John Myers, has branched out as an independent publicist and recently organized her first press show.

If anybody thought that Alfred Davis was over-ambitious in booking Gigli for one performance at his huge suburban cinema, he will be equally surprised to hear that the box-office take was approximately $10,000. Davis admittedly paid a lot for the tenor, but at those figures one can afford fancy sums.

CINCINNATI

The Theatre Owners Corporation will add Christian Pfister's Mayflower and Jewel, Troy, Ohio, to its membership on Dec. 29, according to Irving Sochin, general manager of the buying and booking agency. This increases to 36 the number of theatres served by TOC, which was organized last September with 24. Sochin also announces that James Brunetti will join the TOC booking staff on Dec. 23. Brunetti was booker at the Warner Bros. exchange here for several years, and has recently been managing the National Theatre here.

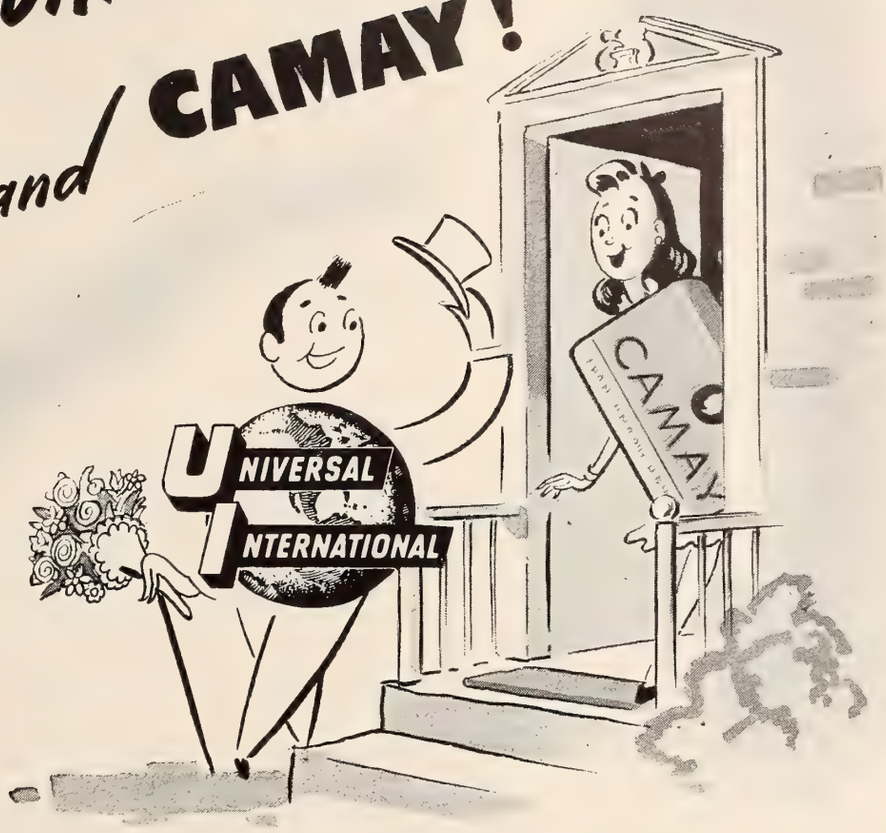
Harris Dudelson has taken over the district managership of Film Classics, with supervision over Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, and Detroit. He will headquarter here. Dudelson was for several years branch manager for United Artists in Cincinnati and St. Louis, and recently has been manager of the William Bein circuit of three theatres. Edward Salzberg has been named branch manager, according to Dudelson, and will take over on Dec. 23. Salzberg is at present city salesman for RKO Radio.

Joseph Lee opened his deluxe Ames, Dayton, Ohio, after delays caused by shortages of fixtures and equipment. This suburban theatre seats 900, and features a lavish refreshment bar off the lobby. Lee also operates the Cove, Covington, Ohio.

Mike Carmichael, recently appointed Cincinnati manager for Universal, succeeded in buying a home, and last week motored to Memphis and brought back his family.

Disagreement as to the purchase price of the equipment has closed the Terminal, 110-seat newsreel theatre in the Cincinnati Union Terminal, according to Edward Williams, former operator whose lease expired Dec. 10. The new lessee is Robert Valaise, who is at present in Paris, France. It is reported that William Clowes, who operates the Scoop, a newsreel theatre in Louisville, will handle the management for Valaise. Meanwhile the theatre is dark, at least temporarily, pending appraisal of the equipment by local theatre supply men.

Joseph Nordloh has opened his Deer Park, in the suburb of that name. The Deer Park will be managed by Horace Wersel, who also operates the Silvertone, in suburban Silverton, for Nordloh. Two other greater Cincinnati theatres are expected to open during the Christmas holidays, Bud Ackerman's big deluxe Covedale, and the Ludlow, in Ludlow, Ky., in which circuit operator Lou Wiethe and veteran exhibitor Harry Hilling are partners.



Jack Keating, Paramount salesman in West Virginia, is the father of a baby boy. Keating, who served as captain in the Rangers, has been acclaimed as the most decorated man in the film business.

Walt Disney's "Song of the South" will open simultaneously in the RKO Grand and RKO Shubert on Christmas day, the only picture to have such an opening since September, 1944, when "Since You Went Away" opened the Grand and Albee. MILWAUKEE

It is hoped to have the new theatre at Pepin, Wis., ready for the public before the holidays. The first week of December the seats were being installed, and the interior has been decorated. It was expected that the enclosing shed over the front can be removed by this week.

At Spring Valley, the last of the steel framework for the new showhouse was being erected early in December, and the roof and front are expected to be installed by the holidays. As some material is still short, an opening date cannot be announced at this time.

On Dec. 5th the new Adams Theatre, at Adams, was opened. The owners are Roy Picus, Shirley Johnston and Everett Erickson. Up to this time the rights to show films in Adams was held by Frank Nowachek, who has operated the Opera House, but the rights were to be given up by him when the New Adams Theatre was opened. The main auditorium seats 400, and the design of the floor has been arranged to permit everyone to see the screen without distortion. The floors and stairways are made of steel and concrete, while the walls are made of fireproof board and specially designed for acoustic properties. The theatre is being heated by oil. Certain materials are still reported short for the completion of the showhouse. Carpets for aisles have yet to be delivered and installed. Also, the velvet curtain to be used to cover the stage between shows has not been delivered, as this is considered a non-essential, according to the management, who consider themselves lucky to have been able to have the seats installed, as it is known that many other new houses cannot get seats, perhaps due to the style ordered. Shirley E. Johnson is the manager, and he is also in the lobby to take tickets, due to a shortage of help.

The Hodag Amusement Co., Inc., has been formed at Rhinelander, Wis., to "operate theatres and other places of amusement." 100 shares of capital stock at $100 per share par value have been authorized. Incorporators are Peter and George Rouman and Thomas Leonard.

Not So Safe

Patrolman Glennon Jasper happened to pass the Fairy Theatre, St. Louis, in the wee hours of a recent morning, when he heard the unmistakable sound of a hammer on metal. Peering into the theatre lobby, he discovered a battered safe with a burglar making a casual, if not noisy, job of knocking the combination off. Spotting his nemesis, the burglar dashed out a side door as the officer fired two shots into the air. Undaunted, the agile crook clambered up a ten-foot fence at the rear of the theatre and made his escape. Nothing was taken, but the safe will never look the same again.

HARTFORD

The RKO picture, "San Quentin," opened at the Regal, Hartford, last week, with Barton MacLane, one of the film's stars, on hand to make stage appearances on the opening day. Executive Secretary Herman M. Levy that he has asked his inspectors to make arrests "only in cases where flagrant violations are observed, and in cases where actual complaints have been made of repeated offenses," the bulletin said.

James F. Clancy, sales promotion manager of Station WTIC, Hartford, who has had many years of experience in the fields of radio, theatre, and allied arts, will retire on Dec. 21. He was manager of the Poli's Capitol Theatre in Hartford for eight years before joining WTIC. Clancy was active in Keith and Poli circuit theatres management for almost 25 years. And before coming to Hartford, he was with the Paramount publicity department in New York.

The suggestions of possible earlier openings in New Britain theatres will have to wait for New Britain Common Council official action, which is due in a month. Last week, the Council's Committee on Salaries and Ordinances, held a public hearing on the petition of local theatremen that would permit an earlier opening and later closing of New Britain theatres on Sunday. The Committee announced delay in action for a month. The Board of Aldermen in New Haven, meanwhile, has approved an ordinance, allowing 1 P. M. to 11:30 P. M. Sunday film showings in theatres in New Haven.

NEW YORK

Christmas was in the air this week along the Row with most of the exchanges giving their help an afternoon off to buck the crowds and do their shopping. The only trouble was they then needed another full day to recuperate from the mauling they received from the store crowds.

And speaking of that season of good will and good cheer, both are going to be tended to royally this year with parties scheduled by most employe and home office organizations.

MGM will hold an exchange party on Dec. 20 in the Empire Hotel while the Loew-MGM-WHN party, also an event that is talked about for days afterward, will take place in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Commodore at 1 p.m.

Twentieth Century-Fox booked its party right in the heart of Times Square on the same afternoon in the Grand Ballroom of the Astor, while Universal will entertain at home in its offices in Radio City.

Columbia will hold an employe's party in its film row exchange on Dec. 24; United Artists will also entertain in its exchange offices on the same date, while RKO will stage its party on Dec. 20 at the Waldorf-Astoria.

And that overworked march by Mendelssohn is due for a playing soon when Gloria Green, daughter of 20th-Fox exchange's Irving Green in the film department marries Dr. Harold Hartstein, a dentist, and when Annette Dropkin of The Big U Exchange's bookkeeping department weds Bernard Glazer.

Condolences are being extended to Rosemary Byer, Fox telephone operator, whose mother passed away on Friday, Dec. 13.

Helen Wisper of Fox will entertain her niece, Alice Knabe (formerly Dzikas) of Alabama during the Christmas holiday. Alice formerly worked in the Paramount exchange.

Ray Smith, Warner exchange manager, George Goldberg and James Moore, salesmen, attended sales meeting in Buffalo on Tuesday, Dec. 17.

The Wyndham Theatre, Wyndham and the Orpheum Theatre, Tannersville, have closed for the winter months.

Joseph Farnam has leased and will open the Lansing Theatre, Troy, on Dec. 27. Booking and buying will be done by Upstate Theatres.

John Rossi of Schroon Lake stopped along Film Row on his way to New York for the Christmas and New Year holidays. Other visitors along Film Row included Frank Wieting of Cobleskill, Sid Kulick of Bell Pictures.

Ben Smith, Film Classics representative, is going to Buffalo to attend the Christmas party given by his office there at the Chez Ami.

Joseph Miller, PRC district manager, suffered a sprained arm when he slipped alighting from his car. In spite of it all, Joe went to Chicago to attend the merger of Eagle-Lion and Producers Releasing Corp.

THE BOX OFFICE SLANT

The Beast With Five Fingers

Warner Bros. (Horror) 90 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) This is a horror-of-horrors; so much so that only those who are extremely rabid fans may be able to take it. For others, there may be a certain amount of repulsion in some of the scenes.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should go well wherever the "horror" fans are well seasoned. Has enough name draw to attract.

Cast: Robert Alda, Andrea King, Peter Lorre, Victor Francen, J. Carrol Naish, Charles Dingle, John Alvin, David Hoffman, Barbara Brown, Patricia White, William Edmunds, Belle Mitchell, Ray Walker, Pedro de Cordoba. Credits: Producer, William Jacobs. Directed by Robert Florey. Screenplay, Curt Siodmak. From a story by William Fryer Harvey. Photography, Wesley Anderson.

Plot: In a small town in Italy live a retired invalid pianist, an unhappy American girl who is his nurse-companion, and a complex, brooding secretary. Into this house comes a young composer who wants to take the girl out of the gloomy environment. The old musician dies and they are all plunged into a maze of sinister circumstances surrounding his death.

Comment: Only the strong-in-heart may be able to take this horror film. It is definitely not for the children, for it has a number of frightening scenes; as, for example, those showing a severed hand crawling over people, coming out of hidden places and even crawling out of a burning fireplace. This showing of the hand, instead of being an illusion in the mind of the crazed individual who severed it from the corpse, as it is supposed to be, takes on a semblance of reality that may well make the scenes too repulsive for the average adult. There is considerable suspense in the story which also has all the other ingredients sought by dyed-in-the-wool horror fans. The cast is a good one for advertising purposes, including, as it does, Robert Alda, Peter Lorre and J. Carrol Naish. Lorre, as expected, does all the "horrifying." Naish is splendid as the Commisario of Police, and Victor Francen and Andrea King are the others in the cast who are quite capable in their respective roles. Direction was by Robert Florey, and William Jacobs produced.

13 Rue Madeleine

20th Century-Fox Drama 95 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Exciting, informative, highly entertaining story of the United States espionage service during World War II. All types of audiences should like it, but the very young might be disturbed by its matter-of-fact treatment of life and death.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: James Cagney's name on the marquees, together with those of Richard Conte, Frank Latimore and Annabella, and the fine advance publicity campaign, should provide good initial draw. Word-of-mouth praise should keep audiences coming. Top exploitation campaign is recommended.

Cast: James Cagney, Annabella, Richard Conte, Frank Latimore, Walter Abel, Melville Cooper, Sam Jaffe, Marcel Rousseau, Richard Gordon, Everett G. Marshall, Blanche Yurka, Peter Von Zerneck, Alfred Linder, Ben Low, James Craven, Roland Belanger, Horace MacMahon, Alexander Kirkland, Donald Randolph. Credits: Directed by Henry Hathaway. Produced by Louis de Rochemont. Original screenplay by John Monks, Jr. and Sy Bartlett. Music, Alfred Newman. Musical direction, David Buttolph. Photography, Norbert Brodine. Special photographic effects, Fred Sersen.

Plot: Walter Abel and James Cagney are placed in charge of training the 77th successive group of U. S. espionage agents who will go into the field on hazardous missions. In the group are Richard Conte, American university graduate who has spent most of his life in Europe; Annabella, whose French husband is missing in action, and Frank Latimore, high school French teacher. Abel and Cagney discover that Conte is really a top-ranking German spy whose mission is to discover when and where the "second front" will begin. They decide to use him by giving him false information. Conte, Latimore and Annabella are sent to parachute into Holland but Conte discovers that Latimore knows his identity. He cuts his parachute cord, kills Latimore, and Cagney later takes Latimore's place. The mission of capturing the collaborator who designed the V2 launching sites is accomplished. Annabella is killed and Cagney captured. During his torture the building in which Cagney is held is deliberately destroyed by Allied bombers to prevent him from giving information to the enemy under the torture.

Comment: Producer de Rochemont has used some of the technique he employed so successfully in "The House on 92nd Street," mixing actual newsreel shots with fictional scenes in adding realistic authenticity to the story of dangerous, exciting espionage contained in "13 Rue Madeleine." The script is excellent, the direction is just about perfect and the story goes its logical way. Shown in most minute detail is the training of the men and women who are to be entrusted with getting enemy information which would be the means of saving months and perhaps years of more war and ultimately, thousands of American lives. Cagney is an older, more settled Cagney here, but withal a rough, tough Cagney. As the leader of a group of American-trained spies who has taught them to be absolutely ruthless and who, during the picture, is just about as vicious as can be imagined in his man-handling of Gestapo men, he is as perfect a choice for this part as can be imagined. Conte is excellent and convincing as are the others in less important parts. Annabella is appealing, but her role might just as well have been eliminated entirely. She does lend a touch of femininity however, to a story that is pretty much all "man stuff." There have been combined in "13 Rue Madeleine" a fine script, excellent production and expert direction with excellent casting and fine acting. That's just about all that can be asked for—and the picture delivers. It's "cloak and dagger" stuff—and it's highly entertaining.

The Story of the Pope

Chapel Films Documentary 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Interesting, informative but repetitive, its main appeal will be to Roman Catholics. Of limited appeal to others.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Of little general commercial value, but can be sold through church auspices to limited audiences.

Cast: Pope Pius XII, the Cardinalate and other officials of the Roman Catholic Church. Credits: Introduction with Francis Cardinal Spellman. Narrated by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen. Written by John Meehan, in collaboration with Rev. John O'Connor. Choral music by the Sistine Choir. Produced by Bernard B. Brandt.

Comment: This film is treated by its producer, script writer and narrator with considerable skill, and their combined efforts have resulted in a clear explanation of how a Pope is elected to office, his Coronation and intimate glimpses into his daily life. Views of the Vatican and some of its world-famous art treasures, several Papal audiences, and colorful processions with the ancient pageantry of the Catholic Church also are shown. While the film's appeal is largely to persons of the Roman Catholic faith, it does have an intelligent, explanatory appeal to moviegoers of other faiths. From a commercial point of view it can be sold successfully to religious audiences under the auspices of local Roman Catholic church groups, wherever managers' knowledge of local situations give them assurance that a sufficient number of Catholics are or can be interested. Not for general appeal, however.

The Locket

RKO Radio Drama 86 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A strange story of an apparently rational girl's twisted personality. The method of telling is strange, too, but discriminating audiences will find it interesting and entertaining.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Good marquee names and intelligent handling, without too much stress being placed on the so-called psychological angle, should bring at least average returns. A comedy or musical booked with it will help.

Cast: Laraine Day, Brian Aherne, Robert Mitchum, Gene Raymond, Sharyn Moffett, Ricardo Cortez, Henry Stephenson, Katherine Emery, Reginald Denny, Fay Helm, Helen Thimig, Nella Walker, Queenie Leonard, Lillian Fontaine, Myrna Dell, Johnny Clark. Credits: Produced by Bert Granet. Directed by John Brahm. Written by Sheridan Gibney. Executive producer, Jack J. Gross. Music by Roy Webb. Musical director, C. Bakaleinikoff. Photography, Nicholas Musuraca. Special effects, Russell A. Cully.

Plot: On the eve of his marriage to Laraine Day, Gene Raymond is visited by Psychiatrist Brian Aherne who attempts to convince him that Laraine has a twisted mentality, is a thief and entirely without scruples. He tells Raymond his story, which involves his marriage and divorce from Laraine and her previous love affair with Robert Mitchum. He tells of the girl's theft of a diamond necklace and other jewelry, of her knowledge of a murder which will acquit a man condemned to die for it; of the condemned man's execution because she will admit no knowledge and of Mitchum's subsequent suicide. Raymond refuses to be convinced, and it is not until the girl has a dramatic recollection as she approaches the altar that Aherne's story is corroborated and the girl confined to a mental institution.

Comment: Producer Bert Granet has spared nothing in the way of production facilities and has been extremely careful in selecting his cast for "The Locket." But the story itself is a strange one, told on the screen by a series of devices, perhaps best defined as a "flash-back within a flash-back within another flash-back" which, unless audiences see the entire film exactly from the beginning, might be hopelessly confusing. As it is, the story is exceptionally well done in every respect from direction to the smallest bit of acting. Laraine Day's interpretation of her character is splendid, with Robert Mitchum as a brooding, sensitive artist also giving probably his best performance to date. Briane Aherne is tops, too, and Gene Raymond in a small, but important part lends credence to the role of a young man in love who refuses to believe evidence against his sweetheart which would convince any other person not ardently concerned. The picture as a whole is a good story-telling job of a girl with a strange, twisted mentality, whose aberrations are logically explained at the film's close. It is definitely not a picture for children, not so much from a moral point of view, but because it certainly will be over their heads. Its best audience will be among the more discriminating. It will be aided by an accompanying booking of either a comedy or musical in either short or full-length form.

California

Paramount (Technicolor) 98 mins.
Western Drama

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) An outdoor, fast-moving, action-packed epic of the old west with plenty of thrills and excitement to entertain the average follower of this type of screen fare.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: With three star names for marquee draw, plus the other ingredients that usually attract the masses, this film is bound to be successful at the box-office.

Cast: Ray Milland, Barbara Stanwyck, Barry Fitzgerald, George Coulouris, Albert Dekker, Anthony Quinn, Frank Faylen, Gavin Muir, James Burke, Eduardo Ciannelli, Roman Bohnen, Argentina Brunetti, Howard Freeman, Julia Faye. Credits: Produced by Seton I. Miller. Directed by John Farrow. Screenplay by Frank Butler and Theodore Strauss. Based on a story by Boris Ingster. Photography, Ray Rennahan.

Plot: In 1848 strong political forces and power-hungry individuals plot to block California's entrance to the Union by setting it up as an empire. A U. S. Cavalry deserter, a young woman and an old grapegrower arrive in the territory on the same wagon train, just in time to become involved in the intrigue.

Comment: Lavishly produced and well-directed, "California" is an outdoor drama with plenty of action, excitement and the other heroics usually present in this type of production. It is a rugged tale of the old west, presented in magnificent Technicolor, that enhances one's enjoyment of the film so much that it's bound to create much word-of-mouth advertising. The opening sequences, especially, are worthy of note, for these call attention to the beauty of California and are shown to the accompaniment of several very catchy tunes, used for background and narration. If the wonders of California have never been gleaned before, here is a chance for everyone to get a regular tour of the place. Besides the picturesque countryside, there is the customary rip-roaring, thrilling riding and shooting to provide good, exciting entertainment for most audiences everywhere. Both Ray Milland and Barbara Stanwyck are excellent in their respective roles. For Milland it is quite a departure from the type of characterizations he's been doing, but he is just as much at home in it as he was in the many perfect delineations he's turned in in the past. Miss Stanwyck, who has never before appeared in a Technicolor picture, not only gives the usual splendid performance one has come to expect of her, but the color photography shows up her beauty and attractiveness. Appearing with them is Barry Fitzgerald, in a smooth, convincing portrayal of one of the pioneers, and George Coulouris, Albert Dekker and Anthony Quinn. This colorful adventure drama was made by the producer-director combination of Seton I. Miller and John Farrow, and they have given it all the fast-moving, action-packed excitement these outdoor epics need to be successful at the box-office.

It's a Wonderful Life

RKO Radio Drama 128 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) An exceptionally entertaining human document about an average American in an average American town. Fraught with those Frank Capra directorial touches and superbly enacted by James Stewart and Donna Reed in the starring roles, this picture appears destined for long and deserved popularity as excellent, enjoyable entertainment for the entire family.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The appealing title itself has sundry exploitation values, but the names of Capra and Stewart who, despite their long wartime absence from the screen, still rank high in public esteem, should account for high grosses in all situations.

Cast: James Stewart, Donna Reed, Lionel Barrymore, Thomas Mitchell, Henry Travers, Beulah Bondi, Frank Faylen, Ward Bond, H. B. Warner, Gloria Grahame, Todd Karns, Virginia Patton, Samuel S. Hinds, Mary Treen, Charles Williams, Frank Albertson, Sarah Edwards and others. Credits: Produced and directed by Frank Capra. Screenplay by Frances Goodrich, Albert Hackett and Frank Capra. Additional scenes by Jo Swerling. Based on a story by Philip Van Doren Stern. Photography, Joseph Walker and Joseph Biroc. A Liberty Films Production.

Plot: An angel comes down from heaven to try to help the father of four children out of a bad predicament. The man, harassed by the bad breaks he has had in life, expresses the wish that he had never been born. To prove how bad that would have been, the angel shows him what would then have occurred.

Comment: Marking the first picture made by Liberty Films, an independent producing company releasing through RKO Radio, and the first picture produced and directed by Frank Capra, as well as the first starring vehicle for James Stewart, since both returned from the war, "It's a Wonderful Life" is an exceptionally entertaining human document about an average American in an average American town. It portrays convincingly all the failings, doubts and setbacks most people have experienced at one time or another in their lives. The skilled directorial hand of Frank Capra is evident in most of the footage, for he injects into the simple tale those outstanding touches that have made his name and his pictures tops in the industry. As the young American, Stewart has just the right kind of role to mark his return to the screen, and he performs it excellently. He wins the sympathy of the audience right from the start and holds it, by virtue of his truly human behavior, until the final, successful conclusion to a long and harassed period of his life. Donna Reed is perfect as his wife, and the supporting cast of top-notch players, including Lionel Barrymore, Thomas Mitchell, Henry Travers, Ward Bond and Beulah Bondi, contribute noteworthy portrayals. Because it is excellent, enjoyable entertainment for the entire family, "It's a Wonderful Life" appears destined for long and deserved popularity. And from the box-office angle there is not only the appealing title, which has sundry exploitation values, but also the names of Capra and Stewart who, despite their long wartime absence from the screen, still rank high in public esteem.

The Fabulous Suzanne

Republic Comedy 71 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Mildly entertaining comedy that should please average audiences in average communities. Has some draggy moments, and there is an element of slapstick in some of the situations, which are not likely to be criticized by average moviegoers, however.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should make a satisfactory companion for a heavy feature. Cast names should be good for marquee draw.

Cast: Barbara Britton, Rudy Vallee, Otto Kruger, Richard Denning, Bill Henry, Veda Ann Borg, Irene Agay, Grady Sutton, Frank Darian, Harry Tyler, Eddie Fields, Al Hammer. Credits: Associate producer and director, Steve Sekely. Screenplay by Tedwell Chapman and Randall Faye. Original story by William Bowers and Tedwell Chapman. Photographed by Henry Sharpe. Musical score, Arthur Lange.

Plot: When her diner-owning boy friend, Bill Henry, refuses to accept money she inherited from an old customer so that the couple can get married, Barbara Britton leaves him. Lucky investments, which she makes by jabbing a pin into a random name on a list of stocks, make her wealthy. Through manipulations by Rudy Vallee, member of a brokerage firm with his brother, Richard Denning, and his father, Otto Kruger, Barbara gets a new diner for Bill, who thinks his late aunt has left him the money. Vallee, Denning and Kruger make a play for Suzanne, and complications eventually ensue when Bill discovers the men in her apartment and learns that Barbara is the "aunt" who left the money. But the difficulties are ironed out, and all ends well.

Comment: "The Fabulous Suzanne" is a mildly entertaining comedy that should please average audiences in average commun-

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management*

VISITING WITH SOME SMART SHOWMEN

By Jack Jackson

I've been doing a lot of gadding about lately. I've been going places, meeting folks and seeing things that I believe will be of as much interest to those who follow—or happen upon—this column than anything I might peck out in the way of "what's what around the theatre" during this season of high spirits and gay times. I'm just going to chatter away as loosely as possible in hopes that you will get something worth while that will help you do a better job for more people at your theatre. So if you have anything more important to do just go on about it and don't mind me.

At a very early age somebody told me about all work and no play making Jack a dull boy. According to reliable reports I began taking the admonition seriously about the time when I was emerging from those triangle breeches and ever since, on the slightest provocation, I've been among the first to grab my rompers and take full advantage of every opportunity to play a bit. So-o, when I heard about the Eagle-Lion shindig at the Baker Hotel while I was handling some business in Dallas, I invited myself and horned in. The place was just oozing with old friends from everywhere and, while I expected to hear some Eagle screaming and Lion roaring, everything was decorous and everybody content to meet and gossip with everybody else. I somehow or other just couldn't help comparing the "easy atmosphere" of the occasion to that period described by historians as "the lull before the battle." Because if you think for a minute that Eagle-Lion is not going to put up a battle for the dollars that you send to market for pictures, just focus your binoculars on this list of folks I met and chinned with:

Alfred W. Schwalberg, vice-president and general sales manager; Harry (go-get-tum) Thomas, president of PRC whose outfit will handle physical distribution of the baby company's output; Bryan Foy (than whom there is no whomer) production chief; Max Youngstein, director of advertising and publicity, and no end of top line men like Herman Beiersdorf, Sam Milner and Ralph McCoy to spearhead the regional sales forces. But let me tell it the way it all happened:

Lot of Pinochle and Pictures to Talk Over

I approached the girl from whom I knew I knew I'd have to buy my coat back (I've done it at least 300 times this year) and was a bit startled to see a banner above her head reading "Love From a Stranger." I waited long enough to make sure it wasn't for me and turned around to bump into the explanation—another banner reading "It's a Joke, Son." About that time Harry Thomas was standing front and center and (since we hadn't seen each other since he was a common sales manager) we had a lot of pinochle and pictures to talk over. Seems like Harry along with making better pictures for PRC is melding bigger pinochle hands for the Thomas bank account.

Max Youngstein was genuinely glad to see me again and Ralph McCoy and I had a long-deferred old-home week visit. The Interstate Circuit was well represented with R. J. (Bob) O'Donnell, Bill O'Donnell, Raymond Willie, Frank Starz, Ray Beall, Debs Reynolds, Ray Jones and his cohorts of the booking department, Armstrong, Bascom and others. R. I. (Rip) Payne and Lynn Stockard were on the Griffith circuit's reception committee. Dick Owen was doing the honors for 20th-Fox. Ben Cammack and Sol Sachs carried the RKO banner. Sol's brother, Harry and I. B. Adelman of the Adelman theatres were among many independents. Claude Ezell and Bill Underwood were checked into account for the Drive-In situations. The Foy's darn near had a family quorum with Byran, Dickie and Madelyn (Mrs. Bill O'D) all present.

I think Claude Ezell paid Bryan Foy an exceptional though well deserved compliment when he referred to him as being the "fellow who had done the most good and gotten the least credit of any man in the production end of the industry." I subscribe to that—and I know a lot of others will second the motion.

The critics section was well represented with the Southwest's headliner, John Rosenfield of the Dallas News and Fairfax Nisbet of his distaff personnel. Ida Belle Hicks of the Fort Worth Star Telegram checked in a little late, but trust Youngstein to see to it that she got her book full of notes about E-L. Somebody had lured a hive full of Braniff Airline Honeys to make the place look nice and keep folks from getting lonesome and they were sure giving out with that stuff that makes plane traveling so popular.

Incidentally I had an inside track with the Braniff babes because I held a plane ticket on the line and was in position to offer documentary proof of my allegiance to their source of bread and butter. Bill McCraw of Variety Clubs had a ticket on anther line for St. Louis, so he was in the doghouse. Bill and I left together for the airport and if you are ever so fortunate as to get an opportunity to spend an hour with the genial and affable Variety Club headliner by all means grab it. He's about the most refreshing person a fellow could possibly hope to meet and, in my book, rates "front" as a salesman of rose colored glasses, and "tops" as a militant leader of the anti-pessimists league. Bill was former attorney general of the state of Texas and an unsuccessful candidate for its governorship some few years back. He is all hopped up over his connection with Variety and evidences a decision to eschew all proffers of commercial or political fame or profit to continue in the work he loves so well. In his own words: "There are a lot of dissatisfied people in the world but Mrs. McCraw's boy Bill sure isn't one of them."

That's that for the gossip department and I hope I didn't bore you. Now let's get on the important chronicling of what's doing around the theatres and among the showmen I visited.

I was down in Southwest Texas and

'Thank You, Kiddies'

During the Christmas holidays the Alliance Circuit, whose headquarters is in Chicago, is giving the kiddies in the towns in which it operates theatres one free morning show in recognition of the youngsters' patronage throughout the year. The stunt is a "great goodwill builder throughout the circuit," the management states.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

met an unique and colorful theatre owner who answers to the monicker of "Stout" Jackson—no, he's too smart to be one of my relatives. Jackson owns and operates a string of three Spanish theatres in towns of dominant Latin population. The following facts will seem fantastic but I've actually enjoyed the experience of witnessing every detail with my eyes wide open.

In Robstown, Texas—population 8,300, according to a 1945 atlas—his exhibition place seats 2,200. And, wonder of wonders, he plays to capacity two to four nights each week with the other three not doing so badly. I purposely refrained from calling it a "house" or "theatre" because of its novel construction. Jackson started in a tent—he was a former strong man of circus fame—and, when he found a permanent structure advisable, erected an exhibition place so unusual and imaginative that it practically advertises itself.

Sound and Solid

The structure is about 200 feet in length and 80 feet in width. Its sidewalls—consisting of about 10 feet of canvas and another 10 or more of metal lath and plaster—stand a good two stories high. With a shingled roof inclining to a center some 30 or more feet. From the outside one gets the impression of a bigger than Ringling's circus tent, but examination shows it to be as sound and solid—if not more so—than many of the newer theatres constructed of ersatz materials. The climatic conditions being what they are in South Texas and the proximity of Robstown to the Gulf makes it possible for Jackson to cool his theatre when crowds or the weather man "up" the temperature by the simple process of raising the canvas sidewall a few feet and letting the Gulf breeze do the job.

The booth, containing the most modern of equipment, is suspended near the center well above the heads of the audience. There is no balcony but a partial second floor provides office and storeroom space as well as a wide catwalk to the booth. Sanitary conditions are provided on the main floor which also has plenty of concessions that contribute materially to the weekly receipts. Folding chairs and benches are the seating accommodations.

In Kingsville a similar edifice seats 2,600 because the population is larger, 12,300. In Falfurrias, Texas, population 2,800, an immense tent does the job.

Only Spanish pictures are exhibited in all Jackson's theatres but the Latins represent about 75 per cent of each town's inhabitants and the draw is for miles in all directions. He has Mexican connections that enable him to contract the best stage, screen and radio talent for personal appearances and his prices range from 25 cents for pictures only to 50 and 60 cents for pictures and vaudeville.

In Alice, Texas, population 7,792, I saw one of those South Pacific cloth airplane hangars, suspended from high metal poles to eliminate interior obstructions, being used for Spanish picture exhibition. From the outside it resembled a mountain of rags caught in a spiderweb of cables but the inside, seating about 2,000, proved to have good sound and excellent projection.

A Day With Torres

In San Antonio I spent a day with Ignacio Torres, general manager of the Lucchese Theatres. This outfit also caters exclusively to Latins of which San Antonio has better than 100,000. Torres resorts to every trick in the book to keep his theatres filled to capacity and receipts of $2,500.00 for one day at his "A" theatre are not too infrequent. He was working out plans for an audience participation activity he intends putting in effect soon to offset the lull in business that all of us are experiencing. Torres knows his people thoroughly and has planned his activity accordingly. However, as I see it, his scheme will come pretty close to getting the brass ring in any customer contest

THEATRE MANAGER'S NOTEBOOK
Maintenance

SOUND EQUIPMENT — Maintenance 2

(From an Outline of Talks Presented to the Classes in the Wilby-Kincey School of Maintenance)

NON-SYNC TURNTABLES

The entire non-synch should be kept clean. Records should be kept clean and free from dust—for which a soft brush should be used.

Lubricate Motor Periodically

The motor should be lubricated periodically in accordance with manufacturer's or sound service inspector's instructions.

Check Platter Speed

Platter speed should be checked frequently by using a stroboscope disc.

LOUDSPEAKERS

Speakers should be kept dry and clean. Dust accumulations should be removed with a vacuum cleaner under the direction of the sound service inspector.

Nothing should ever be placed between the speakers and the screen.

Keep in Same Location

If the speakers are movable, make provisions to assure that they are always returned to exactly the same locations for the show.

Tilting of Speaker

Tilting or flaring of speakers should be changed only under the direct supervision of the sound service inspector. Never change the direction of the speakers because poor sound quality is experienced in some part of the auditorium —this will only injure the quality in some other part. Have the sound service inspector make any necessary changes.

MONITORING SOUND

It is essential that the auditorium sound be monitored by a designated member of the theatre personnel and sound volume maintained properly by signalling the projection room with the buzzer installation.

Keep Proper Sound Volume

Maintaining proper sound volume is just as essential to "ear enjoyment" of the show as proper focus of the screen image is to eye enjoyment.

regardless of the language spoken so I'm going to give you some of the details in case you should decide to try it in your town:

A good master of ceremonies is the first essential and it will be his job to hire "plants" to volunteer from the audience for participation in the stunts that will be embarrassing to the subject but hilariously funny to the paying customers. Torres has gone so far as to write an outline of the line of conversation the MC will use in handling each activity to preclude the possibility of his missing any part of the gag or action contemplations. Most of the stunts will be of the comedy "action" order as Spanish folk seem to enjoy jokes on the other fellow. Torres' plan calls for a "volunteer" to submit to having his hair cut by a blindfolded barber with both barber and volunteer being paid for their participation. The accompanying line of chatter—as he read it to me in English—is a sure-fire buildup that would do credit to Ralph Edwards of the "People Are Funny" radio show. On another night prizes will be offered to the person peeling the most onions without shedding tears, with an added prize to the contestant who maneuvers to get the most tears into a small-nozzled bottle. Still another calls for participants to walk blind-folded and bare-footed along a path strewn with pies. A balloon blowing contest is on the schedule together with many of the old favorites such as eating crackers and whistling; carrying pitchers of water in each hand with one balanced on the back of the neck, etc.

I almost forgot to mention that while in Corpus Christi I happened on a grocer —uh, huh, a Spanish grocer—who was giving perforated coupons with each 25 cents purchase entitling the holder to a chance on a bicycle. In the course of my travels among the Latins I picked up two of the coupon stubs. One was numbered 84,811 and the other 480,606—which would indicate that the bicycle will be well paid for from the grocery profits. Who was it that said the Latins are slow?

In Dallas, I had the pleasure of a few moments with that oracle of theatre craftsmanship, Porter K. Johnston, and, as usual, he came through with some prize information. Either of the following are excellent for the small town operator and can be used profitably in neighborhoods and theatres catering to the juvenile trade:

A Battle of the Cowboys with a Gene Autry film and a Roy Rogers on the same program has brought receipts that are surprisingly flattering. The idea offers possibilities of extension for a four to six weeks period by using the other stars of the wide open spaces with the patrons voting for their favorite. Of course it will be necessary to hold up a couple of mighty good shoot-em-ups to be exhibited as a finale. With the new cowboy stars just coming to the front this looms as a super-swell business builder.

Another dough-gatherer has been the exhibition of mixed comedy and cartoon programs consisting of eleven to fifteen reels of repeat subjects—that can be bought at one third or less of the original price—advertised as a "Mirth of the World" or "World of Mirth" program. It's only good for one day but in every instance where it has been tried the adult patronage exceeded the kid business and the grosses were high with the film costs 'way down.

Well I'm tired of writing and I know you're tired of reading and both of us better get about our Christmas shopping. Hope you got something out of this clutter of experiences that I had such a swell time gathering.

Conserve Paper

The present shortage of paper may be alleviated somewhat in your own theatre by placing signs in all rest rooms urging patrons to conserve paper towels.

Audience Absorbs Sound

People absorb sound. Except where the chair upholstery is such that the absorption is exactly the same whether a seat is occupied or empty, any change in attendance will require readjustment of the volume.

Increasing Sound Volume

Extraneous noise or talking in seating or standee areas may at times require higher sound volume, although a constant effort should be made to minimize these annoyances. Passages of the picture that evoke audience laughter may also require temporary increase of volume.

Monitor from Auditorium

For all of these reasons, good operation requires that sound be monitored from the auditorium. The projectionist cannot do it; he is not in the auditorium and does not know what the volume sounds like down there.

SOUND SERVICE

Sound equipment contains a multitude of condensers, resistors, transformers, tubes, etc., many of which operate under high voltage. They gradually deteriorate with use, and unless replacements are made in time one may fail and cause loss of sound. How long sound will stay "out" then depends on the accessibility of the part, the rapidity with which it can be replaced—and whether or not the theatre has a replacement part on hand.

Periodic Inspection

Sound equipment requires periodic inspections by a competent and experienced technician who has in his possession the special tools and equipment necessary to do the work properly. The sound service inspector detects deterioration of parts, and recommends replacements in time to prevent failure of sound or loss of sound quality. It is his job to keep the apparatus operating at peak performance at all times. He is available in case of emergency.

Sound Service Inspector

The sound service inspector is a valuable ally of the theatre manager and the projectionist. His association with and instruction of the projectionist increases the latter's proficiency and knowledge. His wide theatre experience can be an aid to the manager in many technical problems.

(All of the foregoing comprises verbatim quotation or paraphrase of a chapter in the book issued to members of classes in the School of Maintenance of Wilby-Kincey Theatres circuit. The book was made available to Showmen's Trade Review for such quotation by the company, which is headed by R. B. Wilby, and H. F. Kincey, and is recognized as one of the most progressive and efficiently operated circuits in the United States. The book, according to Mr. Wilby, was prepared not as a manual, but merely to serve members of the classes (which are conducted for managers of the circuit) as a notebook to spare those attending the classes the effort of making their own notes during the talks and demonstrations.)

Phyllis Calvert in Pact with Paramount

Phyllis Calvert, English screen and stage star, has been signed by Paramount to a long-term film contract. Miss Calvert now is in Hollywood for the first time, starring at Universal-International in "Time Out of Mind." Paramount sought a world-wide contract with the star but Miss Calvert wished to continue making pictures in England and the pact permits her to divide her time between Hollywood and London.

After a visit to England Miss Calvert will return to Hollywood next spring for her first picture under the new contract, a filmization of "Make You a Fine Wife," from the novel by Yolanda Foldes.

Unknown Chicago Actress To Play Mother Cabrini

Carla Dare, an unknown actress and native of Chicago, has been chosen by Producer Clyde Elliott for the starring role in "Citizen Saint," screen biography of St. Frances Cabrini now in production in New York at the new RKO Pathe studios. Others signed for roles in the film are Julie Haydon, Jed Prouty, William Harrigan, Wallace Butterworth, Lucille Fenton, Del Casino and June Harrison.

"Citizen Saint," story of the first U. S. citizen to achieve sainthood, traces the career of "The Little Nun" from her ambition as a girl in Italy to take the nun's vows, through her monumental achievements in America.

WB Signs Penny Edwards

Penny Edwards, 18-year-old dancer and dramatic actress, protege of Paul Draper and well known to Broadway musical comedy and night club audiences, has been placed under long-term contract by Warner Bros. and will be groomed for important film assignments.

'Pale Face' for Hope

Paramount will star Bob Hope in "Pale Face" following completion of "Road to Rio," which goes into production this month. "Pale Face" is an original by Robert Welch, Edmund Hartmann and Frank Tashlin.

Jarman, O'Brien Teamed

With Claude Jarman, Jr., expected to rocket into top box-office brackets after the general release of "The Yearling," MGM is teaming him with Margaret O'Brien in "The Secret Garden," to be produced and directed by Clarence Brown, who discovered and developed the boy actor in "The Yearling."

To Film Backgrounds

China's most famous photographer, Newsreel Wong, has been signed by Columbia to photograph backgrounds for the Chinese sequences of "Assigned to Treasury," the Sidney Buchman production which stars Dick Powell.

STUDIO ROUNDUP

Little Activity on Strike Front as Talk Is Heard That Increasing Number of Strikers, Tired of the Long Walkout, Want to Return to Work at Studios

Whether due to the pre-Christmas lull or the fact that negotiations are quietly going on, little has been heard about the Hollywood studio strike during the past week. There was talk going the rounds to the effect that an increasing number of strikers, and particularly their dependents, were becoming tired of the long walkout and wanted to go back to work. Although picketing continues, the studios are proceeding at a good production pace. Columbia still has four films before the cameras, as has Paramount. MGM reports five, while RKO has three, several having finished shooting last week. Only one film is shooting at Republic. Warner Bros. and 20th Century-Fox each have six films in production, and Universal-International has four. Holder of the record is United Artists, where cameras are focused on eight pictures, while PRC is handling two and Monogram three.

UA's Record Number

David O. Selznick's "The Paradine Case" with Gregory Peck, Ann Todd, Charles Laughton and Charles Coburn, with Alfred Hitchcock directing, continues shooting. The news of the break between Selznick and United Artists is having no effect on production plans. Seymour Nebenzal's picture, "Heaven Only Knows," which co-stars Robert Cummings and Brian Donlevy, has added Helen Walker to the cast. Joseph Calleia, noted character actor goes into the Howard Hughes film "Vendetta." This is the story of Corsican blood feuds, which stars Faith Domergue, George Dolenz, Hillary Brooke and Nigel Bruce, with Stuart Heisler directing. Enterprise is testing Henry Armstrong, the only prizefighter in history to hold simultaneously three world championships—the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight titles—for the role of John Garfield's pal in "Burning Journey." Starting date on this will be around Dec. 23.

3 Before RKO Cameras

"Out of the Past," the Robert Mitchum-Jane Greer picture; "Magic Town" the Robert Riskin production starring James Stewart, and "The Fugitive," which Argosy Pictures is making with Henry Fonda in the leading role, are all still shooting. Added to the first one is red-haired Rhonda Fleming. Director Jacques Tourneur and Producer Warren Duff tested more than a score of Hollywood's talented beauties before selecting Rhonda for the role of a blackmailing, voluptuous secretary through whose machinations Mitchum meets death at the hands of the law.

Scoring began on "The Farmer's Daughter" starring Loretta Young, Joseph Cotten and Ethel Barrymore. Constantin Bakaleinikoff, head of the studio music department, will conduct.

My, How Time Does Fly, a nostalgic blackface number by Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson, has been purchased by the studio as one of the big production numbers for "If You Knew Susie," the comedy with music which will star Eddie Cantor and Joan Davis. Gordon Douglas, who will direct, will put the picture before the cameras early in January.

U-I Busy Lot

After six weeks of auditions the "Kettle Family," Betty MacDonald's fictional counterparts of the infamous Jukes family, has been completed for "The Egg and I." With Marjorie Main and Percy Kilbride as "Ma" and "Pa" Kettle, and Richard Long as Tom Kettle, the tribe includes Judith Bryant, Gloria Moore and nine others. The picture stars Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray. Studio has engaged Andrew M. Stodel, director of the American Poultry Association, as technical director on the poultry-show sequence.

The Deanna Durbin picture "For the Love of Mary," is scheduled to get under way January 13 with Irving Pichel directing for Producer Joseph Sistrom.

Patricia Alphin, ex-studio mail girl, has been cast for a role in the Rachel Field story "Time Out of Mind," which stars Phyllis Calvert, Robert Hutton and Ella Raines, with Robert Siodmak directing.

Max Ophuls, noted French director, was signed to a joint, long-term directorial contract by William Goetz, for Universal-International and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., for the Fairbanks Company. His first assignment will be the direction of Fairbanks' forthcoming production "The Exile," which will star Fairbanks and introduce Paule Croset in the leading feminine role.

Paramount Still Active

With a lineup that reads like a Hollywood Who's Who, "Variety Girl" the 36-star musical comedy about life in the film capital, which George Marshall is directing, has been assembling more star names for the final sequence, a Variety Club convention banquet. Fifty players have been set for individual entertainment specialties and all will participate in the finale song.

Lizabeth Scott returns from Mexico to start work in the leading feminine role in the new Hal Wallis production "Deadlock" which Byron Haskin directs. Supplementing Miss Scott, Burt Lancaster and Kirk Douglas are Wendell Corey, Kristine Miller and George Rigaud.

Dorothy Lamour starrer, was put back before the cameras for some added scenes. In addition to the two stars, those working included Peter Lorre, Jack LaRue, Charles Dingle and John Hoyt. William Russell is directing.

After working in the confines of airplane interiors, the "Saigon" troupe expanded to a huge native village and street. The scene requires 170 extra people in addition to Alan Ladd and Veronica Lake. Mikhail Rasumny was assigned to an important comedy role and Luther Adler, Broadway stage personality also checked in for his part. Leslie Fenton directs with P. J. Wolfson as producer.

Build Casts at 20th-Fox

Virginia Brissac arrived by plane in Morelia, Mexico, to appear before the Technicolor cameras in "Captain from Castile." Miss Brissac is portraying Tyrone Power's mother in the film which Henry King is directing for Producer Lamar Trotti.

Director George Seaton and the "It's Only Human" company, (former title "The Big Heart") headed by John Payne, Maureen O'Hara and Edmund Gwenn, have returned to the studio from location. Cast has been in New York City since the latter part of November, where it has been shooting sequences in Macy's and at other local points for the story, which is an original by Valentine Davies.

New castings for the Victor Mature, Peggy Cummins, Ethel Barrymore picture "Moss Rose," which Gregory Ratoff directs, include Frank Baker, Al Ferguson, Doreeen Munroe and Paul England.

"The Ghost and Mrs. Muir" which started last week, with Gene Tierney and Rex Harrison starred, has added Will Stanton to the supporting cast. This is the thriller Fred Kohlmar is producing and Joseph Mankiewicz is directing.

Republic Editing Three

Three films were set for editing at Republic this week, leaving only one still before the cameras: the Roy Rogers-Trucolor starrer "Bells of San Angelo." "Gallant Man," the untitled Nelson Eddy musical and "Wyoming" were the three completed. Studio announced plans to make and release almost twice as many deluxe pictures during the coming year. Two associate producers, Allan Dwan and John Auer, top the schedule with three pictures each. The completed screenplay for Gene Autry's next starrer "Twilight on the Rio Grande" was turned in to Associate Producer Armand Schaefer, with the picture slated to start Jan. 7.

John K. Butler has been signed to a writing contract for another year and assigned to write the screenplay for "The Uninvited Guest" which Jack English will produce and direct.

E-L Signs Hayward

Eagle-Lion is setting the wheels in work for the start of the first picture Louis Hayward will star in under the new two-picture contract signed by Bryan Foy. Hayward will costar with Joan Leslie in "Repeat Performance," which is scheduled to start Dec. 26 with Alfred W. Werker directing. A budget of $1,500,000 has been allocated for the production, the biggest since the company was formed. Two other major roles will be filled by Tom Conway and Richard Basehart.

Monogram Shooting Three

"Violence," the Nancy Coleman-Michael O'Shea picture which Jack Bernhard is directing, went before the cameras this week in two separate units, one on Stage 3 and the other on the back lot. With "High Conquest" and "Black Gold" still going—the latter back from location and set to shoot at the studio—Monogram's production space is completely filled. New castings have been announced for "Violence," with Pierre Watkin, John Hamilton, Carol Donne and Jimmy Clark the latest addition to the cast. A new starring vehicle has been purchased for Belita, John Foster's "Thin Ice," a romantic story based on the experiences of an ice-show troupe. Picture is scheduled as an Allied Artists production. Sheldon Leonard and Emory Parnell have been added to "Black Gold."

6 in Work at WB

Six pictures are currently in production at Warner Bros., with one more set to go before the end of the month. This will make seven pictures in simultaneous production, peak activity for the studio since early this year.

George Cleveland and Clifton Young were handed important roles in the Technicolor musical, "My Wild Irish Rose," which David Butler is directing.

After being retired from the screen to devote her time to other duties, Joyce Reynolds returns to the studio to begin preparations for her next starring assignment, "The Wallflower." With Alex Gottlieb producing, and Frederick DeCordova assigned to direct, picture is slated for camera work within the next few weeks. Robert Hutton has the male starring role.

"The Unfaithful," another film before the cameras, has had John Hoyt, formerly of the Mercury Theatre added for the key role of the detective-lieutenant. Vincent Sherman is directing this romantic drama with Ann Sheridan, Zachary Scott and Lew Ayres in top spots.

MGM Adds to 'Beginning'

In order to include hitherto undisclosed details of President Truman's historic decision to drop the atom bomb on Japan, "The Beginning or The End" has been sent back to the sound stages for an added scene. The new sequence will portray the President at his temporary residence near Potsdam, disclosing for the first time the fact that the United States had developed the atom bomb.

A record number of six assistant directors have been assigned to handle one sequence being filmed by Director Victor Saville in "Green Dolphin Street." Difficult preparations for the sequence, involving more than 200 Maori natives and the leading players, Lana Turner, Van Heflin, Donna Reed and Richard Hart, demanded the unusually large staff. Carey Wilson is producing the film.

Ludwig Stossel, European star, has been signed for the role of Katharine Hepburn's concert manager in "Song of Love" (formerly titled "A Love Story"), in which Paul Henreid and Robert Walker also appear. Clarence Brown is producer-director.

Kathleen Howard cut short a six-week vacation to return to Hollywood for a role in "The Rich, Full Life." In this picture she plays a close friend of a family portrayed by Elizabeth Taylor, George Murphy and Mary Astor. Robert Leonard is directing.

PRC's Next Philo Vance

Alan Curtis and Frank Jenks have been signed to play top roles in the next of the Philo Vance series. William Beaudine will direct for Producer Ben Stoloff. "West of Glory," the Eddie Dean musical western with Roscoe Ates was completed, but "The Payoff" with Noreen Nash and Sheila Ryan is still going, with Nana Bryant and Howard Negley as new additions to the cast.

5 Continue at Columbia

The "Lady from Shanghai" company, headed by Rita Hayworth and Orson Welles has returned from a location trip to San Francisco and resumed shooting at the studio. Up north, sequences were filmed along the waterfront, in Chinatown and in the Chinese Theatre with the famous repertory company of Oriental players performing as background for the action.

The third picture in the studio's "Lone Wolf" series was given to Brenda Weisberg to write a new treatment. This will be called "The Lone Wolf in London" and will be produced by Ted Richmond.

Terry Kilburn makes his debut as a grown-up performer in Venture Pictures' "Bulldog Drummond at Bay," which has Ron Randell and Anita Louise in the leads. Patrick O'Moore, character actor, and Leonard Mudie have been signed for important roles.

Warners, Arrowhead Dissolve Contract

The contract between Warner Bros. and Arrowhead Productions has been "amicably dissolved," it was announced late last week. Reason for the dissolution, according to Mervyn LeRoy, director of Arrowhead, is the continued delay of LeRoy's outside commitments. "Under the circumstances," he said, "I felt the studio should not have to wait until I had fulfilled my obligations for 'The Robe' and other pictures."

LeRoy further stated that Arrowhead Productions will be maintained as a corporate entity for future production activities.

Script to Andrews

Robert E. Andrews has been assigned to write the screenplay of "Archangel on Horseback," scheduled as Arnold Albert's first production at Columbia. Andrews, currently on loan-out from MGM, recently completed his original Columbia assignment, the screenplay of "The Man from Colorado," to be produced by Jules Schermer.

To Film Fast Novel

Leo Hurwitz and Joe Gould are in Hollywood as representatives of a company that was formed to film Howard Fast's novel, "Freedom Road," in which Paul Robeson will star. They will line up a production unit and select players for the film which will be made in the east.

HOLLYWOOD

Spewacks to Write, Produce RKO Film

Sam and Bella Spewack have been signed by RKO Radio to write and produce "The Night Is Young" under which the playwright and screenplay team will carry through their original idea to ultimate screen presentation. This will mark the Spewacks' debut as producers and brings them back to RKO for the first time since they wrote "My Favorite Wife" in 1940.

The Spewacks plan to start casting after the first of the year.

7 Warner Productions Shooting in January

With "The Unsuspected," first picture to be made by the new Michael Curtiz unit, set to go before the cameras at the end of this month, the Warner Bros. Studio will enter 1947 with seven features shooting, a twelve-month high for activity at the Burbank plant.

The other pictures simultaneously before the cameras include "Deep Valley," "Night Unto Night," "The Woman in White," "The Dark Passage," "The Unfaithful," and "My Wild Irish Rose," the latter being filmed in Technicolor.

'Foundling' Rights Sold To Chapel Films Corp.

Following Francis Cardinal Spellman's disclosure that the screen rights to "The Foundling" had been sold for $120,000 to Chapel Films Corporation, the company's president, Bernard B. Brandt, announced last week in New York that he would leave for Hollywood shortly after the first of the year to line up a top director and a cast. Production is scheduled to start soon thereafter.

"It is contemplated," Brandt said, "that this film will be budgeted at over $1,500,000, and prepared for worldwide distribution."

Jaeger Joins Nero Films

Albert Jaeger has been appointed general manager of Nero Films, it was announced this week by Seymour Nebenzal, independent producer for United Artists, who heads the company. Jaeger has been a financial consultant for many industrial firms and several independent motion picture producers. He served as comptroller for Nebenzal on both "Whistle Stop" and "The Chase," the producer's two most recent pictures.

Confer on Premiere

Jack Wrather, Texas millionaire who recently completed production of "The Guilty" for Monogram, has been in Dallas conferring with Bob O'Donnell, head of the Interstate Circuit, regarding a world premiere of the film in his home city.

Pine-Thomas Plan Six

Paramount's Pine-Thomas unit plans to make at least six action pictures in 1947. Besides two "Big Town" films, the schedule also includes "Hard to Kill," "Water Front at Midnight," "Mr. Reckless" and "Liquid Gold." These are in addition to "Adventure Island," a high-budgeted color film.

STUDIO NEWS & PROGRAM NOTES

Deborah Kerr Opposite Clark Gable in 'Hucksters'; Jacques Tourneur Will Direct 'Babylon Revisited'

Deborah Kerr, English star, was handed the choice role of Kay Dorrance for MGM's "The Hucksters," Clark Gable starrer which will start production in January with Jack Conway directing for Producer Arthur Hornblow, Jr.

Peter Chong, Chinese-American Broadway actor, was signed by Producer Sidney Buchman to play the most important of the male roles that will be enacted by Orientals in "Assigned to Treasury," the Dick Powell-Signe Hasso starrer for Columbia release.

Leo Carrillo is the first cast member to be signed for "Low Company," forthcoming King Bros. production for Allied Artists release. He will play a gangster role in the film which will start early in January.

Character actor James Burke was given a role in Paramount's "Blaze of Noon," which stars Anne Baxter, William Holden, Sterling Hayden, Sonny Tufts, William Bendix and Howard Da Silva. Robert Fellows produces.

James Brown will play the male lead in "The Pay-Off," which James Flood will direct for Producer Marvin Stahl. This is Brown's first free-lance role since his release from his Paramount contract. He joins Sheila Ryan in the cast of the picture which is in preparation at PRC.

Republic has exercised its option on the services of Jane Frazee for another year. Miss Frazee recently completed the title role in the studio's top-budgeted musical romance, "Calendar Girl," in which she stars with William Marshall and Victor McLaglen.

Melville P. Baker has been signed by 20th-Fox to collaborate with F. Hugh Herbert on the screenplay of "A Letter to Five Wives," which Sam Engel will produce.

Walter Wanger has given Whitfield Connor, young Broadway Shakespearean actor, one of the two top male roles opposite Susan Hayward in "The Washington Flyer," which Martin Gable will direct as Wanger's next Universal-International production.

Jacques Tourneur will direct "Babylon Revisited," the F. Scott Fitzgerald story which will be produced by Artists Alliance for UA release. This is one of the four pictures lined up by Mary Pickford and Lester Cowan for the first year's program of their new production company; the others are "One Touch of Venus," "Sorrell and Son" and "The President's Husband."

Creighton Hale was set to play the tourist-court operator in "Night Unto Night," which costars Ronald Reagan and Viveca Lindfors. Don Siegel directs and Owen Crump produces for Warners.

Leon Ames will have a top role as a leading murder suspect in MGM's "Song of the Thin Man." William Powell and Myrna Loy are reunited as the stars in the comedy-detective series, with Keenan Wynn also featured. Picture is slated to begin early in January with Eddie Buzzell directing and Nat Perrin producing.

Nancy Coleman and Michael O'Shea have been signed for co-starring roles in "Violence," Monogram's second B & B production, to be directed by Jack Bernhard. Story, dealing with political adventures of a returned serviceman, is now before the cameras.

"Don Carleless," novel of romance and adventure by Rex Beach, has been purchased by Republic and will star John Carroll. The story of a mythical South American country in 1850 has been handed to John Auer as the third picture on his schedule as associate producer-director.

Allyn Joslyn gets one of the funniest roles of his career in RKO's comedy with music, "If You Knew Susie," starring Eddie Cantor and Joan Davis. Cantor, who will also serve as producer, puts the film before cameras in January with Gordon Douglas directing.

Michael Dyne has been assigned by 20th-Fox to a supporting role in "Moss Rose," which Producer Gene Markey and Director Gregory Ratoff are filming from Joseph Shearing's best-selling novel. He joins a cast headed by Victor Mature, Peggy Cummins, Ethel Barrymore, Vincent Price and Patricia Medina.

Herbert Marshall and Lucile Watson were signed by Director Sam Wood and Producer William Cameron Menzies for top roles in Interwood's "Ivy," which stars Joan Fontaine with Richard Ney, Patric Knowles, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Rosalind Ivan and Sara Allgood.

John Larkin begins his screenplay assignment on "The Persian Cat," mystery thriller slated by Warners as a starring vehicle for Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall. Robert Buckner will produce.

Lou Lantz and Stanley Rubin, recently signed to term contracts as writers at Columbia, will collaborate on the treatment of "The Castaways," film adaptation of the Frank Stockton novel, which will be produced by Helen Deutsch.

Elyse Knox has signed a new contract with Monogram providing for three pictures a year.

William Beaudine has been signed by PRC to direct the third in a series of Philo Vance mysteries based on the S.S. Van Dine fiction detective. Ben Stoloff will produce from Robert E. Kent's screenplay.

UA Ad, Sales Heads See New Lloyd Comedy

Howard Hughes' California Pictures, Inc., played host last week to United Artists' New York sales and advertising executives visiting Hollywood.

Cliff Broughton, vice-president, welcomed the visiting group to the set of "Vendetta," being directed by Stuart Heisler. Following a dinner, the executives attended a sneak preview of the new Harold Lloyd comedy, "The Sin of Harold Diddlebock," directed by Preston Sturges.

'Fling' for Flynn

Errol Flynn has been set for the starring role in Warners' "One Last Fling," romantic comedy of modern marriage. Robert Buckner will produce from the story by H. C. Lewis.

BOX-OFFICE SLANTS

ities. Barbara Britton is attractive and wholesomely appealing as the girl whose "lucky jabs" bring her wealth, and Rudy Vallee, except for a few scenes in which he overacts, is good as the serious-minded investment broker whose favorite beverage is carrot juice. The contrast in this characterization and the real Rudy can be noted in a restaurant scene whereby Vallee, in character, listens to the real Rudy sing. Bill Henry, Otto Kruger, Richard Denning and Veda Ann Borg are competent in their supporting roles. At times the film becomes draggy, and there is an element of slapstick in some of the situations; but these defects are not likely to be criticized by average moviegoers. The cast names should be good for marquee draw, and "The Fabulous Suzanne" should make a satisfactory companion for a more serious feature.

Les Miserables

Distinguished Films Drama in French 193 mins.

(English Titles)

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Of limited appeal for average American audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: May do okay in art theatres on roadshow basis. Much too long and players too obscure for other American exhibition.

Cast: Harry Baur, Charles Dullin, Josselyne Gael, Gaby Triquet, Marguerite Moreno, Max Derly, Jean Servais, Emile Genevais, Paul Azais, Lucien Nat, Arane Demazis, Georges Mauloy. Credits: Producer, Pathe Consortium Cinema. Author, Victor Hugo. English dialogue titles, Noel Meadow. Photography, J. Kruger.

Plot: In the year 1820 in Southern France, Jean Valjean, ex-convict, is befriended by a priest, changes his name, invents an industrial process, becomes wealthy and devotes his wealth to caring for the poor. He adopts six-year-old Cosette. Years later in Paris, with Valjean's name changed again to avoid persecution, Cosette falls in love with a young man who is actively engaged in revolutionary plans. A battle with soldiers ensues and Valjean saves the young man's life and returns him to Cosette. They are married. All during the film Valjean is dogged by police inspector Javert, who relentlessly tracks him down, only to have his life saved by Valjean. He allows Valjean to go free and then commits suicide. Upon returning to Cosette and her husband Valjean dies of wounds received in the battle in which he had saved the young husband.

Comment: Except for students and others with a fluent knowledge of the French language, and particularly of the French school of acting, this will have limited appeal for American audiences. The photography is not good, the action is extremely slow by American standards, and the acting, except for Harry Baur, has a tinge of "ham." In other words, the players are given to exaggeration of facial expression and gesture, which may be fine for France but not so good for America. There are evidences of opulence in the picture's production values and great directorial attention to detail in some sequences. Others seem slip-shod by comparison. The picture as a whole is much too long and will have little appeal for average American audiences. Its best bet is the so-called "art" or "foreign film" theatres on a roadshow basis.

Great Expectations

(Reviewed in London)

Universal Drama 118 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Magnificent, painstaking version of Charles Dickens' classic combines romance, pathos and comedy with suspense and action. Excellent fare for all types of audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Brilliant characterization and direction plus top production values make this a class offering. With extra selling it should garner profitable returns.

Cast: John Mills, Valerie Hobson, Bernard Miles, Francis L. Sullivan, Finlay Currie, Martita Hunt, Anthony Wager, Jean Simmons, Ale Guinness, Ivor Barnard, Freda Jackson, and others. Credits: Adapted from Charles Dickens book by David Lean and Ronald Neame with additional dialogue by Cecil McGivern and Kay Walsh. Musical score by Walter Goehr and played by the National Symphony Orchestra. Director, David Lean. Producer, Ronald Neame. A Cineguild production presented by J. Arthur Rank.

Plot: Pip (John Mills), a blacksmith's apprentice, becomes rich through an unknown benefactor whom he believes to be the eccentric Miss Havisham (Martita Hunt). He studies to become worthy of her priggish, adopted niece, Estella (Valerie Hobson), but Miss Havisham, who was jilted on her wedding day, has raised Estella as a heartless man-hater, and she does not return his love. The wealth actually comes from Magwitch (Finlay Currie), an ex-convict who Pip helped to escape in his childhood. Dying, Magwitch reveals that Estella is his daughter. Pip goes to her to discover that, because of her parentage, a rich man has ended their engagement and heartbroken, she is following the eccentric life of Miss Havisham. Pip takes her away to start anew.

Comment: For a literary classic, "Great Expectations" is exceptionally good cinema, combining as it does romance, pathos and comedy with suspense and action. Period pictures can be stilted, lifeless affairs and far from convincing. Not so with this one. Director David Lean has handled it brilliantly and, without losing the true Dickensian spirit, presents the many fruity characters so that they appear credible people. In consequence, audiences believe in them and sympathize with their problems. Here he is helped in no mean manner by the artists. The casting is faultless. Good as John Mills and Valerie Hobson are in the leads, the smallest bit player deserves equal credit. Each is a perfect Dickens character brought to life. Production values are of a high standard and the excellent sets and exteriors help the players create the right atmosphere. Walter Goehr's music is also worthy of special note. In short, this is J. Arthur Rank's finest offering to date. Astute showmen who get behind it and sell it correctly should garner profitable returns.

On Forthcoming Product

TIME OUT OF MIND (U-I). Drama. Principals: Robert Hutton, Ella Raines, Phyllis Calvert, Helena Carter, Leo G. Carroll. Director, Robert Siodmak. Plot: Because a young pianist-composer fails miserably at his debut in Symphony Hall in the year 1892, he disappears, leaving his loving wife, his sister and a young family servant waiting vainly for him. He eventually returns broken, destitute and discouraged, and is nursed back to health through the confidence of the young lady servant.

KING OF THE WILD HORSES (Col.) Drama. Principals: Preston Foster, Gail Patrick, Billy Sheffield, Patti Brady. Director, George Archainbaud. Plot: When a youngster goes to live on his uncle's ranch, he makes friends with a stallion who has come there seeking water. They become fast friends, and the stallion saves the boy's life when he is about to be trampled by a herd of horses.

VACATION DAYS (Mono.) Drama. Principals: Freddie Stewart, June Preisser, Frankie Darro, Milt Kibbee. Director, Arthur Dreifuss. Plot: When a school teacher inherits a ranch, she invites a young professor in whom she's interested, and some students, to spend their vacation with her. During their stay, a local bank is robbed and because one of the students resembles a member of the gang, the entire group becomes involved. They are all kidnapped by the real culprits in order to keep them from interfering with another robbery, but manage to escape in what was used as the getaway car. This they drive to the sheriff, who arrests them for the holdup, but the real culprits are caught and confess.

LADY IN THE LAKE (MGM)

*FAMILY—Nat'l Board of Review.

Class A—Section II—Nat'l Legion of Decency.

(The above data should be filed for reference in order to supply information to interested local parents' groups, church organizations, or individual parents when inquiry is made about a current or forthcoming picture's suitability for various age groups. In quoting these sources, the theatreman should emphasize that he is giving the information supplied by national organizations which are independent of the film industry. The authorities quoted in this column, as the information becomes available, and descriptions of them and their methods of classifying pictures, are as follows:

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS. The motion picture committee is headed by Mrs. Arretus F. Burt, chairman, of St. Louis. Two reviewing committees are maintained—Mrs. Harry Lilly, New York, Eastern Committee chairman; Mrs. John Sterns Thayer, Los Angeles, Western Committee chairman. Designations used: FAMILY—8 years and up; MATURE FAMILY—14 years and up; ADULTS—Senior High School Students and Adults; —indicates picture is rated as "Exceptional."

NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW: Founded in 1909 "to represent the interests of the motion picture public." The reviewing committee consists of some 300 men and women of all ages, "representing a cross-section of public taste." Designations used: FAMILY—14 years of age and up (recommendations for age groups under 14 are by Schools M. P. Committee of the National Board); MATURE—18 years and up; *—indicates picture "especially worth seeing."

NATIONAL LEGION OF DECENCY: Committee of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae reviews pictures and publishes its classifications for guidance of members of the Legion—composed of those members of the Catholic Church who join the Legion. Designations used: Class A—Section I—Unobjectionable for General Patronage; Class A—Section II—Unobjectionable for Adults; Class B—Objectionable in Part; Class C—Condemned.

FAMED AUTHORS HAIL "THE YEARLING"

"One of the few truly great epics of the screen. Among the most enchanting, exciting and emotionally rewarding pictures ever made."

NORMAN REILLY RAINE
Testimonial in Saturday Evening Post

"Destined to be received by the public as one of the great pictures of the year."

OCTAVUS ROY COHEN
Testimonial in Collier's

"I never knew Sidney Franklin to produce a motion picture more eloquent than THE YEARLING, nor one more laden with the honest elements of dramatic compulsion. The best thing Gregory Peck has ever done."

MacKINLAY KANTOR
Testimonial in Cosmopolitan

"I can only say that this jewel of a motion picture gave me an emotional experience I never had before . . . You have to thank the M-G-M studio for spending the money and making THE YEARLING possible. One Yearling once a decade, and I for one, shall be content. If this isn't the Academy Award picture for 1947, what is? This saga of Florida's scrub country is the giant of them all. I never hope to see anything better."

JOHN FANTE
Testimonial in Woman's Home Companion

"True and beautiful . . . all-in-all, a heart-warming exciting experience."

VIOLA PARADISE
Testimonial in Parents' Magazine

"Shimmers with color, natural suspense. The heart leaps."

CECILE GILMORE
Testimonial in McCall's

"We live and breathe in another world, we pay tribute in tense silence, and even tears, to the human happiness and suffering of which we cannot help but feel a part. A great and momentous picture. Deeply satisfying to the eye and the imagination."

SARAH-ELIZABETH RODGER
Testimonial in American Magazine

"It is a great and wonderful experience. If you have a heart you will love it and be better for having seen it. It will thrill you and hold you breathless."

NEWLIN WILDES
Testimonial in Ladies Home Journal

"A memorable picture of this year or any year. 'Flawless' is the word for THE YEARLING as a picture. There seems to be no more precise one."

URSULA PARROTT
Testimonial in Redbook

"This is the year of THE YEARLING"

Community Goodwill

Smart theatremen never under-estimate the tremendous importance of community goodwill.

The advances made in visual education via the motion picture screen offers theatremen a new, great opportunity to cooperate with the community and make further important contributions to the welfare of the city or town. The practical manner in which this may be done is best exemplified in the action of Fred Schwartz, head of Century Circuit, New York, who has announced that his company's theatres and projection facilities will be available to the local school authorities for visual educational purposes.

The fine spirit behind this offer undoubtedly was motivated by a sincere desire to serve the public. However, you can bet your bottom dollar that the action is going to reflect handsomely on the Century company and all theatres for a long time to come.

The program undertaken by Century's Fred Schwartz may well be emulated by circuits elsewhere around the country. It is the kind of action which has done so much more for the industry than the pretty speeches made by representatives of national organizations or associations.

Message to Hollywood

Before public resentment mounts to greater heights, we suggest that the heads of the Hollywood studios get together and work out a plan for all possible "de-emphasis" on drinking scenes.

The matter is assuming tremendous importance through a series of episodes and incidents in a large number of pictures and stage shows, and ammunition is being made of it by parties eager to discredit the industry by feverish effort to capitalize on the sincere constructive criticisms of individuals and groups which have noted with concern the large number of shows, screen and stage, in which drinking scenes figure importantly.

The theatremen are very well aware of the dangers and embarassments which plague the theatre as a result of these complaints by the public. Even the news photos of screen stars at parties where cocktail glasses and liquor bottles are in evidence cause trouble for a surprisingly large number of theatres when the photos get into local roto sections.

We've got to remember, that, while the screen is a medium of artistic expression as well as a reflector of life, one of the greatest of all powers possessed by the motion picture is the very acceptance which pictures have earned as amusement for family groups.

This is not a matter of "shackling" art. It is an exercise of responsibility which producers must assume since they enjoy the confidence which has been bestowed upon motion pictures by the great masses of the people.

Auspicious Bow

The new Liberty Films company makes a most auspicious bow with the first public showing of Frank Capra's "It's a Wonderful Life" in New York. The old master, returned from war service in which he further distinguished himself, is at his best and merits the rave reviews he has won with his picture.

Deserved Promotion

Few promotions have given us greater satisfaction than the Harry Thomas announcement that Arnold Stoltz has been named special sales representative of PRC.

Stoltz has had a fine background in this business. As a "showman" Arnold really belongs—as demonstrated by his accomplishments

Thomas is building up a crack organization at PRC, and this latest move is another feather in Harry's cap as a head man who knows how to pick and advance able executive talent.

Resolution

The film industry has enjoyed another year of top business, and, in most instances, high profits.

The industry, likewise, finishes up another year with a fine record of service to the public. During years of war shortages the public has received excellent service from their theatres and the studios and the distributors of motion pictures.

No finer resolution, we think, can be made for the year ahead than a purpose to keep on giving the very best to a public that has been very good to the industry. Come what may, the motion picture industry, through all its branches, must go on giving better and better service, through finer pictures, improvements and refinements in presentations and comfort and courtesy in the theatres.

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

EXHIBITION—"The exhibitors of this country have made fabulous amounts of money and often it was made at the expense of the producer. We feel that the producer, whether it is for his first-run or his 101st-run, should be entitled to a certain share of these profits."

The speaker was not Sam Goldwyn, Darryl Zanuck, Sam Briskin or Dave Selznick. He was an exhibitor—David Flexer, who on Jan. 1 becomes sole owner of the Haberfeld-Flexer circuit of 12 houses and who has the blue prints ready now for a circuit of 12 to 15 key city houses of moderate size which would operate on a policy of giving a picture its longest possible playing time and giving the audience the greatest amount of comfort. Example of the latter: All seats will be divan types. (See p. 9).

Something new as a regular policy of railroads gets under way Jan. 6 when the Chesapeake and Ohio will install film entertainment on its crack trains. Premiere of "Swell Guy" starts the policy with entertainment to be standard features on 16-mm.

Throughout the United States and Canada this week exhibitors were optimistic over the business 1947 would have to offer, tempering their optimism, however, with the sober belief that the last six months of the coming year might show a slight drop.

The March of Dimes announced that it was 20 per cent ahead of itself compared to this time last year in the number of theatres pledged to collections. The metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres of New York announced it would back the March of Dimes—in everything but collections.

Christmas found Cleveland neighborhood house exhibitors wondering whether Santa Claus was an asset as half of them went dark Christmas eve because they felt they couldn't compete with stockings by the fireplace.

In New York the state censors refused to revoke their approval of "The Outlaw" on the basis of advertising which had not been used in the state but which had been used in California, and License Commissioner Ben Fielding, who is the complainant, said he would appeal. A change in the city code which would prevent officials from acting or threatening to act against a theatre before a conviction was procured in court as to the character of the entertainment shown, was tabled. And in London "The Outlaw" shot his way into the fourth record-breaking week at the Pavillion.

"Duel in the Sun" will open at the Los Angeles Egyptian on Dec. 31, while "It's a Joke, Son!" will compete with the inauguration of the governor of Texas by giving its world premiere in the Lone Star State on Jan. 22.

B&K realigned its Great States circuit into two divisions; Milwaukee is considering an increase in its theatre licensed from a present minimum of $30 to $50 and a maximum of $300, and in Chester, Ill., little boys and girls have to keep off the streets after 9 P. M. unless they are going to a sports event, in which event the city fathers apparently think their morals are safe. And again in Chicago Warner houses have moved their 45 cent admissions for weekend shows to 50 cents, while Balaban and Katz has announced a half million dollar improvement program.

Walter Leveitte sold his southern Oregan chain to Bob Leppert of San Francisco this week for $500,000.

LAWMAKERS—The 80th Congress will have much to do with legislation which will affect the motion picture industry, Washington reports (See p. 10) and in Illinois Rep. Le Roy Sandquist announced that he would look into the matter of licenses for theatre checkers when the legislature meets. The Mayor of Waterloo, Iowa, appointed a five-party censor board for that town following showing of films which were thought unfit for juvenile consumption. Motion Picture Association President Eric Johnston, testifying before a House sub-committee in Washington, said that the Motion Picture Export Association was selecting films which went abroad. Johnston's statement came in answer to discussion on whether American films were correctly representing the United States abroad.

LITIGATION — Two Minnesota Theatre Corporations filed suit against eight majors and another theatre corporation this week for $1,350,000 charging conspiracy to withhold first-runs; Martin D'Arcy who operated the Shubert at St. Louis for brief time, added to the litigation of the year with a suit for $600,000 against various companies of the St. Louis Amusement Company and the major distributors for a similar reason; and the Government filed appeal to the adverse decision it received in the Griffith case. (See p. 13).

And David O. Selznick went into two separate courts with two separate suits, totaling $13,500,000 damages. The first, against United Artists for alleged contract breach, is for $7,500,000 and was filed in the federal district court of Los Angeles. The second is for $5,000,000 filed in the California Superior Court and charges Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin with "malicious and wilful interference."

DISTRIBUTION—MGM Vice-President Howard Dietz this week announced a new audience reaction test which is said to be immediate and accurate. (See p. 12). Miles Sherover and Henry W. Kahn formed a new export film company; Monogram announced a new five-circuit deal for 1947 product.

FBI Recovers Nine 16mm. Films Stolen from Army

Federal Bureau of Investigation Agents, making a nationwide search for hot 16-mm. film this week, had recovered nine more features for seven major companies following the arrest of Theodore Alven Gilman, 44-year old merchant seaman, at Westminister, Calif.

Gilman was arrested by the FBI and charged with federal copyright law violation after he had reportedly completed sale of a 16-mm. version of MGM's Technicolor feature "Meet Me in St. Louis." Agents claimed to have found prints of other films in his possession as well as in storage warehouse in Pasadena, Calif.

The films recovered in addition to "Meet Me in St. Louis," were: Columbia's "Tonight and Every Night"; Paramount's "Affairs of Susan"; "Till We Meet Again"; RKO's "Along Came Jones," and "Sing Your Way Home"; Twentieth Century-Fox's "Don Juan Quilligan"; Warner Bros. "Of Human Bondage"; Universal's "The Merry Monahans."

Gilman's arrest marked the first west coast activity in the drive FBI agents have been conducting ever since it was discovered that 16-mm. features, given by major companies for the entertainment of the armed forces, had been stolen from the United States Army Signal Corps Photographic Center on Long Island, N. Y. He was held in jail with bond fixed at $500. Attention to the violations of copyright in the 16-mm. field were first called to the FBI's attention by Edward A. Sargoy and Joseph L. Stein of New York, special counsel for the Copyright Protection Bureau.

WAC Winds Up Its Affairs With Surplus of $83,086

Winding up the affairs of the War Activities Committee this week an audit showed a surplus of $83,086.52, Chairman George J. Schaefer announced. Two-thirds of this sum was returned to George Borthwick for distribution to the contributing distributors and one-third to Leonard Goldenson for redistribution to the theatre division.

The WAC showed during its four years of operation and expenditure of $2,111,706.87, of which $758,654.73 represented money spent on war loan campaigns.

Alexander Film Melon

Home office workers of the Alexander Film Company at Colorado Springs this week shared in $75,000 worth of bonuses—the second such bonus payment of 1946, the first, amounting to $50,000, having been paid in June. Workers outside the home office shared in a $39,000 bonus melon. The company also paid approximately $50,000 in 1946 for home office pensions and $31,000 for salesmen's pensions.

Flexer Plans National Chain For Long-Runs in Key Cities

Southern Showman Says Circuit Will Operate 12 to 15 Houses for 'A' Product

By BILL SPECHT
News Editor

A new circuit, operating moderate-sized theatres in 12 or 15 key cities across the country for the purpose of giving extended playing time to quality product, will be established as soon as building operations can bgein, it was revealed in New York last weekend by David Flexer, Southern showman associated with the Haberfeld-Flexer circuit operating theatres in Northern Mississippi and Southern Tennessee.

Flexer, who on Jan. 1, will become sole owner of the Haberfeld-Flexer chain of 12 theatres through purchase of the interest of his partner, Bernard Haberfeld, said that his circuit would extend into the East and spread to the West Coast as a national chain devoted to giving maximum run to top-bracket pictures from the leading producers.

Fullest Revenue

The theatres he said will be under the management of public relations experts with a set policy of individual treatment for each picture in each theatre in order to develop the fullest possible revenue from the attraction at first-run.

Flexer did not say whether his New York visit was concerned with arrangements for financing his project or booking product, but he emphatically denied that the new circuit had its roots in the Universal-International program of theatre acquisition.

"We work on the theory," he said, "that the industry has grown up. It has acquired responsibilities and if we don't accept these responsibilities, we are going to find that we are pushing our theatres back into the class of carnivals.

"The exhibitors of this country have made fabulous amounts of money and often it was made at the expense of the producer. We feel that the producer, whether it is for his first-run or his 101st run, should be entitled to a certain share of these profits.

"If the producer gives you a picture that will make a profit so much greater, he's entitled to the great part of this extra profit, due to the fact that he made the picture that made this profit.

"If the first-run theatres of this country had followed this principle, there would be no shortage of top-quality pictures since a producer would have had the incentive to make them. 'A' pictures are the lifeblood of this business it must be remembered. But what happened?

"Instead of an exhibitor accepting a strong picture and giving it the first-run it was entitled to, he'd pull it for the next attraction. It stands to reason that if an exhibitor had, say a contract with two companies for about 50 pictures a year, he could not give any picture much more than a week's run. . . . If a picture deserved a longer run it frequently did not get it because it was pushed out by the next booking.

"We will give him the proper run. Because a producer who is making a picture spends two to five million dollars, he shouldn't be pushed around or hamstrung because another picture

Selznick Sues UA for $7,500,000 and Chaplin-Pickford for $6,000,000

David O. Selznick this week had written another chapter in his current fight with United Artists, which has already led to the forming of the Selznick Releasing Organization, with damage suits totaling $13,500,000 filed Friday in Hollywood against United Artists and two-thirds owners Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin.

The United Artists suit, filed in the Federal district court for southern California, is for $7,500,000 and is based on alleged breach of contract. The suit against Miss Pickford and Chaplin was filed in the California Superior Court and is for $6,000,000.

In his suit against United Artists, Selznick denies the contention that his deals for actors, writers, producers and other talent with rival producer-distributors was a violation of the agreement he had with UA, and in turn charges that United Artists breached its contract with him by refusing to advance $200,000 for the production of "The Paradine Case," which is Selznick's next, as well as by refusing "Duel in the Sun."

The suit further charges that United Artists had mishandled sales and distribution of the Selznick pictures, "Since You Went Away," "I'll Be Seeing You," and "Spellbound."

In addition Selznick claims that United Artists was able to sell films inferior to his on the strength of Selznick pictures.

The suit against Miss Pickford and Chaplin alleges that they, through "malicious and willful interference" led to the breaching of the Selznick contract by United Artists. In a statement issued by his Vanguard Films at the time the suit was filed, Selznick was said to have "had enough of Pickford and Chaplin interference in United Artists affairs" and charged that "neither of them had contributed anything of appreciable value to the company for several years."

Important Film Legislation Expected by New Congress

By MANNING CLAGETT
Washington Correspondent

The 80th Congress bids fair to be a very important one to the motion picture industry.

Though the fact is that the out-going 79th Congress was very much aware of the importance of films both as a medium of ideas and as a salesman of American products, little legislation of direct importance to the industry was acted upon.

Early in the year the Treasury recommended a cutback in the admission taxes on amusements and other excise taxes to their pre-war rates, but the Senate Finance Committee refused to concur after the House had accepted the Treasury proposal. The paring of the tax rates was knocked out of the tax bill in conference with the House deferring to the Senate.

Late in the year, Rep. Harold Knutson (R. Minn.) who will be chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee next year, introduced a separate bill to the same end, but it never received committee consideration. From the industry standpoint, one of the major questions to come before the new Congress at the moment is whether the solons in the near future will offer a cut in the admission tax levy.

Concerned in British Loans

The industry also was vitally concerned, due to its exports and the relation it has to world economic affairs, with the congressional consideration of the British Loan, and the Bretton Woods agreement. It also had an important stake in housing legislation, the end of price controls and other legislation of a more general nature.

Since the housing program is now dead, it is uncertain how far its demise will affect the film industry. During the past year, however, several hundred new theatre projects were knocked out by administrative action, with the White House retaining among its war powers the authority to rule out a major part of the planned commercial construction.

Twice within the year, the House Committee on Un-American Activities sent representatives to Hollywood.

So far none of the findings have been made public beyond general remarks of a sneering nature. The report of the first investigation was held up because some of the committee's members objected to the release of unsubstantiated charges. Findings of the second investigation however, are expected to be published soon, and already some of the members who went to Hollywood to investigate have made personal statements.

This second inquiry heard the testimony of warring labor leaders and the charge of communist influence in some of the unions has been tossed about.

Monopoly Probe Dropped

The Senate Small Business Committee also devoted its interest to the motion picture industry, but abandoned its probe into motion pictures as a monopoly after preliminary work.

In December, the special Committee on Postwar Economic Policy and Planning called officials of the State and Commerce Departments before it, and leaders of the Motion Picture Association, for information concerning the foreign markets for American pictures and the trade, political and exchange barriers faced by the industry. Some recommendation for further action by the State Department is to be expected early next year.

In general, the 79th Congress was a fairly friendly Congress. It is too early now to assay the general feeling of the next Congress toward the industry—although it is certain that many matters of extreme industry importance—including all those mentioned before—will come before it.

But when the 80th Congress does meet, among matters likely to be introduced are two of Senator William Langer's (R., N. D.) pet bills. One is to place a ceiling on film rentals, the other is for out-and-out theatre divorcement. During the closing days of the last Congress, Langer introduced a bill calling for ceilings on rentals, which made little progress.

Fielding to Ask Regents To Revoke 'Outlaw' Rule

New York City License Commissioner Benjamin Fielding, refused in his request that the state censors revoke their approval of "The Outlaw," this week declared he would appeal immediately to the Regents of the University of the State of New York, who act as a court of review in such matters.

Fielding, who is apparently keeping "The Outlaw" out of New York City despite censor approval through intimation that he will revoke the license of any theatre showing it, had sought to have the censors reverse themselves on the grounds of the picture's advertising.

Dr. Ward C. Bowen, acting director of the Motion Picture Division of the state education board, which act as censors, found that the advertising complained of had been used in California but not in New York and declared that in his opinion the action of the censors are "limited to advertising within the state of New York." Under the censor code, censors can act against film advertising as well as the film itself.

Meanwhile the city of New York tabled a proposed change in its municipal code which would prevent Fielding or the Police Commissioner from acting against a theatre until it had first been convicted of presenting an indecent or immoral performance. The suit of the Hughes Tool Company to enjoin Fielding and the police commissioner from action is still in court.

'Outlaw' Breaks London Gross

"The Outlaw" entered its fourth week at the Pavilion Theatre in London Wednesday smashing the house's records for pre-Christmas business, according to cabled reports received here.

Acts to Eliminate 'Thrillers'

The Minneapolis Parent and Theatres Central Council this week launched a campaign to eliminate film and radio "thrillers" from juvenile entertainment programs.

Holdovers, Going Strong, Pulled for Holiday Bills

Christmas upset the holdover applecart in many locations this week with product that still had some playing time left in it getting pulled to make ready for holiday bills.

Winding up the end of their runs, with a good box-office potential behind them though, were:

Warner's "The Big Sleep" which closed in Chicago after 10 weeks; "Deception" which wound up there after seven weeks there and after 10 in New York.

United Artists' "Strange Woman" which did two weeks in Cleveland and three in Washington; "Angel on My Shoulder" which had its holdovers in Springfield and Long Beach.

RKO's "Nocturne" which did four in Chicago, held over in Pittsburgh and Rochester; "Notorious," which ran through four weeks in Seattle, three in Oakland, Portland and Akron and did a second in Phoenix.

Walt Disney's "Song of the South" promised to run through the holidays with six weeks in Birmingham, five in New York and four in Nashville. The film also got Christmas bookings in Chicago, Syracuse, New Orleans, Trenton, Philadelphia, Harrisburg; Reading, Easton, Washington, Lowell, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Davenport, Cedar Rapids, Waterloo, Sioux City, Salt Lake City, Boise and Omaha.

"The Best Years of Our Lives," doing record business in its fifth New York week, went through two at Springfield and was held over in Buffalo. This feature opened for the holidays in Chicago.

Astral Films Signs for 24 Screencraft Features

I. H. Allen of Astral Films in Toronto announced Tuesday that he had signed for 24 features from Screencraft Pictures, Inc., and that he would open exchanges in Vancouver and Montreal in addition to his Toronto office.

'Joke' for Austin

Eagle-Lion announced this week that "It's a Joke, Son" will have its world premiere in Austin, Texas, coincidental with the inauguration of Governor-elect Beauford H. Jester. The film will then be shown on Jan. 22 in San Antonio, Jan. 23 in Houston, Jan. 24 in Dallas, after which it will get 150 simultaneous bookings over the Interstate Circuit.

C & O to Show Films

The Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad will inaugurate a policy of showing films aboard its crack train "The George Washington" effective Jan. 7, using 16-mm. versions of regular feature product.

Prior to this the world premiere of Universal-International's Mark Hellinger production "Swell Guy" with Sonny Tufts and Ann Blyth, will be held aboard the train on its trip from Washington to Cincinnati, Jan. 6. A dining car will be used as the "theatre," but the C&O later plans to have a specially built car to serve as a theatre on wheels for its new train, 'The Chessie," which will be put on about spring.

MPEA Censoring Films Submitted for Export

Motion Picture Association President Eric Johnston, testifying with associates Friday before a House of Representatives subcommittee in Washington, indicated that he was attempting through the Motion Picture Export Association to see that films which misrepresented the United States were not sent abroad to those countries which the MPEA serves.

Johnston acknowledged, however, that the MPEA's distribution was confined to those nations which have state film monopolies and that not all American distributors belonged to his association. The MPEA at present is selecting product for export from the pictures submitted to it by its member owners, which consist of the majority of the major distributors.

The hearing, before the subcommittee on foreign trade and shipping of the Special Committee on Post-war Economic Policy and Planning, seemed interested in the charges made that American motion pictures were giving the foreign nations a wrong idea of America. This charge, which has been repeatedly made, by March of Time Producer Richard de Rochemont among others, has received wide circulation.

Rites Held in Montclair For William J. Clark

Funeral services for William J. Clark, Twentieth Century-Fox's 54-year-old short subjects and Movietone sales manager, were held Thursday from Montclair, N. J. He had died Saturday in Newark's Lutheran Memorial Hospital.

Clark entered the industry in 1921 as a Paramount salesman, later serving that company in India, Burma and Ceylon and becoming managing director for it in Australia. During the past 12 years he was with 20th Century-Fox.

Clark, a brother of the late John Clark, former distribution vice-president of 20th Century-Fox, is survived by a daughter, Diana Rita of New Zealand; a sister, Mrs. Jane Clark Johnston of Lansdowne, Pa.; a brother Alexander C. Clark of Cleveland, and a half-brother, Richard M. Clark of Maplewood, N. J.

Joe Robin Dead

Funeral service for Joseph E. Robin, president of the Robin Imperial Electric Company and one-time representative for Neu-made products abroad, Motiograph and several lines of theatrical equipment product, were held Monday at Palisade, N. J. Robin, who was 56, died of a heart ailment after six weeks of hospitalization. He had been at one time president of the Theatre Equipment Supply Dealers Association. Surviving are his widow, Louise, and two sons, Charles and Thomas.

W. C. Fields Passes

W. C. Fields, 66-year-old stage and screen comic who started at $6 weekly and became a big time attraction, died in Pasadena, Calif., Wednesday. He probably is best remembered for his screen characterization of Mr. Micawber in "David Copperfield."

Flexer Plans National Chain For Long-Runs in Key Cities

is waiting to get in. In our theatres, a picture will get a run as long as the gross warrants."

In the new circuit, Flexer wants to bring together a plan of service to the public plus service to the picture, both of which he thinks are cardinal principles in getting the box-office served.

"We're not going to load a manager down with a lot of work," he said, "Our managers will be called managing directors. They will be experienced public relations men—men who know how to meet the public and how to treat a picture before and during its run. Under them will be a house manager to handle the floor.

"Before a picture comes to us, we will hold meetings of these managing directors in some central location and consider the proper way to pre-sell the picture. Then they will go back to their houses and work out their campaigns. Proper planning and intelligent exploitation are important."

New Services

Turning to the public angle, Flexer said the operation would develop many new services.

"What's the first thing a smoker does when he leaves a theatre?" he asked. "He reaches for a cigarette. You can watch them with one hand on the door and the other searching for their packs.

"What would be the effect if an attractive girl stepped up to them and in a dignified manner offered them a cigarette? Also in winter, what do you do with your coat? Your wife puts it on her chair and sits comfortably through the show. You pile it on your knees with your hat on top of it and sit that way through the film.

"We are going to feature large coat rooms. We are going to require our patrons to use them and to make it plain that no tipping or other cost is involved. That way we can get a man to relax better and he'll not only enjoy the picture more, but will think it a better picture."

1500 Seats

The seating capacity of the theatres will be around 1500, Flexer said, with two or three houses to seat 1200. The 1200 seat houses will be one-floor type, starting at street level. The 1500-seat houses will use the balcony space for a lounge, cut off from the theatre by glass screens and having their own speakers. Here a section will be devoted for children with a registered nurse in attendance. Another section will be devoted to reserved seats. Elevators will carry the patrons to this section. Flexer believes that the theatre can attract a large untapped matinee audience, children and mothers and that comfort and convenience will attract many who now stay away from the movies.

The houses will be designed strictly for motion pictures and the stages will be very small, to take care of any special events which might necessitate them. They will not be adapted to production. Policy of the houses will be continuous, excepting for roadshows. Admissions, generally, will be those of the community in which they are constructed.

In answer to a question, Flexer acknowledged that such a project would have been impossible from the product standpoint five years ago, but added that independent producers were "growing jealous of their product" for which he did not blame them and that a house offering a fair run and trying to reach an audience which would appreciate a picture through planned exploitation, was attractive to them.

In 1 Year

Flexer added that he thought the building program could be achieved in a year's time once the go ahead signal was received, since the plans were ready and a "mass production" system of construction was contemplated.

The exhibitor first came into some national prominence when he took over the Ritz and Peabody theatres in Memphis as part of an expansion plan. He remodeled the Ritz and with a pre-opening campaign converted it from a subsequent-run house to first-runs, starting out with J. Arthur Rank product.

The Ritz, Flexer said, would play Rank, some Universal-International and the product of two or three other "top independent producers" whom he would not name because the deals had not been formally signed. The Peabody may serve as a moveover house if the Ritz product starts to crowd, he added.

Great States Realigns Circuit in 2 Divisions

Realignment of the Great States Circuit into two divisions—one for northern Illinois and Ohio and the other for south Illinois and Indiana—was announced from the company's headquarters in Chicago this week.

Henry Stickelmaier, assistant to the late J. J. Rubens, will be division manager of the north Illinois-Ohio district with 13 theatres while Dave Wallerstein, formerly district manager for the south side and Indiana theatres, will take over the southern district.

Buys FC Interest

Joseph Bernhard, who recently disposed of his holdings in United States Pictures, this week announced that he had bought a strong interest in Film Classics by taking over the stock holdings of Joseph Auerbach and of the law firm of Stillman and Stillman. Bernhard did not say whether or not he would take an active part in the management of Film Classics, which is now under the general management of Vice-President L. E. Goldhammer.

'Circlin Reactograph' for MGM's Sneak Previews

MGM Vice-President Howard Dietz this week announced that MGM had made arrangements to test its pictures for audience reaction in the future with "Circlin Reactograph," a mechanical device which records individual reaction instantly.

"Circlin Reactograph," it was explained, was a portable system which can easily be installed in any theatre, whereby the individual in the audience is provided with two buttons connected to the recorder by wire. One button is marked green, the other, red. When the individual sees something in a film that he like he presses the green button; when he sees something he doesn't like, he presses a red button.

The recording device checks this individual reaction off against the scene of the picture passing through the projector at the time. A totalizer system makes the sum total of the reactions available immediately following the test. The record is then followed up with a personal interview of the individual.

MGM plans to use the device on sneak previews and the like to get an audience reaction on pictures still to be edited or changed.

Minn. Theatres Sue Eight Majors for $1,350,000

Suit for $1,350,000 damages charging violation of the anti-trust laws in conspiracy to withhold first-run films was filed in the federal district court at Minneapolis this week by the Duluth Theatre Corporation and the Lyceum Building Corporation, both of Duluth, against one theatre corporation and eight major distributors. Ben Berger of Minneapolis is president of the Duluth Theatre Corporation.

Defendants are Minnesota Amusement Co., Paramount Pictures, Inc., Columbia Pictures Corp., Loew's, Inc., RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp., United Artists Corp., Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., and Warner Bros. Pictures Distributing Corp.

The complaining corporations charge that the defendants had refused to grant the Lyceum Theatre in Duluth licenses to show feature pictures until after they had been run at competing theatres operated by the Minnesota Amusement Co.

Consequently, the Lyceum was forced to reduce prices and could not compete with other downtown theatres in Duluth, the suit states. Loss in net profits to the Lyceum in Duluth has been approximately $350,000 since Aug. 21, 1941, the complaint alleges. Triple damages, as authorized in an anti-trust suit, would bring the amount asked by the theatre to $1,050,000. The Lyceum Building Corp. computes its loss of "rental, profits and other damages" at $100,000, which tripled, brings its amount sued for to $300,000.

A. J. Balaban Renews Contract for Roxy

A. J. Balaban, executive managing director of New York's Roxy Theatre, this week signed an agreement to remain at the helm of that house's management for another five years plus an option which allows the operators, 20th Century-Fox, to retain him for another three years as a theatre consultant.

A. J. Balaban

Balaban, who was called into the Roxy management shortly after 20th-Fox acquired the house, took it over at a time when it had been depression-struck and had sunk from the "cathedral of the motion picture"—a title given to it when it was built by the late Samuel L. (Roxy) Rothafel—to what the present lessors call a "dilapidated structure."

D'Arcy Files St. Louis Trust Suit

Suit for $600,000 against five theatre companies, six individual defendants and nine distributors was filed last week in the federal district of St. Louis by Martin W. D'Arcy, who at one time operated the Shubert Theatre in that city.

D'Arcy charges that the distributors and exhibitors named in his complaint conspired to prevent his getting motion pictures, and as a result he had to abandon the operation of the theatre for which he had signed a five-year lease in 1942.

Named in the complaint are: Fanchon and Marco, St. Louis Ambassador Theatre, Inc.; St. Louis Amusement Co.; Eden Theatre; St. Louis Missouri Theatre, Inc.; Harry C. Arthur, Jr., James H. Arthur, Edward B. Arthur, Thomas G. Arthur, Harry C. Arthur III, Edward L. Murphy—all reported to be executives in the preceding theatre corporations, and Paramount, RKO, 20th Century-Fox, Warner Bros., Universal Film Exchanges, United Artists, Columbia Pictures, Loew's (MGM), Monogram and Republic.

Goldman Awarded $375,000 and Injunction in Erlanger Theatre Suit

Judge William H. Kirkpatrick of the Federal Court last Thursday handed down a triple damage judgment for $375,000 in favor of William Goldman Theatres, Inc., against Warner Bros. Pictures Co., two affiliates and eight motion picture producing and distributing companies.

The judgment was granted as a result of a ruling by Judge Kirkpatrick that the Goldman Corporation had lost profits of $125,000. Goldman had sued the defendant companies for $1,350,000 charging they monopolized the showing of first-run feature films in the Warner theatres here, and prevented him from obtaining feature pictures at the same time Warners did.

Judge Kirkpatrick also granted Goldman a permanent injunction restraining the defendant group from continuing the practices of which Goldman complained and directed them to give Goldman the same opportunities to bid for first-run pictures that the Warners have.

Must Pay Counsel Fees

The defendants also are ordered to pay William A. Gray and Robert Dechert, counsel for Goldman, a joint fee of $60,000 for legal services. Under the Clayton anti-trust laws, attorneys for parties damaged by monopolistic or discriminatory practices in trade must be paid by the offenders for their services. Gray and Dechert claimed a fee of $175,000 which was vigorously opposed by the Warner group. Goldman's petition for interest on the money award was denied.

Goldman had leased the old Erlanger theatre for 10 years at a rental of $12,000 a year, he claimed in his suit, and expected to get first-run pictures to exhibit in competition with the Warner houses. But, he claimed, the movie producers and distributors turned him down and he suffered losses.

He has another suit pending against the same group of defendants, charging them with using the same practices to hamper him in operation of the Karlton and Keith's theatres. In this case, he asks for an injunction, but makes no claim for money damages.

In another case, however, Judge Kirkpatrick ordered the Goldman Co. headed by William Goldman, to turn over to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Blum of 5331 Wynnefield Ave., the 69th St. Theatre and the Killegarry apartment house in Upper Darby, and to account to the Blums for all profits made from operation of these two enterprises since last January. The judge previously ruled the Blums were rightful purchasers of the properties from the Patrick J. Lawler estate, instead of Goldman.

Judge Kirkpatrick ignored a claim of the Blums for $100,000 damages from Goldman, but directed the Goldman company to turn over all profits from operation of the theatre and apartment building. David Felix, attorney for the Blums, was awarded a fee of $5,000 which the Goldman company must pay.

5-Circuit Monogram Deal Embraces 174 Theatres

Monogram President Steve Broidy this week announced product deals with five circuits embracing a total of 174 theatres. They are: the M & P chain with 103 houses in New England; Chakeres Theatres with 33 in Kentucky and Ohio; 183 Blatt Bros. theatres in Pennsylvania; the 12 Long-Griffith Texas houses and the eight in the Essick and Reif circuit in Ohio.

NT Sets Bonus Record

Nineteen forty-six saw over $2,000,000 distributed by National Theatres in its program of incentive pay, President Charles P. Skouras said in Los Angeles this week. Of that amount, $425,214 was given out in Christmas checks which made the past year the top one for National's bonus record.

Nine A. M. openings of the Senate Theatre were arranged by Manager Bob Sidman for special children's showings of "Song of the South" in Harrisburg.

'Duel' for Egyptian

"Duel in the Sun" will begin its Los Angeles premiere on Dec. 31 for a roadshow engagement at the Egyptian Theatre.

Appeal Griffith Decision

The Department of Justice formally took an appeal last week on the adverse decision which Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught had handed down against it in its suit against the Griffith Amusement Cobpany.

In its appeal the Government claims that Judge Vaught erred when he ruled that the company had not been monopolistic in its theatre operations. The Government had originally charged the Griffith Amusement Company, the Consolidated Theatres, Inc.; West Theatres, Inc.; L. C. Griffith, H. J. Griffith and the late R. E. Griffith with restraint of trade through price fixing and control of films. Judge Vaught had ruled that the Government had not sustained its charges.

A JALOPPY FOR 'MARGIE.' This is the way students of Polly-Lowell paraded at the Kezar Stadium, recent annual football contest. The cut-down "jaloppy" toured the stadium, with the students carrying "Margie" pennants in connection with the film's engagement at the Paramount, San Francisco.

Crowd Mobs K. C. Girl In $5 Giveaway Stunt

When Mrs. Juanita Davis accepted her new position as student assistant manager at Loew's Midland Theatre, Kansas City, little did she realize that her first chore would be to play the part of the femme fatale in an exploitation stunt carried off on behalf of United Artists' "The Strange Woman." And little did she realize, too, that as the femme fatale she was to stand on a street corner and—of all things—pass out real five-dollar bills to the passersby.

Anyway, that's what she did, with the assistance of Martin Maher, Loew's assistant manager. Perplexed recipients, scratching their heads and pinching themselves to see if they were dreaming, wanted to know the why and wherefore of such generosity. Replied Mrs. Davis: "I am 'The Strange Woman'."

When word gets around that money is being distributed, you can bet the last candy bar in your vending machine that a large crowd will gather. Before Mrs. Davis could get rid of the $125 allotted her for the purpose, she was mobbed by a raging, money-mad crowd, and had to be rushed from the corner by Maher.

The stunt was the most sensational worked out in the campaign for the picture. Mrs. Davis, incidentally, was recently made student assistant manager after serving several months as office assistant to Manager Russ Bovim. She was formerly bookkeeper at the Vogue, a neighborhood subsequent-run.

That money stunt, incidentally, was also tried out in Boston on the same picture by Joe Di Pesa. In this case, however, the woman offered a five-dollar bill in exchange for three singles (so one report goes). Another states that she simply offered the bills, but that the majority of the large crowd refused to accept them. Hundreds gathered to yell "sucker" at the few who did. The bills were actually legal tender.

Walter Reade Planning Conover Girl Contest

The Walter Reade Circuit is setting plans for a Harry Conover Cover Girl contest for the month of January. The winner will get a two-year Conover contract, and also an interview on Paula Stone's WNEW show.

Steve Brener, director of publicity for the circuit, is in charge of the contest.

Canadian Contest Set On WB's 'The Verdict'

An all-Canadian contest, with five cash prizes, is announced by Warner Bros. in connection with the Canadian release of "The Verdict."

Board of judges will consist of James R. Nairn, advertising director, Famous Players Canadian Corp.; Larry M. Graburn, advertising director, Odeon Theatres of Canada; N. Roy Perry, president of the Advertising and Sales Club of Toronto; Hye Bossin, managing editor of Canadian Film Weekly; Ray Lewis and J. Smith, editor-publisher and managing editor, respectively, of Canadian Moving Picture Digest, and Glenn Ireton, Warner's field public relations representative.

Contest is open to all exhibitors whose playdates of "The Verdict" start not later than March 31. First prize is $100; second $50; third, $25; fourth, $15; fifth, $10.

BRIDAL DISPLAY CLICKS. A mannequin dressed as a bride and displayed in the lobby of the Theatre Rex, an Odeon house in St. Jerome, Quebec, Canada, boosted receipts to the highest that theatre has ever had, according to Manager A. N. Lefebvre. Four of Lefebvre's ushers are shown with the display, which was used in connection with MGM's "Easy to Wed."

100 Roses Giveaway Stunt For 'Spectre of the Rose'

Manager Paul O. Klinger, Loew's Poli-Strand, Waterbury, Conn., tied-up with a Waterbury florist to give the Strand 100 roses for a giveaway stunt to female patrons during "Spectre of the Rose" run. Staff members wore fresh roses for a week in advance of showing.

The staff members also wore a neat card plugging the picture. A local dancing school had a display, while merchants used window displays and co-op ads. Theatre had two large lobby panels for a month ahead of the showing. Klinger's assistant, Hollis Sweeney, helped out on the campaign.

WINDOW TIEUP. When United Artists' "Angel on My Shoulder" played at Loew's Rochester, N. Y., Manager Lester Pollock promoted this arresting tie-in window display with Edwards' Department Store.

'Wicked Lady' Send-Off Big With Campaigns in 5 Cities

With the recent opening of J. Arthur Rank's "Wicked Lady" at Loew's theatres in Baltimore, Atlanta, Louisville, Norfolk and Reading, strong pre-selling campaigns were used to put over the Universal-International release. Exhibitors due to play the picture at a later date should take note of the many ideas utilized in the following campaigns:

Baltimore—Gertrude Bunchez, publicity director of Loew's Theatres, arranged for several outstanding tieups.

The Baltimore News Post ran a contest for the best gift-slam suggestions for James Mason, the heel of the year. Such things as a record of I'll Be Glad When You're Dead, You Rascal You and a box of crackers which would make crumbs in his bed, and similar items were suggested by contestants who hoped to win $50 in prizes.

The Baltimore Home News ran a contest offering cash prizes for the best alliterative slogans similar to "Mean Moody Mason Makes Mamas Mad."

'Wicked Lady' Night

A "Wicked Lady" night was held at the Club Charles and advertised in the local newspapers. It was also plugged over the radio and by the m.c. at the club. Window displays were obtained in two outstanding shop windows on the angle that black lingerie would make women feel like a "Wicked Lady."

A race at the Bowie track was called the "Wicked Lady" handicap. It was plugged in the race track programs, over the air and in newspaper ads for several days in advance. The winning horse in this race was given a specially lettered blanket labeled "Wicked Lady Purse Winner."

A "Wicked Lady" played various tunes over radio station WITH for three days with passes as prizes to those identifying the song numbers. A still of Margaret Lockwood reading Look was used on posters displayed on newsstands. This tieup was made with the Baltimore News Company which also placed poster strips on their trucks calling attention to the picture.

Atlanta—Boyd Fry, Loew's manager in Atlanta, started proceedings by bringing his four-year-old daughter to Fred Moon, drama editor of the Atlanta Journal. The little girl acted as press agent for "Wicked Lady" in place of her father. Moon used the cut of the youngster with a story about the picture. A four-column Margaret Lockwood layout was used in another Atlanta paper showing the star of the picture in various moods she interprets. Accompanying this was a story describing the picture as "Another Amber."

Shortly before the picture opened, James Mason, its star, arrived in New York from England accompanied by 12 cats. A cat show was in progress at the Municipal Auditorium, so Fry arranged to have a pretty girl send Mason his 13th cat—the meanest cat in the show. This picture (see cut) was used on the AP wire service. A night club tieup was also made by Fry and the Look photo was also carried on newstand tack cards. Fry also arranged for a radio station to carry a "wolf whistle contest" the idea being that contestants would sound the call which they would give to a "Wicked Lady."

Louisville—George Hunt, Jr. manager of Loew's Louisville Theatre, started proceedings by carrying teaser trailers in the newsreel a week in advance of the regular trailer.

The Louisville Times sent a reporter out to interview women on why they like "heels" like James Mason. The Times also carried the gift-slam contest in which people suggested uncomplimentary gifts to send to Mason, screen heel of the year.

A. A. Daugherty, drama editor of the Times, also ran the contest on gift-slam suggestions for Mason.

A three-way tieup was made with the Joy Shops and the Post and Paddock night club whereby the club gave away lingerie from the shop at a "Wicked Lady" night, and both advertised the idea in the newspapers. Since Kentucky is the breeding ground for race horses, a yearling filly was named "Wicked Lady." A picture of this horse made the sports page of the Courier Journal.

Miss Lockwood Contributes

Miss Lockwood made a contribution to the Committee for Kentucky organization soliciting memberships to improve conditions in the state. With her contribution she sent a cablegram and, together with a still, this made newspapers throughout the state. One thousand tack cards were used and one hundred street car and bus dash boards were used. Radio time totaling several hours was promoted for a week in advance of the picture.

Norfolk—Milton Kaufman, manager of

THIRTEENTH CAT. When James Mason, star of "Wicked Lady," released by Universal, arrived in the United States bringing with him 12 cats, there was a cat show in progress in Atlanta, Ga. Boyd Fry, manager of Loew's seizing the opportunity, had one of Mason's admirers pick the meanest cat in the show to send to Mason as the 13th feline.

Tit for Tat

Scratching each other's backs is not a bad idea occasionally, and that's figuratively what Sterling Theatres' director of advertising, Jack J. Engerman, and a radio station did when they arranged for Mutual's radio station in Seattle to give a nice plug for the playing of "Falcon's Alibi" on a Tuesday night. Picture opened Wednesday, which was nice timing.

In return, the theatre ran a 20-second trailer for the "Adventures of the Falcon" radio program, with the station paying for the cost of the trailer.

Peters Gets Full Radio Coverage for 'Angel'

Full radio coverage, on the airwaves and in radio stores, was employed by George Peters, manager of Loew's Theatre, Richmond, Va., assisted by E. E. Milburn, United Artists exploiteer to sell United Artists' "Angel on My Shoulder." Three stations were used for air plugs. Highlighting the airwaves promotion was a series of 15-minute programs emanating from in front of the theatre and broadcast by station WRVA. This "Streetman" program covered the opening week from Monday through Friday.

Three programs on station WLEE devoted time to stressing the "Angel" showing. For the opening week the daily program of Harvey Hudson's 1450 Club program contained many plugs for the picture. The same station carried a review of the picture on the second day of the engagement by Miss Edith Lindeman, critic for the Times-Dispatch. The Phillip Levy Furniture Company broadcast devoted time to the picture in connection with an automatic blanket tieup. Station WMBG devoted two spots daily to the picture, its stars and theatre.

Among Peters' other promotional stunts were special window display tieups on washing machines; four window displays in retail stores on the automatic blanket; a specially made easel standee placed in the main entrance of the new Cosmopolitan restaurant; displays in four of the city's hotels; a special 24-sheet poster placed on a lighted board on the Petersburg Pike approaching the city from the south.

Newspaper promotion included special art layouts and stories in the Times-Dispatch and News-Leader.

Radio Limerick Contest On 'Never Say Goodbye'

Utilizing a radio adaptation of the newspaper Limerick Contest from the press book on "Never Say Goodbye," the Paramount Theatre in Omaha, and Tri-States' Capitol in Davenport, Fort in Rock Island and LeClaire in Moline, stirred up quite a bit of interest in the picture for their simultaneous openings recently.

In each case, the daily contest was plugged by a Man on the Street from the local radio station, with many plugs for "Never Say Goodbye" worked into the programs.

The hit song, Remember Me, also was given plenty of play over the radio by disk jockeys and in several hundred juke boxes.

Through this song, music stores also were tied in for attractive window displays and newspaper promotion.

SELLING THE PICTURE

He Didn't Fool Papers, But Stunt Got Results

Manager Walter Lloyd of the Allyn Theatre in Hartford, Conn., didn't fool the newspapers on his sensational stunt for "Angel on My Shoulder," but the ballyhoo got the desired results anyhow.

Lloyd pulled something which appears unprecedented, in that the local police offered cooperation for the occasion. The manager hired a man to sprint full speed down Main Street at the height of the noon hour rush screaming "There's an Angel on My Shoulder!" Two officers gave chase, arrested the offender, who was later freed for lack of evidence, all with the approval of the Hartford chief of police, Michael Godfrey.

Space was given to the event in newspapers which qualified the stories by referring to it as a stunt for "Angel on My Shoulder" at the Allyn.

Lloyd augmented his campaign for "Angel" by planting numerous window displays and using radio extensively. A contest over WTHT offered war bonds as prizes to the contestant deriving the most words from the picture's title.

Collie Contest Tops Doob 'Lassie' Campaign

A "Name the Collie" contest and an early morning show were highlights of the campaign staged in connection with the showing of MGM's "Courage of Lassie" at Loew's Aldine, Wilmington, Del., by Manager Edgar J. Doob and his assistant, Robert E. Diem.

The local radio station, WDEL, gave important coverage to the contest and show with six announcements daily for six days and nine announcements daily for three days. Air promotion started ten days in advance of playdate, and the announcements tied in with merchant-sponsored programs.

Cooperating merchants distributed 5000 entry blanks plugging the collie giveaway and the early morning show. Five copies of Elizabeth Taylor's book, "Nibbles and Me," were given to the five girl runners-up in the naming contest, and five hobby kits to the five boys.

The special events were also plugged by a special lobby one-sheet, a special trailer, underlines in regular ads, and newspaper publicity stories.

Rose Display Feature of Seattle 'Spectre' Selling

One of the most effective lobby displays produced for publicizing Republic's "Spectre of the Rose" was set up by Manager James McDermott of the Roosevelt, Seattle, in the form of a special 40x60 surrounded by roses which were supplied to McDermott through the cooperation of a local flower shop.

A special front treatment included a hanging valance.

The direct mail approach was used for a carefully selected list of nearly 1,800. These were mostly teachers of ballet, dancing, music and art. Radio, window cards and other displays rounded out the campaign in which Zollie Volchok, city manager and Jack J. Engerman, advertising manager, collaborated with McDermott ATMOSPHERE was what Manager Jack Randall was striving for and that's just what he got when he dressed his cashiers and usherettes in these gay Mexican costumes to pre-sell MGM's "Holiday in Mexico" at his Capitol Theatre, Vancouver, Canada.

Ed Burrows Arranges Unique Florist Tieup

Ed Burrows, owner-manager of the Lansdale Theatre, Lansdale, Pa., employed his showmanship ingenuity to good results in connection with the engagement of Warners' "A Stolen Life." Bette Davis plays a dual role, that of contrasting twins, so Burrows arranged with a local florist to present a beautiful corsage to every twin attending the show.

It was no ordinary corsage, either, but a real orchid plus several other seasonal flowers to set it off.

Stunt created considerable talk, and "A Stolen Life" out-grossed every previous Bette Davis picture played at the Lansdale.

LITTLE MAN, BIG SIGN. Art Krolick, manager of the Century Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., is a little man in comparison to the giant 12-foot display of Bette Davis that he set up in his lobby to herald the coming of Warners' "Deception."

News, Radio Contest Sells 'Strange Woman'

As an exploitation stunt for the Bridgeport showing of "The Strange Woman" at Loew's-Poli, Manager Matt L. Saunders conducted a Mystery Woman contest through the local newspapers and Radio Station WNAB. Bridgeport girls who resembled Hedy Lamarr, star of the film, entered the contest and the entrant who looked the most nearly like the film star was selected by Saunders and a committee of judges. Women not necessarily resembling Miss Lamarr also had a chance to win prizes. The winning Lamarr-type entrant appeared on four occasions in one week at local stores.

A description of the girl with the Hedy Lamarr "Strange Woman" look was broadcast over the radio station daily, with a few hints on what she would wear and how to pick her out from among other customers at the stores. There were cash awards of $40, the first person to correctly identity the Strange Woman each day receiving a prize.—BR.

'Kid' Promoted by Milkman Interview

A seven-o'clock-in-the-morning interview with a local milkman on the opening day of RKO's "The Kid From Brooklyn" was one of the stunts engineered by Lou Cohen, manager of Loew's Poli, Hartford, and his assistant, in their campaign for the Danny Kaye film. Stunt was arranged with station WTHT and rebroadcast at 4 o'clock the afternoon of the same day. Cohen got several "Kid" plugs.

Participants over a quiz show, also on WTHT, were awarded theatre guest tickets.—HD.

Jewelry Store Ad Tie-in

A Hartford jewelry store carried newspaper co-op ads for "Rage in Heaven," playing at Loew's Poli, Hartford, through a tie-up by Lou Cohen, manager, and his assistant, Sam Horowitz.

Film Premiere Honors Star

The return of James Stewart to the screen, in Frank Capra's production, "It's a Wonderful Life," was the occasion for a gala opening at the Globe Theatre, New York, last Friday, which attracted nearly all the film stars in the city, plus stars of stage and opera and a large sprinkling of socialites. The picture is the star's first since his discharge from the armed services, and the large turn-out of celebrities was in his honor.

Stewart's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Stewart, came on from their home in Indiana, Pa., to witness the picture's premiere, proceeds of which went to the Boys' Club of New York.

Newspaper, Merchants Sponsor Juvenile Show

Many theatres throughout the country have staged their Back-to-School special events. Typical of these is a report in the Vellejo (Cal.) Times-Herald on a tieup the newspaper made with John Fredericks, manager of the Hanlon Theatre, in which kids of school age could obtain tickets to a special show, free, by making a purchase in any one of eight merchants' stores in the town. The merchants bought a page of cooperative advertising in the Times-Herald, plugging the special performance, for which Fredericks arranged to present a western and eight cartoons.

The stores sponsored the program, which seems to indicate that they bought their gift tickets from the theatre, although the report is not specific.

The theatre plugged the coming special show by a trailer and by the display of a giant lobby frame which announced the event and listed the names of the merchants through whom free tickets could be obtained.

The popcorn and candy business was away above average, too.

'Season Pass' Gag Still Works for Brewer

It was an old gag, of course, but it doubled his Wednesday's business. And if it could do that for Charles Brewer, manager of the Clay and Cove theatres, Green Cove Springs, Fla., it could also prove effective for other theatremen.

The gag: the "season pass" card—you know, the one with copy something like this: "Do not let the SEASON PASS without seeing (title of picture) at the Clay Theatre." The words "season pass" and the name of the theatre were in large red letters to make them stand out in bold relief from the rest of the copy. Brewer used the gag on Republic's "Night Train to Memphis."

Family Gets Invitation

Hometown stunt on Universal's "Her Adventurous Night" at the M & P Capitol Theatre, Worcester, Mass., was an invitation to the family of Actress Helen Walker to attend a screening of the film. Miss Walker is a former Worcester girl.

Radio Forum on 'Deception'

A radio forum on a local station was used by Jim McCarthy, Warner Strand, Hartford, for promotion on "Deception." Women discussed the question, "Is a little 'Deception' permissible in modern marriage?" McCarthy also had newspaper plugs on the picture. Co-op ads and store displays were used.

Insert 'Killers' Tabloid In Daily Newspapers

Although the distribution of tabloids, paid for by a merchant through cooperative advertising, is not a new stunt by any means, the method of distribution obtained by Ed. May, manager of the Rosetta Theatre, Miami, on "The Killers" is worthy of particular note.

May's assistant manager, James E. Camp, and doorman Budd Trigg, through arrangements made with newsstand operators and newspaper carrier boys in the areas served by the Rosetta, were able to have the tabloids inserted in regular editions of the Miami Herald and the Miami Daily News, in spite of strict regulations against such procedure, promulgated by the publishers. Passes to the carriers and newsstand operators were the only cost.

'Beaucaire' Plugged Via Man-in-Street Broadcasts

Walter B. Lloyd, manager of the M & P Allyn in Hartford, promoted mentions of "Monsieur Beaucaire" over "Man in the Street" programs on Hartford radio stations. Program participants got theatre guest tickets.

Aiding Manager Lloyd on the campaign was Arnold Van Leer, Paramount exploitation representative.—HD.

'IMPOSSIBLE STUNT.' But Willard Coghlan, United Artists' exploitation man in Seattle, did it. He found a statue of an angel in the center of the intersection of Mason and Market streets in San Francisco, opposite the Pepsi-Cola Center for service men. In some way or other, he succeeded in attaching a sign just below the angel with this copy: "I'm flying to see 'Angel on My Shoulder' now at the United Artists Theatre."

Seat-Selling Angles on Medford 'Kid' Campaign

Samuel Goldwyn's "The Kid from Brooklyn" benefited by a smash showmanship campaign staged by the Holly Theatre, Medford, Oregon. Local dairy was induced to place banners on a fleet of 14 trucks covering the county with the legend: For Milk It's Snider's Grade A—For Laughs See "The Kid from Brooklyn." The dairy, in addition, sponsored a "Milkmaid's Pigtail Queen Dairy," a variation of contests previously run in the same territory. The dairy also ran a large ad containing entry blank for the derby, with theme similar to the truck banner which was also carried out in an attractive herald distributed locally on home delivery and at high schools and colleges.

With the assistance of RKO Radio field exploiteer Don McGregor, the theatre also succeeded in getting the creamery to print up 3,000 popcorn bags in which, preceding the run of the picture, popcorn was sold. In addition, the Mail-Tribune (daily) supplemented the theatre's ad campaign with considerable story and photo space. Three prominent merchants were promoted to serve as derby judges on the stage of the theatre on opening night of "The Kid from Brooklyn," with the event broadcast over Station KWIN. Key prizes donated for the event were: oil color portrait (8″x10″) in gold-filled frame; $25 permanent wave and a popular record album of the winner's choice.

The Holly Theatre devoted considerable space in the lobby to display the prizes with lobby cards naming the donors; also against black lobby drop cut-outs from the 24-sheet with similar theme to the truck banners. Tie-ups were also made with local music stores to supply records for pre-showtime and intermission play on theatre public address system in exchange for space in lobby listing the records and sheet music from the picture and the places they were on sale.

'Wicked Lady' Gets Big Campaign in 5 Cities

Loew's Theatre, engineered a campaign here which included two cooperative ads, one featuring Miss Lockwood placed by a local beauty salon and the other featuring Patricia Roc, placed by an electrical distributor.

A radio contest was arranged with a "Wicked Lady" playing various tunes for the radio with prizes for those identifying them.

A bookstore featured a window of "Wicked Ladies" of fiction including "Forever Amber," "Duchess of Hotspur" and others. This window carried stills and full credits for the picture. Classified teaser ads were placed in the personal columns of the local newspapers. The distributor of Look used a still of Miss Lockwood reading the publication, on newsstands and its trucks.

Reading—Larry Levy, Loew's manager got a photo contest sponsored by a local photo agency store in which the "Wicked Lady" offered prizes for the most seductive poses of pictures developed by the agency. The photo agency took two-column ads to announce the contest featuring art and full credits. Teaser truck cards and trolley posters were bought in Reading, and sidewalks were stenciled.

Board of directors of Tent No. 2, Variety Club of Columbus, were elected at a meeting here. The new board consists of Harry Simons, John Hardgrove, Floyd Gooding, George Anagnost, J. F. Luft, Leo Yassenoff, Jack Kelly, Leo Haenlein, Robert Nelson and Don Burrows. They will choose the tent's new officers at a later meeting.

A pre-Christmas dinner was held here last week, at which the guests of honor were John Murphy, in charge of all out-of-town theatres for Loew's, and Ernest Emerling, Loew's Theatres publicity and advertising chief, with Allen Sparrow, the company's division manager, as host. Managers of Loew theatres in Akron, Canton, Toledo, Dayton and Columbus, with their wives, were other guests at the dinner.

Jack Good, local singer, dancer and stage screen comedian is spending the holidays here after a New York run and road tour in "The Desert Song."

A holiday season shift in opening days for Loew's theatres here brought Paramount's "Blue Skies" in as the big Christmas week attraction at the Ohio Theatre. MGM's "Rage in Heaven" did a Christmas holdover at the Broad after five days at the Ohio. The Palace and Grand stuck to their Monday openings.

Paul Schwartz, 45, of Detroit, and production manager of the Gayety Theatre here, a burlesque house, was found dead in his bed at the Broad-Lincoln Hotel last week, a day following his arrival to take up his new duties.

John Payne, film star, and Mrs. Brian Donlevy, wife of the actor, were among the 54 passengers stranded at Port Columbus when a TWA Constellation made a forced landing.

TORONTO

Entry into the theatre field of St. Catharines, Ont., by 20th Century Theatres, Toronto, was effected in taking over the Granada Theatre, which has been re-named the Park, after completion of renovations. The Granada was once operated as a unit of the former Hanson circuit. There are four other theatres in St. Catharines, including the Famous Players' Capitol and the Odeon Palace.

Manager George Fairley of the Famous Players' Palace Theatre, Guelph, Ont., was equal to the emergency when fire broke out in the building next door. He cleared the theatre of its 900 patrons by a quiet stage announcement. Smoke and water did considerable damage to the theatre. Six firemen were injured.

William Brenner, head of MGM's checking department, was here last week on company business.

New Orleans was gaily decorated all this week with brilliant Christmas colors. The theatres also went in heavily for decorations, but the pre-Christmas slump was not to be overcome, particularly as the stores were open quite late in the evenings. The drop in business, however, was not as great as had been anticipated.

SEES GAIN IN SINGLE-FEATURE POLICY. Speaking to the industry press at an informal luncheon last week at the Hotel Astor in New York, William F. Rodgers, Loew's distribution chief, declared that "more of the better theatres are playing single features today than at any time during the past five years." Rodgers cited as one reason for the shortage of pictures in neighborhood and small-town situations the rapid turnover of product because of the double-feature policy. He saw present box-office peak audience levels retained in 1947 if quality films of wide appeal were presented and "B" films were eliminated. Rodgers is shown above addressing the gathering, while directly next to him is Howard Dietz, MGM vice-president in charge of advertising, publicity and exploitation. The two listeners at the extreme left are William R. Ferguson, MGM director of exploitation, and "Chick" Lewis, editor and publisher of Showmen's Trade Review.

BRIDGEPORT

All members of the personnel of the four Bridgeport Loew-Poli theatres — Loew-Poli, Majestic, Globe and Lyric—except managers, received an extra two weeks' salary as a Christmas bonus.

Morris Jacobson, general manager of the Strand Amusement Co., operator of seven neighborhood houses in this city, gave all his employes an extra cash bonus in time for their Christmas shopping.

Veteran employes of Loew theatres in Bridgeport were honored Friday night, this week, and their long service given public recognition. Members of the theatres' staffs, with the circuit 10 years or more, were awarded a Loew service emblem at a ceremony held on the stage of Loew's-Poli after the last show. The pins were circular in shape, with the upper half carrying the inscription "Loew's MGM." On the lower half were service stars, each designating 10 years of employment with the circuit. A buffet supper and entertainment rounded out the evening.

The Globe Theatre took good advantage in advance publicity for its showing of "The Strange Woman," by issuing newspaper releases calling attention to the fact that nine-year-old Charlotte Thomas, a native of this city and now of Hollywood, appeared in the beginning of the film riding in a stage coach with Hedy Lamarr. Charlotte appears under the professional name of Sally Thomas. Her father, George Thomas, formerly was with the First National Bank of Bridgeport.

Marvin Salinger is a new member of the staff of the Majestic.

Michael Carroll, manager of the American, gave a Christmas party Saturday night, Dec. 21, on the stage for his entire staff and former employes, some of whom are still in show business with other houses. All received presents from a grab-bag.

Loew theatre managers and their assistants were entertained in New Haven Sunday night, Dec. 22, for their annual Christmas party of the New England Division with Division Manager Harry F. Shaw as host. The event was held in the Hotel Taft.

Although the Globe is generally a second-run downtown house, Manager Al Domain presented one of his rare first-run bills beginning on Christmas Day. The pictures were "Bachelors' Daughters" and "Rainbow Over Texas."

MILWAUKEE

The Dec. 22 promised opening date for the remodeled Towne Theatre could not be kept, due to further shortages of material and the unexpected length of time it is taking to install seats, etc., but at this writing Dec. 26 is promised for the opening of this new first-run showing of United Artists pictures. "A Night in Casablanca," with the Marx Brothers, will reopen the house.

Work is now under way for the new theatre in Muscoda, Wis., but by the middle of December only the excavation work and installation of footings had been completed. It is to be an apartment building with the Muscoda Theatre occupying a part of it. At present a shortage of concrete building blocks is causing delay in construction work.

About one-half of the building material—cement blocks, etc., for the new La Farge Theatre, at Large, Wis., is reported on hand, with more coming soon, but construction probably will not start on this show house until early spring, as other shortages are reported as imminent. Plans for the new theatre have been forwarded to the state authorities at Madison, as they must be approved before work can be started. Such approval, however, is usually not denied.

On Dec. 15 a new movie projector was presented to and dedicated at Our Savior's Church (Lutheran) at Iola, Wis. It is a 16-mm. Bell and Howell, and was purchased by the Sunday School of the church. The first film to be shown was "The Power of God," a one-hour film, which is reported to have been shown to thousands of GIs at home and abroad, and on board troop ships.

The Passion Play was presented at the Pabst Theatre, one of the last two legit houses left in Milwaukee, Dec. 2 to 19 inclusive, by Josef Meier, who played Christ and also operated the show. On the last night of the play four of the members of the cast struck for a raise in pay and after much argument were discharged by Meier. The players were Kurt Kupfer, who played Judas; his wife, who was the costume mistress; Mrs. Maria Sorich, who took the parts of Rachel, Salome and the Angel, and John Sorich who played Herod.

A fire on Dec. 14 in the basement of the Mars Theatre, located in an outlying section of Milwaukee, drove patrons from the house through the back way to an alley. It was mostly smoke, as the fire was confined to the burning of overflowing oil from an oil-burning furnace. Damage was slight, and after a short time the patrons filed back into the theatre.

At the Rivoli Theatre, La Crosse, Wis., crowds are attracted by the addition of a stunt to the program, in the form of a fortune-telling wizard—Ramus II, who appears in person and is satisfying the audience. Patrons are also able to consult Ramus privately, by making a date before the show, as there is always a waiting list. It is drawing the crowds daily, and has been for a week. It is to be a limited engagement.

CEA Sets Up 6-Point Program Concerning Buying Concessions from Renters; Still Guess About Korda

By JOCK MacGREGOR

RENTALS—that hardy annual of exhibitor convention topics—took up much time at the December CEA General Council Meeting. Though the delegates were delighted with the way Major R. B. Baker met them with regards to the terms for "The Overlanders," several could not let the occasion pass without making further cracks about Teddy Carr's methods.

MacGregor

Negotiations with the KRS are to be instituted making the following recommendations:

1. A sliding scale on the Renter's part when the booking is 50 per cent.
2. Bookings of 40 per cent or over should be for the whole program with the option of a second feature or shorts or an adequate allowance.
3. Subsequent runs should be booked on a lower percentage than first-runs.
4. Small exhibitors' terms to be given where average takings do not exceed £150 a week.
5. Renters should treat circuits and independents in the same barring area alike concerning the selection of films.
6. Flat rentals should be negotiated individually.

These points will be discussed by the local branches before submission to the KRS when it would appear there will be considerable alterations to some. To accept such proposals would cut severely into renters' incomes.

Councillor Harry Mears' proposal that the Independents should form their own section within the CEA was defeated.

The joint Renters Exhibitors Producers Committee are, at the request of the KRS, being asked to deal with the Christian Film Council's proposal to set up a reviewing panel in opposition to the British Board of Film Censors. Despite "The Outlaw" getting a "U" certificate and "Great Expectations" an "A," the BBFC does as good a job as any similar set-up.

A certain amount of conjecture still surrounds the Korda set-up for theatres. At present he controls one cinema—the 700 seater Rialto—yet he has both Alex Stevenson and E. S. Luke, experienced West End managers, on his pay roll. This house, incidentally, is playing to capacity with "Les Enfants du Paradis."

Though Hollywood pictures generally are not doing well in the West End the two longest runs are "Kid from Brooklyn" and "Blue Skies." "The Outlaw," too, continues to hold its own.

The Public Safety Committee of the Board of Aldermen voted Dec. 20 to kill a proposed ordinance revising the city's rules for the licensing of electricians. Under the proposed rules it would have been necessary for theatres, business concerns and industrial plants, to hire outside contractors for all new electrical installations instead of using their house maintenance men as heretofore. Richard Nichols, Ninth Ward Republican, chairman of the committee, said it voted unanimously that the measure offered no greater safety precautions than the present rules and regulations. The committee will introduce another bill later to call for annual inspection of electrical wiring instead of inspection only at the time of installation. The bill met with widespread opposition at a public hearing held by the committee last week.

NEW YORK

Christmas parties were hardly over before the film gang got going on plans to make the New Year's parties produce some of the biggest and best hangovers yet.

On the more serious and constructive side though, the Cinema Stamp collectors, that new organization of movie philatelists for whom that redoubtable merchant of words, Leon J. Bamberger, is the official speaker, has a meeting set for Jan. 8 in the Little Theatre of the Museum of Science and Industry. Harry Lindquist, editor and publisher of Stamps Magazine will be the speaker.

The Christmas spirit went over pretty well at Century theatres where bonus checks were handed out to all employes, based on a schedule of $250 maximum for five years' employment, $150 maximum for three years, and $100 maximum for one year.

Walter Reade and his employes threw quite a party on Dec. 17 for Rock Dilione, veteran projectionist who has been with the organization for 34 years. Dilione was presented with a watch and a scroll. Walter Reade, Jr., presided.

Universal has appointed Norman E. Gluck as house manager of its recently acquired Rank showcase, the Park Avenue. John E. Hudson was appointed assistant manager. Max Fried, formerly of Century, is sergeant-at-arms.

United Artist District Manager Jack Ellis got back to New York just in time to be around when the Christmas bonuses were handed out and to congratulate Brooklyn Booker Myron Starr on being a father. A six pound girl, named Nadine Ronnie, was born to the booker and Mrs. Starr at the Israel Zion Hospital last week.

When they say "talk about the ceiling" at Warner Bros. these days it doesn't mean that some of those gifts the publicity department sent out got astray and were sampled. It's that proud the exchange is of its new sound absorbent ceiling, which goes in along with fluorescent lighting and all the other fixings.

Incidentally three Warnerites' are spending that Christmas bonus on vacations at Miami, Fla., where they can renew their exhibitor contacts. They are: Irving Rothenberg, Harry Decker and Leo Mayer—all salesmen.

Twentieth Century-Fox Accessory Department Chief Shirley Mandell week-ended in Boston, and Office Manager Joe Burke is back from Albany.

In line with the established Century theatres' policy of active participation in community affairs in peace time as well as during war, J. R. Springer, Century's general theatre manager, authorized the use of five Century theatres by local organizations, for the purpose of staging Christmas parties for the children of the neighborhood.

These civic affairs were held at Century's College theatre in Brooklyn, Dec. 23, under the auspices of the 63rd Precinct of the New York Police Department; at Century's Park theatre in New Hyde Park, L. I., on the same date, under sponsorship of the Lions Club of New Hyde Park; at the Station theatre in Huntington, L. The 20th-Fox Family Club held its holiday party here Friday of last week with a swell time being had by all.

Loew Emblems to 20

Loew's Northeastern Division Manager Charles E. Kurtzman presented 20 employes of Loew's State and Orpheum Theatres in Boston with service emblems at the company's annual Christmas party on Dec. 23 at the Hotel Lenox. Those receiving them are: Meyer Bixgorne, Charles J. Foley, Morris A. Goldman, Thomas B. Green, Charles Hayes, Jacob Kaufman, Frederick J. Keogh, William Leavens, Joseph M. Lunny, Nathaniel Max, James C. McCormack, Thomas F. Meagher, Marie O. Margarian, James B. O'Brien, Elijah J. Rogers, Charles C. Sandborn, Alice E. Shea, Edward E. Schindler, Louis S. Silvey, Helen M. Toomey.

Harry Gittelson, New York, assistant to Western Division Manager Walter Branson of RKO, is due in town right after the first of the year to spark the tenth anniversary Ned Depinet drive here.

DALLAS

The Telenews Theatre here has announced a new policy of selected feature films to augment the news programs now in effect. The new policy, according to Ross McCausland, Telenews manager, started Christmas Day with "Notorious Gentleman." News portions of the program will be the regular Telenews-edited newsreels. Prices will be 50c matinees and 60c for evenings. Ellis W. Levy, Telenews western division manager, was here last week on business, supervising the changeover of policy.

Laurence Olivier's "Henry V" has been booked here for March.

A. R. Lowrey, owner of the Plaza Theatre at Carrollton and civic and business leader of that community, died at his Carrollton home last Wednesday after a brief illness. He suffered a stroke while at work in the theatre a week before. Survivors include his wife, a son, John Austin Lowrey, and a sister.

Ben Kalmenson, Warner general sales manager, has left after a brief series of sales meetings here.

Jim Pritchard is in charge of the Universal office here while Dutch Smith is ill from a heart trouble. Pritchard is from the "U" office in Oklahoma City.

MEMPHIS

Herb Kohn, general manager of Malco Theatres, Inc., has been re-elected chief barker of the Memphis Variety Club. Dave Flexer, president of Flexer-Haberfeld Theatres, was elected first assistant chief barker, and R. M. (Buster) Hammond, branch manager for United Artists, was selected second assistant chief barker. Property master is Ed Sapinsley, Malco comptroller, and dough guy is Bailey Prichard, branch manager of Monogram. Chairmen of committees named are Rafael Pierre Dawson, branch manager of Universal, house committee; Flexer and Herman Chrisman, branch manager of Columbia, luncheon; Nat Wyse, branch manager of Republic, and Leonard Shea, branch manager of PRC, entertainment, and Ed Williamson, branch manager of Warner Bros., membership.

Jimmie Gillespie, newly appointed southwestern advertising manager for 20th Century-Fox, and Mrs. Gillespie, spent several days in Memphis en route to his job at Dallas.

Lawrence Audrain, American publicity representative of J. Arthur Rank, visited Memphis en route from Dallas to New York.

Tom Young, branch manager of 20th Century-Fox, was host this last week at a special press and civic club screening of "The Razor's Edge," at which the picture was highly praised by most of those seeing it.

Dick Settoon, salesman for Paramount here, is proudly reporting to his friends that his father, an employe of the New York Post, and his mother, have authored a new mystery novel.

Dave Flexer, president of Flexer-Haberfeld Theatres, and Mrs. Flexer have returned from a flying trip to New York. Flexer incidentally is carrying a broken hand in a cast, suffered when an office chair collapsed under him.

Memphis theatres, faced with the usual slow down in business the week before Christmas, depended on holdovers, sure-fire reissues or on stage attractions. "Strange Woman" was held a second week at Loew's Palace and the theatre opened with the old "Boom Town" on Christmas Eve. The Malco boosted its pre-Christmas attendance with a stage revue, "Star and Garter." Loew's State brought in the reissue of the popular oldie, "The Westerner," with Gary Cooper. The Warner broke the unwritten rule against double features in downtown first-run houses by bringing in two reissues, "Captain Caution" and "Captain Fury." The Strand, a Malco playover house, offered a first-run of Boris Karloff's "Bedlam." The Ritz held doggedly to "Henry V." Other Christmas Eve changeovers brought "The Dark Mirror" to the Malco, Red Skelton's "Showoff" to Loew's State and "The Verdict" to the Warner.

BRISKIN HONORED AT LUNCHEON. Samuel J. SHORT Subject REVIEWS

Moonlight Melodies (Excellent)

Univ. (2304) Name Band Musical 15 mins.

The enormous sale of Frankie Carle records is proof enough that his musical organization is one of the top favorites now. This short is a good example of why Carle is popular. Setting for the musical numbers is in a New York night club and opens with Up An Octave and then features The Starlighters, a singing quintet singing How Would You Feel? Carle's daughter, Marjorie Hughes, Gregg Lawrence, Derry Falligant also are featured in vocal numbers. An excellent musical addition to any type of program except where the feature is a musical.

Nature's Atom Bomb (Interesting)

Univ. (2392) Answer Man 10 mins.

The Answer Man comes up with some interesting observations in answer to some of the questions sent in by motion picture audiences, including the question, "Were the recent atom bomb explosions the biggest the world has ever known?" And the answer tells and shows how Mt. Krakoa exploded entirely off the face of the earth so that the sun appeared red for three years in the area where the explosion took place. Other questions answered in the usual interesting fashion include, "How many periods are there in a bottle of ink?", "How much weight does a football player lose in a game?" "Were there any survivors of Custer's Last stand?" "How deep does a pearl diver dive when he dives for pearls?" "What are my chances of marrying a blonde?" Good for any type program.

Fair Weather Fiends (Funny)

Univ. (2321) Woody Woodpecker 7 mins.

Woody Woodpecker and his pal, the wolf, find themselves shipwrecked and entirely without food on a desert island. They pursue all sorts of fantastic ideas in their search for food, (including ideas about having each other for dinner) with the usual screwy results. They finally discover a cache of Technicolored food and go to it with glee.

The Wacky Weed (Good)

Univ. (2322) Andy Panda 7 mins.

Andy Panda buys a delicately Technicolored plant to put in his back yard and becomes involved with a lively but evil weed which takes every opportunity to choke the beautiful plant. The plant calls for help and Andy is on the job, tearing up the weed and part of his house at the same time. He seems to have the weed cornered at the close as he chases it with a lawn mower.

Tumbleweed Tempos (Very Good)

Univ. (2303) Name Band Musical 15 mins.

A few years ago Spade Cooley's orchestra consisted of five or six non-descript musicians playing hill-billy music. Today, however, Cooley's organization has about 25 excellent musicians, still wearing glorified cowboy attire and, believe, it or not, the outfit includes a harp, a cello and a xylophone! Regardless of its orchestral combination the outfit and its accompanying entertainers provide 15 minutes of solid entertainment very little of which follows the cowboy atmosphere. Ella Mae Morse, Smokey Rogers, the Mercer Brothers, and Tex Williams are featured vocalists and dancers performing. Good for any program.

NAVED Regional

The National Association of Visual Education Dealers will hold its first southeastern regional meeting at the Biltmore Hotel, in Atlanta from Jan. 31 through Feb. 1, Regional Director E. E. ("Jack") Carter announced this week. The meeting will open with a dinner on Jan. 31 with the following day's program devoted to discussion and lectures.

Hi-Li (Interesting)

Col. (8803) Sport Reel 9½ mins.

Something unfamiliar to most North Americans, the game of jai-alai is an extremely fast combination of handball and bone-breaking spills on the cement court. Bill Stern's narration, with the help of two expert players, describes the fundamentals of the game. Then the slow-motion camera analyzes a round of play at a Florida stadium, followed by normal-action shots which barely catch the incredible speed of the ball as it is flung against the wall of the court. The only drawback to this short is the narrator's enthusiasm, which is not in keeping with the game as shown.

Society Mugs (Fair)

Col. (8431) All-Star Comedy 16 mins.

When her husband decides to go fishing on the day of a big party, Mrs. Allen calls a date bureau to furnish two escorts. Her call reaches exterminator Shemp Howard by mistake, and he arrives at the party with his assistant, prepared to go to work on the rodents. At this point the party is reduced to chaos, as the two boys wreck the house and injure the guests in their line of duty. Gag situations abound in this short; that not all come off is not to be blamed on a lack of effort on Howard's part.

Double Dribble (Excellent)

RKO (64,114) Disney Cartoon 7 mins.

Walt Disney, with the aid of Goofy, herewith takes the great American sport of basketball for a ride. Poly U. and University U. meet on the court for the battle of the century, with a majority of rabid fans on hand to cheer U.U. to victory, but only one enthusiast behind P.U. The gun sounds, and the game is on! Amidst tremendous cheering, the U.U. team seems headed for certain victory. Fouls are committed all over the court, and the P.U. coach is forced to put in his last player. Through a lucky break, this poor shrimp is thrown bodily through the basket just in time to win the game. This Technicolor short is a riot.

Nobody's Children (Excellent)

20th-Fox March of Time 17 mins.

This is perhaps the most exploitable of all the recent MOT subjects, many of which have been exploited to the hilt by smart showmen. It tells the story of the adoption of babies from a legitimate point of view and also from the Black Market standpoint, which seems to be flourishing, because childless couples must wait about two years to take the baby of their choice into their homes from legitimate sources, and then must wait another year to obtain final adoption papers. The long delay has caused illegal rings of professional men, including some doctors and lawyers, to provide unwanted youngsters to couples, sometimes with disastrous results. The film is very well produced, directed and acted by its semi-professional cast. It offers almost unlimited opportunities for smart showmen to exploit it to a fare-thee-well. Contacts with any local branch of a Community Fund, the Red Cross, Child Welfare organizations, civic officials, etc., should start the ball rolling.

So You Want to Save Your Hair (Fair)

WB (3401) Vitaphone Variety 10 mins.

Joe McDoakes, the perpetual fall-guy, becomes convinced that he is losing his hair, so he dashes off to his barber. Not satisfied with the advice he receives, Joe tries other barbers, only to discover each has his pet remedy. Fed up, McDoakes then reads a book on the subject, to no avail, and then tries a Hair Institute. After a mechanical hair-restorer is put to work on him, Joe ends up wearing a toupee to conceal his now completely bald head. The subject is reminiscent of Pete Smith, yet lacks that producer's comic touch.

Frontier Frolic (Good)

Univ. (2301) Name Band Musical 15 mins.

This is a fast-moving musical with a western setting of a Las Vegas Dude ranch and features Bob Wills and his Texas Playboys, the Modernaires, the McKinney Sisters, Pat Starling and Tommy Duncan. Musical numbers sung and danced by various members of the cast all have a western flavor and include, Texas Playboy Rag, La Cucaracha, I Betcha My Heart, San Antonio Rose, Coffee Five, Doughnuts Five, and a finale of Goodbye, Liza Jane in which the entire group take part. Good addition to a program which contains a serious dramatic feature.

Bowling Fever (Fair)

RKO (74,303) Sportscope 8 mins.

Photographed in Chicago's Pla-Mor alleys, this reel endeavors to show that bowling is not confined to adults alone, but that the youngsters also take great interest. Mrs. Catherine Fellmeth is shown imparting her championship bowling technique to youthful fans, and Mr. and

Bogart-Warners Sign New 15-Year Contract

Marking the longest-term agreement on record for an actor, a new 15-year contract has been concluded between Humphrey Bogart and Warner Bros. Although there are no options, California law permits Warners to enforce it against Bogart for seven years, after which the actor can leave the studio if he so desires.

Terms of the pact were not officially revealed, but it was reported that Bogart will make two pictures the first year and one picture a year thereafter, with the specification that he may make one picture away from Warners. Bogart's last contract with the company, signed in 1939, expired in the fall.

First assignment under the new deal is "Dark Passage," in which Bogart is currently playing opposite his wife, Lauren Bacall. His next film will be "Treasures of the Sierra Madre."

Murray Added to 'Noon'; Hayden Honored

Forbes Murray, veteran character actor, has been cast in the role of a United States Congressman in "Blaze of Noon," Paramount's epic of aviation which John Farrow is directing. Murray recently completed a role in MGM's "Beginning or the End."

Sterling Hayden, also in the film's cast, was last week awarded the nation's third highest combat medal, the Silver Star, in recognition of his undercover work as a Marine attached to the OSS.

RKO Jan.-Feb. Schedule

Nine features are scheduled to go before the cameras at RKO Radio in January and February. Starting in January will be "If You Knew Susie," "Tycoon," "Indian Summer," "Under the Tonto Rim," "Angel Face" and "Memory of Love." The three films set for February production are "Alice Adams," "Miracle of the Bells" and "Father Dunne's Newsboys Home."

Buys Moss Hart Play

Motion picture rights to the new Moss Hart play, "Christopher Blake," have been acquired by Warner Bros. Under terms of the deal, payment will be made by Warners on a percentage basis, with details still to be worked out. The screen version of the play is expected to be released in 1948.

5 in Preparation at PRC

"Hollywood Hi," "Girls Camp," "Mattawan," the balance of the Eddie Dean-Al La Rue-Al St. John films, and the fourth and fifth films in the Philo Vance series are in preparation for early 1947 production at PRC.

STUDIO ROUNDUP

44 Pictures Before the Cameras at Hollywood Studios; 20th-Fox, Warners Top List With 6 Each, While MGM, UA Tie With 5; Columbia, U-I Next With 4 Films Each

As in all other situations, the Christmas spirit had pervaded the studios late last week, so that scarcely any announcements regarding production were forthcoming. However, those pictures in for long shooting schedules—such as the four at Columbia, the five each at MGM and United Artists (not counting the Selznick picture which is to be released by his own organization), and the six at Warners—are all going strong. Three are still in work at RKO Radio, and Republic, by starting a new one last week, now has two pictures on the sound stages. Six are still before the cameras at 20th-Fox, and Paramount has three going, having finished one last week. Screen Guild and PRC have each started one. Now add Monogram's three and Universal's four, and the total is 44 pictures which were in production at week's end.

Wind-Ups at Columbia

The latest in the "Rusty" series, and the "Bulldog Drummond" pictures were finished this week, leaving Columbia with four still in work. To these, Grant Mitchell was given an important supporting role in the Sam Bischoff production "The Corpse Came C.O.D.," while Leslie Brooks also joined the cast. Vernon Steele was added to the cast of the Sidney Buchman production "Assigned to Treasury." Robert Young, star and co-producer of the Technicolor western which Cavalier Productions is making for Columbia release, announced a two-day lay-off for the 125 members of the company to be able to fly to Hollywood for Christmas holidays. "The Lady From Shanghai" picture going strong released news about the realistic fist fight sequence between Orson Welles and Ted di Corsia requiring the services of a company first-aid man.

First background footage shot along the Cote d'Azur for an American motion picture since the war has been received by Producer Casey Robinson. This will be used for background material to incorporate in the Irene Dunne starrer "No Sad Songs For Me."

Several assignments were handed out. . . . Richard Goldstone was given the producer's berth for the musical "When A Girl's Beautiful," based on an original story by Howard J. Green, from which Henry Moritz will write the screen treatment. Lawrence Watkin was signed to do a polish job on the screenplay of "Keeper of the Bees," film adaptation of the Gene Stratton Porter novel which will be produced by John Haggott. And Arthur Morton has been assigned to write the background score for "Millie's Daughter," which Sidney Salkow directed with Gladys George and Gay Nelson in the top spots.

RKO Shooting Three

Mike Brandon, William Conrad, Oliver Blake and Wallace Scott have all been cast in the RKO picture "Out of the Past," which stars Robert Mitchum and Jane Greer under Jacques Tourneur's direction.

Renie will design the glamorous wardrobe Joan Davis will wear in her co-starring role with Eddie Cantor in "If You Knew Susie." Miss Davis, as a former successful stage star, will wear more than 25 different costumes for the role, climaxing in a colorful style show in which she is featured.

MGM Signs LeRoy

Mervyn LeRoy signed a long-term contract with MGM for his exclusive services as a director. He returns to the lot where he filmed "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," "Random Harvest" and "Madame Curie." No assignment has been set for LeRoy, although he is scheduled to report after the first of the year.

Director Gregory LaCava has completed the dramatic sequences of "To Kiss and to Keep" and the reins of the film have been turned over to David Miller who will direct the dance sequences. Gene Kelly and Marie McDonald are teamed in one of four to be included in the production. Remaining three include Kelly with a trained dog, a Pied Piper number starring him with a dozen youngsters and a waltz with Jean Adair, 64-year-old grandma of the picture.

Leslie and Stanley Harr, twins, have been assigned roles in "The Rich, Full Life," cast of which is topped by Elizabeth Taylor, George Murphy and Mary Astor.

Spencer Tracy is appearing in an extensive series of tests to be used in the selection of cast members for the picturization of Sinclair Lewis' best-seller "Cass Timberlane." The film will have 26 principal roles, a record number.

Dick Simmons has been given a new long-term acting contract.

New Color Development

New natural color plate process has been developed by Paramount. The transparency department has purchased several three-color separation cameras in order to obtain full color control in production of revolutionary natural color stereopticons developed by the studio. This is the result of five years' research and experiment, and is the most important improvement in color photography since 1940. Farciot Edouart heads the transparency department.

Kitty Irish was signed by Producer Hal Wallis for a role in "I Walk Alone," with Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas, Wendell Corey and Kristine Miller heading the cast. Miss Irish was discovered through an advertising placard, brought to Wallis' attention and okayed for the part by Byron Haskin the director.

Scoring of "Golden Earrings," Ray Milland-Marlene Dietrich starrer, started with Victor Young conducting his score. The film was directed by Mitchell Leisen.

WB Art Directors Busy

With the signing of John Hughes as art director on "Whiplash," forthcoming Dane Clark starrer, a total of 11 art directors are at work on 10 films. Lew Seiler will direct "Whiplash."

Milton Sperling, head of United States Pictures, signed Sidney Sheldon to develop the screenplay for "Dream Street," from the Robert Sylvester novel about New York and Hollywood. Property will be filmed in 1947. At the same time an announcement was made that USP had purchased "Nothing But the Night," murder mystery by Roy Huggins, for the company's 1947 production schedule.

Third generation of an acting family, 4-year-old Dennis Donley, was cast in "Night Unto Night," Ronald Reagan-Viveca Lindfors starrer.

Jean De Briac, character actor, goes into a supporting role in "The Unfaithful," being directed by Vincent Sherman and produced by Jerry Wald with Ann Sheridan, Zachary Scott and Lew Ayres co-starred.

PRC Filming Two

Damian O'Flynn and Clara Blandick have been added to the cast of the third Philo Vance picture, in which Will Wright plays the famed sleuth. William Beaudine directs and Howard Welsch produces. Bill Beaudine, Jr. has been made assistant director on this film. Father and son will now handle direction chores together.

Glorian Marlen has been announced by Jerry Thomas, producer of "Border Feud," the second of the Al LaRue-Al St. John westerns, as the leading lady. Ray Taylor will direct.

Republic's Many Sets

Russ Kimball, director of Republic's art department, has been designing over 70 sets for use in three top-budgeted films. Major number were needed for the Nelson Eddy-Ilona Massey starrer, which required 35, most of them large and all requiring a great deal of research. An entire street, representing the Russian Fort Ross, was built, another set representing the interior of a Russian cathedral, while a Russian Junk of the period cost $90,000. "Gallant Man" required 27 different sets, including reproductions of the Santa Anita race-track and stand, the Venice Amusement pier, an elaborate Bel-Air home which cost $35,000, and a completely stocked drug store. Eighteen different sets were used for the third major picture, "Wyoming."

Adele Mara and Stephanie Bachelor get the leading feminine roles in "Lightnin' Strikes Twice," an original story by Robert Bellem, adapted by Royle Cole, and Lesley Selander has been assigned to direct.

"Song of the Golden West," the next Roy Rogers starrer, has been given a February starting date.

20th-Fox Making 5

"Captain From Castile," the Tyrone Power starrer which has been shooting at Morelia, Mexico, has added Stella Inda and Ramon Sanches, two of Mexico's outstanding screen personalities, to the cast. Henry King, who is directing, will scout new location sites via studio plane. King will fly to Acapulco to look for locations along the coast for the final month of shooting in January. Cesar Romero, Alan Mowbray and Harry Carter have left for Mexico for their roles in the picture.

Director Walter Lang started shooting the "Kokomo" number for the Technicolor musical "Mother Wore Tights." The routine is one of six production numbers in the Betty Grable starrer and will feature Betty and Dan Dailey in a four-minute dance specialty.

Filming continues on "It's Only Human" the John Payne, Maureen O'Hara and Edmund Gwenn starrer, now that the cast and crew have returned to the studio. Director George Seaton and William Perlberg, the producer, are busy keeping the picture on schedule.

Monogram Activities

Ferike Boros and William Edmonds have been added to the cast of "High Conquest," currently being produced and directed by Irving Allen. Film co-stars Anna Lee, Gilbert Roland and Warren Douglas.

After shooting background scenes in Louisiana, Producer Lindsley Parsons returned to the studio.

Jimmy Wakely, western singing star, signed a five-year contract as a recording artist for Capitol Records.

U-I Continues With 4

Jack Brooks, who wrote the lyrics for Hoagy Carmichael's Old Buttermilk Sky, was set to work with Walter Schumann in turning out a number for the Abbott & Costello current picture, "Buck Privates Come Home."

Frank Skinner was assigned as musical director of "The Egg and I" and will work with Walter Schumann on the underscoring and directing of the Deanna Durbin picture, "I'll Be Yours."

Other two films in work are "Time Out Of Mind," with Phyllis Calvert, Robert Hutton and Ella Raines, and the Sam Wood Production "Ivy" with Joan Fontaine, Patric Knowles, Herbert Marshall and Richard Ney. Robert Siodmak directs the former and Sam Wood handles the direction on his own production.

'Heart' for Cummings

"The Glass Heart," an original by Marty Holland, has been purchased by United California Productions as a starring vehicle for Robert Cummings, according to President Eugene Frenke. The picture will probably go into production following UCP's initial venture, "Bad Guy," which gets the green light in April. "The Glass Heart" will be produced by Frenke and Philip Yordan, associates of Cummings in the newly formed company.

'Father' Budget Upped

Success of the recent three-week world premiere run of "Bringing Up Father" at the Laffmovie theatre, New York, has prompted Monogram President Steve Broidy to add $25,000 to the present advertising appropriation on the film. Barney Gerard produced, and Eddie Cline directed.

Wallis 1947 Budget Set at $8,500,000

Following conferences in New York with Joseph Hazen and Paramount executives, Hal Wallis in Hollywood last week announced plans for his 1947 production schedule which has been budgeted at $8,500,000. His current production is "I Walk Alone" (formerly "Deadlock") with an all-Wallis cast headed by Lizabeth Scott, Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas, Wendell Corey, Kristine Miller and George Rigaud. Byron Haskin directs.

The first film to go into production next year is "Be Still, My Love," a suspense drama starring Barbara Stanwyck and slated for a late January start. In April Wallis will leave Hollywood for England to produce "For Her to See," which will be a Paramount production starring Ray Milland and an English-American cast. In the fall he will film "House of Mist" and a Technicolor film, probably "Lola."

Monogram Sets 3 for Start in January

First production to go before the cameras in 1947 at Monogram will be "Tragic Symphony," based on the life of Tchaikowsky. The picture, to be made by Symphony Films, under the production reins of Barney Glazer and Nat W. Finston, will be released by Allied Artists, new company formed to handle high-budget pictures. Starting date is January 6.

Also set for January production are "Brooklyn Buckaroos," featuring the Bowery Boys, and a Johnny Mack Brown special.

Set for Next Vance

Alan Curtis and Frank Jenks have been signed by PRC for the top roles in the next Philo Vance mystery film, soon to go before the cameras. William Beaudine will direct the picture for Producer Ben Stoloff, from a screenplay by Robert E. Kent.

To Portray Male Lead

James Brown has been signed to portray the male lead in PRC's "The Pay-Off," which James Flood will direct for Producer Marvin Stahl. Opposite Brown in the female lead will be Sheila Ryan, who will report to the studio after her recovery from an attack of influenza.

WB Buys Siodmak Story

"Strange Desire," original psychological melodrama by Curt Siodmak, has been bought by Warner Bros. and placed on Jerry Wald's production schedule. Siodmak will do the screenplay.

Seiler on 'Whiplash'

Lew Seiler has been assigned by Warner Bros. to direct "Whiplash," in which Dane Clark will star. This will be Seiler's first picture since returning to the Warner contract list. William Jacobs will produce.

Richard Baer Joins WB

Richard Baer, who staged the modern version of Shakespeare's "Macbeth" now being presented at the El Patio Theatre in Hollywood, has been signed by Warner Bros.

HOLLYWOOD

Hellinger Signs Dassin To Direct 'Brute Force'

Mark Hellinger's third production for Universal-International release will be "Brute Force," which will have Burt Lancaster as one of its stars. Jules Dassin will direct. Hellinger signed Dassin on a free-lance basis immediately after the director obtained his release from MGM. "Brute Force" will be Dassin's second production for Hellinger.

The screenplay will be written by Richard Brooks, who also did the treatment of "Swell Guy" for the producer, from an original story by Robert Patterson, columnist on the San Francisco Examiner. Production is scheduled to start early in February.

Vacation for DeWolfe

Billy DeWolfe, who plays the comedy lead in Paramount's "Blue Skies," left Hollywood last week for New Orleans for newspaper interviews and radio appearances in connection with the opening of the film there. From New Orleans he went to Miami where "Blue Skies" opened on Christmas Day in four theatres in Miami and Miami Beach. DeWolfe will remain in Miami for a vacation and will return to Hollywood some time in January.

Jane Novak Returns

Jane Novak, old-time western star, will see her name on the screen for the first time in 15 years when the Hal Wallis Technicolor production, "Desert Fury," is released by Paramount. The former leading lady of William S. Hart, Tom Mix and Richard Dix recently came out of retirement to play a role in the film. She will be given main title billing with John Hodiak, Lizabeth Scott and Burt Lancaster. Jane is the sister of Eva Novak, another silent film favorite.

Albuquerque Model

A 10x16-foot reproduction of the city of Albuquerque, N. M., in 1875 will be constructed by Clarion Productions for use in filming "Albuquerque," Paramount color release to co-star Randolph Scott, Arleen Whelan and George "Gabby" Hayes. Photographs and material are being gathered to make the reproduction as authentic as possible. Director Ray Enright will map camera angles and scene action from the model before production starts in January.

Start Six in January

Production pace at the Warner Bros. studio will be stepped up in January with the start of six new pictures in the first 30 days of 1947. Group includes "Voice of the Turtle," "Whiplash," "One Last Fling," "The Unsuspected," "The Wallflower," and "Two Guys From Texas."

WB Buys 'Silver River'

"Silver River," an original story by Stephen Longstreet, has been bought by Warner Bros. Longstreet, who also wrote "Stallion Road," just completed by Warners, will do the screenplay of the new story, a historical western with a Nevada setting. Owen Crump is slated to produce.

STUDIO NEWS & PROGRAM NOTES

Ann Sothern Opposite Knox in 'Indian Summer'; Viveca Lindfors Signs New Warner Star Contract

Adolphe Menjou has been assigned an important role in MGM's Clark Gable starrer, "The Hucksters," which will go into production early in January. Jack Conway will direct for Producer Arthur Hornblow.

"Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back" was placed on the schedule of Venture Pictures as the second in its series of Bulldog Drummond features to be produced for Columbia release. First of the series is now in production with Australian star Ron Randell and Anita Louise in the leads.

Darryl Hickman, Robert Dover and Thomas Frazier have been added to the cast of "Black Gold," Monogram's Kentucky Derby story now in production with Anthony Quinn starred. Phil Karlson directs with Jeffrey Bernerd producing.

Mildred and Jimmy Mulcay, known as "Mr. and Mrs. Harmonica," will make their first screen appearance in Paramount's 36-star "Variety Girl." They were signed to do a harmonica comedy skit with Bob Hope in the spectacular musical directed by George Marshall.

Ann Sothern has been borrowed from MGM to co-star with Alexander Knox in RKO's "Indian Summer," a sentimental comedy by Boris Ingster, who also will direct. Filming starts early in January, with Michel Kraike producing. In addition to co-starring, Knox also will work with Ingster on the screenplay.

Phil Ford has been assigned to direct Republic's "The Finger Woman," modern melodrama scheduled to go before the cameras early next month. Picture will follow "Lightin' Strikes Twice" on the schedule of Associate Producer William J. O'Sullivan.

Paul Cavanaugh, Lumsden Hare and Gavin Muir were signed by Director Sam Wood and Producer William Cameron Menzies for top feature roles in "Ivy," which stars Joan Fontaine, Patric Knowles, Herbert Marshall and Richard Ney.

Jennifer Jones and Joseph Cotten will be co-starred by Selznick Productions in the Robert Nathan novel, "Portrait of Jenny," which David Hempstead will produce and William Dieterle direct. Miss Jones will play the title role, and Cotten will enact the part of the painter who loves her.

Alan Marston was signed by 20th-Fox to play one of his direct lineal forebears, "Alan Marston, Lord of Marston Moor," in "Forever Amber," Linda Darnell-Cornel Wilde starrer being filmed in Technicolor.

Viveca Lindfors has been given a new long-term starring contract by Warners, as a result of her work in "Night Unto Night," in which the Swedish actress is currently before the cameras with Ronald Reagan. Don Siegel directs, and Owen Crump produces.

Jerry Bergen, radio comic, has been added to the cast of MGM's "The Pirate." He will portray a member of the band of itinerant actors headed by Gene Kelly. The Technicolor film, with Vincente Minnelli directing, begins production early in January. Arthur Freed will produce.

Irene Dunne will wear her most lavish screen wardrobe to date in the Columbia picture, "No Sad Songs For Me," in which she plays a Boston socialite. Miss Dunne also will sing for the first time on the screen in several years.

Eugene Borden, one of Hollywood's most versatile actors, was added to the cast of Paramount's "Saigon," in the colorful role of a French riverboat captain in Indo-China. The part is important to the dramatic action of the Alan Ladd-Veronica Lake co-starrer which Leslie Fenton directs for Producer P. J. Wolfson.

Benay Venuta, Broadway star, embarked on a screen career when she was signed by Eagle-Lion for a lead role in "Repeat Performance," starring Joan Leslie and Louis Hayward.

Richard Wallace has been signed by RKO Producer Stephen Ames to direct the forthcoming Technicolor epic, "Tycoon," which stars John Wayne with Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Anthony Quinn. Much of the drama will be filmed in Mexico City.

"Sea of Darkness," unpublished novel by Gerald Adams, has been purchased by Republic and assigned to Alfred Santell to produce and direct. Modern drama of deep-sea divers will spotlight two top male stars.

With Burt Lancaster as one of the stars and Jules Dassin as director, Mark Hellinger announced "Brute Force" as his third production for Universal-International release. This will be Lancaster's second picture for Hellinger, his first having been "The Killers."

Warner Anderson was cast in the role of a doctor in MGM's "Song of the Thin Man." William Powell and Myrna Loy are starred in the newest picture of the wisecracking detective series, with Keenan Wynn, Jayne Meadows and Leon Ames also featured. Edward Buzzell will direct and Nat Perrin produce.

Richard Loo, Chinese stage and screen actor, has been signed by Producer Sidney Buchman for the role of a Shanghai police commissioner in Columbia's "Assigned to Treasury," Dick Powell-Signe Hasso starrer.

Ken Niles, radio announcer, has landed a choice dramatic role in RKO's "Out of the Past," Robert Mitchum-Jane Greer starrer. In the screen version of Geoffrey Homes' thriller, "Build My Gallows High," Niles plays an innocent lawyer who becomes involved in several murders.

Ross Ford will have the role of the bellboy in the Ann Sheridan starrer, "The Unfaithful," which Vincent Sherman is directing with Jerry Wald as producer for Warners.

Lt. Theodore Geisel, expert on the Japanese, who was attached during the war to the U. S. Army Department of Information and Education, is with his wife putting the finishing touches on RKO Radio's tentatively titled "Kamikaze."

The picture will include confiscated Japanese film never before seen by the public. More than a million feet of this film were viewed in selecting the footage. Theron Warth is producing under Sid Rogell's executive supervision.

THE BOX OFFICE SLANT

The Lone Wolf in Mexico

Columbia Mystery 70 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A light weight addition to the Lone Wolf series that is not as good as some of its predecessors, but which will provide sufficient entertainment for mystery fans who like the casual touch.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Good enough for any double bill program but lacks sufficient drawing power as a lead feature.

Cast: Gerald Mohr, Sheila Ryan, Jacqueline de Wit, Eric Blore, Nestor Paiva, John Gallaudet, Bernard Nedell, Winifred Harris, Peter Brocco, Alan Edwards, Fred Godoy. Credits: Screenplay by Maurice Tombragel and Martin Goldsmith from a story by Phil Magee, based upon a work by Louis Joseph Vance. Produced by Sanford Cummings. Directed by D. Ross Lederman. Director of photography, Allen Siegler.

Plot: The Lone Wolf and his valet visit Mexico City on vacation and run into a couple of murders, two jewel thefts and other illegal activities with the Lone Wolf the chief suspect. To clear himself and to aid a woman who has become embroiled with crooked gamblers, he and the valet contrive a scheme with the roulette wheel of a gambling house, force the real crooks to flee, assist in their capture and clear themselves.

Comment: While this is not the best Lone Wolf story produced it is good enough to fill the bill for which it was intended—as a supporting feature on double bill programs. Production values are fair, direction is the same and the cast do just about all right. Gerald Mohr as the suave, polished Michael Lanyard has an engaging personality, a nice smile and a tendency to over-act. Sheila Ryan is excellent in a not too difficult or sympathetic part and Eric Blore plays Eric Blore. Nestor Paivo as Mexico City's chief of police is perhaps the best part in the film with another bow to Jacqueline de Wit. Okay as a supporting feature on double bills.

Alias Mr. Twilight

Columbia Drama 69 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Good, light entertainment. Should please average audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Satisfactory supporting fare for double-bill programs.

Cast: Michael Duane, Trudy Marshall, Lloyd Corrigan, Rosalind Ivan, Alan Bridge, Gi-Gi Perreau, Jeff York, Peter Brocco, Torben Meyer, Olaf Hytten. Credits: Screenplay by Brenda Weisberg with additional dialogue by Malcolm Stuart Boylan from an original story by Arthur E. Orloff. Produced by John Haggott. Directed by John Sturges. Photography, Vincent Farrar.

Plot: Lloyd Corrigan, kindly indulgent grandfather and guardian of five-year-old Gi-Gi Perreau, turns out to be a clever confidence man involved in several swindles. Gi-Gi's nurse, Trudy Marshall, is in love with police lieutenant Michael Duane, whose specialty is swindlers. Corrigan's cousin, Rosalind Ivan, knows of Corrigan's real source of income and threatens to have the child taken from him unless payment of a large sum is made to her. Corrigan arranges a gigantic swindle in which he involves his cousin so that they both can be caught by police and sent to prison. He also schemes to have the youngster adopted by Trudy and Michael Duane, who marry.

Comment: While this picture carefully goes into detail about the way various swindles are manipulated, thus possibly serving as a classroom for prospective crooks in the audience, it does provide an hour or so of good, light entertainment which should please average audiences. Production and direction are nicely handled from a somewhat verbose script which lets the film drag in spots, but as a whole it is well enough done. Lloyd Corrigan is thoroughly convincing as the confidence man and almost dominates the picture. Trudy Marshall and Michael Duane have little to do, but do it well. And young Gi-Gi Perreau is a pleasant, pretty child. "Alias Mr. Twilight" will do satisfactorily as a supporting feature on double-bill programs.

A Diary for Timothy

English Films Documentary 40 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A wistful and sometimes almost poetic argument for an improved world. More than just another documentary it carries an impassioned argument against war and should entertain and inform intelligent audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Problematical. With a musical or comedy as a lead feature it might do okay.

Cast: The people of Great Britain, with a scene from Hamlet by John Gielgud and piano music by Dame Myra Hess. Orchestral music by Richard Addinsell, played by the London Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Muir Mathieson. Credits: Made by the Crown Film Unit. Produced by Basil Wright. Directed by Humphrey Jennings. Commentary by E. M. Forster and narrated by Michael Redgrave. Photography, Fred Gamage.

Plot: Timothy James Jenkins was born on 3 September 1944. This is the story of what happened to the world into which Timothy was born, as told to him by the narrator (supposedly his soldier father). The narration continues through the first six months of Timothy's peaceful life, surrounded by the war and the hopes of the British for a new and better world. At the conclusion, Timothy's dad poses a question, "What will your generation do toward eliminating the causes of war?"

Comment: "A Diary for Timothy" combines the factual approach of the newsreel with a vivid presentation of the plain "guts" with which Great Britain took a terrible beating during the days of the buzz-bomb "blitz." The film is difficult to describe, because it is a film with a "message," one that hits home and might well be seen and heard by everyone. It is solemn but it has its light touches. It is always in good taste. What its chances are commercially is anyone's guess. Booked with a musical or comedy it might do satisfactorily.

Stars Over Texas

PRC Western with Songs 57 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Good western entertainment with a couple of new plot twists.

BOX-OFFICE SLANTS: Eddie Dean's rising popularity should bring it up to as good, if not better, than its predecessors in the series.

Cast: Eddie Dean, Roscoe Ates, Shirley Patterson, Lee Bennett, Lee Roberts, Kermit Maynard, Jack O'Shea, Hal Smith, Matty Roubert, Carl Mathews, Bill Fawcett and the Sunshine Boys. Credits: Original screenplay by Frances Kavanaugh. Associate producer, Jerry Thomas. Produced and directed by Robert Emmett Tansey. Photography, Ernest Miller. Original songs by Eddie Dean with Hal Blair and Glen Strange.

Plot Eddie Dean and his pals, Roscoe Ates and Lee Bennett, secretly representing the Cattlemen's Association in its investigation of cattle rustling, deliver a herd to Lee Roberts' ranch where they are signed for by Roberts' sister, Shirley Patterson. Bennett looks so much like the ranch foreman (also Bennett) that he substitutes for him to get evidence against rustlers who are trying to ruin Roberts. Dean, Ates and Bennett eventually clean up the rustlers.

Comment: The double-identity twist is a rather new one in western plots but it's a welcome addition, adding a bit of zest to a tired plot. Dean is good, sings three songs well, acquits himself ably in several spots and slings guns with the best of them. Ates supplies a bit of comedy and Bennett and Miss Patterson are involved in a tepid romance. The picture is good light western entertainment with not too much to think about and, with Eddie Dean's rising popularity, should do as well as its predecessors in the series.

Humoresque

Warner Bros. Drama 126 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A stirring, emotional drama that will appeal to all lovers of melodramatic art. For the Joan Crawford followers there is a performance by her that they will never forget; that of a wealthy dipsomaniac. The Garfield fans will find their favorite at his best and Oscar Levant will also entertain all those who enjoy his humor and his piano-playing.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A natural for the houses that cater to patrons of dramatic fare, with the name-draw of Joan Crawford and John Garfield and the title "Humoresque" to help make it a huge box-office success.

Cast: Joan Crawford, John Garfield, Oscar Levant, J. Carrol Naish, Joan Chandler, Tom D'Andrea, Peggy Knudsen, Ruth Nelson, Craig Stevens, Paul Cavanagh, Richard Gaines, John Abbott, Bobby Blake, Tommy Cook, Don McGuire, Fritz Leiber, Peg La-Centra, Nestor Paiva, Richard Walsh. Credits: Produced by Jerry Wald. Directed by Jean Negulesco. Screenplay by Clifford Odets and Zachary Gold. Based on a story by Fannie Hurst. Photography, Ernest Haller.

Plot: Told in retrospect, this is the story of a poor violinist and his desire for a musical career. He is introduced to a beautiful woman who tries to forget her unhappy marriage by sponsoring young talent and by drinking to excess. He resents her efforts, even though they further his career, and his affair with her causes an open break with his family. On the eve of his greatest concert, realizing he needs more than she can give him, the woman drowns herself. In his sorrow, he returns to his family.

Comment: Distinguished by exceptionally splendid performances and the finest in production elements, with the name-draw of Joan Crawford and John Garfield for marquee strength, this picture should be a natural in houses that cater to lovers of dramatic fare. The box-office lure of the Crawford name alone should insure plenty of shekels at the ticket windows, but when that is added to the Garfield draw and the film's familiar title, there is little chance that this one can miss. Music lovers, too, will get their share of entertainment, for there are 23 classical numbers, many of them played by a full symphony of 110 pieces, and several popular numbers. Only those patrons who do not go in for heavy, melodramatic fare may not be entirely pleased. There are few light moments in the entire 126 minutes of running time. Excellent casting in supporting roles is another mark in its favor. J. Carrol Naish makes a convincing, believable person of Garfield's father, Ruth Nelson is splendid as his mother and Oscar Levant human, cynical and very able as his friend and accompanist. There are few satisfactory superlatives one can use for the performance Miss Crawford turns in. It must suffice to say that if she was worthy of the Academy Award for the excellence of her work last year, there should be little doubt about her being in the running this year. In the role of the young violinist, Garfield turns in a sensitive, stirring delineation and Joan Chandler is very attractive and very capable as his boyhood sweetheart. For the finest in direction and production, credit goes to Jean Negulesco and Jerry Wald, respectively.

The Man I Love

Warner Bros. Drama 97 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Ida Lupino not only gives her usual fine performance but also vocalizes in this modern drama that has most of the elements necessary to entertain average audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Title, which comes from the George Gershwin song, plus the name draw and the quality of the picture, should make this a good box-office attraction.

Cast: Ida Lupino, Robert Alda, Andrea King, Bruce Bennett, Martha Vickers, Don McGuire, Tony Romano, Alan Hale, Dolores Moran, John Ridgely, Warren Douglas, Craig Stevens, William Edmunds, James Dobbs. Credits: Produced by Arnold Albert. Directed by Raoul Walsh. Screenplay by Catherine Turney. From a novel by Maritta Wolff. Photography, Sid Hickox.

Plot: This is the story of two sisters and their weakling brother, and of the trouble they all get into because of a small-time racketeer with designs on one of the sisters. The brother lands in jail and is bailed out. There are fights, blackmail and tragedy before all their problems are solved.

Comment: With the sure hand of Raoul Walsh handling the direction and Ida Lupino, Robert Alda and Bruce Bennett teamed in top roles, this modern drama turns out to be an entertaining film for average audiences. Not only will they enjoy the work of the cast and the direction, but also other elements. They'll like the background music taken from the title song, The Man I Love, that old Gershwin favorite, and they'll hear other oldies like Liza, Bill, and Why Was I Born? To their pleasant surprise they'll discover that these numbers are displayed vocally by Ida Lupino who does an exceptionally fine job with the presentation. This, aside from the fact that she turns in her usual splendid performance. Main theme of the picture revolves around Miss Lupino and the two men in her life, both played excellently by Bruce Bennett and Robert Alda. In sub-plots Andrea King does very well in the role of a soldier's wife and John Ridgely exceptionally good as her battle-fatigued husband. Martha Vickers, Dolores Moran and Don McGuire are good also in roles that tie in with the main theme. The fact that the song numbers mentioned above were written by George Gershwin and Jerome Kern is information that should be used in exploiting the picture. Entire production was in charge of Arnold Albert.

Heldorado

Republic Western with Songs 70 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT (Family) Lively western with pleasing songs and plenty of action in the modern manner.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Roy Rogers' pictures have been fine and this one is a welcome addition to the series. Should do well everywhere.

Cast: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes, Dale Evans, Paul Harvey, Barry Mitchell, John Bagni, John Phillips, James Taggart, Rex Lease, Steve Darrell, Doye O'Dell, LeRoy Mason, Charles Williams, Eddie Acuff, Bob Nolan and the Sons of the Pioneers, and Trigger. Credits: Associate producer, Edward J. White. Directed by William Witney. Original screenplay by Gerald Geraghty and Julian Zimet. Photographed by William Bradford.

Plot: During the celebration of Annual Heldorado Week at Las Vegas, Ranger Captain Roy Rogers is enlisted by the local sheriff to aid him in discovering who is behind the passing of large sums of black market money over the gaming tables. Dale Evans has been made honorary deputy sheriff and to Roy's annoyance also tries to solve the mystery. One man is murdered and danger threatens others before Roy, Gabby Hayes and Miss Evans frustrate a plot to pass a half million dollars more in thousand dollar bills, and also find the murderer.

Comment: Republic seems to have hit upon a happy formula in the last few Roy Rogers films, placing the locale of his stories in the west of today, rather than in the "old" west of Indians, etc. This story takes place during the Annual Heldorado week celebration at Las Vegas and includes actual scenes of the parade, rodeo and other festivities with Rogers, his horse Trigger, Dale Evans, Gabby Hayes and Bob Nolan and the Sons of the Pioneers taking active part in the celebration. Interior scenes have been given the best in production values, the script is artfully contrived and the direction keeps action moving at a fast pace throughout. The Rogers fans will find plenty to be amused and entertained about in "Heldorado," and those who can take their westerns or leave them alone, also will be plentifully entertained. Should do well everywhere.

Mr. District Attorney

Columbia Mystery 81 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Designated a mystery, this isn't mysterious enough to hold the interest of any but the less discriminating.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do satisfactorily in average situations.

Cast: Dennis O'Keefe, Adolphe Menjou, Marguerite Chapman, Michael O'Shea, George Coulouris, Jeff Donnell, Steven Geray, Ralph Morgan, John Kellogg, Charles Trowbridge, Frank Reicher. Credits: Directed by Robert B. Sinclair. Screenplay by Ian McLellan Hunter. Adaptation by Ben Markson. Story by Sidney Marshall. Based on the radio program created by Phillips H. Lord. Photography, Bert Glennon. Produced by Samuel Bischoff.

Plot: A young, struggling lawyer is hired by a district attorney because he overhears him talk about justice and honesty. While on the job the lawyer gets mixed up with a female whom he thinks is okay but who happens to be the villain of all the proceedings. He takes quite a beating, and there are several murders, before matters are cleared up.

Comment: This latest picture based on the radio program of the same name differs in one respect to its predecessors: it lacks the suspense and excitement of such mysteries. There are, however, enough top names in the cast among them Adolphe Menjou, Dennis O'Keefe and Marguerite Chapman plus the draw of the pre-sold radio audience to help put it across in its regular market. Main fault lies with the story, which too soon uncovers the fact that the heroine is the trouble-maker, and this not only detracts from the theme itself, but makes one lose interest in the proceedings. Menjou has done much better in other roles. His interpretation of the District Attorney lacks conviction, and this holds true of Dennis O'Keefe's portrayal of the young lawyer who keeps switching from one side to the other, in spite of his protestations of honesty and a belief in justice. Marguerite Chapman makes a good villainess, for she's attractive and does well with her interpretation of the role. Among the supporting players, George Coulouris is a standout. Direction is by Robert B. Sinclair and production by Samuel Bischoff.

London Ealing Studios Set 6 Films for 1947

Six new films, the first of which will go into production shortly after the first of the year, have been announced by the Ealing Studios in London for distribution by the J. Arthur Rank organization.

The pictures include "It Always Rains on Sunday," to be directed by Robert Hamer from an original story by Arthur La Bern; "Against the Wind," to be directed by Charles Crichton; "Saraband for Dead Lovers," to be directed by Basil Dearden from the novel by Helen Simpson; "Toilers of the Sea," an adaptation of the Victor Hugo novel, to be directed by Cavalcanti; "Scott of the Anarctic," to be directed by Charles Frend, and "Eureka Stockade," to be directed and filmed in Australia by Harry Watt and to star Chips Rafferty.

To Start in February

"The Forty-Niners," a screenplay by Paul Wellman, has been scheduled by Warners for February production with Errol Flynn.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management*

ARE YOUR DISPLAYS 'HIT' OR 'MISS'?

By Jack Jackson

Is the scheme of distribution and display of your outdoor billing the result of sound objective planning, or have you allowed it to sink to the status of "customary routine" that requires and deserves no special attention on your part?

Regardless of the size or location of your theatre I'm certain that a definite sum is set aside for the "away from the theatre" advertising of each and every feature attraction. Whatever the sum may be, and regardless of the area covered or intensity of the effort, its value to the box-office can be reliably gauged by the amount of study, attention and supervision you devote to the planning and execution of the job.

Let me say right here that "Objective thinking" is not an abstract phrase. In simple language it means picking out a real objective to be attained and concentrating—to the exclusion of all non-essentials—on the detail necessary to attainment. Simpler still, it means charting out the most satisfactory, least expensive and surest method of getting the job done.

In all advertising effort—and particularly in the department of outdoor effort for theatres—the goal is to get the message before the maximum number of potential buyers. You may have to compromise at times because of difficult or impossible situations, but never allow the compromise to take the place of the original objective or detract from the zeal with which you approach the next detail of your plan.

In full certainty that each and every reader will subscribe to the truth of the preceding paragraph I'll proceed to bore you with some of the details essential to making every penny of your billing appropriation follow—as directly as possible—the paths that will lead to the objective—which is to get the mesage before the maximum number of potential buyers. Of course I'm taking it for granted that you know your theatre, its audience potential and every pertinent fact about the community it serves.

Let's start with the lowly handbill or "dodger."

Make the Copy As Bold And Brief As Possible

The "dodger" is a cheap method—effective at irregular intervals except in rare situations—of reaching a certain element of potential buyers. That element does not live in the exclusive residential districts. Factory workers, frequenters at the more virile sporting events and folks who live in the slums and poorer section are most susceptible of being influenced by this kind of message. Ergo: the cheapest form of distribution is at factory gates and at the spill of sport events. The printed message can only be depended on to get a passing glance from the recipient, so it is important that the wording be bold and brief as possible and emphasize the "where, what and when." Gauge the amount of distribution, print on the cheapest and gaudiest paper (poster stock) and consider the effort at least 70 per cent wasted before you start. Distribution is the most costly detail of "dodger" advertising so always send the boys among crowds or to crowded neighborhoods.

"Dodgers" are not on the regular agenda of the average theatre but window cards are. The cost of window cards—which we used to pitch about with abandon—has advanced considerably during the past few years and the cost of distribution, in larger cities, runs anywhere from 7 to 12 cents each plus theatre passes. That kinda puts the WC on the spot to produce three to four customers to insure profit that will amortize its cost and placement charges. A theatre can't run without profit, so it is safe to say that every WC must account for four to six admissions. That means you'll have to be right picky about where and how you place them. So-o-o, be careful what windows you select. Be sure the location is such as will guarantee display to large numbers of passersby. Be sure the card is so placed that it will be in the line of vision for the longest possible period of time. That means to set it as far to the left side and as close to the window front as is possible, since most folks walk to the right of the sidewalk. This matter of proper placement is important because of the time required by hurrying pedestrians to absorb your message. Be sure the card is in evidence and readable for the longest time possible. Walk by the location yourself and see if you can read it at least four times while in normal stride. If you can't, it's not a good location and holds little promise of returning ticket sales sufficient to offset the cost. Try to find locations where folks gather to wait for cars and busses. Those folks have time on their hands and are actually looking for something to occupy their minds while waiting. When you get a spot like that go to a little pains to make your display unusually attractive. The extra cost will more than pay for itself. Don't ever allow your bill-poster to tack 4, 6, 8 or more window cards in one spot to cover a one-sheet or three-sheet space. You're just throwing away your money when you do. Tacked cards, except when used in connection with some civic tieup and placed on light or street telephone poles, can seldom be depended on to contribute to the success of a billing campaign. If you can't find the right places for window card displays cut down the order to the exchange until it covers only sufficient to fill the locations that hold promise of returning a profit. Quit wasting your time and money.

The one-sheet, because of its size and flash, holds greater promise of catching the eye of Mr. and Mrs. Hurryup and impressing a message on promised entertainment on their busy minds. But here again the matter of initial cost, posting charges and theatre passes must be considered. The one-sheet can be seen and read from greater distance and consequently allows more latitude in the selection of locations. Let me advise right

How to Quiet 'Em

The problem of juvenile misbehavior (STR, Dec. 14, p. 18) is well on its way to a satisfactory solution as far as the Utica Theatre, Brooklyn, is concerned. Manager Max Schiering finds the trouble-maker, refunds his or her admission, then sends the youngster home. The child is not allowed to return to the theatre at a later date, unless of course, he promises to behave. Word-of-mouth comment on this procedure spreads, Schiering declares. As a result, his theatre is now operating with a minimum of noise.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

quick to make use of the one-sheet instead of the window card wherever such substitution is possible. Follow the same plan of placement as is recommended for window cards—keep 'em in sight as long as possible and always point 'em at the spot where the crowds are thickest. Watch your town for vacant stores, front remodeling, construction, barriers, etc. and endeavor to get permission for the posting of one and three sheets.

The novelty of the location is in itself enough to guarantee maximum attention, provided the locations are in busy neighborhoods, and the size of the displays are such that bus and street car passengers and motorists can absorb the message as they hurry past.

Too Much Copy

The three-sheet plant—a regular route of sturdily built attraction boards—seems to be coming back into favor in many towns and cities. The principal fault I have to find with a lot of these is the attempt to enumerate three or four attractions with catch lines and star names on each board. Unless these are placed for walkby attention—and most of them are intended to catch the eye of motorists—the amount of copy results in confusion and defeats the purpose of the display. It would be better to divide the board in two parts—one "now showing" and one "coming"—and arrange for more frequent printing and posting. If you're engaging in this type of effort try riding past your boards at normal speed and you'll know exactly what I mean.

For many moons I've had the idea that a properly handled three-sheet plant—and one sheets too—could be so set up that it would hold position as one of the most important and profitable of theatre advertising efforts. For my mythical plant the boards would be placed exclusively on the sides or fronts of neighborhood grocery, drug, notion, etc. stores. It must be admitted that the proprietors of these stores all have a loyal following among the residents of their respective communities or the chain groups would run them out of business. My scheme would involve a weekly visit to the proprietors by some able member of the theatre staff who would "talk pictures" with the storekeeper and his clerks. He would stuff them so full of what was coming to the theatre that they'd begin viewing themselves as "insiders" and use the films coming to my theatre instead of the worn subject of "weather" when conversing with the Smiths and Joneses who frequent their establisments. I'd make the passes I tendered in return for the location good only on the first days—yes Saturday and Sunday included—so they'd be sure to attend in plenty of time to tell all their customers about my shows BEFORE the attraction changed. I'd make them feel as though they were the personal representatives of my theatre in their vicinity and make it a point to see that my entire staff knew them by name and greeted them as an advertising associate deserves to be treated. As I see it a billing route like that would be a sure barrier against depression, famine and inflation flood alike. Think it over Mr. Showman. It's a sure, easy and inexpensive way to achieve that "personal touch" which is the quickest route to the customer's pocketbook and the best insurance of continued patronage for your theatre.

Pardon the digression, but that one is too good to keep and I sure hope some live wire writes me quick that he has the scheme under way.

More Practical to Rent

Let's get on to the most expensive and difficult unit of outdoor billing, the 24-sheet. Very few theatres own their own 24-sheet "stand." The expense of building and maintaining these large boards (to say nothing of the nuisance of permits, property leases, etc.), is such that it is usually found far more practical to rent the locations from established posting firms on a weekly or monthly basis. The charge

THEATRE MANAGER'S NOTEBOOK

Maintenance

AIR CONDITIONING

1. Blowers and Deflectors

(From an Outline of Talks Presented to the Classes in the Wilby-Kincey School of Maintenance)

The air which reaches a blower always contains an appreciable quantity of dust. If allowed to accumulate on the wheel blades over a long period this dust will reduce the efficiency of the blower; and may also cause it to become unbalanced, with resulting noise and vibration. Vibration in turn shortens the life of the bearings.

The wheel should be cleaned each two weeks during the cooling season; and of course at the beginning and end of each season. A vacuum cleaner having a stiff brush-type nozzle is an effective tool for this. BE SURE TO CLEAN EVERY BLADE, OR THE BLOWER WILL BE UNBALANCED. Any oil deposits present may be removed with a rag soaked in mineral spirits. The fan housing should be kept clean, and free from rust.

CAUTION: Fuses in the line to the blower motor should always be removed before any work is done on the blower wheel.

If manufacturer's instructions for lubricating the blower bearings have been mislaid, the following rules will assure safe operation:

1. Oil-lubricated bearings: Use a high-grade oil of such weight that it will lubricate but will not be drawn into the fan. When the bearings begin to wear, a heavier oil should be used—as with an automobile.

2. Grease-lubricated bearings. As the bearings become worn, increase the frequency of lubrication. Be sure to use a high-grade grease.

Excessive quantities of any lubricant should never be used; if this is done accidentally any excess should be carefully wiped away.

Accumulated dust inside the motor should be blown away with a bellows or reversed vacuum cleaner at least every six months.

External surfaces of the motor should be kept clean and free of oil.

For lubrication, scrupulously follow manufacturer's instructions or, if these have been mislaid, apply the same rules given above for blower bearings.

It is very important not to overlubricate motors, since any excess lubricant reaching the coils will tend to break down the insulation; internal short-circuiting may follow.

The gripping effect of a V-belt results from the wedging action between the belt and the V-shaped groove in the pulley; when the belt has worn until it rides on the bottom of this groove instead of on the sides it should be replaced. In such cases, slipping could still be prevented by tightening the belt excessively, but doing so would overload the bearings.

If any belt has to be replaced, it is considered good practice to replace all in the same unit. This will prevent overloading of the new belt, which otherwise would occur.

A V-belt should never be forced on a pulley with a screwdriver or other lever. The proper procedure is to loosen the motor and put the belt on by hand.

V-belts that are either too tight or too loose may be

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Jackson Discusses Outdoor Billing

varies, depending on the service, and illuminated boards cost more than a dollar a day in most locations. Mister, that's a lot of money even in these days of fifteen cent doughnuts. Tell me, could you sit down right now and give me a list of the locations you buy? I'll bet you couldn't! You're just like the great majority who call up the posting plant and say; "The distributors are going with me on this next picture and sending down some extra stands. Can you find me some locations?"

Ride your billing route every now and then. See whether the traffic that used to jam Ichabob Avenue is still there or whether street repair work is detouring it along Dunkers Drive. And if you're stuck with Ichabob Avenue boards get them changed quickly. Don't tell me the posting salesman will inform you! Those outfits are as badly in need of help as you are and they'll gladly go looking for the "road of least resistance" in their customer contacts.

The location means everything to this expensive form of advertising. Go out for "head on" shots at the curves in the road. Try to get as many locations as possible on the right hand side of the street leading toward your theatre. Pick out the corner stands and don't let them sandwich you in between cigarette and whiskey ads. Explain to the salesman that yours is perishable merchandise that will be gone in a few days and that only the best and most preferable spots will warrant the expense involved. Try to lease locations that are in the normal line of vision—for motorists—for at least 30 seconds. When you have boards under contract insist that they be kept clean and are painted at the stipulated intervals. You pay a lot of money for this type of advertising and it's up to you to see that you get your money's worth. Occasionally there may be a barn or building wall that is desirable for this size of display but these are too infrequent to mention here.

I've overlooked the six-sheet because this is the "maverick" of the billing routine. This size is best suited for barn, garage or fences and its value depends entirely on location and proximity to crowds.

It may be advisable to check your town for locations for displays in sizes other than standard. Notice the circus posting and see how they plan for paper sized to fit every possible opening. You might find it profitable—at intervals—to use half-sheet uprights or half-sheet flats in block letter and color. There are literally dozens of ways to make occasional novelty outdoor campaigns effective, but if you stick to "Objective planning" for your regular week-to-week effort and check frequently to be sure your locations continue to point straight at the pre-determined goal of getting your message before the maximum number of potential buyers you'll have a better chance of chalking up a consistent profit in this department of your advertising effort.

Should you ever find yourself with more paper than you can profitably and effectively display either send it back to the exchange or put it in the furnace. Quit wasting your money for "spots that don't pay."

Barnes, McCarthy in New Warner Theatre Posts

James Barnes, who has been manager of the Warner Theatre in Memphis, has been transferred to Oklahoma City, where he will manage the Warner Theatre. James McCarthy, formerly manager of the Badger Theatre, Racine, Wis., succeeds Barnes in Memphis.

The Memphis operation, as well as Oklahoma City, is now under the supervision of James Coston, zone manager for Illinois and Wisconsin.

Holiday Kiddie Shows

All 24 Loew theatres in the metropolitan area held special kiddie shows this week. The shows were given in the mornings.

noisy in operation, and cause rapid wear and loss of efficiency.

New belts should be checked, and tension readjusted as necessary, every week for the first month of their operation because of the initial stretching that generally occurs.

Lubricants reaching a V-belt will attack the rubber in it and cause early failure. Avoid this needless deterioration.

Belt dressings should not be used on V-belts.

Efficiency of the deflectors in securing proper air distribution can easily be checked by placing streamers of paper or light cloth on the backs of the seats and under the balcony. Deflector vanes (if of the adjustable type) can be set accordingly. Do not permit any two vanes to point toward each other; both vertical and horizontal settings should be of fan-like arrangement. If this is disturbed in cleaning it should be accurately restored.

Deflector surfaces should be kept clean, and painted often enough to eliminate any chance of rusting.

1. Trouble: Shortage of air supply at deflectors.

Causes and Remedies: (a) Improper adjustment of dampers—readjust them. (b) High duct resistance—inspect duct for, and remove, internal obstructions. (c) Air intake blocked—remove obstruction. (d) Low fan speed—correct drive belt slippage. (e) Wrong rotation of fan—check rotation-direction arrow on fan housing and reverse direction of rotation if wrong.

2. Trouble: Air noise.

Causes and Remedies: (a) Sharp obstruction in air stream—remove it; streamline internal surfaces of ducts and smooth out rough edges. (b) Small slits or openings in fan room or ducts—close all holes or openings. (c) Accumulated foreign matter in deflectors—clean them.

3. Trouble: Scraping noise in fan room.

Cause and Remedies: Wheel hitting the fan housing—check bearings; adjust wheel to turn free on all sides.

4. Trouble: Squeaking and rumbling.

Causes and Remedies: (a) Loose belts—tighten them. (b) Dirt in bearings—clean them. (c) Bearings tight—lubricate them.

5. Trouble: Rattling noises.

Causes and Remedies: (a) Electrical BX cable loose—tighten it securely. (b) Loose screws in housing—tighten them, or insert lock washers and then tighten.

6. Trouble: Vibration.

Causes and Remedies: (a) Loose motor mounting—tighten motor mounting bolts. (b) Improper weight distribution on hangers or feet—level unit on all sides. (c) Belt slipping because too tight—adjust belt tension. (d) Pulley loose or out of line—tighten or align it. (e) Fan shaft sprung—replace shaft. (f) Shaft bearing worn—replace it. (g) Fans out of balance or loose on shaft—adjust and tighten if shaft is not seriously worn from loose play—if shaft is badly damaged, replace it.

7. Trouble: Belt noise.

Cause and Remedy: Wrong belt tension—adjust it.

8. Trouble: Belts cutting or wearing excessively.

Cause and Remedy: Motor or fan pulley out of line—loosen motor alignment bolts and align it properly.

9. Trouble: Motor fails to start.

Causes and Remedies: (a) Fuse blown—replace it. (b) Overload relay tripped—rest it. (c) Motor burnt out—replace it. (d) Control circuit open—run down control circuit wiring. (e) Bearings tight—lubricate them.

(All of the foregoing comprises verbatim quotation or paraphrase of a chapter in the book issued to members of classes in the School of Maintenance of Wilby-Kincey Theatres circuit. The book was made available to Showmen's Trade Review for such quotation by the company, which is headed by R. B. Wilby, and H. F. Kincey, and is recognized as one of the most progressive and efficiently operated circuits in the United States. The book, according to Mr. Wilby, was prepared not as a manual, but merely to serve members of the classes (which are conducted for managers of the circuit) as a notebook to spare those attending the classes the effort of making their own notes during the talks and demonstrations.)

Shorts Reviews

Mrs. Joseph Willman go through their paces for the slow-motion camera. Bowling shorts have become so standardized that it would be a relief to discover a new approach.

Rubber River (Fair)

WB (3802) Technicolor Adventure 10 mins.

This is an adventure through the wilds of Nicaragua's bountiful rubber region. The camera follows a small party up the Coco River, shows them buying raw rubber from natives in canoes, and continues with them to the heart of the interior where natives tap the trees for valuable latex. There are a few shots with local color, but the reel is not likely to arouse much interest.

Mouse Menace (Good)

WB (2710) Merrie Melody 7 mins.

Porky Pig's house is inhabited by a clever mouse, and the combined attempts of cats, mountain lions, and gangsters fail to dislodge it. In desperation, Porky concocts a mechanical cat, but the wily mouse resorts to dynamite, demolishing both robot and house, and Porky winds up in the dog house—with the mouse. A clever Technicolor reel.

ADVANCE DATA
On Forthcoming Product

PRAIRIE RAIDERS (Col.) Western. Principals: Charles Starrett, Robert Scott, Nancy Saunders. Director, Derwin Abrahams. Plot: After a young man is given a lease on 50,000 acres of land for the purpose of starting a wild horse ranch, he discovers that a gang of hoodlums also have a lease on the same property. When he investigates, he discovers that their lease is a phoney, so he confronts the Department of Interior agent, who is mystified. Together they arrive at the ranch in time to find the gangsters rustling the horses and running them to the railroad. They pitch in, get the horses back to the ranch and then straighten the matter out with the Secretary of the Interior.

RETURN OF PHILO VANCE (PRC) Mystery. Principals: Alan Curtis, Frank Jenks, Terry Austin. Director, Basil Wrangell. Plot: Trying to doublecross his sweetheart, as well as others, in an emerald smuggling scheme, a man passes the word around that he has hired a detective to protect the gem. When the detective learns about this, he visits the man, and while he is there the man is slain. Suspicion falls on the detective, but nevertheless he is permitted to help with the investigation. The slain man's sweetheart is killed just as the detective is questioning her. This second killing supplies the clue which enables the detective to run down the murderer.

GUN FIGHTER (PRC) Western. Principals: Al La Rue, Al St. John, Mary Scott, Jack O'Shea. Director, Ray Taylor. Plot: A young prospector comes to town for supplies and at the general store learns of the stagecoach robbery. Among the things stolen were three valuable rings and these he discovers on the person of an argumentive customer. A quarrel ensues between him and the robber, who knocks him out and escapes. By various clues he learns the name of the leader of the outlaws, and succeeds in driving the entire gang out of town.

(The above data should be filed for reference in order to supply information to interested local parents' groups, church organizations, or individual parents when inquiry is made about a current or forthcoming picture's suitability for various age groups. In quoting these sources, the theatreman should emphasize that he is giving the information supplied by national organizations which are independent of the film industry. The authorities quoted in this column, as the information becomes available, and descriptions of them and their methods of classifying pictures, are as follows:

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS. The motion picture committee is headed by Mrs. Arretus F. Burt, chairman, of St. Louis. Two reviewing committees are maintained—Mrs. Harry Lilly, New York, Eastern Committee chairman; Mrs. John Sterns Thayer, Los Angeles, Western Committee chairman. Designations used: FAMILY—8 years and up; MATURE FAMILY—14 years and up; ADULTS—Senior High School Students and Adults; —indicates picture is rated as "Exceptional."

NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW: Founded in 1909 "to represent the interests of the motion picture public." The reviewing committee consists of some 300 men and women of all ages, "representing a cross-section of public taste." Designations used: FAMILY—14 years of age and up (recommendations for age groups under 14 are by Schools M. P. Committee of the National Board); MATURE—18 years and up; *—indicates picture "especially worth seeing."
